Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish details of the criteria used to reach the decision to increase electricity charges in Northern Ireland by 8 per cent. from 1 April.

Mr. Needham: The main criterion was that electricity charges should reflect the economic price of supply in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated level of profit likely to be produced by Northern Ireland Electricity in the period 1990-91 by the increase in charges to consumers from 1 April.

Mr. Needham: It is not practice to publish estimates by boards of public undertakings of their forecast performance.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether Her Majesty's Government and Northern Ireland Electricity have proposals to reduce electricity prices in Northern Ireland and to reduce the energy burden on industry and domestic consumers.

Mr. Needham: As regards electricity prices I refer the hon. Gentleman to the Secretary of State's answer to a question from the hon. Member for Newbury (Sir M. McNair-Wilson) on 13 March, Official Report, columns 139-40.

On reducing the energy burden, the Government actively encourage consumers to use energy efficiently so as to reduce their energy costs.

St. Louis School, Ballymena

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy on the inclusion by the grant-aided St. Louis R.C. voluntary grammar school, Ballymena, in its enrolment criteria of the statement, "Any prospective entrant must accept the Catholic ethos of the school".

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the new open enrolment arrangements all secondary schools must have regard to parental preference. If they are oversubscribed the criteria which they will use in selecting pupils is a matter for the board of governors. I will be considering the need to issue further guidance on criteria in the light of experience in the 1990-91 school year.

Ballinamallard Primary School

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Ballinamallard primary school, County Fermanagh, which was bomb-damaged in 1985 will be given priority for capital funding; and when a permanent extension will be provided to replace mobiles.

Dr. Mawhinney: Extensive damage to the school as a result of a van bomb in September 1985 has been repaired. The provision of a permanent extension at the school has recently been the subject of an investment appraisal which is still under consideration by the Department of Education. It will depend upon the future detailed planning of the scheme, on the priority which will be attached to it by the Western education and library board and the level of financial resources available to the Department for the education capital programme. I cannot, therefore, predict a time scale for the project at this stage.

Fair Employment Legislation

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he has taken to expedite the formulation of new guidelines for the Local Government Staff Commission in accordance with the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Local Government Staff Commission has a statutory responsibility to recommend the procedures to be followed by district councils in making appointments or promotions. It is currently setting up a working party, which will include representatives of staff associations, to review the existing employment and promotion procedures. It anticipates the completion of this review in two to three months.

There is no statutory requirement under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 for employers, including district councils, to formulate new guidelines on fair employment matters.

All employers should have regard to the code of practice on fair employment published by the Department of Economic Development on 31 December 1989. The code exhorts employers to draw up a clear policy of promotion and equality of opportunity in the workplace and to make this widely known, especially among employees and job applicants.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many of the staff, other than home helps, of the Western health and social services board in Northern Ireland are (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholics, (c) religion not known because they were educated in the Irish Republic and (d) religion not known because they were educated elsewhere than the island of Ireland;

(2) what information he has on the religious composition of the 110 home helps mentioned in his reply of 7 March, Official Report, columns 660-61, who were educated outside Northern Ireland;

(3) what information he has on the religious composition of the 767 home helps mentioned in his reply of 7 March, Official Report, columns 660-61, for whom no record of primary school attended is held;

(4) what information he has on the religious composition of the 989 home helps mentioned in his reply of 7 March, Official Report, columns 660-61, who were educated in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The information requested by the hon. Gentleman is not available. All health and social services boards are required to monitor the composition of their work force and to make returns to the Fair Employment Commission. No board has yet completed its analysis of the data concerned.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Fair Employment Commission will publish detailed information on the religious composition of (a) its staff and (b) its applicants who are not appointed.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: In due course such information will be published by the Fair Employment Commission.

Community Care

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to publish a White Paper on community care in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: My noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale will tomorrow be publishing a policy paper on community care in Northern Ireland. The paper will explain how the national objectives in the White Paper "Caring for People" are to be pursued in the context of Northern Ireland's unique integrated health and social services. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Electoral Registration Office, Strangford

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what instructions have been given to the electoral registration office for Strangford as to the times of day that telephone calls should be made.

Mr. Cope: Routine administrative matters of this nature are the responsibility of the chief electoral officer for Northern Ireland.

Hepatitis B

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of hepatitis B there have been in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years for which figures are available; and in each year, how many have been fatal.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The information is as follows:

	Cases	Deaths
1987	9	1
1988	8	nil
1989	8	[1]1

[1] Up to 30 September 1989.

Long-term Unemployment

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in Northern Ireland have been unemployed for more than 10 years and more than 15 years; and for each period, how many are (a) male and (b) female.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The information, at 8 February 1990, is as follows:

	Male	Female	Total
More than 10 years	4,104	381	4,485
More than 15 years	650	60	710

The figures are not mutually exclusive since those unemployed for more than 15 years will also be included in the more than 10 years category.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the longest period of continuous unemployment for any person in Northern Ireland at the present time; and whether the person concerned is a male or a female.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The information requested, at 8 February 1990, is 28 years nine months and the person concerned is male.

Security Vetting

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many persons selected as suitable applicants for posts for which they had applied by the Eastern health and social services board during each of the last three years have subsequently been refused an appointment because an adverse security report was received by the board from the Northern Ireland Office;

(2) whether there is any appeal against an adverse security report issued by the Northern Ireland Office on an otherwise suitable applicant for a job with a health and social services board;

(3) who is (a) responsible for and (b) carries out security vetting of otherwise suitable applicants for posts with the Eastern health and social services board.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 20 March 1990]: It has been the policy of successive Governments not to give detailed information about security vetting procedures.

Higher Education

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the number of young people who became, or will become, 19 years old during the current academic year and who are refused Department of Health and Social Security benefit although they are undergoing a course of education entered into before they became 19 years old.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: No such estimate is available.

Salmon (Bushmills)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will indicate the Department of Agriculture (Northern Ireland) commitment to the continuation of scientific studies of salmon at the Bushmills site; how long the Department's lease on the site and river has to run; and whether it is intended to continue to base scientists on this site for the remainder of the lease.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The Department's future strategy for research on salmon is currently under review with a view to expansion across Northern Ireland. The Department's lease on the Bushmills site and river extends to 2002. Until now no DANI scientists have been based on this site—they visit as required by seasonal factors.

Marine Research

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on how many occasions a fisheries scientist from his Department has attended meetings of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea in each of the last three years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Number
1987	3
1989	3

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the projected annual savings to his Department which will arise by transfer of all fisheries research laboratory staff and the freshwater biological staff to Belfast; what percentage of the research vessel Lough Foyle annual running costs in a full year this represents; and what percentage of the research vessel's total annual costs this represents, including depreciation and replacement costs.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: An investment appraisal estimated that over a 25-year period, relocation of staff from fisheries research laboratory, Coleraine and freshwater biological investigation unit, Antrim to Belfast and the location of the scientific staff from the research vessel on the same site would have the lowest discounted net cost compared to other options.

The decision to relocate was driven primarily by the scientific benefits to be gained from having a unified division located at the Department of Agriculture's scientific base in Belfast.

The question of savings expressed as a percentage of research vessel costs is not relevant.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what scientific evidence is put to meetings of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea on behalf of his Department.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Scientific evidence presented to ICES consists of fish population parameters obtained from samples of the Northern Ireland sea-fish catches and fishing vessels. These Northern Ireland input data are combined with analogous data supplied by scientists from other EC countries exploiting Irish sea stocks and stock assessments are carried out using internationally agreed modelling techniques. Results derived in future through the MV Lough Foyle will provide essential fishery-independent data hence greatly enhancing accuracy of stock assessments and the resultant total allowable catches.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what would be the total savings for (a) 1990-91, (b) 1991-92 and (c) 1992-93 if the research vessel Lough Foyle were now to be sold.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Total savings from selling the Lough Foyle have not been estimated as our current policy is to enhance marine research through the facility of a sea-going research vessel.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether a place on the United Kingdom delegation of scientists to meetings of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea is reserved for a scientist from his Department.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]:

HEALTH

Drugs (Education Programmes)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost in the latest year for which figures are available for education programmes designed to reduce the demand for drugs.

Mr. Freeman: Last month, at a cost of £3·8 million spread over two financial years 1989-90 and 1990-91, the Department launched the latest national drug publicity campaign warning young people of the dangers of becoming involved with drug misuse. Complementary regional campaigns are being run in Yorkshire, Mersey and west midlands.

Residential Homes, Easington

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds are provided in the Easington constituency by private residential and nursing homes; and if he will indicate the number of beds home by home.

Mr. Freeman: Information about nursing homes and residential care homes is not collected centrally in this form. Details of nursing homes and residential care homes registered under the Registered Homes Act 1984 are kept by district health authorities and local social services authorities respectively.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those years in the period 1974 to 1989 when financial cuts in real terms were made in the National Health Service in England and Wales.

Mr. Freeman: Over the period 1974-75 and 1989-90 there has been a reduction in real terms in spending in the NHS in England in only one year—1977-78. Over the same period there were real terms reductions in NHS spending in Wales in 1976-77 and 1977-78.

Disabled People

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which disability organisations his Department has met this year to discuss the Government's proposals contained in "Caring for People."

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Ministers have met a number of organisations this year as part of the consultation process for implementing the community care proposals. These organisations have included the Prince of Wales Advisory Group, the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation and the Keighley Disablement People's Council.

Health Care Research

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made in the establishment of the post of chief of research and development at the Department of Health; and what role he expects the research and development division to have in the support of research into nursing care.

Mr. Freeman: The post of chief of research and development (CRD) has been advertised in the press, and once the closing date has passed a short list of candidates to be invited for interview will be drawn up.

The Department's present research management division, suitably strengthened and perhaps renamed, will form the basis of the support to be provided for the CRD. The CRD will be responsible for advising Ministers and the chief executive of the NHS on what relative priority should be given to research on any particular topic.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in the Official Report, for the latest available date, the numbers of mental illness beds in secure accommodation in each district health authority and those district health authorities where no secure accommodation is available; what action he has taken to promote the development of comprehensive secure provision, including that for those chronically mentally ill and behaviourally disturbed people not appropriate for regional secure units, in pursuance of the recommendation of the interdepartmental Home Office and Department of Health and Social Security working group accepted in 1987; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Tables with the numbers of mental illness beds in secure accommodation in district health authorities at the end of 1986, the most recent date for which figures are available centrally, and those districts without secure mental illness beds, have been placed in the Library.

The Department continues to work closely with regional health authorities and professional bodies in developing a full range of secure provision. In particular it remains our policy that, in all appropriate cases, mentally disordered offenders should be kept out of, or transferred from, the penal system. To that end, we are fully committed to the implementation of all the recommendations made by the joint working party. Its report provides a co-ordinated strategy to guide the work of both the Department of Health and the Home Office. It identified a series of practical and achievable measures aimed at improving access to health and social services, and ensuring that full use is made of existing provisions.

Good progress has been made in implementing the report's recommendations, including the recent publication of guidelines for health authorities on services for mentally handicapped people with challenging behaviour. We know that there are still occasional difficulties in placing particular patients quickly in appropriate accommodation; in some cases improvements in local referral systems are required; in others some additional facilities may be needed. But there are a number of places in which excellent work is being undertaken. We will be drawing on experience gained from these initiatives in formulating national guidelines in due course.

Health Visitors

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health visitors there are as a proportion of children on the child care register in each borough in England and Wales.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is not possible to calculate the proportion requested. The number of children and young persons on child protection registers in each local authority area is published in "Survey of Children and Young Persons on child protection registers year ending 31 March 1988: England". This is available in the Library. Data for health visitors are shown by region in table C9.5(a) in the 1990 edition of "NHS Workforce in England" (page C102). I have arranged for a copy of this to be placed in the Library.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to improve health visiting facilities where the infant mortality is above national average; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The measures we are taking to achieve further reductions in infant mortality were described in the Government's reply to the first report from the Social Services Committee on perinatal, neonatal and infant mortality (CM 741). We accept that health visitors play a key role in the health surveillance and care of infants: the organisation and staffing of these services is best determined by health authorities in the light of local circumstances.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average caseload of a health visitor.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is not available in the form requested. The average number of people seen by each health visitor (whole-time equivalent) in England in the financial year 1987-88 was 395. Each person may be seen more than once, the annual average being three visits per person.

Figures for 1988-89 are not yet available.

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he is taking to ensure that there is an effective and safe child care service provided by health visitors; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Provision of health visiting services is the responsibility of health authorities. Guidance on child protection was given in "Working Together: A Guide to Arrangements for Interagency Co-operation for the Protection of Children from Abuse" prepared by the Department and "Child Protection: Guidance for Senior Nurses, Health Visitors and Midwives" prepared by the Standing Nursing and Midwifery Advisory Committee; both of which were published in 1988; copies are available in the Library.

Any evidence of shortcomings in a health authority's children's services could be taken up in the annual review process and, if appropriate, discussed at the review meeting between the management executive and the region.

Infant Mortality

Ms. Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the infant mortality rate in each of the boroughs in England and Wales.

Mr. Freeman: The information has been placed in the Library.

AIDS (Diets)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information is available to him on the costs of diets for people with AIDS or with HIV infection; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have nothing to add to the reply my right hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security gave the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 8 December 1989 at column 419.

General Practitioners

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to make the grounds for eligibility for general practitioners' targets more flexible should it become apparent that it is in the patients' best interests to do so.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The GP target payments system will reduce the number of unnecessary deaths from cancer of the cervix and help to eliminate childhood diseases. It is therefore clearly in the patients' best interests. The Government have already given an undertaking to monitor all aspects of the GPs' new contract and to consider further improvements should this prove necessary.

EMPLOYMENT

Regional Functions

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what functions his Department carries out at the regional level; where the regional offices are located in each of the regions; what staff are employed and at what grades; what proportion of his Department's budget is spent in each of the regions; and what geographical boundaries determine his Department's regions.

Mr. Eggar: Due to the unusual length of the information requested, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Students

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the number of unemployed students in each region of the country for each month from May 1989 to November 1990.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is available in the Library. The following table shows for each month from May 1989 to February 1990 the number of unemployed students in each region of the country. Unemployment figures are not available for the requested group in Northern Ireland and no figures are available beyond February 1990. Figures on unemployed students are published separately and are not included in the monthly claimant count.

Training and Enterprise Councils (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what representations he received in the last month from the chair of education, Nottingham county council, regarding consultations in the setting up of the Greater Nottingham training and enterprise councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have received a letter from the chair of the education committee for Nottingham county council concerning consultation with the education services by the prospective Greater Nottingham training and enterprise council. I place great importance on training and enterprise councils consulting the wider community.

Genetically Engineered Organisms

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Gordon, Official Report, 23 March, columns 783-84, why it would be inappropriate to list the locations of the three centres where applications for the release of genetically manipulated organisms are under review.

Mr. Nicholls: Applicants are in discussion with the Health and Safety Executive and relevant Government Departments about these proposals and final clearance is expected shortly. In accordance with its normal practice in such circumstances the Health and Safety Executive will ask the centres concerned to issue a press release. Until the current discussions are completed there is no certainty that any release will take place and it is reasonable to respect concerns regarding commercial confidentiality.

Pig Farming Industry

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what information he has in respect of chest complaints among workers in the pig farming industry.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive is aware of respiratory problems in people working in pig houses and is currently undertaking research to identify the possible causes. A report on the research will be published later this year.

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total publicity and advertising expenditure, including for privatisation, of his Department and public bodies for which his Department has responsibility in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Eggar [pursuant to his reply, 19 March 1990, c.503]: In my reply of 19 March I referred in error to Government expenditure plans as set out in the public expenditure White Paper for 1989. I should have referred to the public expenditure White Paper for 1990.

The correct reply should have read:

"The planned expenditure by my Department on total publicity in (b) 1989-90, to include that for the Training Agency, remains as stated in table 6.31 on page 29 of the public expenditure White Paper, Cm. 1006, published in January 1990. No further detailed information is yet available."

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

17. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take immediate steps in order to exempt from poll tax payments (a) students, (b) the disabled and (c) pensioners.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to change the present community charge arrangements for these groups.

19. Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of the Scottish population, eligible for payment of the community charge, has paid in 1989-90.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally but we understand that in most regions 85 per cent. to 95 per cent. of those eligible for the community charge have made some payment, with a figure of 98 per cent. in one area.

28. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to review the operation of the poll tax.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The operation of the community charge arrangements is kept constantly under review and my right hon. and learned Friend will bring forward changes in these as and when he considers appropriate.

29. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of collectable community charge remains unpaid at the latest available date; and what proportion of collectable rate was unpaid at the last year of the rating system in the equivalent date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally.

Fishing Industry

18. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend met representatives of the Scottish Fishermen's Federation on 7 February to discuss the management of the North sea haddock fishery. My noble Friend the Minister of State participated in that meeting and met representatives of the federation again on 8 March, to inform them of the Government's decisions on management of this fishery.

33. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the current situation in the Scottish fishing industry.

Mr. Lang: The total value of landings into Scotland in January and February this year was slightly higher than that recorded in the corresponding period last year with the reduction in the volume of whitefish being offset by increased prices.

A1 Improvements

20. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the effect on traffic flows and safety on the A1 in Berwickshire of improvements to the road south of the border.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As part of our "Routes South of Edinburgh" study, consideration was given to the extent of any traffic increase which might be generated on the A1 in Scotland by road improvements south of the border. The effect on traffic was concluded to be minimal, however, and therefore is likely to have no road safety consequences. However, the whole question of traffic and safety on the route can be addressed by the A1 steering group which we propose to set up and which the hon. Member recently agreed would be an appropriate forum for monitoring such issues.

Regional Development

21. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the European Commissioner responsible for regional development; and if he will make a statement.

41. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to secure continued funding by the European Community of regional development in the highlands and islands.

43. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the loss of European Community funds to the highlands and islands.

Mr. Lang: I last met Commissioner Millan on 24 November 1989 when I represented the United Kingdom

Government at an informal seminar of European Community Ministers responsible for regional planning and development held in Nantes. The Government are seriously concerned by the European Commission's recent proposals for regional fund assistance to the highlands and islands and Dumfries and Galloway. We shall be making every effort to persuade the Commission to reconsider its proposals and recognise the needs of these areas.

Rents into Mortgages Scheme

22. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to extend the rents into mortgages scheme to more public sector tenants.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Gloucester (Mr. French) on 29 November 1989 at column 282.

Scottish Assembly

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received during the past six months about a Scottish assembly.

Mr. Rifkind: Four.

Investment

24. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what new inward investment projects have been announced in the last two months.

Mr. Lang: In the last two months, three major inward investment projects have been announced for Scotland.

These are (a) British Airways' announcement to establish a major telephone sales centre in Glasgow; (b) Conner Peripherals' announcement to manufacture Winchester hard disk drives at Irvine; and (c) Motorola's announcement to set up its European cellular subscriber division in a new plant in West Lothian.

Fish Farming

25. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has evaluated the marine environment implications of the fish farming industry.

Mr. Lang: A wide range of studies have been carried out, or are currently under way to consider the environmental effects of fish farming in Scotland. These have been undertaken mainly by the Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland, the Highlands and Islands Development Board and the Nature Conservancy Council. River purification boards in their role as pollution control authorities may carry out relevant monitoring.

The Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland's marine laboratory is studying hydrographic, chemical and biological characteristics in order to determine the flushing times and dispersion and dilution characteristics of sea lochs, where most of Scotland's salmon farming is carried out. Studies are also being carried out to assess any chemical or biological impact of fish farming operations and to model the physical and biological processes in coastal waters.

Speech Therapy

26. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many speech therapists are employed by Glasgow health board per 100,000 population; what is the level recommended by the Government-commissioned Enderby report on speech therapy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Based on the 1988 population figure of 939,000 for the Greater Glasgow health board area, the board currently employs 66·1 whole-time equivalent speech therapists, which equates to approximately seven per 100,000. The Enderby report is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Nature Conservation

27. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what further plans he has for improving nature conservation in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Environmental Protection Bill now before Parliament provides, inter alia, for the establishment of a Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland. We propose to establish, by subsequent legislation, a natural heritage agency which will merge the Nature Conservancy Council for Scotland with the Countryside Commission for Scotland. This will ensure a co-ordinated, integrated and sensitive approach to nature conservation and countryside issues in Scotland.

Scottish Development Agency

30. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the Scottish Development Agency, and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Lang: My right hon. and learned Friend last met the chairman of the Scottish Development Agency on 24 March at a dinner for UK-Japan 2000.

Electricity Exports

31. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much electricity, in coal equivalent, has been exported from Scotland since 1 January to date and what is the estimated total for a full year.

Mr. Lang: This is a commercial matter for the Scottish

Scottish Police Federation

32. Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairman of the Scottish Police Federation; and what matters were discussed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I met the chairman and general secretary of the Scottish Police Federation on 8 February to hear their representations on the proposed changes to police rent allowance.

Community Care

34. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what extra money he will make available for community care in Scotland in 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman).

Family Conciliation Services

35. Mr. Buchanan-Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he is making for the Scottish Association of Family Conciliation Services and regional family conciliation services in Scotland to secure a level of funding which will meet the needs of all sheriff courts and the Court of Session, in light of the forthcoming rules of court which will empower sheriffs and judges to remit parties to the conciliation services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The Scottish Association of Family Conciliation Services has been offered grant for 1990-91 under section 10 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968, amounting to £45,500 in respect of revenue and £6,250 in respect of capital expenditure. The local services are not funded by central Government except where local authority expenditure attracts urban programme grant.

It has always been open to judges to refer parties to conciliation. The new court procedures will make this explicit.

I am considering the question of funding for conciliation services.

Takare plc

36. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if there are any proposals to award further contracts to Takare plc for the provision of services to National Health Service elderly patients.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This is a matter for health boards in the first instance.

Self-employment

37. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his latest estimate of the number of self-employed persons in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: There were an estimated 239,000 self-employed in Scotland in September 1989, the highest ever recorded total. In the past two years the number of self-employed in Scotland has increased by over a fifth, a faster rate of increase than in the whole of Great Britain.

39. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland were self-employed in 1979 and at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: The Department of Employment estimates that there were 159,000 self-employed in Scotland in September 1979. By September 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, the number had increased by over 50 per cent. to 239,000.

River Tay Flood Barriers

38. Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has any plans to delegate responsibility for the supervision of flood barriers on the banks of the River Tay and for the issuing of flood warnings.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are no plans to change the present arrangements which work satisfactorily. Responsibility for floodbanks lies primarily with the riparian owners. Regional and islands councils have discretionary powers to carry out flood prevention works to protect non-agricultural land under the Flood Prevention (Scotland) Act 1961. River purification authorities have discretionary powers to instal and operate flood warning systems.

Sheriff Officers

Mr. Douglas: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the number of commissions issued by sheriffs principal authorising individuals to act as sheriff officers since 1 January.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the period from 1 January to 20 March 1990 the sheriffs principal granted seven applications for commissions. Individual sheriff officers can hold commissions for more than one sheriffdom.

CBI Scotland

42. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met CBI Scotland; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Lang: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to him on 20 December 1989.

British Steel

44. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the chairman or chief executive of British Steel.

Mr. Lang: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of today to the hon. Member for Motherwell, North (Dr. Reid).

Students

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of students at universities in Scotland in the current academic year who are domiciled (a) in Scotland, (b) in England and Wales and (c) overseas; and if he will also list the same information in respect of Scottish central institutions.

Mr. Lang: The number of students by domicile in full-time higher education in universities and central institutions in Scotland in 1988-89 (the latest year available) is as follows:

	Universities	Central Institutions
Scotland	31,888	25,558
Other United Kingdom	11,494	1,693
Overseas	6,397	826
TOTAL	49,779	28,077

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount spent by the Scottish Development Agency in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Scottish Development Agency in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that the Scottish Development Agency has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Lang: Expenditure by the Scottish Development Agency on management and computer consultancy contracts for the period 1 April 1989 to 23 March 1990 amounted to £7,961,000. The budgeted figure for the financial year 1990-91 is £10,722,000. Both these figures include fees for research and development, advisory services, appraisal and administration, such as tax and accounting advice, pension and legal consultancies.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Refrigerator Thermometers

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has given the manufacturers of domestic refrigerators regarding the fitting of internal thermometers.

Mr. Maclean: I have not formally given any advice to manufacturers of domestic refrigerators but officials of my Department and of the Department of Health have met with them to discuss the feasibility and benefits of fitting integral thermometers.

Liquid Egg

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has made an assessment of the level of bacteria, expressed as numbers of bacteria per gram, expected to be found in bulk liquid eggs immediately prior to pasteurisation.

Mr. Maclean: Several factors including the quality of raw materials and the hygienic conditions of the breaking-out plant affect the level of bacteria in bulk liquid egg. No general assessment may therefore be made.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will specify the evidence available to him indicating that salmonella can multiply in intact grade A eggs kept at room temperatures for a period not longer than five days.

Mr. Maclean: Published research undertaken by the public health laboratory service showed that salmonella inoculated into whole shell eggs multiplied at room temperature. This implies that any salmonella present in intact shell eggs might also be able to multiply but research continues to investigate the factors which govern the multiplication of salmonella in shell eggs.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food under what basis the compensation for birds compulsorily slaughtered under the Zoonoses Order 1989 and the Animal Health Act 1981 is calculated.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to her on 5 March (Official Report, column 498) and, in addition, to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 26 March (Official Report, columns 54-55), which explain changes to the arrangements for the disposal of birds from salmonella-infected laying and breeding flocks.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment was made of the levels of employment in meat processing plants in the formulation of his policy on compulsory slaughter of salmonella-affected chickens.

Mr. Maclean: No specific assessment of this kind has been made. As announced in the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 26 March (Official Report, columns 54-55), birds from salmonella-infected laying and breeding flocks are to be sent for processing subject to strict safeguards.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what level of salmonella contamination in bulk liquid eggs, expressed in numbers of bacteria per gram, is likely to cause a liquid egg pasteurisation process to fail.

Mr. Maclean: The Liquid Egg (Pasteurisation) Regulations 1963 require pasteurised egg to pass the alpha-amylase test specified in the regulations. This test is not affected by the presence of salmonella.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the level of contamination by salmonella of grade A eggs produced by farms which are subject to infected place notices under the Zoonoses Order 1989 is such as would overwhelm a pasteurisation process.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave on 12 March 1990, Official Report, column 78. The pasteurisation process is never totally effective at destroying all salmonella and the risk remains that some salmonella may survive the process.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Curry: We estimate that our expenditure on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases, will be £2,963,175 in the financial year 1989-90. Our provision for the financial year 1990-91 is set at £4,403,198. A list of contracts awarded in 1989-90 is given in the table:

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to put into effect the changes to the fishing vessels grant scheme which he announced in his statement of 20 December.

Mr. Gummer: Following my announcement last December that the present vessel grant scheme served to distort rather than encourage sensible investment by vessel owners I am proceeding to restrict the availability of these grants. A draft order under the Fisheries Act 1981 will be laid before Parliament shortly with a view to it coming into force at the beginning of April. The order will amend the present scheme (the Fishing Vessels (Acquisition and Improvement) (Grants) Scheme 1987) by providing aid only to essential safety improvements and to those cases where it is needed to provide back-up for EC grant aid.

The rates of grant for essential improvements will continue to be 30 per cent. (10 per cent. for vessels greater than 33m in length). The rate of back-up grant will be 10 per cent. regardless of vessel size.

These measures form part of our process of rationalisation of fleet capacity.

DEFENCE

Reply-paid Cards

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will reconsider the design of the reply-paid cards used for armed forces reservists to offer more security for the names, addresses and service status of the personnel concerned.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Computer Hacking

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any British database based in Europe was infiltrated by computer hacking by the West Germans convicted on 15 February of selling the information obtained to a foreign power.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any evidence to suggest that the three West Germans convicted on 15 February breached the security of any United Kingdom military database, either in this country or overseas.

RAF Finningley

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what services will be open for private contractoring tenders at RAF Finningley; and what will be the future role of service personnel currently carrying out these duties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At present, accommodation cleaning and local ancillary tasks at RAF Finningley, such as pest control and chimney sweeping, are carried out by private contractors. Tenders have been invited for the engineering and supply tasks at RAF Finningley and, subject to the acceptability of a contractor's bid in operational, technical and financial terms, it is hoped to let a contract for these services in April 1991. Service personnel currently carrying out these duties will be redeployed to other tasks within the RAF.

Security

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what update of security safeguards has been implemented for (a) employees and (b) companies employed on private tendered services at military establishments.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The security provisions concerning companies and their employees employed at military establishments are kept under constant review. It is not our practice to discuss the details of such arrangements.

Defence Spending

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the amount spent on national defence per head of the adult population.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In 1989-90 some £470, on latest estimates.

Nuclear Missiles

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which cities in Europe are within the range of the United Kingdom nuclear missiles.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: In theory, all European cities could fall within the range of Polaris. However, it is not our practice to comment on targeting policy.

Mallet Blow Exercise

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether aircraft involved in exercise Mallet Blow will be involved in low flying over areas of population in Northumberland.

Mr. Neubert: All military aircraft taking part in exercise Mallet Blow will be governed by the normal United Kingdom low flying regulations, which require aircrew to avoid flying low over the centres of major conurbations and towns and to avoid all other populated areas wherever possible.

Military Training

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give the figures for the number of deaths and serious injuries that were sustained as a result of participation in Royal Marine training courses or exercises in 1988, 1987, 1986 and 1985.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Figures for deaths and serious injuries attributable to Royal Marine training courses and exercises in the years 1985 to 1988 are as follows:

Year	Deaths	Serious injuries
1985	2	—
1986	1	2
1988	1	—

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the number of fatalities from all causes that have occurred in military exercises and training in each year since 1978.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The tri-service deaths attributable to training and exercise injuries from 1978 to the last year for which firm figures are available (1988) are as follows:

Year	Royal Navy and Royal Marines	Army	Royal Air Force	Total
1978	1	26	10	37
1979	4	14	3	21
1980	9	16	4	29
1981	5	13	6	24
1982	5	17	10	32
1983	3	10	13	26
1984	2	16	2	20
1985	2	10	7	19
1986	1	16	2	19
1987	—	10	4	14
1988	1	10	4	15
				Overall Total 256

The figures for 1989 will be promulgated in the "Service Annual Health Tables" to be published this summer.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 13 March, column 202, if he will outline the nature of the PULHHEEMS system of fitness assessment; and if he will specify how frequently it is applied to an individual member of the forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The PULHHEEMS system of medical classification involved assessment of:

P = physical capacity
U = upper limbs
L = locomotion
HH = hearing (hearing acuity)
EE = eyesight (visual acuity)
M = mental capacity
S = stability

The system is designed to:

a. provide a functional assessment of the individual's capacity for work;
b. assist in expressing the physical and mental attributes appropriate to individual employments within the services;
c. assist in posting people to the employment for which they are most suited in the light of their physical, intellectual and emotional make-up;
d. provide a system which is administratively simple to apply.

All new applicants to the services are required to have a PULHHEEMS medical examination at the pre-service stage and thereafter initial and service assessments following completion of their basic training. Further PULHHEEMS examinations are undertaken, with variations according to the branch of service, depending on the age of the individual and his employment. More regular assessments are given following injury and/or hospitalisation. The allocation of a PULHHEEMS assessment is a medical responsibility, but officers in command are responsible for ensuring that all ranks are referred to a medical officer.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 13 March, columns 198-99, if he will ensure that all training instructors are required to read, understand and observe the newly issued defence council instructions on heat illness.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: They are already required to do so.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 13 March, columns 201-02, how many men took part in the Royal Marine training courses and exercises in 1989 during which three died and one suffered serious injury.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of personnel involved in Royal Marine training courses and exercises in 1989 in which three died and one suffered serious injury was in the region of 3,500.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 13 March, column 199, what category of medical fitness was used for the Royal Navy survival course before the injury to Lieutenant Simon Rowland; and what is the new category.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The category of medical fitness used for the Royal Navy aircrew survival course is unchanged at P2—Physically Fit.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the right hon. Member for Stoke-on-Trent, South, Official Report, 13 March, column 198, if he can obtain without disproportionate cost and effort the number of disciplinary inquiries that have followed the 12 cases of heat-induced fatalities which have occurred since 1978.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the right hon. Member.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence expects to spend £18 million in the financial year 1989-90 on management and computer consultancy contracts. Details of the management consultancy contracts are listed. Contractual responsibility for computer consultancy contracts rests with the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency. CCTA does not currently maintain separate details of consultancy contracts, which, in many cases, form part of wider computer procurement and support contracts. Details of individual contracts could therefore be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Army Equipment Exhibition

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many military personnel will be on duty in support of the British Army equipment exhibition 1990.

Mr. Alan Clark: Some 720 military personnel will be on duty in support of the British Army equipment exhibition 1990.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if any firepower or mobility demonstrations are planned in conjunction with the British Army equipment exhibition 1990.

Mr. Alan Clark: In conjunction with the 1990 British Army equipment exhibition there will be mobility demonstrations but no firepower demonstrations.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the list of names of countries to which invitations to the British Army equipment exhibition 1990 have been extended.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. It has been the consistent policy of successive Administrations not to release details of invitation lists to British forces equipment exhibitions. Invitations are issued on a confidential basis and it would be a breach of trust to release names.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence who will be opening the British Army equipment exhibition to be held at Aldershot from 3 to 8 June.

Mr. Alan Clark: Detailed arrangements have yet to be finalised, but it is expected that the exhibition will be opened at ministerial level.

Fire Safety Standards

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria govern the application of the Government fire standards code to major refurbishments of his Department's storage facilities.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The code is applied to major refurbishments of MOD storage facilities where feasible or cost-effective.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the annual amount of expenditure on improving fire safety standards in his Department's storage depots for each year since 1979.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Figures for years prior to 1984 are not readily available. Fire safety-related expenditure by calendar year since 1984, which includes spending on specific fire safety enhancements and on new buildings which meet the Government fire standards code, has been broadly as follows:

	£ million
1984	1·3
1985	11·7
1986	22·7
1987	8·9
1988	14·0
1989	6·4

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the legal status of the Government fire standards code; and whether the code applies to his Department's storage facilities in other countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The code is an advisory document, and has no statutory force. It is applicable to the Ministry of Defence's storage facilities worldwide.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what regulations govern the liaison between the various military fire services and local civilian fire services in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) abroad.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Departmental regulations, applicable in the United Kingdom and overseas, provide for visits to Ministry of Defence establishments by local fire brigades, for joint exercises and mutual assistance.

TRANSPORT

Ferries (Safety)

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he has taken to improve the safety of existing roll on/roll off ferries since the sinking of the Herald of Free Enterprise.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have taken a number of steps to improve ferry safety since March 1987. Firstly, new legislation and guidance—including eight sets of regulations—have been introduced. The control of operational procedures which the new regulations have ensured has been fully supplemented by increased numbers of random and unannounced inspections by Department of Transport marine surveyors. Secondly, we have required all United Kingdom flag ferries, irrespective of year of build, to meet the United Kingdom residual stability standards introduced for new vessels in 1980. All but a handful of the older United Kingdom ships, which are at present being phased out, now meet these standards, which exceed current international stability standards. Thirdly, a wide-ranging research programme to examine the capability of roll on/roll off passenger ships to survive after sustaining collision damage has been undertaken. Its findings will be made public shortly.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether all roll on/roll off ferries now comply with the passenger ships regulations in respect of stability in the event of an incident at sea.

Mr. McLoughlin: All United Kingdom registered roll on/roll off passenger ships comply with the United Kingdom and international passenger ship regulations which include requirements in respect of stability in the event of an incident at sea.

London Underground

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report from the chairman of London Underground Ltd. about plans to refit the automatic ticket barriers on the London underground and as to what is proposed, for what reason and at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: This is an operational matter for London Underground Ltd. I am not aware of any plans to refit the gates, but I understand that a new touch-and-pass system of operating automatic ticket gates will be adopted at certain stations for a trial period of six months.

I am sure that London Underground would be happy to provide the hon. Member with full information on how the system works and what its benefits are.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report from the chairman of LRT on the policy of extending one-person operation of trains on deep tube lines of London; what assessment has been made of the risk to passengers of such a policy; whether this policy has been approved by the railway inspectorate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The decision to extend one-person operation on any part of the underground is for London Underground. I understand that it commissioned an independent assessment before introducing one-person operation on the Bakerloo line last year.

Although the railway inspectorate has no statutory role in approving one-person operation, there is full consultation with London Underground over all safety aspects. The inspectorate observed a recent exercise, which simulated an emergency caused by incapacitation of a one-person-operation train driver. The chief inspecting officer of railways has assured me that he regards the arrangements as acceptable in safety terms.

"Marchioness"

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what representations he has received to set-up a full public inquiry into the sinking of the Marchioness; and what has been his response;

(2) whether he will publish in full his Department's inquiry into the sinking of the Marchioness; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Several requests have been made for a formal investigation into the sinking of the Marchioness. The present preference of my right hon. Friend is to publish in full the report by the chief inspector of accidents as soon as possible.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Bowbelle and other sand dredgers are working on the Thames outside daylight hours; and what changes in their operation since the Marchioness sinking his Department had required of them.

Mr. McLoughlin: Bowbelle, other sand dredgers and other ships operate on the Thames at all hours provided that they follow the general directions for navigation issued by the Port of London Authority. These directions have been reconsidered and amended since the Marchioness tragedy, in consultation with the Department of Transport, to improve safety on the river.

Jubilee Line

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) at what stage of the Jubilee line project Olympia and York will pay its contribution to the cost of the extension;

(2) what was the financial contribution that Olympia and York was going to make to the Jubilee line under the terms of the provisional contract or orginal agreement.

Mr. Portillo: Under the agreement reached last November Olympia and York will make a cash contribution of £400 million to the Jubilee line extension. Of that sum, £100 million will be paid within the next three years with the balance to be paid in the years following the opening of the line.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his practice from time to time to travel on the Jubilee line of London Underground between St. John's Wood and Charing Cross stations in order to experience for himself the conditions undergone by regular passengers.

Mr. Portillo: No, but I have travelled on many parts of the underground at peak times and I am aware that congestion can be severe. London Underground is investing record sums, with Government support, to bring about improvements. St. John's Wood station will be renovated this spring at a cost of about £1 million.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which developers other than Olympia and York will be contributing to the extension of the Jubilee line.

Mr. Portillo: British Gas and Regalian.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether there has been any change in the level of the net contribution which Olympia and York will be making for the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Portillo: No.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether any options are being considered to reduce the number of intermediate stations in the Southwark stretch of the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Portillo: Powers are being sought in the Bill for stations in the Southwark stretch of the Jubilee line extension at Waterloo, Southwark, London Bridge, Bermondsey and Canada Water (Surrey Quays). The case for providing stations at Southwark and Bermondsey, where patronage is expected to be light, is still being considered.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether a provisional contract or agreement for the funding of the Jubilee line has been signed by his Department or London Regional Transport with Olympia and York.

Mr. Portillo: A schedule of terms setting out the agreement reached last November has been initialled by the Department and Olympia and York. The final agreement will be executed by London Regional Transport and Olympia and York.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether Olympia and York will be taking a share of the ticket revenue from passengers after the opening of the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Portillo: No.

London Assessment Studies

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he received by 28 February relating to each of the four London assessment studies; and what percentage of the total (a) supported and (b) objected to these proposals.

Mr. Atkins: The number of responses received from local authorities, national and local organisations, pressure groups and individuals was approximately as follows:

	Number
South London	9,700
East London	9,500
West London	4,600
South Circular	2,600

An analysis will be published shortly.

"St Columbia"

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the marine accident investigation branch has investigated the role of the radio officer in maintaining vital radio communications with the emergency services during the fire which left the roll-on roll-off passenger ferry St. Columbia adrift without power in the Irish sea on Wednesday 31 January; and what conclusions have been drawn from the investigation.

Mr. McLoughlin: The purpose of an investigation carried out by the marine accident investigation branch is to determine the circumstances and causes of an accident. To this end, the inspector who carried out the investigation into the fire on board the St. Columbia on 31 January interviewed several of the ship's officers—including the radio officer. The inspector found that the fire occurred when fuel oil escaped from a pipe and sprayed onto a hot exhaust manifold, causing the oil to ignite. A report will be published to apprise the shipping industry of the lessons to be learnt.

Sprinter Units

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the safety of sprinter units; and what steps are being taken to ensure that the doors on such units lock securely.

Mr. Portillo: I have received a small number of representations. Problems with the door-locking mechanisms of class 155 sprinters developed towards the end of 1988. After modification, the doors have worked satisfactorily. The railway inspectorate is now examining at design stage all proposals for new BR rolling stock.

St. John's Wood Underground Station

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report on the safety aspects of the closure of both the up and down escalators at St. John's Wood underground station.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave to his question on 27 March.

Clyde Port Authority

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the names of the chairman, chief executive and directors of the Clyde Port Authority; what are their periods of office and their annual remuneration; and from which organisation they were recruited and appointed.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has appointed the following non-executive members of the Clyde Port Authority:

Name	Organisation	Expiry date of appointment
Sir Robert Easton CBE (Chairman)	Chairman and managing director of Kvaerner Govan, Shipbuilders	31 March 1992
L. McGarry	Chairman of Strathclyde regional council's economic and industrial development committee	31 March 1991
W. K. Mackay	Partner in Jamieson & Mackay Partners, consulting civil, structural and transportation engineers	31 March 1992
G. S. Milne	Managing Director of Scottish Metropolitan Property plc	31 March 1992
T. O'Connor	Chairman of the local port workers branch of the TGWU	31 March 1992
C. S. Paterson	Chief Executive of Caledonian McBrayne Limited	31 March 1992
J. M. Young	Former joint general manager and member of the management board of the Bank of Scotland	31 March 1991

The executive officers who are members of the board and whose appointments are at the discretion of the authority are:

J. Mather—managing director
G. P. Johnston—director and secretary
Captain D. B. McMurray—director marine and operations

According to the authority's accounts for 1988, the annual remuneration received by the chairman was £10,000 and by the other non-executive members was £3,500. The highest paid executive on the board received £44,385 and the other two received between £20,000 and £35,000.

Driving Tests

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what conclusions have been reached, as a result of the trial carried out by his Department, about conducting driving tests on Saturdays.

Mr. Atkins: The trial was very successful and confirmed that Saturday testing is a practical proposition at many centres. In the first year the service was used by some 30,000 candidates, and contributed three to four days to the reduction in waiting times. I have decided to continue the service on a permanent basis, and to extend it to all centres where it is feasible to do so.

ENVIRONMENT

Housing, Kent

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the number of council houses, flats and sheltered accommodation owned by each local authority in Kent in 1978 and 1989, together with the amount collected in rent.

Mr. Chope: Local authorities provide estimates of their housing revenue accounts on their second advance subsidy claim returns. The latest available information for local authorities in Kent for 1978-79 and 1989-90 is as follows:

	1978-79		1989-90
	Number of dwellings[1]	Rent income[2] £ million	Number of dwellings[1]	Rent income[2] £ million

Disabled People (Housing)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure a more even spread and consistent provision of improvement and disabled facilities grants to disabled home owners across the country.

Mr. Chope: When the main provisions of part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 are implemented on 1 July, mandatory disabled facilities grants will be available from all local authorities for a much wider range of adaptation works than the current home improvement grant system allows. Authorities will also be able to give discretionary grants for other works, which will vary according to local needs and priorities.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that local housing authorities address the housing needs of disabled people in their area.

Mr. Chope: Local housing authorities are required by Section 3 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970 to have regard to the special housing needs of disabled people when considering the housing needs of their district.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will make a supplementary credit approval available for local housing authorities to adapt their own properties for disabled people.

Mr. Chope: Resources for local authority capital expenditure on housing are allocated through the annual round of housing investment programme (HIP) allocations. The distribution of these allocations reflects the entire spectrum of needs for local authority capital expenditure, including the adaptation of council housing stock for disabled tenants. There is no need, therefore, to issue supplementary credit approvals for this purpose.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will take steps to ensure that landlords taking over local authority property under the Housing Acts 1986 and 1988 address the housing needs both of disabled tenants and of future disabled applicants for housing.

Mr. Chope: Purchasers of council housing, whether acquiring under tenants' choice or by a large scale voluntary transfer from a local authority, will be expected to subscribe to the tenants' guarantee, which requires landlords to pay special attention to the specific housing difficulties experienced by particular groups, including disabled people. Purpose-built housing for the disabled which has special facilities, such as a warden, is excluded from transfers under tenants' choice.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will update the guidelines contained in HDD occasional paper 2/74 "Mobility Housing" and HDD occasional paper 2/75 "Wheelchair Housing".

Mr. Chope: I am satisfied that the guidelines contained in these papers are sound and have no plans to update them.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to encourage the provision of wheelchair and mobility housing by general needs housing associations.

Mr. Chope: The Housing Corporation requires new build and, where possible, rehabilitation schemes by housing associations to be built to mobility standards, and the cost criteria used by the corporation in assessing schemes and calculating grant make due allowance for this. Where associations wish to provide new housing designed specifically for tenants confined to wheelchairs, grant is available to cover the extra costs involved.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that local authorities' action on providing housing for homeless people addresses the housing needs of homeless disabled people.

Mr. Michael Spicer: A revised code of guidance is being prepared which will provide advice to local authorities on meeting their statutory duties to the homeless. This will include the need to recognise special requirements, such as those of the disabled, when securing permanent accommodation for homeless households.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to make supplementary credit approvals available to local housing authorities to provide housing for disabled people leaving residential care.

Mr. Chope: We have no proposals to issue supplementary credit approvals to local authorities for this purpose in 1990-91. The Department takes account of the housing needs of disabled people in the distribution of local authorities' housing investment programme (HIP) allocations each year. In addition, the Housing Corporation plans to maintain the output of their special needs programme in 1990-91 at no less than current levels, and disabled people are one of the groups helped by this programme.

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will take steps to ensure that all private developers build to mobility standards with a minimum percentage of dwellings to wheelchair standards.

Mr. Chope: My Department fully supports the initiative by the National House-Building Council, in association with other interested bodies, to encourage private developers to design housing convenient for disabled people to live in or visit. We consider that voluntary action and good practice are the best way forward for private dwellings.

Community Care

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking to ensure that local housing authorities work with social services departments on the new community care initiatives being developed as a result of the White Paper, "Caring for People".

Mr. Chope: My Department has been in regular contact with the Department of Health in the preparation of the White Paper and of the ensuing legislation. Clause 43 of the Bill as now amended will require social services departments to consult local housing authorities and other housing providers in the preparation and revision of communtiy care plans.

London Docklands

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what the financial arrangements will be for the remaining social homes, after taking account of the Winsor Park development, of the London Docklands development corporation programme of 2,000 new rented homes in the docklands area of the London borough of Newham.

Mr. Moynihan: The memorandum of agreement between the London Docklands development corporation and the London borough of Newham has the objective of producing 1,500 social housing units. The London Docklands development corporation's grants towards schemes at Winsor Park and North Beckton have secured 434 of these. The London Docklands development corporation is considering the arrangements for further schemes in consultation with the Housing Corporation and Newham.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the Government's estimate of the number of households excused from paying rates in the current financial year because of insufficient income and the number who paid a reduced rate for the same reason; how many in each case were estimated as liable to pay more and how many less under the poll tax in identical circumstances; and how many who were not eligible for a reduction in rates on income grounds, will be eligible for a reduction under the poll tax.

Mr. Chope: No such estimates were made when it was decided that the community charge offered the best alternative to domestic rates.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will exclude expenditure on education from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes;

(2) if he will exclude expenditure on maintenance of council housing from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes;

(3) if he will exclude expenditure on public libraries from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes;

(4) if he will make it his policy as part of his charge-capping proposals to indicate the areas of the capped budget in which he proposes each authority should make reductions.

Mr. Chope: It would not be right for me to speculate on the detailed operation of community charge capping, were my right hon. Friend to use his capping powers for 1990-91.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's current estimate of the number of households paying the full rate whose occupants would contribute less under the poll tax, and the average amount saved in each case.

Mr. Chope: Had local authorities set community charges at the levels contained in the Community Charge Transitional Relief Report (England), I estimate that 55 per cent. of households with no entitlement to rate rebates in 1989-90 would pay a lower proportion of their net income in community charges in 1990-91 than they did in rates in 1989-90. The average amount paid in rates for these households in 1989-90 was £516 compared to £503 in community charge in 1990-91. These estimates are based on simple survey data taken from the family expenditure survey and are consistent with the analysis of the distributional impact of the community charge placed in the Library on 15 February.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report the estimate of the numbers who would have (a) gained and (b) lost if the level of poll tax had not exceeded the Government's targets.

Mr. Chope: The Government have not set targets for the level of the community charge in each area. An analysis of the effect on household finances of moving to the community charge was placed in the Library on 15 February. This showed 60 per cent. of households gaining.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to exempt from poll tax women residing in refuges who have been the victims of domestic violence and have been forced to leave the marital home.

Mr. Chope: A period of residence within a women's refuge does not confer exemption from the community charge unless it is a night shelter or hostel. But, in general, women will not be registered at refuges for the community charge unless, exceptionally, they are solely or mainly resident there. In almost all cases, women stay in refuges for short periods, during which they will be registered for the personal charge at their previous address.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the total figures for 1990-91 local government finance for (a) the distributable amount, (b) the distributable amount per adult, (c) net total standard spending, (d) revenue support grant and (e) population of England.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is as follows:
the distributable amount: £10·4 billion
the distributable amount per adult: 292·51
net total standard spending: £29·8 billion revenue support grant: £9·5 billion sum of the relevant populations of English charging authorities: 35·7 million.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, with reference to paragraph 2.5 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), what definition is used for (a) relevant populations as used in the explanation of distributable amount per adult and (b) relevant population, as used in the subsequent sub-paragraphs; and if he will list the relevant population for each authority.

Mr. Chope: The rules for calculating relevant population are set out in the Population Report (England) approved by this House on 18 January. Figures for each authority were placed in the Library on 11 January, with other details of the 1990-91 settlement.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, with reference to paragraph 3.7 of his Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), if he will list the results for each authority of applying formulae to indicators in section (a) and multiplying by the area cost adjustment for education, but not scaling to control.

Mr. Chope: I have today placed in the Library a table which shows the standard spending assessment for primary education for each authority, prior to scaling to the control total for this sub-block.

Rateable Values

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what figures he has for the proportion of people living in properties of above average rateable value who have below average incomes.

Mr. Chope: I estimate that 40 per cent. of houses with above average rateable value are lived in by households who have below average incomes.

Toxic Wood Preservatives

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the regulations for the storage of toxic wood preservatives of the type which have polluted the River Bourne in Woking.

Mr. Trippier: I am satisfied that the existing controls over the storage of toxic wood preservatives are extensive and sufficiently comprehensive in most circumstances. In the case of the incident on the River Bourne at Woking, the cause is still under investigation by the local constabulary.

The storage of wood preservatives is covered by the general provisions of the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act, 1974. More specifically, wood preservatives are subject to the Control of Pesticides Regulations (COPR) made under the Food and Environment Protection Act, 1985. Certain timber treatment activities are also subject to the requirements of the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations, 1984, which aim to prevent and mitigate the consequences of major accidents to people or the environment. These regulations are due to be amended later this year to comply with the second amendment to the "Seveso" directive (82/501/EEC) to include additional premises storing toxic substances such as wood preservatives.

House Condition Survey

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will publish from the English house condition survey 1986 information on the means of heating the bathroom tabulated (a) by income and (b) by tenure;

(2) if he will publish from the English house condition survey 1986 information on the main form of heating in the living room tabulated by (a) income and (b) tenure;

(3) if he will publish from the English house condition survey 1986 information on the form of heating used in kitchen and hall tabulated by (a) tenure and (b) income;

(4) if he will publish from the English house condition survey 1986 information on the means of heating for other

(5) if he will publish from the House condition survey 1986 information on the main form of heating used in the interviewee's bedroom tabulated by (a) income and (b) tenure.

Mr. Chope: As I indicated in the answer I gave to the hon. Member on 18 January, Official Report, Column 366, information on these topics will be included in a supplementary report on the English house condition survey which will be published later this year.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to require the sampling of bathing waters to be undertaken during specified conditions.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority is the competent authority for the purposes of the bathing water directive. It is for that authority to sample waters in accordance with the directive's rules.

Partnership Programme, Newcastle

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the environment what was the capital allocation for the 1989-90 partnership programme for Newcastle city; what has been the actual spend to date; what is the planned real outturn for 1989-90; and what will be the amount spent on projects within the parliamentary constituency of Newcastle upon Tyne, East.

Mr. Moynihan: The urban programme capital allocation to the Newcastle-Gateshead inner city partnership for 1989-90 is £12·3 million of which £6·14 million is allocated to Newcastle city. A total of £3·3 million of the Newcastle city allocation had been spent by 31 December 1989. The city council has recently informed my Department that there will be a £500,000 underspend on their capital allocation producing an estimated outturn figure of £5·64 million for Newcastle city for 1989-90. This underspend, however, has been contained within partnership through a transfer of resources to Gateshead MBC. My Department's regional office does not record urban programme expenditure by parliamentary constituency and therefore this information can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Brighton Aquarium

Mr Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy to institute an inquiry into animal welfare and safety conditions at the Brighton aquarium and to suspend its operating licence pending the outcome of the inquiry;

(2) what educational purpose is served by the Brighton aquarium; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Brighton aquarium is licensed by the local authority, Brighton borough council, under the Zoo Licensing Act 1981. The Act gives local authorities the powers, inter alia, to carry out special inspections and to withdraw licenses, in certain circumstances. Animal welfare, safety conditions and educational value are among the factors which are taken into account in the issue of a licence.

Dolphinaria

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what action he expects to take to review the operating licences of dolphinaria which have not replied to requests or reminders for details from United Kingdom dolphinaria of their operating plans for implementing new standards;

(2) what enforcement action he proposes to take in the case of operators of dolphinaria failing to respond to his Department's requests for the submission of operators' plans or implementing new standards for dolphinara, pursuant to the 1986 Klinowska report;

(3) when he expects to receive operators' plans for implementing new standards for dolphinaria from all four United Kingdom operators;

(4) whether he proposes to review the operating licences of United Kingdom dolphinaria.

Mr. Trippier: The steering group report makes it clear that display exemption licences will only be renewed by my Department in August 1991 if satisfactory progress has been made towards attainment of the revised standards by August 1993. All four dolphinaria operators are aware of this deadline and three have now responded to our requests for information about their plans.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take regarding the implementation of the steering group's recommendations on the Klinowska report on revised criteria for licensing dolphinaria in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: My officials have undertaken consultations with all interested parties on the basis of the draft standards of modern zoo practice annexed to the steering group report. We will issue the additional standards once any outstanding technical questions have been resolved.

County Hall

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider the use of County Hall for hon. Members' offices or other public use; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: No.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy in considering any planning appeals to ensure that in the event of development of County Hall the war memorial and inscribed marble detailing the offices of previous leading figures of the London county council and Greater London council will remain in situ;

(2) if he will make it his policy, in considering any planning appeal relevant to County Hall, to ensure that the council chamber is not affected by any development proposals; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend cannot prejudge the outcome of any planning appeal.

Mr. Tony Banks To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of money he estimates will be made available to London boroughs from the disposal of County Hall.

Mr. Moynihan: I cannot give an estimate in advance of the completion of a contract.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decision regarding the future of County Hall; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friend will announce his decisions on the planning appeals which were the subject of a public inquiry last autumn when he has considered his inspector's report.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution was made by Her Majesty's Government to the CITES secretariat ivory unit in the year 1989-90 to date.

Mr. Trippier: In the year 1989-90, the United Kingdom contributed £5,000 towards the running of the CITES monitoring unit for trade in raw ivory.

Local Authority Properties

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received about inefficient use of resources in respect of local authorities completely reroofing properties in their ownership in place of reinstating them with a longer expectation of life at less cost.

Mr. Chope: None.

Heritage Organisations

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what grants will be available in 1990-91 for voluntary heritage organisations.

Mr. Trippier: The table gives the voluntary organisations to which grants will be made in 1990-91 in support of the work they do to promote and protect parts of the national heritage.

Applicant	Grant
Architectural Heritage Fund	23,616
Cathedral Camps	21,500
Centre for Environmental Interpretation	8,666
The Insite Trust	3,900
The Garden History Society	10,700
The National Council for the Conservation of Plants and Gardens	5,000
Heritage Education Trust	16,000

The Ancient Monuments Society	16,810
The Council for British Archaeology	16,810
The Georgian Group	16,810
The Victorian Society	17,336
The Society for the Protection of Ancient Buildings	24,810

A separate announcement will be made about the amount of grant to the Civic Trust.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 28 March 1990]: Central records are collated annually after the end of the financial year. The latest readily available information therefore covers 1988-89.

The total amount spent was £6·3 million and the contracts awarded to management or computing consultants, excluding consultancies in connection with water privatisation, by the Department of the Environment (excluding PSA) in the financial year 19988-89 were as follows:

Firm and subject of consultancy

My Department's estimate of expenditure on computing and management consultancies in the financial year 1989-90 is £10·1 million.

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount spent by the Property Services Agency in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts; excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awareded by the Property Services Agency in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that the Property Services Agency has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Chris Patten: Forecast expenditure by the Property Services Agency in the financial year 1989-90 will be £13·035 million. The planned expenditure for 1990-91 financial year is £9·5 million. This will be kept under review in the light of changing circumstances. The following consultancies were let in 1989-90:

Consultancy Firm and Subject of Assignment

Management Consultancy

W.S. Atkins Management Consultants—To review the information systems supporting the business objectives of PSA Fuel Branch.

MDA Computer Group plc.—Managing hardware/software and telecommunications network.

GECS Ltd.—Training in use of Reinforced concrete CAD software package.

Loadplan—Conversion of document-based Airfield Pavement specification to computer disc.

Oracle Corporation (UK) Ltd.—Provision of Oracle Programming Support.

Civil Defence

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local government unions and professional bodies are being consulted about the provision of nuclear, biological and chemical defence clothing and equipment to local authority staff with a civil defence role.

Mr. John Patten: I have been asked to reply.

No formal consultations are being held with these bodies in regard to protective clothing for civil defence purposes. A current working party, including representation from the Society of County Emergency Planning Officers, is concerned with the possible use of radiation survey equipment in wartime.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Food (Value)

Mr. Ralph Howell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the proportion of the value of food which has gone to (a) the producer and (b) the processor, wholesaler and retailer in each year since 1973.

Mr. Curry: Figures for the period 1973 to 1987 are as follows. However, this series was discontinued due to doubts about the validity and meaningfulness of the calculations and the difficulty of making the necessary estimates given the increasing complexity of the food chain.

Percentage of the price of food going to the producer or to the processor, wholesaler and retailer

	Producers	Processors, wholesalers and retailers
1973	51·9	48·1
1974	52·6	47·4
1975	49·9	50·1
1976	52·2	47·8
1977	52·5	47·5
1978	49·2	50·8
1979	40·0	51·0
1980	43·9	56·1
1981	44·0	56·0
1982	45·8	54·2
1983	44·1	55·9
1984	46·6	53·4
1985	44·1	55·9
1986	42·0	58·0
1987	40·5	59·5

Notes:

1. The producers' share is derived from estimates of agricultural products produced in the United Kingdom for home consumption valued at farmgate prices and imported food valued at shipside prices.
2. The share of processors, wholesalers and retailers is derived from estimates of household expenditure on food at retail plus the estimates of the wholsale value of food used in the catering sector. The retail price of food is valued less taxes but including subsidies.
3. More detailed figures are given in CSO's Annual Abstract of Statistics, 1988 edition, Table 9.16.

Farms

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the proportion of total capital grant expenditure that is given to each category of small, medium and large farms.

Mr. Curry: Information on total capital grant expenditure is not available in the form requested. However, the proportion of grant expenditure in England and Wales under the agriculture improvement scheme is identifiable by size of farm holdings as measured in British size units (BSUs). The latest year for which data are available is 1988 and the proportions of total grant expenditure of £25·4 million for that year are as follows:

1988 Size of Holding (BSU)	Per cent. of Total Grant Expenditure
0–8	14·8
8–24	35·7
24–100	43·3
100 plus	6·2

Marine Coastal Eutrophication

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why his Department decided not to be represented at the international conference on marine coastal eutrophication from 21 to 24 March.

Mr. Curry: The conference was principally concerned with the problems which are experienced in shallow, static, warm seas such as the Mediterranean. These issues are not relevant to the colder, well mixed waters round the United Kingdom.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many samples from live poultry of all types have been examined by Ministry laboratories for the presence of salmonella during 1988 and 1989; and how many samples from other animal species were similarly examined.

Mr. Maclean: From 1 January to 31 December 1989, a total of 131,472 samples were submitted to the Department's veterinary investigation centres in England and Wales for testing for the presence of salmonella in poultry. It is not possible to say how many of these samples came from live birds, carcases of birds or the environment of live birds or how many were examined in 1988 from live birds or other animal species.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times in 1989 his Ministry's laboratories have misidentified or misreported the serotypes of salmonellas they have examined.

Mr. Maclean: There have been no occasions in 1989 when a salmonella serotype was misidentified by the Ministry's veterinary laboratories. However on four occasions misreporting occurred, primarily due to clerical-typing errors.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to restrict the spreading of manure from calves and pigs infected with salmonella on to farmland in line with his restrictions on the spreading of manure from infected poultry flocks.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of whether intact grade A eggs, derived from flocks infected with salmonella enteritidis, delivered to egg producing plants and pasteurised immediately after breaking out, would introduce such heavy contamination into the pasteurisation process that it would overwhelm the process and cause it to fail.

Mr. Maclean: As I explained to my hon. Friend in my answers to earlier questions, only a moderate heat treatment can be applied to liquid egg during the pasteurisation process otherwise its functional properties are destroyed. It is also important in processing to prevent salmonella contamination of the plant environment which would put the final pasteurised product at risk. For these reasons, processing plants cannot accept raw product from infected flocks which may be contaminated with salmonella enteritidis.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his assessment of the possibility of domestic wild birds infecting farm animals with salmonella typhimurium and enteritidis through their droppings.

Mr. Maclean: Salmonella organisms are widespread in the environment and the potential for the infection of farm animals through wild birds exists.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what provisions apply to the slaughter of laying flocks found to be infected with salmonella enteriditis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The provisions relating to the compulsory slaughter of poultry laying flocks are contained in the Animal Health Act 1987 as applied in respect of salmonella through the provisions of the Zoonoses Order 1989.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether there is a difference in multiplication rates between salmonellas introduced into eggs and those introduced naturally into intact grade A eggs.

Mr. Maclean: Little information is available to indicate whether differences exist in the multiplication rates between salmonellas introduced into eggs and those introduced naturally into intact grade A eggs and research continues to investigate the factors which govern the multiplication rates of salmonella in shell eggs.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will define the terms egg and egg product as used by his Department.

Mr. Curry: An egg is a poultry egg in shell and an egg product is whole egg—a mixture of yolk and albumen—or its constituent parts, not in shell.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current financial position of the egg producer industry and his assessment of the likely impact on it of the refusal to issue licences to producers with flocks subject to infected place notices under the Zoonoses Order 1989.

Mr. Curry: The market for eggs is firm and packer to produce prices are currently at high levels.

In granting licences for the removal of material from premises subject to an infected place notice under the Zoonoses Order 1989, the Government's priority is to protect public health. The reply given to my hon. Friend on 5 February, Official Report, column 499, explains why eggs from an infected flock cannot be removed for processing. But it was announced on 26 March, Official Report, columns 54-55, that carcases from infected flocks may be sold for processing under carefully controlled conditions and subject to stringent safeguards.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial contributions are intended to be made from former eggs authority funds to the British Egg Industry Council and the British egg information service during the financial year 1990-91; and what part of that sum is intended to support the recently announced British lion scheme.

Mr. Curry: Subject to the approval of the European Commission it is proposed to make up to £350,000 available to the British Egg Industry Council (BEIC) for the 1990-91 promotional campaign. In the financial year 1989-90, a total of £107,000 was made available to the BEIC for programmes previously approved by the European Commission. These sums include the cost of work carried out by the British Egg Information Service on behalf of the BEIC.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his response to the recent report sent to him by the Secretary of the United Kingdom Egg Producers Association.

Mr. Maclean: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to a letter from the Secretary of the United Kingdom Egg Producers' Association dated 6 February to which officials replied on my behalf on 28 February.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) why it has been decided not to make residual Eggs Authority funds available to organisations representing the majority of egg producers;

(2) why the Government provide funding to the British Egg Industry Council only; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Argriculture Act 1986 requires the Agriculture Ministers to dispose of the net assets of the Authority for the benefit of persons engaged by way of business in the production, marketing and processing of eggs.

When the egg industry was consulted in 1986 on how the net assests should be used the National Farmers Union of England and Wales, the National Farmers Union of Scotland, the Ulster Farmers Union, the Scottish Egg Producer Retailers Association, the British Egg Association, the British Poultry Breeders and Hatcheries Association, the National Egg Marketing Association and the British Egg Products Association all urged that the Government should disburse these assets through the British Egg Industry Council. UKEP Association Ltd was the only association to dissent from that view.

The Government considered that it would be appropriate to follow the advice tendered by nearly all the industry associations which between them clearly represented the majority of those engaged in the production, marketing and processing of eggs.

Poultry Industry

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in light of his proposals to restrict the spreading of manure from infected broiler flocks, whether he intends to introduce compulsory testing of broiler flocks to enable identification of potentially contaminated manure.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to restrict the spreading of manure from infected broiler flocks or to introduce the compulsory testing of these flocks. Isolations of salmonella by laboratories are required to be reported to MAFF under the Zoonoses Order 1989. Flock owners are advised to stack and disinfect manure removed from houses where salmonella infected broilers have been kept.

Wild Birds (Infection)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has any plans to restrict the access of wild birds to sewage works and refuse tips.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to do so.

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information he has concerning the research currently being undertaken in Reading university on the toxicity of pesticide mixes; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what research he is undertaking into the toxicity of approved pesticides when ingested in combination.

Mr. Maclean: Research into this subject has been carried out jointly by Reading university and the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, part of the National Environment Research Council. One of the Reading team, Dr. Colin Walker, is a member of the environmental panel of the advisory committee and a proposal for the funding of follow-up studies is currently lodged with the Department of the Environment.

Dairy Crest (Redundancies)

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many jobs are to be lost in the latest round of Dairy Crest creamery closures; how many redundancies are expected in Derbyshire; what are the levels of redundancy payments arising directly, or indirectly, from European Economic Community funds; what steps he is taking to prevent the closures; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Dairy plant closures are a matter for the firms concerned. Dairy Crest Limited has announced a rationalisation programme involving the loss of 450 jobs, of which 153 are at the company's Alfreton creamery which will close at the end of December 1990. There are no Community funds for redundancy payments, but the company's own arrangements provide for payments which exceed the statutory minimum. In addition, the company is setting up job shops at the various sites and is confident that most of those looking for new jobs will be successful.

Agriculture Council

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held this week in Luxembourg.

Mr. Gummer: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Agriculture Council from 26 to 29 March together with the Parliamentary Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Skipton and Ripon (Mr. Curry). Discussion concentrated on the 1990 price fixing. Detailed and intense discussions over several days resulted in two presidential compromises. However, a qualified majority could not be found. Discussion is expected to resume at the next meeting of the Council beginning on 25 April.

EMPLOYMENT

Earnings

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the proportion of female and male full-time workers in the United Kingdom, the south-west and Avon, respectively, whose hourly earnings, exclusive of overtime, fell below (a) £2·80, (b) £3·00, (c) £3·20, (d) £3·60, (e) £4·00 and (f) £4·50 in April 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The estimated percentages of full-time adult female and male employees earning below specified amounts in the new earnings survey sample in April 1989 are provided in the table. Figures for Great Britain are given as the equivalent information for the United Kingdom as a whole is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Hourly earnings less than:—

per cent.

	£2.80	£3.00	£3.20	£3.60	£4.00	£4.50
Females
Great Britain	14	19	25	36	46	57
South West	16	21	28	41	52	64

	£2.80	£3.00	£3.20	£3.60	£4.00	£4.50
Avon	10	14	21	33	46	59
Males
Great Britain	5	7	10	17	24	35
South West	5	8	12	20	28	39
Avon	4	6	9	15	21	31

Hourly earnings excluding overtime, earnings not affected by absence.

YTS Allowances

Mr Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will arrange for YTS allowances to be increased to cover community charge payments for young people who have never paid rates and who are on a scheme living away from home.

Mr. Nicholls: There are no plans to do so. YTS non-employed trainees who need to live away from the parental home in order to benefit from a training course receive a lodging allowance to cover their lodging costs.

Wakefield TEC

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish the names of the business people who are involved with the Wakefield training and enterprise council; and if he will give information as to their business interests.

Mr. Eggar: The Wakefield TEC is currently drawing up its corporate plan which will list the board of directors.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what date the Wakefield training and enterprise council was established; what consultations took place with interested organisations including the trades councils and local authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: An employer-led group was awarded development funding to establish a training and enterprise council in Wakefield on 25 January 1990. It is now preparing its corporate and business plans and I expect it to consult all relevant local interests in drawing up these Plans.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what amount of funds has been allocated to the Wakefield training and enterprise council for the current year.

Mr. Eggar: Development funding of £109,000 has been awarded to an employer-led group in Wakefield to set up a training and enterprise council for the area.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total amount spent by the Training Commission in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Training Commission in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that the Training Commission has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Eggar: [holding answer 28 March 1990]; The Training Agency estimate, that expenditure in the financial year 1989-90 will be £3.4 million on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases. No management consultancy contracts were awarded during 1989-90. The total budget for 1990-91 has not yet been agreed. The list of computer consultancy contracts awarded during the financial year 1989-90 is as follows:

Consultants and Subject of Assignment

THE ARTS

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on British Telecom's forthcoming A-Z business and services phone book as it affects reference to access for people with disabilities to arts and leisure venues, and the role played by Arts Access in encouraging this and other provision of facilities for disabled people.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 28 March 1990]: I welcome the initiative to include a reference guide for disabled people in the London business and services phone book. I was pleased to be present at the launch and to be able to congratulate Arts Access and British Telecom for putting this simple but effective idea into practice. It will certainly help to improve access to the arts for disabled people.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Minister for the Arts what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The Office of Arts and Libraries had no management and computer consultancy contracts in 1989-90, and has no present plans for any in 1990-91.

Works of Art

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Arts if there have been any items accepted in lieu of tax or allocated since he last made an announcement on the subject to the House.

Mr. Luce: Since my announcement on 14 February Official Report, column 239, I am pleased to announce that three further offers have been accepted in lieu of tax: a woodcut by Edward Munch, "Two People—the Lonely Ones" and two paintings, one by Corot entitled "Richmond pres Londres", and one by Jan van der Heyden, "The Westerkerk". The tax satisfied was £57,539, £361,500 and £2,800,000 respectively. The acceptance of the van der Heyden painting was made possible by a call on the Reserve.

No decision has yet been taken on the allocation of the Corot painting, but in accordance with the conditions on which they were offered the Munch woodcut will go to the Whitworth art gallery, Manchester and the van der Heyden painting will be allocated to the National gallery. Finally, I would like to inform the House that because of a change in the tax liabilities due on the estate concerned, the cost of the acceptance of the Kirckman harpsichord, announced on 14 February, has been reduced to £25,276·95.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing tax and national insurance contributions, less child benefit, where appropriate, for 1990-91, and comparable figures for 1989-90 and 1978-79, with the multiples of average earnings of half, two thirds, one, five and 10 times for (a) a married couple with part-time working spouse, (b) a married couple plus two children with part-time working spouse and (c) a single person.

Mr. Lilley: The information requested for a single person is given in the table. Figures for married couples with part-time working spouse will depend on how much the part-time worker earns.

Payments of income tax and national insurance contributions by a single person (£ per week at current prices)
Multiples of average male earnings[1]

	½	⅔	1	5	10
1978-79	10·93	17·04	29·25	242·17	625·97
1989-90[2]	32·71	48·60	80·31	506·61	1,066·61
1990-91	33·98	51·23	85·62	553·05	1,160·65

[1] Full time males on adult rates (all occupations), using illustrative assumption of 8½ per cent. growth in earnings between 1989-90 and 1990-91.

[2] Financial year average of pre- and post-October regimes for employees national insurance contributions.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any ivory is currently being held by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Mr. Ryder: Yes. Quantities of ivory are regularly seized by customs and held pending disposal.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he is now in a position to produce records of ivory seizures since 12 April 1989.

Mr. Ryder: No. As I said in my reply of 23 October 1989, Official Report, columns 286-87 to an earlier question on this topic, detailed information about such seizures is compiled only periodically. Customs will be doing so in connection with publication of the commissioners' annual report for the year ending 31 March 1990.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of the fate of the five consignments of ivory held at Heathrow airport and referred to in his reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West on 6 June 1989, Official Report, column 118.

Mr. Ryder: All five consignments have now been seized. No further details can be given at this stage because court proceedings in relation to forfeiture of the goods are in prospect.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many consignments of ivory were detained or seized by customs officers in 1989 and 1990 to date.

Mr. Ryder: Records of detentions which do not result in seizure are not maintained centrally and information about them could be obtained only at disproportionate expense. Information about seizures is compiled only periodically. Customs will be doing so in connection with publication of the commissioners' annual report for the year ending 31 March 1990.

Income Tax

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the revenue from income tax in Scotland, broken down by district and islands authorities, in (a) the period between April 1987 and April 1988 and (b) the period between April 1988 and April 1989;

(2) what was the total revenue from income tax raised in Scotland in (a) the period between April 1987 and April 1988 and (b) the period between April 1988 and April 1989.

Mr. Lilley: The latest information is for the 1987-88 tax year and covers the income tax liabilities of residents of Scotland. The estimates in the table are based on samples, which places limitations on their reliability, particularly in the case of smaller districts.

Income tax liability of residents—1987-88

Banking Services

Mr. David Davis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he proposes to publish the Government's response to the report of the review committee on banking services law and practice.

Mr. Major: The Government's full response to the report of the review committee is published today in a White Paper "Banking Services: Law and Practice" Cm1026.

The review committee was commissioned by the Government, jointly with the Bank of England, in January 1987 to undertake a full review of the legal framework for banking services. The committee was chaired by Professor Robert Jack CBE, and the other members were Mrs. Liliana Archibald and Mr. Geoffrey Taylor. Their report, which was published on 23 February 1989 (Cm622), provided a very clear and comprehensive critique of the existing law. The Government are extremely grateful to the committee for all its work in producing the report.

The committee found that the legislative framework had stood the test of time remarkably well, despite the very rapid changes seen in banking in recent years; there were no major deficiencies or gaps, but the committee indentified a number of areas where banking practice could be improved and where they felt the law might be usefully clarified or tightened up. The Government made it clear when the committee's report was published that in considering their response to its recommendations, they would wish to take full account of the views of those who would be affected by the proposals, and would, therefore, consider carefully the implications for bankers, their customers and the general public interest. This the Government have done. The names of those who submitted comments on the review committee's report are set out in the White Paper.

The Committee's central recommendation was, in fact, addressed to the banks and building societies, rather than to the Government. It was that they should prepare and adopt a code of banking practice, aimed at ensuring that customers were made fully aware of the basis on which banks or building societies would conduct their dealings. The code would, for example, specify that customers should be given information in clear and simple language about the terms of their contract with the banker and the rights and obligations that apply on both sides; customers would be told of their rights to privacy under the law and the very limited circumstances in which any information about their personal finances may be passed on; customers would be told how to lodge a complaint if that proved necessary, how such complaints would be dealt with, and how matters might be referred to the relevant ombudsman; they should be told what banking charges might be levied in what circumstances; and they should be given a simple explanaton of the timing of the clearing cycle and when they might normally expect funds from a cleared cheque to be available.

The Banking Information Service announced on 1 March 1990 that an independent committe under the chairmanship of Sir George Blunden (former deputy governor of the Bank of England) had been set up to oversee the preparation of such a code by the British Bankers' Association, the Building Societies Association and the Association for Payment Clearing Services. The aim would be to get the main sections of the code in place by early 1991. The Government warmly welcome this initiative, and in particular welcomes the fact that the banks and building societies have undertaken to consult the consumer interests fully before the code is introduced. The White Paper comments on a number of issues which the Goverment expect the banks and building societies to wish to consider in the preparation of the code, in line with the recommendation of the review committee. These include notification of bank charges, credit marketing and customer privacy.

The review committee made a large number of other recommendations, some of them on highly technical points of banking law, and some involving codification of existing case law or consolidation of existing legislation. In drawing up their response, the Government have carefully considered the comments of interested parties and proposed legislation only where some change is justified and where the intended effect cannot be achieved in another way, such as through the proposed code of banking practice. In general, the Government have accepted the spirit, if not the detail, of most of the committee's recommendations.

The points on which the Government will legislate in due course are set out in annex 9 of the White Paper. They include extending to all payment cards the present £50 limit on customer liability for losses and the ban on unsolicited mailing of cards and PINs which at present applies only to credit cards; tightening up banks' liability for the failure of electronic funds transfer equipment; clarifying the legal status of the various crossings and markings such as "account payee" on cheques; allowing for the "truncation" of cheques (that is, allowing banks to exchange electronic information about cheques and not the actual pieces of paper); amending and updating the Bills of Exchange Act; and dealing with a number of other detailed points raised by the Committee. These proposals will be implemented when other pressures on the legislative timetable permit.

The review committee made the key point in their report that in considering any proposals in the field of banking services it is important, above all, to preserve flexibility, and to avoid cramping competition and innovation by excessive regulation. The Government wholeheartedly endorse that view. In recent years, it has been competition within a flexible regulatory framework that has benefited the customer most. It is from this source that further improvements are most likely to come; and that is the primary principle underlying the Government's response to the review committee's report.

Child Benefit

Mr. Squire: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the savings would be of taxing the child benefit for taxpayers at the 40 per cent. tax rate in 1990-91.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The direct revenue yield for 1990-91 from taxing child benefit—which is paid to the mother—at 40 per cent. for those married women and single parents liable to higher rate tax is estimated to be about £20 million. If child benefit were taxed at the higher marginal rate of either spouse the yield, including that from single parents, is estimated at £175 million.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the total amount spent by Her Majesty's Treasury in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by Her Majesty's Treasury in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that Her Majesty's Treasury has budgeted to spend in the current year;

(2) what was the total amount spent by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consulting firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 28 March 1990]: We estimate that our expenditure in the financial year 1989-90 will be some £5·1 million, including some £4·7 million by the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency. Figures given include the cost of development studies, which in turn include the cost of associated hardware and software; the latter items are not separately indentifiable.

The budget for the financial year 1990-91 is some £6·9 million, including some £6·3 million for the Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency.

Savings Accounts

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the availability of savings accounts which pay a 20 per cent. or higher rate of interest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 28 March 1990]: We do not keep information centrally on the full range of savings accounts that are available.

WALES

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will (a) state the number of people in employment in Wales for each quarter of 1979 and for the latest available date and sub-divided for males and females in employment and (b) provide an estimate of the extent of double-counting in (a).

Mr. Peter Walker: The information requested is shown in the table:

Civilian workforce in employment[1]

(thousands)

1979
March	711	429	1,140
June	716	441	1,157
September	720	440	1,160
December	712	443	1,155
1989
September	692	521	1,213

[1] Defined as employees in employment, the self-employed and, from 1983 onwards, participants on work-related government training schemes.

Labour force survey estimates of the number of people in employment and with a second job for Wales, which are subject to large sampling errors, suggest that in 1979 there were about 17,000 such persons. The corresponding estimate for 1989 was 45,000.

Agricultural Land

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the loss of agricultural land for urban development for each of the last 10 years in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Information on land use changes in Wales from 1985 to 1988 is included in appendices 3 and 4 of the "Environmental Digest for Wales, No. 4, 1988-89", a copy of which is in the Library. It should be noted that since changes are recorded by Ordnance Survey as part of its work on map revision, they are not necessarily recorded in the year they occur. Comparable data for earlier years are not available.

Myodil

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he proposes to take to ensure that patients in Wales who are suffering as a result of the side-effects of myodil are able to receive compensation rapidly.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Clinical Regrading Review

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appeals under the clinical regrading review are still outstanding in each health authority; and when the appeals procedure will be completed in each area.

Mr. Grist: Latest information on the number of outstanding clinical regrading appeals made at local level to employing authorities is as follows:

	Number
Mid Glamorgan HA	760
South Glamorgan HA	630
West Glamorgan	166
Gwent HA	392
East Dyfed HA	214
Pembrokeshire HA	88
Powys HA	298
Gwynedd HA	131
Clwyd HA	258

It is not possible to predict when the appeals procedures will be completed at the local level.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, how many registered hearing aid dispensers there are in each health authority area.

Mr. Grist: The information is not available centrally.

Welsh Language

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each county education authority the number of teachers employed who are (a) able to undertake Welsh language teaching at the primary and secondary levels, as required by the national curriculum and (b) in possession of the appropriate subject qualifications to ensure the national curriculum is properly delivered in all Welsh language secondary schools.

Mr. Roberts: The number of teachers who have a qualification in Welsh as either a first or second language, and who will thus be able to contribute to the teaching of Welsh as part of the national curriculum is shown in the table:

Teachers with a qualification[1] in Welsh

	All teachers (full-time and part-time)
	Primary (1987)		Secondary[2] (1989)
	1st language	2nd language	1st language	2nd language
Clwyd	400	90	110	50
Dyfed	540	60	170	40
Gwent	30	10	10	10
Gwynedd	580	40	240	40
Mid Glamorgan	—	—	120	70
Powys	90	10	40	20
South Glamorgan	110	30	60	30
West Glamorgan	260	90	100	40
TOTAL	[3]2,010	[3]330	850	300

[1] Refers to all teachers with a post A-level qualification in Welsh. All teachers with a qualification in Welsh as a first language will be capable of teaching Welsh as a second language.

[2] Secondary figures are drawn from the 1989 secondary school staffing survey and are provisional estimates. The results of the survey will be published later in the year.

[3] Excludes Mid Glamorgan.

More detailed analyses including those of subject qualifications of teachers in Welsh secondary schools will be available later this year when the 1989 secondary schools staffing survey results are published.

National Curriculum

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his reply of 22 February, Official Report, columns 861-62, if he is now in a position to publish for each county education authority the number of teachers needed to deliver all national curriculum subjects in Welsh secondary schools by teachers with the appropriate subject qualifications.

Mr. Roberts: A statistical model of the number of teachers needed to deliver the national curriculum in Welsh secondary schools is currently being produced. The model and assumptions which underlie it will be the subject of consultation with local education authorities later this year.

Nuclear Waste (Transport)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much nuclear waste is transported, by road, through Clwyd via the A5.

Mr. Atkins: The Department does not collect data of the kind requested.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

CERN

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has received in the last 12 months on the funding of CERN.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend has received no specific representations about CERN funding in the last year.

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the United Kingdom funding for CERN in 1979, 1985 and 1989.

Mr. Jackson: The United Kingdom contribution to the CERN budget in these years was as follows:

United Kingdom contribution

Calendar year	Percentage of CERN budget	Cash £ million
1979	15·8	25·2
1985	16·1	36·9
1989	16·1	50·3

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mrs. Rumbold: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989	[1]	[1]
1988	11	—
1987	10	—
1986	12	1
1985	20	—
1984	12	1
1983	12	2
1982	11	—
1981	18	1

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Devon County Council

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science pursuant to the oral answer given to the hon. Member for Torridge and Devon, West from the Under-Secretary of State on 27 February, Official Report, column 125, if he will specify how the Devon county council capital expenditure priorities differ from those of the Government.

Mr. Alan Howarth: In formulating annual capital guidelines for education for local education authorities for 1990-91, priority was given to items in LEAs' plans for committed expenditure flowing from projects covered in earlier capital allocations, new projects to meet population growth, new projects to remove surplus places, and to new major building projects at colleges. Any remaining resources were distributed by formula for improvement work in schools. Annual capital guidelines are, however, only indicative: local authorities are free to spend above the level indicated if they choose to finance such expenditure from receipts or other sources. Most of Devon LEA's plans were in respect of commitments over and above those allowed for in the department's previous allocations, and of improvement work in schools for which available resources fell well short of LEAs' plans.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will deposit in the Library copies of the approved schemes for local management of schools for each local education authority.

Mr. MacGregor: It is the responsibility of local education authorities to publish their approved schemes by distributing copies to their schools and to the Department, and by making copies available for reference in their local public libraries and education offices. I am asking authorities to consider making copies available to the Library of the House.

Examinations

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many people sat (a) GCSE and (b) A-level examinations in (i) politics, (ii) British constitution and (iii) political history in 1989.

Mrs. Rumbold: Figures for 1989 are not yet available; neither is information available specifically for the subjects requested. In 1988, there were 11,000 GCSE attempts in England in politics and British constitution by candidates in schools and colleges. Comparable information is not available in respect of A-levels, but in 1987-88, nearly 2,500 school leavers in England attempted an A-level in British constitution.

Art Students

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total cost to the Exchequer and local government of educating a student at art college who completes the course.

Mr. Jackson: The data requested are not available centrally.

College of Europe

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether there are any plans to increase the number of bursaries offered to United Kingdom students at the college of Europe.

Mr. Jackson: The college of Europe at Bruges offers postgraduate courses in administrative, economic and legal studies, in preparation for employment in European Community institutions and similar fields. The Government wish to enable more United Kingdom students to take advantage of these valuable opportunities. We therefore intend to increase substantially the number of bursaries we offer, from four currently to 21 in the academic year 1990-91. Of these, 17 will be provided by my Department for students from England and Wales. My right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Northern Ireland will increase their provision to two bursaries each. The additional cost will be met from within existing public expenditure plans. We envisage further increasing the United Kingdom total bursaries offered to 30 in 1991-92. Existing arrangements for selecting students will continue.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

South Africa

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on how British companies have complied with the European Community code of conduct for companies with interests in South Africa during the 12-month period to 30 June 1989.

Mr. Redwood: By 6 March 1990, a total of 111 companies had submitted reports to the DTI under the code of conduct. Copies of the reports and of the Department's analysis and summary have, as in previous years, been placed in the Library of each House. These documents may also be inspected at the Department's export market information centre, at the British embassy in Pretoria, at the British consulate-general in Johannesburg, and at the British consulates in Cape Town and Durban.

The analysis and summary is the fourth since the adoption of the revised code of conduct by EC Foreign Ministers in November 1985. Reports were received from all British companies whose interests are known or believed to warrant a full report under the code, with only one exception. This particular company has been undergoing reorganisation in South Africa and should be in a position to provide a report for next year's analysis and summary.

The reporting period under review has seen a further reduction in the number of black employees of British subsidiaries being paid below the code's recommended minimum level, with companies reports indicating that now over 98 per cent. were paid above this level. Companies' reports also indicated that the level of their involvement with trade unions representing black workers increased, with the majority of companies reporting formal involvement with the trade unions. In addition, companies continued to report impressive levels of involvement in projects benefiting not only their employees and their families but also the wider communities from which their workforces were drawn. Companies also continued to encourage the growth of black businesses.

The Government are once more grateful to companies for their continued co-operation in providing reports, and urges them to maintain this performance and to comply fully with the code.

Baltic States

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest assessment of trade opportunities with Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia.

Mr. Redwood: No assessment is possible at present. Above all, we need to know whether the Baltic republics will have control of their own production and its distribution. If they become free to trade their own products with the west there could be many opportunities for increased business.

Stock Exchange

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the stock exchange; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: Ministers meet the chairman of the stock exchange whenever appropriate to discuss topics of mutual interest.

Company Audits

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many times in 1988 company auditors filed a statement in respect of section 390 2(a) and 2(b) of the Companies Act 1985.

Mr. Redwood: During 1988 the registrars of companies for England and Wales and for Scotland received copies of 9,167 auditors' notices of resignation under section 390 of the Companies Act 1985. These have been placed on the public files of the companies concerned. No information is readily available about the number of these notices which fall within the scope of section 390(2)(a), indicating that there were circumstances connected with the resignation which the resigning auditor considered should be brought to the notice of the members or creditors of the company.

Electricity Supplies

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what reply he has sent to the letter from the chairman of the Electricity Consultative Council (South Wales) dated 14 March regarding the different treatment between the domestic and commercial markets.

Mr. Redwood: My reply was sent to the chairman of the Electricity Consultative Council (South Wales). It is a matter for him to decide whether to make the contents public.

Electricity Supply (Consumer Protection)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he anticipates being in a position to answer the letter to him of 14 March from Tom Keen, the chairman of the Electricity Consultative Council (South Wales), on consumer protection in the electricity supply industry.

Mr. Redwood: I have already replied to the letter.

Business Inquiries

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many major inquiries were made by business under the market information inquiries scheme for each month from September 1988 to date;

(2) how many substantive inquiries were made under the market information inquiries scheme for each month from September 1988 to date.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 21 March 1990]: Following is the information.

June 1989—February 1990

Month	Number of enquiries billed
June	37
July	72
August	87

Month	Number of enquiries billed
September	103
October	108
November	135
December	104
January	97
February	182
Total	925

The market information enquiry service (MIEs) was introduced as a chargeable service on 1 April 1989. The information available is set out above. A breakdown of MIEs which are "major" and those which are "substantive" could be made available only at disproportionate cost. Figures were not collected prior to the introduction of charges.

Africa (Exports)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it his policy to reinstate Export Credits Guarantee Department cover for United Kingdom exports to Nigeria, Ghana, Sierra Leone and the Gambia; and if he will list the present value of exports and imports between the United Kingdom and those countries.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 March 1990]: ECGD cover for exports on cash or short terms of payment—up to 180 days credit—is already available for these countries.

Cover for exports on longer terms of payment is in principle available for Ghana subject to ECGD's normal underwriting judgment being satisfied. The possibility of reinstating ECGD cover for longer payment term business with Gambia, Nigeria and Sierra Leone will be considered when this is justified by improvements in the economic situation in these countries and progress has been made in clearing past payment arrears.

The value of exports and imports between the United Kingdom and those countries, for the year ending December 1989, is as follows:

	United Kingdom imports £ million	United Kingdom exports £ million
Nigeria	129·406	388·777
Ghana	92·208	121·076
Sierra Leone	15·899	20·402
Gambia	2·340	16·563

Multi-fibre Arrangement

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has considered any changes in the multi-fibre arrangement in the light of the changes in central and eastern Europe.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The multi-fibre arrangement (MFA) lays down a multilateral framework for trade in textile products. The EC is already committed in the current Uruguay round to negotiating the phase out of the MFA on acceptable terms on its expiry in 1991. This commitment is unaffected by developments in central and eastern Europe. However the EC has a number of bilateral agreements with east European countries within the current MFA framework and changes to the agreements with Poland and Hungary have recently been agreed.

Cable Television

Mr. Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many franchises have been granted for the issuing of licences by his Department for the establishment of television cable stations in the United Kingdom since such licensing started; and if he will list (a) the geographical location of such stations, (b) the name of each company which has been granted a franchise, (c) the name of the principal shareholder or parent company of such franchise holders, specifying whether such principal shareholder or parent is of United States of America, Canadian, United Kingdom or other origin and (d) how many applications are outstanding to the latest convenient date and still awaiting decision by the Cable Authority.

Mr. Mellor: I have been asked to reply.

The Cable Authority is responsible for awarding cable franchises under the Cable and Broadcasting Act 1984. A total of 71 cable franchises have been awarded since 1983 (including 11 pilot franchises awarded by the Home Office before the passage of the 1984 Act). Of these 20 have been licensed, of which 17 are operational. A further 63 franchises have been advertised by the Cable Authoritiy. The authority is considering a total of 139 applications, in respect of the 44 franchises for which the closing date has now passed. It intends to make its decisions known during the course of the summer. I have placed in the Library a list of the other information requested, where this is not commercially confidential.

PRIME MINISTER

Hong Kong

Q35. Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government are now ready to publish their proposals for legislation concerning the provision of United Kingdom passports for certain citizens of Hong Kong.

The Prime Minister: The Government intend to do so shortly.

East Germany

Q66. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the implications for United Kingdom foreign policy of the recent elections in East Germany.

The Prime Minister: We welcome the holding of democratic elections in the German Democratic Republic. We believe that the establishment of genuine democracy in the German Democratic Republic, as elsewhere in eastern Europe, will strengthen confidence and understanding between east and west.

Prisons

Q108. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to one of Her Majesty's prisons.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Cyprus

Q189. Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister if, during her future visit to Turkey, she will discuss with the Turkish authorities the urgent need for a settlement in Cyprus; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I look forward to discussing Cyprus and other matters of mutual concern with the Turkish Government during my planned visit to Gallipoli next month for the 75th anniversary of ANZAC day.

German Unification

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the implications for the net contributions of member states of the proposed reunification of Germany; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: We hope that the informal summit to be held in Dublin on 28 April will agree a framework for detailed negotiation, by the Council and the Commission, of all the consequences for the Community of German unification. Germany is likely to remain the largest net contributor to the Community budget.

Cabinet Responsibility

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister what steps she is taking to strengthen collective Cabinet responsibility.

The Prime Minister: None is needed.

Correspondence

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Prime Minister what measures she will take to improve the performance of Government Departments in answering letters from hon. Members.

The Prime Minister: There are nearly 250,000 replies a year from Ministers to letters from hon. Members and replies are sent at official level to several million letters received direct from members of the public. It is clearly in the interests of Members, the public and Ministers that this correspondence is conducted speedily and efficiently. I have therefore asked the efficiency unit to conduct an interdepartmental scrutiny into the methods and costs of handling this correspondence, and to seek the views of hon. Members and others who receive replies, so as to identify good methods of operation and recommend them for adoption by all departments. Departmental performance will be monitored and a Minister in each Department will be given responsibility for overseeing progress. In appropriate cases, Members of Parliament are encouraged to write in the first instance to civil service agencies, or the local offices directly concerned.

Engagements

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 29 March.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I am speaking at the Anglo-German Konigswinter conference held in Cambridge.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Land Registry

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Attorney-General what is for each of the last three years (a) the minimum length of time and (b) the maximum length of time that Her Majesty's Land Registry has taken to deal with a first registration application.

The Attorney-General: No statistical information is available on either the maximum or the minimum processing times. The minimum processing time can be as low as one or two weeks for expedited applications and those where no queries arise. Some complex applications, involving clarification from an applicant's solicitors, take a considerable time to process.

The average time taken to process a first registration application is currently 27 weeks, compared with 30 weeks in 1989, 34 weeks in 1988 and 32 weeks in 1987.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Attorney-General on what date the Land Registration Act 1988 will come into force.

The Attorney-General: The Lord Chancellor hopes to bring the Land Registration Act 1988 into force in December 1990. An announcement of the exact date will be made in due course.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Attorney-General what action he is taking to reduce the delays at Her Majesty's Land Registry in dealing with applications to register title.

The Attorney-General: Since 1 March 1987 the Land Registry has increased its work force by over 3,000 staff. In order to move work away from the south-east of England, where the recruitment and retention of staff is difficult, four new district registries have been opened and two more are planned in the near future. Computerisation of the application processing system will have been introduced at a total of eight district registries by the end of this year and by 1993 all district registries will operate the computerised system. Average completion times on all types of application to register title are improving steadily, unit cost targets are being met and productivity is at record levels.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Attorney-General what representations he has recieved regarding the delays at Her Majesty's Land Registry in dealing with applications to register title.

The Attorney-General: A total of 128 representations about delay were received by the Lord Chancellor between January and December 1989.

Marconi

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Attorney-General what recent developments have taken place into the inquiry being carried out by the special fraud office into fraud in the Marconi company; and if he will make a statement as to general progress of that inquiry over the last six months.

The Attorney-General: A case in which the defendents are Marconi Company Limited, Marconi Space Systems Limited, Marconi Secure Radio Systems Limited and various former employees of those companies is pending before Winchester crown court. It results from inquiries carried out by the Serious Fraud Office. The remaining inquiries concerning Marconi companies are being carried out as expeditiously as possible.

ENERGY

Oil Companies

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he has any plans to require all oil companies to deposit a bond with his Department that can be immediately used to finance clean-up operations in the event of an oil spillage around the British coast.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Primary responsibility for clean-up, following an oil spill from an offshore installation, rests with the operator. To ensure that operators have sufficient funds available to discharge any liability attributable to such an incident, the offshore pollution liability agreement (OPOL) was set up by the oil industry in 1975 at the request of the Department of Energy. This agreement ensures that funds are available, up to $60 million per incident, to meet claims for remedial measures and pollution damage from an offshore oil spill incident.

North Sea Oil and Gas

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the output of North sea oil and gas for each year since 1980.

Mr. Peter Morrison: North Sea oil and gas production in the period 1980 to 1989 was as follows:

	Crude oil (thousand tonnes)	Natural gas liquids thousand tonnes)	Gas (Million cubic metres)
1980	78,680	1,550	37,290
1981	87,714	1,534	37,186
1982	100,058	2,908	37,832
1983	110,566	4,078	38,690
1984	120,961	4,759	38,520
1985	122,069	5,150	42,961
1986	120,734	5,815	45,289
1987	117,030	5,693	47,623
1988	108,641	5,004	45,726
1989[1]	86,505	4,407	44,705

[1] Provisional

Electricity Consumers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will amend the part of the draft electricity licence dealing with domestic consumers in default, on the terms submitted to him by the National Consumer Council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Electricity disconnections are currently standing at the lowest level since records began in 1976. Careful consideration has been given to the NCC's proposals but we believe that the combination of protections we have provided for, including the role of the director general and the consumers committees, will give the best degree of protection to consumers and ensure that the downward trend continues.

DEFENCE

Community Charge

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations he has received regarding the community charge and its effect on service personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Ministers have received about 85 such written representations or inquiries.

Trident

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will be ordering a fourth Trident nuclear submarine.

Mr. Neubert: We expect to issue an invitation to tender for the fourth Vanguard class submarine later this year.

WE177 Free-fall Bomb

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will reassess the basis for envisaging a requirement for a replacement for the WE177 free-fall bomb.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We keep our requirements for all weapons systems under review. As the WE177 free fall bomb approaches the end of its service life we are studying options for its replacement.

"Statement on the Defence Estimates"

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to publish the 1990 "Statement on the Defence Estimates".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We expect to publish the "Statement on the Defence Estimates" on Monday 2 April.

School of Peace Studies

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether any serving members of the armed forces are currently studying at the School of Peace Studies in Bradford.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A serving WRNS officer is currently undertaking a one-year defence fellowship at the School of Peace Studies in Bradford. I am not aware of any other serving members of the armed forces who are studying at the school.

Warsaw Pact

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent contacts members of his Department have had with Warsaw pact countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There have recently been regular meetings with representatives of Warsaw pact nations at ministerial and official level. In the past month the Ministry has hosted visits by Colonel General Morocz, Hungarian State Secretary for Defence, Colonel General Stanculescu, Romanian Defence Minister and Colonel General Omelichev, Soviet Deputy Chief of General Staff. These contacts are a valuable means of building mutual confidence and improving understanding.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the accountancy firms used by his Department.

Mr. Neubert: The two outside accountancy firms currently employed by the Ministry of Defence on accountancy-type tasks are:

Ernst and Young
Coopers and Lybrand Deloitte.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Leicester (IRA Bomb)

49. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the consequences of statements made after the recent explosion of the Irish Republican Army bomb in the city of Leicester for the fight against terrorism.

Mr. Waddington: The statements made by the police following the incident provided the public with information about what happened in order to reassure them that the matter was under control, to learn of any possible further threat and to seek their help in identifying those who had planted the device. The public response once again has been of great assistance to the police in pursuing their investigations.

Rehabilitation of Offenders

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those organisations which sought inclusion in the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974 (Exceptions) Order 1975.

Mr. John Patten: The following organisations sought exceptions under the 1975 exceptions order:

The Association of British Adoption Agencies
The National Deaf Children's Society
The National Council for Social Services
The National Association for Deaf/Blind and Rubella Children
The National Society for Mentally Handicapped Children
The Ockenden Venture

The Wellcome Foundation Ltd.
Members of the London Gold Market
The British Museum
The Civil Aviation Authority
The British Insurance Association and Lloyd's
The Royal Commission on Historical Monuments

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, further to his reply to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 8 January, Official Report, column 474, he will provide a list of accountancy firms.

Mr. Waddington: The accountancy firms employed by the Home Office were:

Touche Ross
Peat Marwick and McLintock
Deloitte Haskins and Sells
Coopers and Lybrand.

RTL Astra Channel

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what authority, and for what reasons, the Cable Authority ceased taking the RTL Astra channel.

Mr. Mellor: The Cable Authority is responsible under the Cable and Broadcasting Act 1984 for the regulation of programme content on cable television. Section 10 of the 1984 Act places the authority under a duty to do all that it can to ensure that all licensed services comply with a number of requirements, which are codified in the authority's programme codes and guidelines. I understand the Cable Authority concluded that RTL Plus was in breach of these requirements and that it was therefore no longer acceptable.

Thorp Arch Prison

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been allocated to Thorp Arch prison and are now awaiting transfer at the latest count.

Mr. Mellor: On Friday 23 March, 275 inmates were allocated and awaiting transfer to Thorp Arch prison.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners have been transferred to Thorp Arch prison in the last three months.

Mr. Mellor: On 19 March, 27 of the 134 inmates held at Throp Arch had been received since 19 December 1989. The numbers of inmates who may have been transferred to Thorp Arch in that period, and subsequently moved elsewhere, cannot be readily identified.

Firearms

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many compensation claims have been received in relation to the Firearms Amendment Act 1998; how many of these claims have been (a) paid, (b) refused and (c) are still pending; and when such outstanding claims will be settled.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 2,906 claims have been received from applicants in England and Wales for payments under the Government buy-in scheme for weapons newly prohibited under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988. Of these claims, 2,727 have had payments authorised and 73 have been refused as ineligible under the scheme. A further 106 claims have yet to be determined. These will be resolved as soon as we are able to determine their eligibility.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many firearms were handed into police stations under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 bringing-in scheme since its commencement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 2,906 applicants in England and Wales have submitted claims in respect of 3,607 weapons, surrendered to the police or otherwise disposed of, for a payment under the Government buy-in scheme. Separate figures on the number of weapons surrendered to the police and the number otherwise disposed of are not collected centrally.

Young Persons (Police Charges)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children and young persons, having been charged by the police, were transferred to the care of the local authority or detained by the police in pursuance of section 38(6) Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 in the last two years for which figures are available; and how this total figure is subdivided by police force area and local authority area.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I regret that this information is not available.

Police (Protective Clothing)

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is considering issuing to police forces nuclear, biological and chemical defence clothing and equipment.

Mr. John Patten: The need for specialist clothing and equipment is kept under review.

Deportation

Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many defendants found guilty of a criminal offence, during the last five years, have been recommended for deportation by the court; and how many of these recommendations the Home Secretary has supported;

(2) in how many cases where there were no court recommendations for deportation after conviction of a criminal offence the Home Office has served notice to deport on grounds conducive to public good over the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The available information for 1985 to 1988 is published in table 24 of the Home Office Command Paper "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1988" (Cm. 726), and for 1987 to 1989 in table 14 of the Home Office statistical bulletin 8/90 "Control of Immigration: Statistics—Fourth Quarter and Year 1990". Copies of both publications are in the Library.

The numbers of notices of intention to deport served on grounds conducive to the public good include a small number where there was no criminal conviction.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Refugee Camps, Thailand

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what he is doing to ensure United Kingdom food aid to the Cambodian camps on the Thailand border is not going to the Khmer Rouge.

Mrs. Chalker: I have nothing to add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 19 February, Column 486.

Indonesia

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether human rights matters, including the situation in East Timor and the recent execution of six political prisoners in Jakarta and in Medan, will be included on the agenda of the 1990 meeting of the intergovernmental group on Indonesia, scheduled for June.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government have not received the proposed agenda for next June's meeting of the intergovernmental group on Indonesia. The meeting will be chaired by the Dutch Minister for Development Co-operation and no doubt he will be discussing the draft agenda with the Indonesian Government and the World Bank in the coming weeks.

Czechoslovakia

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals Her Majesty's Government have to assist economic, social and educational development in Czechoslovakia; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 21 March, during the visit of President Havel to Britain, that the know-how fund for eastern Europe had been extended to cover Czechoslovakia. The aim will be to provide advice, skills and training to aid Czechoslovakia's transition towards democracy and a market economy. We shall be discussing an overall strategy for the use of the fund with the Czechoslovak authorities.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what monitoring is being undertaken by his Department of elephant conservation schemes funded by Her Majesty's Government, following the decision to allow Hong Kong ivory to be traded.

Mrs. Chalker: We regularly monitor all development projects funded by Her Majesty's Government, including those in the wildlife conservation sector.

Zaire

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what advice the Overseas Development Administration has given to Grindlay's bank about financing Babcock Electric in its logging projects in Zaire.

Mrs. Chalker: No advice has been sought or given.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

UNESCO

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to complete his review of the progress the United Nations Education, Scientific and Cultural Organisation is making in resolving the difficulties which prevent the United Kingdom from rejoining.

Mr. Maude: We are currently reviewing comments received from a large number of organisations consulted as part of our review of policy towards UNESCO. We will also be taking into account the views expressed in the report on UNESCO by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House.

We hope to be able to announce the outcome of the review during the course of the next few weeks.

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Maude: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989-90	[1]	[1]
1988-89	5	1
1987-88	7	—
1986-87	5	—
1985-86	7	—
1984-85	10	—
1983-84	6	—
1982-83	13	—
1981-82	14	—
1980-81	6	—

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the PCA upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Guatemala

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make representations to the Government in Guatemala on the abduction on 27 February of Benjamin Diaz Arévalo, a student at the universidad de San Carlós in Guatemala;

(2) if he will make representations to the Guatemalan Government concerning the safety of Carlos Luna, a student of the San Carlos university, Guatemala city.

Mr. Maude: We are making inquiries about these cases. We will continue to monitor the human rights situation and make representations when appropriate, either acting alone or in concert with our European partners. The Guatemalan authorities are in no doubt about the concern felt in this country about human rights violations in Guatemala.

Refugee Camps, Thailand

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action Her Majesty's Government are taking to support European Commissioner Abei Mauters, to establish neutral refugee camps on the Thailand border.

Mr. Maude: We support all efforts to improve the lot of displaced persons in camps along the Thai-Cambodian border. Since 1979, the United Kingdom has contributed over £13·7 million in humanitarian assistance via international agencies. If and when neutral camps under direct United Nations administration need to be created as part of a comprehensive political settlement in Cambodia, we would be ready to play our full part in their establishment.

Indonesia

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has concerning the human rights situation in East Timor, following the United States ambassador's visit to Dili in January.

Mr. Maude: We believe that generally the situation has improved following the changes in military command structure last December. We continue to monitor the situation.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the instructions given by the Indonesian Minister for Defence in February to the armed forces about how to handle demonstrators in favour of independence from Indonesia.

Mr. Maude: We are not party to instructions issued by the Indonesian Minister of Defence. We understand that the authorities' intention is that peaceful demonstrations should be allowed to pass off without intervention.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the British Government have made to the Indonesian authorities about the use of violence against peaceful demonstrators for independence in East Timor.

Mr. Maude: The Indonesian authorities are well aware of our views on the need to respect human rights. Two recent demonstrations that we know of passed off peacefully without incident.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, what steps the Government are taking to promote educational exchanges between the United Kingdom and the emerging democracies of eastern Europe and, in particular, to assist students from these countries to study at United Kingdom universities.

Mr. Maude: We have been progressively extending our educational exchange programmes in response to changes in eastern Europe and introducing new schemes to bring eastern European students to our universities and polytechnics, funded jointly with the private sector, with academic institutions and with bodies such as the Soros Foundation.

Kenya

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact his Department has had in recent weeks with Dr. Richard Leakey, director of the Kenyan wildlife department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The British High Commission in Nairobi is in regular contact with Dr. Leakey and senior officials of the Kenya Wildlife Service. The high commissioner in Nairobi last met Dr. Leakey on 15 March.

Kenya

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has regarding the level of elephant poaching in Kenya following the decision to enter a reservation on behalf of Hong Kong ivory.

Mr. Maude: The Kenya Wildlife Service does not produce official figures of monthly poaching. The service knows of only three killings in March in Tsavo and, although not all poached elephants are discovered, it anticipates that the total killed for this month in Kenya will be in single figures. During the previous two months we know that 50 elephants were illegally killed in the Tsavo area.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on world price movements of ivory following the decision to enter a reservation on behalf of Hong Kong; and what monitoring is maintained of price movements.

Mr. Maude: None. The Foreign and Commonwealth Office does not monitor price movements in the ivory market.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Environmental Investigation Agency concerning poached ivory being laundered into Hong Kong using spare CITES permits.

Mr. Maude: None.

SCOTLAND

Health Spending

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those years in the period 1974 to 1989 when financial cuts in real terms were made in the National Health Service in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Moray (Mrs. Ewing) on 15 November 1989, Official Report, columns 362-63. In the period 1974-1989, the only year in which gross National Health Service spending in Scotland fell in real terms was 1977-78.

Speech Therapy

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total number of vacancies for speech therapists within each health board area and the agreed establishment for speech therapists.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is the average case load covered by a speech therapist;

(2) if he will provide a percentage breakdown of the communication-handicapped population who receive speech therapy in (a) the hospital site, (b) National Health Service premises, (c) local authority premises, (d) patients' homes and (e) other locations;

(3) if he will provide statistics on the levels of speech therapy service currently available in each area health authority in Scotland; if work is currently in progress to analyse the levels of services required for areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 March 1990]: Information available centrally about speech therapy staffing, patients, workload and location of treatment in health boards is collated annually by the information and statistics division of Common Services Agency. The latest tables are as follows, and copies are in the Library. Assessment of the need for speech therapy services is a matter for health boards.

Table 1—Speech therapy statistics: year ending 31 March 1989

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give a breakdown of the percentages of speech therapy referrals which come from doctors and consultants, and from clinical medical officers, health visitors, community nursing, educational services, social services, speech therapists in other districts, from self-referrals and other sources;

(2) if he will provide statistics relating to the percentages of people receiving speech therapy services who have associated mobility problems or a level of social-economic difficulty.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 March 1990]: This information is not available centrally.

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for East Lothian (Mr. Home Robertson) on 20 December, Official Report, column 296, if he will provide details of the numbers of speech therapists employed by each regional education authority in Scotland during the past five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 March 1990]: Speech therapists are employed almost exclusively by health boards which provide the service for education authorities. The table shows the whole-time equivalent numbers of speech therapists employed by health boards at the latest available date and at the corresponding date in each of the years 1985-88.

Greater Glasgow Health Board

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the name and address of the company which is transferring the Greater Glasgow health board's medical records onto computer.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No such transfer is being undertaken at this time.

Examinations

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people sat public educational examinations in (a) politics (b) constitutional studies and (c) political history in 1989.

Mr. Lang: The Scottish Examination Board does not offer examinations in any of these subjects. Figures for presentations in these subjects in the further and higher education sectors are not collected centrally.

A9

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those stretches of the A9 lying within Caithness and Sutherland in respect of which since 1970 improvement plans have been announced; and if he will indicate, for each stretch of road, whether (a) work has been completed, (b) work is in progress and (c) an economic assessment is still in train.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The position with respect to major schemes for which plans have been announced since 1970 is as follows:

A9 Schemes within Caithness and Sutherland

Clothing and Textiles

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department intends to take in order to protect the clothing and textiles industry in Strathclyde after the eventual phasing-out of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Lang: This is primarily a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry. The Government have made it clear that progress in phasing out the multi-fibre arrangement must be on the basis of a strengthening of GATT rules and disciplines, particularly those relating to safeguards, unfair trade, intellectual property and the reduction of trade barriers. It is by progress in those areas that the industry will be assisted in coming to terms with the liberalisation of trade in the clothing and textile sector.

Portland Street, Kilmarnock

Mr. William McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will report on the progress of the planning application submitted by Balfour Beatty to redevelop Portland street, Kilmarnock.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office inquiry reporter carried out his accompanied site inspection of Portland street on 16 January. His report in relation to the listed building consent applications associated with the proposed Balfour Beatty development is at present under consideration. I expect to reach a conclusion on these applications very soon.

National Health Service (Competitive Tendering)

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on competitive tendering for the non-emergency patient transport services in the Forth Valley and Lanarkshire health board areas.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Common Services Agency, having considered the tenders received, has decided to award the contract to the Scottish ambulance service in-house team for a five-year period from 1 July 1990.

The tendering exercise has been proved successful and will result in substantial savings of £500,000. These savings will be reinvested into the accident and emergency service to further improve the level of care provided with no detriment to the non-emergency patient transport service.

In the light of this experience, I have asked the agency to begin the preparatory work which will allow the tendering exercise to be extended to other areas in Scotland.

GPs (Fees and Allowances)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to publish the amendment to the statement of fees and allowances to be administered by the Scottish Rural Practice and Fund Committee for the benefit of general practitioners who practise in less densely populated country areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The Scottish rural practice fund committee has not yet formulated detailed proposals concerning the new scheme. It has recommended that in the first instance the transitional payments scheme at present set out in paragraph 83 of the statement of fees and allowances (SFA) should apply to all GPs who meet the criteria, including those who receive payments from the Scottish rural practice fund. An amendment to the SFA will be made shortly to give effect to this recommendation. This will allow the longer-term scheme covering doctors who work in the less populated areas of Scotland to be worked out carefully and in detail. The details of that long-term scheme will also be set out in an amendment to the SFA in due course.

Health Service Staff

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many physiotherapists, occupational therapists, clinical pyschologists and pharmacists are employed in each area health authority in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 March 1990]: The information is as follows:

Infertility Services

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he anticipates receiving the report of the working party set up by the National Medical Consultative Committee to examine the provision of infertility services in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The report of the working group on infertility is currently being drafted. Following consideration by the national medical advisory committee, it is hoped that the final report will reach the Scottish Health Service Advisory Council in June, and be submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend thereafter.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the annual cost of administering income support benefits for free school meals, free milk, wigs, fabric support, prescriptions, false teeth and glasses; and what is the annual value of these benefit payments.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The administration costs arising in the Department of Social Security in respect of the free welfare milk scheme are estimated to be £9·3 million in the year 1989-90. The administration costs in respect of the free school meals scheme and the exemption from NHS charges of income support recipients are not separately identifiable.

Administration costs in other Departments and elsewhere, and the benefits costs, of providing these schemes for income support recipients are the responsibility of my right hon. and learned Friends the Secretaries of State for Health and for Scotland and my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Education and Science and for Wales.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give his latest information on the number of claimants living in the Greenock and Port Glasgow parliamentary constituency aged below 25 years, over 25 years and married couples, receiving income support and the number of dependants covered by each of these three groups of payments.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest available information on the number of claimants of income support, together with the number of dependants, in each of the parliamentary constituencies in the Strathclyde region; and if he will give the comparable information for 1979 and 1987.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Data on the number of dependants are unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Data on the number of claimants of income support are unavailable by parliamentary constituency. Data for the Department's offices covering Strathclyde region as a whole are in the table.

Number of supplementary benefit/income support claimants

Year	Numbers

1979	173,068

Source: 100 per cent. count of cases in action which include a number where payment has ceased but other action is continuing. Data for 1990 is provisional and subject to amendment.

Benefits (Take-up)

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate of the rate of take-up of (i) housing benefit and (ii) income support by (a) all claimants and (b) pensioner households.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest available information on take-up of income-related benefits is contained in the technical notes on take-up of benefits, copies of which are available in the Library.

Child Benefit

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current level of child benefit if it had been raised in line with inflation.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Child benefit was fully introduced from April 1979 at a rate of £4 a week. Increasing that by the movement in the index of retail prices to April 1989 would give a current amount of £8·42.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether community care grants are available to persons moving from long-stay psychiatric hospitals to housing association houses where care staff are provided.

Mr. Scott: Directions and guidance for the award of social fund community care grants appear in the social fund manual, a copy of which is in the Library. The guidance makes it clear that community care grants are intended to promote independent living in the community. In any particular case it will be for the social fund officer to decide whether a move from long-stay hospital care to a home with some provision for care can be regarded as a return to the community. One of the factors taken into account will be the level of care provided.

Social Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the final expenditure for each local social fund office for the year 1988-89, separately for loans and grants expressed as a proportion of the total annual allocation made to each office.

Mr. Scott: The information requested can be derived from data in the Library.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report the names of offices given extra allocations for social fund loans or grants from 1 January to the present and the value of those allocations.

Mr. Scott: We shall place a full list of the additional allocations in the Library after the end of the current financial year.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what proportion of successful applicants to the social fund had support for their application from (a) hon. Members, (b) social workers, (c) welfare rights workers and (d) voluntary groups both (i) initially and (ii) after request for review for (1) community care grants, (2) budgeting loans and (3) crisis loans;

(2) what proportion of unsuccessful applicants to the social fund had support for their application from (a) hon. Members, (b) social workers, (c) welfare rights workers and (d) voluntary groups both (i) initially and (ii) after request for review for (1) community care grants, (2) budgeting loans and (3) crisis loans.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not collected.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of people in (a) Scotland, (b) Dunfermline, (c) Cowdenbeath, (d) Leven and (e) Kirkcaldy receiving income support in November 1989; and what is his estimate of the number of dependents of each of these at the same date.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Data on the number of dependants are unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Data on the number of claimants of income support are in the table.

Number of income support claimants

Area	Number
Scotland	506,853
Dunfermline	5,718

Family Credit

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye of 21 March, Official Report, column 642, if he will ensure that payment of the claim for family credit dated November 1989 made by the Reverend and Mrs. John MacLeod of Ross-shire, about whom the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye wrote to the Minister on 13 February and 13 March, respectively, will not be delayed by the appeal of the Department of Social Security to the Social Security Commissioners against the award made under the claim for family credit dated November 1988 made by the Reverend and Mrs. John MacLeod; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest claim was decided on 22 March. An award of family credit was made and has been put into payment.

Community Charge

Sir Ian Gilmour: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the figures showing the amounts of community charge benefit payable during 1990-91 to pensioner couples with joint community charge bills (a) £500, (b) £750, (c) £1,000 and (d) £1,250, assuming in each case that they have £15,000 invested in the building society and occupational pensions of (i) nil, (ii) £500, (iii) £1,000 and (iv) £1,500.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table.

Community charge benefit (weekly). Pensioner couple, capital £15,000, aged 60-74, on state retirement pension for a couple of £75·10 per week.

Whooping Cough Vaccine

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether there has been any change in (a) departmental policy and (b) the adjudicating doctor's attitude towards payments for damage from the whooping cough vaccine following the Loveday case.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Departmental policy towards vaccine damage payments has not changed since the Loveday case. It remains our intention to make payments under the vaccine damage payments scheme for people who show that they are severely disabled as a result of the effects of vaccination against certain diseases, including whooping cough. The Vaccine Damage Payments Act 1979 requires that the question whether the severe disablement results from vaccination is to be decided on the balance of probability. Adjudicating doctors have to look at all the relevant evidence available to them when making this decision in individual cases. The Loveday judgment forms part of this evidence.

Benefits

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement about the level of benefits.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to the statement on uprating social security benefits made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State on 25 October 1989 at col. 841-69.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Economy

13. Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the performance of the Northern Ireland economy over the last 12 months.

Mr. Cope: The latest information shows that, in the last quarter of 1989, manufacturing output was 7 per cent. above the same quarter of the previous year, the number unemployed in February 1990 was 10,900 down on a year earlier and growth in Northern Ireland's gross domestic product since 1981 has been similar to the United Kingdom's.

Dublin (Official Visit)

15. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he hopes next to pay an official visit to Dublin; whom he proposes to meet; and what he hopes to discuss.

42. Mr. Duffy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next plans to meet his co-chairman of the Anglo-Irish intergovernmental council; and what he hopes to discuss.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next hopes to meet the Foreign Secretary of the Republic of Ireland; and what he plans to discuss.

Mr. Brooke: I plan to meet Mr. Collins in Dublin shortly to discuss political development within Northern Ireland. Other current issues affecting Northern Ireland are likely to be raised.

Local Government

16. Mr. Cran: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he has had with representatives from political parties in Northern Ireland regarding the transfer of various powers to local authorities.

36. Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he has any plans to increase the scope and accountability of local government in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: In their talks with us, most Northern Ireland politicians have looked towards the establishment of a devolved form of government for Northern Ireland as a whole, with an appropriate role for representatives of the minority community. The Government would give serious consideration to any proposals for more local involvement in the government of Northern Ireland which were workable and seemed likely to command widespread acceptance.

Stevens Inquiry

17. Mr. Molyneaux: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he proposes to publish the report of the Stevens inquiry.

Mr. Cope: I understand that Mr. Stevens has not yet delivered his report to the Chief Constable, who commissioned it. At this stage, it is too early to say when or in what form its conclusions may be made public.

35. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the outcome of the Stevens inquiry.

Mr. Cope: So far, 58 people have been charged with offences as a result of the inquiries of Mr. Stevens and his team. The inquiry continues. I understand that Mr. Stevens is now expected to report the findings of his inquiry to the Chief Constable of the RUC during the month of April.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

18. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had with representatives of Eire regarding the Anglo-Irish Agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I last met Ministers from the Republic of Ireland at the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference meeting on 2 March. The two Governments remain committed to the Agreement and the principles it embodies.

30. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the status of Northern Ireland as embodied in the Anglo-Irish Agreement.

Mr. Brooke: Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom. The Governments of the United Kingdom and of the Republic of Ireland affirm in article 1 of the Anglo-Irish Agreement that any change in the status of Northern Ireland would only come about with the consent of a majority of the people in Northern Ireland and recognise that the present wish of a majority is for no change in that status.

School Assemblies

19. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to introduce legislative proposals relating to the conduct of school assemblies; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: No.

Community Relations

20. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on community relations in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Steps have been and are being taken to improve relations between the two sides of the community in Northern Ireland. These include measures directed at: increasing contact and co-operation across the community; increasing greater mutual respect and understanding; and ensuring the existence of equality of opportunity and equity of treatment.

Terrorists (Extradition)

21. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications by the Royal Ulster Constabulary for the extradition of persons sought for terrorist-type crimes have been made during the last 10 years to the Irish Republic; and how many persons have subsequently been handed over.

Mr. Cope: During the past 10 years the Royal Ulster Constabulary has requested the return of 51 persons for terrorist offences from the Irish Republic. Six persons have subsequently been returned, three of them in the past 20 months.

Security

22. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation in Northern Ireland.

26. Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the present security situation in Northern Ireland.

25. Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the security situation in Northern Ireland.

37. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the current security situation in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: Since I answered a similar question on 1 March 1990 there have been six deaths arising from the security situation in Northern Ireland. A part-time member of the UDR, a member of the RUC Reserve and a civilian were murdered by republican terrorists. Following the latter murder, I have proscribed the Irish People's Liberation Organisation. Two civilians were murdered by loyalist terrorists, and a further civilian died in the course of an attempted robbery. I know the House will join me in condemning the vicious and cowardly murder of the RUC Reserve Constable George Starrett, who was cruelly shot last night at his home in Armagh. This sickening attack on a man who was convalescing at home is yet one more example of the depravity of these evil men.

NHS Expenditure

23. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the levels of planned expenditure on the National Health Service in 1990-91 broken down by region.

Mr. Needham: A total of £1,035 million will be provided for the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland. Of this sum, £742,847 million will be allocated directly to the four health and social services boards. Excluding sums set aside for priority developments the balance will be allocated as follows: the Eastern board, £392,372 million, the Northern board, £123,891 million, the Southern board, £113,982 million and the Western board, £113,525 million.

Voluntary Organisations

24. Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to increase grants to voluntary bodies in 1989-90; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope: Grants to voluntary bodies are reviewed each financial year and adjusted as necessary. However, there are no plans to increase grants to voluntary bodies in the remaining part of the 1989-90 financial year.

Cross-border Co-operation

27. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what subjects of cross-border co-operation were discussed at the last meeting of the Anglo-Irish ministerial council.

Mr. Brooke: Discussions at the last meeting of the Anglo-Irish Intergovernmental Conference on 2 March included cross-border co-operation on security and social and economic matters.

34. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what issues of non-security related cross-border co-operation will be discussed at the next meeting of the Anglo-Irish ministerial conference.

Mr. Brooke: Among the items for discussion at the next Conference will be cross-border economic and social co-operation and the implications of 1992.

38. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on cross-border security co-operation between the United Kingdom and the Irish Republic.

Mr. Brooke: Enhancing cross-border co-operation on security matters remains a fundamental objective of the Government in their discussions with the Irish Government. Progress has been made since the signing of the Anglo-Irish Agreement, but there remains considerable scope for further improvement. We shall continue to explore, through the Conference, ways in which this can be achieved.

Prison Visits

28. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what requests he has received from the Irish Government for visits to prisons in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Cope: None.

Hospitals

29. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many patients were treated in hospitals in Northern Ireland in 1987 and 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The total numbers of in-patients treated in 1987 and 1989 were as follows:

Ordinary admissions	266,622	266,530
Day cases	27,707	42,423
TOTAL	294,329	308,953

Industrial Development Board

31. Mr. Leigh: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual amount of Industrial Development Board assistance to aid employment.

Mr. Needham: The Industrial Development Board's expenditure to aid employment was £94 million in 1988-89. Forecast expenditure for the current year is £85 million.

Inward Investment

32. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a further statement on inward investment.

Mr. Needham: Recent successes and current levels of interest by potential investors in the far east, United States and Europe suggest that an increasing number of companies are prepared to give serious consideration to investment in Northern Ireland.

39. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is being done to promote overseas investment in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: Our efforts are concentrated on major markets for mobile investment, with increasing emphasis on the far east and the USA, and sectorally in areas where Northern Ireland has particular strengths.

47. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the benefits of advance factory provision and availability of sites with development planning approval in attracting inward investment to Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham: The IDB's advance factories provide high quality and immediately available industrial accommodation for inward investors who may wish to purchase or rent premises. Twelve such factories are currently available throughout the Province. Serviced industrially zoned land provides investors with the opportunity to acquire sites quickly and at market price for early project implementation. Some 500 acres of fully serviced land are available in the major centres of population.

Northern Ireland Railways

33. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last met the chairman of Northern Ireland Railways; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: I met the chairman on 2 March 1990 at the scene of the level crossing accident at Slaght, near Ballymena, Co. Antrim. We viewed the damage to the rolling stock and track and discussed steps necessary to set up an inquiry into the accident and the arrangements to visit the local hospital to see those who had been injured.

Area Health Boards

40. Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whan he last met representatives of the area health boards; and what issues were discussed.

Mr. Needham: My noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale has met representatives of the boards on a number of occasions. His discussions with them have covered a wide range of issues concerning the policy and administration of the health and personal social services in Northern Ireland including the progress of the boards in taking forward the reforms set out in "Working for Patients".

Constitutional Reform

41. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what practical alternatives to devolution have emerged from his exploratory meetings with the main constitutional political parties.

Mr. Brooke: All the main constitutional political parties in Northern Ireland have expressed a willingness to work towards the devolution of powers to local elected representatives. The Government support this aim, because it seems the approach most likely to command widespread acceptance and serve the interests of all. My discussions with the leaders of the parties have concentrated on this approach.

Community Care

43. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has for the reorganisation of community care.

Mr. Needham: My noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale is today publishing a policy paper, entitled "People First", which sets out the Government's proposals for the development of community care in Northern Ireland. A copy is being placed in the Library.

Cross-community Projects

44. Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many schools are involved in cross-community projects; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: In October 1987 I introduced the cross-community contact scheme to stimulate the development of cross-community projects between schools, and youth and community groups.

Since its introduction, some 400 schools—about one third of all schools in Northern Ireland—have applied for assistance under the scheme which has an actual budget in 1989-90 of £450,000. Grant is available for joint, continuing projects most of which are curriculum based.

Private House Building

45. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate private sector house building in 1979 and 1989.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Private house building starts rose 64 per cent. from 4,127 in 1979 to 6,763 in 1989.

Planning Legislation

46. Mr. Clifford Forsythe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what changes he proposes to make to Northern Ireland planning legislation.

Mr. Needham: I intend to lay a draft Planning (Northern Ireland) Order before the House in April.

Northern Ireland Members have already been consulted on the proposed draft order, the main points of which will be the introduction of simplified planning zones; discontinuance notices; planning agreements and measures for controlling the storage and use of hazardous substances. This will bring the planning law in Northern Ireland substantially into line with that in Great Britain. Also, the draft order will introduce a new measure—a submission notice procedure whereby the Department of Environment (NI) could require the submission of a planning application from anyone carrying out development without planning permission.

Prison Service

48. Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the prison service in the light of the decision of the Dublin Supreme Court.

Mr. Cope: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in the House on 14 March the suggestion that persons returned to custody in Northern Ireland would be subject to ill treatment was whose members work with courage and commitment often in difficult circumstances. Conditions in the Maze prison and throughout the Northern Ireland prison system compare most favourably with those found elsewhere in Europe and prisoners are able to enjoy the benefits of an imaginative and constructive prison regime.

> "an unacceptable slur on the professionalism of the men and women of the Northern Ireland prison service."—[Official Report, 14 March 1990; Vol. 169, c. 481.]

Strangford Lough

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the representations about the declaration of the Strangford Lough (ASSI) Part 3 were taken into consideration during the consultative period by (a) his Department and (b) the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland considered all representations and objections to the declaration of the Strangford Lough (part 3) area of special scientific interest before confirmation took place on 16 November 1989. At a meeting on 3 November 1989 the Council for Nature Conservation and the Countryside was given information regarding the representations and objections and took this into consideration before advising the Department of its support for the confirmation of the area of special scientific interest.

Primary Schools, County Fermanagh

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make a statement on progress towards resolution of controlled post-primary provision in County Fermanagh for the future.

Dr. Mawhinney: The future of controlled post-primary school provision in County Fermanagh is a matter for the Western education and library board. No development proposals relating to controlled post-primary schools in this area have been published. However, at the request of the board of governors of Portora royal school—a voluntary grammar school for boys—the board has published a proposal to the effect that girls should be admitted as day pupils to the school with effect from 1 September 1990. No decision on this proposal can be taken until after the expiry of the statutory two-month objection period which ends on 25 April 1990.

Purchasing Costs

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if his Department achieved the target of 5 per cent. saving in purchasing costs in 1988-89, set by the Paymaster General, through use of the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Cope: Through the co-ordinating efforts of the central unit on purchasing for Northern Ireland, we achieved savings of 6·3 per cent. worth £17·7 million in 1988-89—significantly above the target which had been set.

Child Poverty Action Group

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he has any plans to meet representatives of the Child Poverty Action Group.

Mr. Needham: My noble Friend the Minister responsible for health and social services has agreed to meet representatives of the group but not date has yet been arranged.

Energy

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to what extent Northern Ireland is self-supporting in terms of fuel for energy production.

Mr. Needham: At present Northern Ireland is entirely dependent on imported fuels for all its energy needs.

Debt Payments

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the working party on the Payment of Debt (Northern Ireland) Act 1971.

Mr. Cope: The Payments for Debt (Emergency Provisions) Act (Northern Ireland) 1971 does not make provision for a working party; but the public debt policy committee, comprising officials from all Government Departments in Northern Ireland with a major interest in public debt, keeps the problem of public debt under review.

Integrated Schools

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing integrated schools since the making of the Education Reform (NI) Order in 1989.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Education Reform (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 only came into force on 20 February. Since then, however, a number of schools have approached the Department of Education (NI) for advice about integrated status. Statutory proposals have already been submitted to education and library boards on behalf of five proposed new grant-maintained integrated schools and acquisition procedures for integrated status have also begun at a number of existing grant-aided schools. These latter procedures will include the holding of secret, postal ballots of parents, and it has been arranged that these will be conducted on behalf of school governors by the Electoral Reform Society in London.

Violence

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to take any further measures in the light of recent violent incidents in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I have signed an order to proscribe the Irish People's Liberation Organisation (IPLO) under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1978. The order has been laid before Parliament and since midnight the IPLO has been a proscribed organisation. We shall be asking both Houses to affirm the order in the next few weeks. Organisations such as the IPLO have no place in a democratic society such as ours.

Fair Employment

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 20 March he will state whether the Fair Employment Commission has indicated that it will be bound by the agreement reached with the Fair Employment Agency.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The code of practice was agreed with the former Fair Employment Agency. The question of the agency or the new commission being bound by the code of practice does not arise.

The code of practice and the questionnaire used to collect the "religious affiliation" of Northern Ireland civil service staff gave an assurance to staff that such information would be treated confidentially. The code of practice states that the information will be used solely for the purposes of monitoring the policy on equal opportunities and on no account will statistical summaries be produced for any other purpose.

Exceptionally, the code of practice does provide for the release of information to the Fair Employment Commission in the discharge of its statutory responsibilities. Section 19 of the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989 places regulations on the commission regarding the confidentiality of such information.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 8 February, Official Report, column 745, how many (a) Protestants and (b) Roman Catholics in each grade and section listed in that answer, the Fair Employment Commission must employ to comply with present requirements; and what percentage balance it is seeking to reach those targets.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The Fair Employment Acts 1976 and 1989 make preferential treatment of individuals of one religious belief or political opinion unlawful but affirmative action measures to encourage members of an under-represented group, including goals and timetables, are lawful. The commission has a target for its workforce and at a press conference in February 1989, the chairman of the then Fair Employment Agency said that the agency advertisements would specify that it is particularly interested in receiving applications from Protestants. He also said that for its support staff, the agency should have a target of 25 to 30 per cent. Catholic and 70 to 75 per cent. Protestant and that this was already being achieved. For operations staff the target was to achieve a Protestant share of applicants for each vacancy advertised of 50 to 55 per cent. and a target for the group as a whole of 50 to 55 per cent. Protestant and 45 to 50 per cent. Roman Catholic. The commission intends to publish information on the composition of its staff and the applicant flow when it has reached it full staffing complement later this year.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information the Fair Employment Commission has on religious affiliations of its present staff.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The commission is monitoring the community background of its applicants and staff in accordance with the provisions of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989. The commission intends to publish information on the composition of its staff and the applicant flow when it has reached its full staffing complement.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects the Fair Employment Commission to reach its final staffing complement; and which posts at present remain unfilled.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The commission hopes to reach its full staffing complement by autumn 1990. At present, posts are unfilled in the following Northern Ireland civil service equivalent grades: one grade 6, two deputy principals (one of which is a research post), one staff officer (complaints), one administrative assistant and the chairman's personal secretary.

Salmon

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many salmon and grilse were caught in River Bush in each of the last 10 years; how many were recorded passing upstream at Bushmills each year; how many each year are believed to have spawned naturally and successfully; what is the estimated number of (a) parr and (b) smolts produced each year; what has been the estimated survival rate of smolts to adults; how far the information acquired corresponds with information gained from other studies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Following is the information:

Salmon-grilse catches in the River Bush

	Number caught (angling in restricted stretches	Number passing upstream	Estimate number spawning	Number of smolts	Marine survival smolt to adult percentage
1980	246	973	783	20,503	12·0

[1] No data due to breakdown of electric barrier.

The River Bush experiment is highly regarded internationally and the data produced are regularly integrated with those from other studies, through the ICES salmon working group on which DANI scientists are represented. This is a continuing process and current comparisons are not yet available.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has as to the total catch of salmon at sea which are bound for (a) the Foyle river system including the Roe and the Faughan, (b) the River Bann system, (c) the River Bush and (d) other salmon rivers in Northern Ireland; and what percentage of the total run this represented in each of the last five years, or as much of such information as is available to him.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Following is the information:

(a) None.

(b) None.

(c) For River Bush wild salmon stock information is only available for the last three years as follows:

Year	Estimated sea catch of salmon bound for the River Bush	Relevant percentage of total run
1987	4,804	68·5
1988	5,237	65·3
1989	5,931	89·0

(d) None.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the age at which salmon smolts in the River Bush migrate to the sea; how long they normally spend there; what percentage of an annual cohort returns are (a) one sea winter, (b) two sea winter, (c) three sea winter and (d) four sea winter fish; and what percentage of the annual salmon run over the last five years has returned in each month of the year.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: In the last 10 years 25·1 per cent. of River Bush smolts have migrated to sea at one-plus years of age, 73·8 per cent. at two-plus years of age and 1·1 per cent. at three-plus years of age.

The percentage of annual returns of various sea ages is as follows (average of last 10 years):

(a) 1 sea winter : 87·8 per cent.
(b) 2 sea winter : 12·2 per cent.
(c) 3 sea winter : 0
(d) 4 sea winter : 0

Fisheries Research

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many permanent staff, and of what grades, have left employment at the fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine in each of the last three financial years and the current year; which of these posts have been filled with (a) permanent appointments and (b) temporary staff; how many of the temporary staff (i) were and are presently employed for periods of less than one year and (ii) were and are as well qualified as the permanent staff they replaced; and what training programme is employed for such temporary staff.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

Year	Grade of staff leaving[1]	Replacement action
1986-87	Principal scientific officer	Post filled by permanent appointment
	Laboratory attendant	None, the post was dropped fom complement
1987-88	None
1988-89	None
1989-90	Higher scientific officer	Post to be advertised for permanent appointment

Year	Grade of staff leaving[1]	Replacement action
	Assistant scientific officer	Post initially filled by temporary staff pending the transfer of a permanent assistant scientific officer from within DANI on 5 March 1990
	Laboratory attendant	Post filled to date by temporary staff

[1] Includes resignation, retirement, promotion, transfer and career breaks.

In each case the temporary staff were appointed for periods of less than one year. The temporary assistant scientific officers appointed in 1989-90 were at least as well qualified as the previous permanent postholder. There are no formal qualifications required for laboratory attendant appointments. Appropriate on-the-job training was provided for temporary staff to allow them to carry out the duties required.

Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest figures for the number of staff presently employed, and the full complement of staff, including vacant posts in the press and public relations office of his Department; and what is the proposed complement for 1990-91.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 12 March 1990]: At present, 54 staff are employed in the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments. The full complement, including vacant posts is 59. The proposed complement for 1990-91 is 61.

HEALTH

Infertility

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the prevalence of infertility in England.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. The White Paper "Human Fertilisation and Embryology: A Framework for Legislation" (Cm. 259) published in November 1987 indicated that about one in 10 couples are thought to be infertile and a greater number are estimated to seek specialist help at some stage.

AIM Programme

Dr. Bray: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is supporting the extension of the European Commission AIM programme for health care.

Mr. Freeman: We strongly support the continuation of the advanced informatics in medicine (AIM) programme. The Department has been pressing for an adequate budget through the relevant official committees, and I have written in support to Vice-President Pandolfi, the Commissioner responsible. United Kingdom organisations have made the largest contribution of any EC member state to the present stage of the programme, and we wish to see this continue.

Care Funds

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to issue guidelines on the assessment of individual needs by social services departments under the care funds system.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We expect to issue guidance in the autumn after wide consultations in the summer.

Medical Research Ethics

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to introduce a legally binding code of medical research ethics as proposed by a committee of Ministers in the Council of Europe.

Mr. Freeman: No. The recommendation accepted by the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe on 6 February 1990 was that member states should either adopt legislation or take any other measures to ensure the implementation of a series of principles concerning medical research on human beings. The Department of Health will shortly be issuing updated and expanded guidance on the supervision of research on human beings. This guidance may be further revised in the light of experience.

Drug Trials

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will require all authorities running drug trials to offer no-fault compensation to all participating healthy volunteers.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Guidance to health authorities, which will be issued shortly, emphasises that those volunteering to participate in research studies should be made aware of what the arrangements are for obtaining compensation in the event of an injury arising from the research. It is then a matter for the individual concerned to decide whether or not the arrangements are acceptable.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will place a statutory limit on the number of drug trial studies a healthy volunteer can participate in per year;

(2) if there is any monitoring of the number of drug trials each volunteer student participates in over time;

(3) what safeguards there are to prevent students from taking part in more than one drug trial simultaneously;

(4) if there is any evidence of volunteers taking part in more than one drug trial simultaneously.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No information is held centrally about individuals who choose to volunteer to participate in medical research projects. There are no plans to introduce limits on the number of times a person can volunteer.

The Department recommends that a declaration about the state of health and any current medication should be obtained from healthy volunteers. They should also be asked to give their permission for notice to be sent, when necessary, to their general practitioner. Refusal to permit such communication should lead to rejection as a participant.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines have been issued to regional health authorities in assessing the business plans of National Health Service opt-out trusts and in particular on whether such trusts will be expected to shoulder their share of health authorities' deficits in the form of loans or other short-term finance from regional health authorities.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Subject to the passage of the necessary legislation. It will be for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to assess applications including business plans submitted by applicants for NHS trust status—on an individual basis in the light of local circumstances.

Private Homes (Fees)

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will ensure that where a person moves from a National Health Service hospital to a private nursing home or private elderly persons home, it will be made clear to her or him, in writing, before the transfer, whether the district health authority will pay the fees under a contractual arrangement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Circular HC(89)5 which was issued to health authorities in February 1989, together with a booklet "Discharge of Patients from Hospital"—copies are available in the Library—emphasised that proper arrangements should be made for any necessary continuing care before patients are discharged from hospital. Arrangements, including care in a private residential or nursing home, should be made in good time and be acceptable to the patient and, where appropriate, the patient's relatives or carers. Where a person moves from hospital to a private nursing home, it should be made quite clear to him or her in writing before the transfer whether or not the health authority will pay the fees, under a contractual arrangement.

Charges

Ms. Jo Richardson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a table showing prescription, dental and optical charges in April 1979 and April 1990 in current and constant prices showing both the cash and real increase for each charge.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The table sets out the latest available information in relation to prescription and dental charges. No comparable figures for optical charges are available because the supply of NHS spectacles ceased in July 1986. Information relates to financial years.

Prescription charges
1979-80	0·20

[1]1988-89	19·84
[2]1988-89	10·54

[2] 1979-80 prices.

In 1979 a total of 185 million NHS prescription items were dispensed without charge. In 1988, the latest year for which figures are available, 269 million items were dispensed free.

Wakefield DHA

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will call for a report from the chairman of Wakefield district health authority on the full cost of (a) the out-of-court settlement to be paid to Mr. Ray Corner, the authority's former district finance officer, (b) the legal fees incurred by Mr. Corner which are to be met by the authority, and (c) the authority's own legal fees in its defence against the action; and under which budget heading the payments will be made;

(2) if he will direct Yorkshire health authority to conduct an inquiry into the circumstances leading up to the dismissal of Mr. Ray Corner as district finance officer of Wakefield district health authority and to publish the report of the inquiry.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a local management issue; the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Wakefield district health authority, Mr. Brian Hayward for further information.

Guy's Hospital (Psychiatric Team)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to reach a decision on the request that his Department's funding of the psychiatric team for single homeless people, attached to Guy's hospital, London, be extended for a further year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman The funding of the team is secure until the end of May. We are considering the possibility of extending support thereafter and expect to be in a position to reach a decision soon.

Beverley Lewis

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what action he intends to take as a result of the reports he has received from the Gloucester health authority and Gloucestershire social services department into the death of Beverley Lewis;

(2) when he expects to receive the coroner's report on Beverley Lewis's death.

Mr. Freeman: We have now received reports from the health and social services authorities concerned and the conclusions and verdict of the coroner, and are considering them before deciding whether any further action is warranted.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration is being given into the need for additional legislation following the death of Beverley Lewis; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Government have recently received the coroner's report as well as reports from both the health and local authorities and are examining what, if any, changes are needed to existing legislation or policy.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the need for a public inquiry into the death of Beverley Lewis.

Mr. Freeman: We have received a number of letters from Members and members of the public.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many manufacturers of hearing aids have approval to market their hearing aids in the United Kingdom; and what criteria governs their approval.

Mr. Freeman: No formal approval is necessary in the United Kingdom for manufacturers to market their hearing aids to their dispensers.

The retailing of hearing aids to the private user is governed by the Hearing Aid Council Act which is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

The Department runs an NHS product approval scheme for hearing aids purchased on central contract by Mersey regional health authority to meet large-scale demand throughout the NHS. Currently eight models are approved under that scheme and have to meet the requirements of specifications drawn up by the Department in consultation with professional NHS staff. The detailed requirements run to several pages but the main factors are the levels of maximum gain and maximum output, and the frequency response.

A further 300 to 500 other models of hearing aid are also being marketed in this country at present.

Agency Nurses, Clerical and Administrative Staff

Mr. Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the amount spent on (a) agency nurses and (b) agency clerical and administrative staff for the latest available year for each district health authority, special health authority and regional health authority and England as a whole.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department for 1988-89 (the latest available) is shown in the table which has been placed in the Library.

As a result of various initiatives achieved or pending such as nurse clinical grading and local pay flexibility for administrative and clerical and other staff groups the total expenditure incurred on agency staff should reduce in the future.

As shown in the table the expenditure is incurred predominately in the Thames regions which together with the special health authorities for the London postgraduate treaching hospitals accounted for some 85 per cent. and 77 per cent. of the England totals for nursing and administrative and clerical staff respectively.

Mental Incapacity

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the Law Commission's review of mental incapacity to be complete.

The Attorney-General: I have been asked to reply. The Law Commission hopes to be able to publish a discussion paper on mentally incapacitated adults later this year.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Drink-Driving

Mr. Alton: To ask the Attorney-General what steps he takes to ensure that the Crown prosecution service determines the correct charges to be brought in cases of drink-driving.

The Attorney-General: Prosecution decisions are taken after careful consideration of the police report and evidence submitted to the Crown prosecution service by the relevant police force. The criteria for such decisions are set out in the code for Crown prosecutors promulgated by the Director of Public Prosecutions in accordance with section 10 of the Prosecution of Offences Act 1985. Subject to the requirement that certain categories of case must be submitted to the Crown prosecution service headquarters for consideration, it is the responsibility of the chief Crown prosecutor to establish arrangements within his area to ensure that decisions in particular cases are taken at a level of seniority commensurate with the gravity and difficulty of the particular case.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Organic Farming

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many inquiries about organic agriculture his Department has received in the last 12 months.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Over the past year the Department of Agriculture dealt with inquiries and requests for advice on organic agriculture from approximately 40 farmers and growers. We do much to promote more natural food and farming.

Rural Regeneration

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what work has been undertaken by the inter-departmental committee on rural regeneration which was established by the Department of Agriculture in December 1989; and when the committee's findings will be publicised.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The inter-departmental committee on rural development has been in operation since January 1990. It continues to work to its general remit of preparing advice for Ministers on how best to carry forward action to tackle the social and economic problems in the most deprived rural areas.

Discussions have taken place with district councils, the rural action project and the promoters of rural development projects. Following a recommendation from the committee it was agreed to fund the rural action project for a further year to 31 March 1991.

The work of the committee is to provide advice to Ministers on the effective delivery of policies and programmes. Decisions following from the committee's recommendations will be announced.

Extradition

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications relating to terrorist offences have been made for extradition from the Irish Republic to Britain (a) between 1972 and 14 November 1985 and (b) since 15 November 1985; how many have been refused; how many have been granted; and for how long any outstanding cases have been under consideration.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 23 March 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

In the period covered by the question, so far as England and Wales are concerned, the centrally available information on extradition requests made to the Republic of Ireland, in cases believed to have been related to terrorist offences, is as follows:

1986 One application made and refused;
1988 Two applications made: one refused and one outstanding as the person cannot be traced;
1989 One application made and granted, but now subject to appeal.

I understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland that although information about requests made to the Republic of Ireland was not centrally recorded prior to 1987, two such applications are know to have been made in the period from 1972 to the present:

1973 One application made and refused;
1984 One application made and outstanding because of the failure of the person to appear at an appeal hearing. He remains at large.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Student Grants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many students in each local education authority area received the full mandatory grant for undergraduates in the last year for which figures are available; and what percentage they formed of all recipients of mandatory awards.

Mr. Jackson: The data requested are listed in the table.

School Building

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his proposals to ensure that all schools comply with the school building regulations due to come into force in April.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The current standards for school premises are set out in the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1981. No changes to these regulations are due to come into effect in April. Responsibility for meeting the requirements of the school premises regulations rests with the local education authorities and governing bodies.

Non-teaching Time

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what plans he has to provide non-teaching time for teachers in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools to enable them to implement (i) the teaching, testing and assessment provisions of the national curriculum and (ii) the proposals of the Elton report on discipline in schools.

Mrs. Rumbold: The use of teachers' directed time, and in particular its division between teaching and non-teaching duties, is a matter for head teachers to decide.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what policy considerations determined his decision to accept the recommendations of the IAC on teachers' pay and conditions report in respect of the awards to main scale teachers on scale points 1, 6, 7, 8 and 9.

Mrs. Rumbold: The IAC has produced an outstanding report, which sets out the thinking underlying its recommendations. My right hon. Friend has welcomed the report and proposes to accept its recommendations in full.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what allocations will be made to local education authorities to support the activities of the Workers Educational Association under the education support grant programme for 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: My Department is today writing to local education authorities in England to inform them of the level of expenditure which I have approved for the WEA activity in the education support grants (ESG) programme for 1990-91. The information is shown in the table.

A total of 102 authorities have submitted bids for this ESG, out of a total of 107 that were invited to do so. This is a most encouraging result, which demonstrates the support of the local education authorities for the Workers Educational Association. It confirms the willingness of statutory and voluntary providers to work in partnership to assist the better overall planning of adult education locally.

DEFENCE

Radar Base, Brawdy

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to make any financial contribution to the proposed building of a radar base at Brawdy for the United States navy.

Mr. Alan Clark: A decision in principle has been taken to embark, in collaboration with the United States, on a two-year joint trial of a United States navy over the horizon radar (OTHR) in the United Kingdom. This equipment is a high-frequency radar which uses the ionosphere to refract beyond the normal radar horizon. It can therefore supplement the coverage obtained by conventional microwave radars and enhance the effectiveness of airborne early warning and air defence resources.

The trial is planned to start in 1993, and the information obtained from it will be fully shared between ourselves and the United States. The United States Government will supply the radar; the United Kingdom Government will provide and prepare the operational sites; and the running costs of the trial will be shared. Once the results of the trial have been fully assessed, further consideration will be given whether to retain the OTHR as a permanent operational facility.

To be effective, the system needs separate transmitter and receiver sites. After extensive studies and assessment of possible locations, we have concluded that the most suitable site for the transmitter is St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, and that that for the receiver is Blakehill radio station, near Cricklade, Wiltshire. Both sites are MOD owned. We will shortly be submitting formal notices of proposed development to the appropriate planning authorities in accordance with normal planning procedures. These will be supported by full environmental impact assessments. No construction work will be carried out at either site before the necessary approvals have been obtained.

When installing the transmitter, we will ensure that there is no danger of any radio frequency or other environmental hazard to any member of the public outside the MOD boundary of the site. The receiver site will present no environmental hazard.

War Widows

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the financing of the special payments to be made to pre-1973 war widows.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence announced on 11 December 1989 at columns 677-78, the special payments to pre-1973 war widows will be paid from the beginning of the financial year 1990-91 by the Department of Social Security on behalf of the Ministry of Defence. The necessary provision is being sought in the 1990-91 main estimate for class I vote 3. Pending parliamentary approval of that estimate, urgent expenditure estimated at £55 million will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Greenham Common

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the future of RAF Greenham Common.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave at column 615 of Hansard, dated 6 March.

Chemical and Biological Weapons

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence his Department has that the Soviet Union is reducing its capacity to produce chemical and biological weapons.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union declared in 1987 that it had ceased production of chemical weapons. We are, however, not aware of any change in Soviet capacity to produce them since then. The Soviet Union is a signatory of the 1972 biological warfare convention and has stated it is in compliance with its obligations. Any production of biological weapons would be in breach of the convention.

US Defence Secretary

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the United States of America Defence Secretary; and what he expects to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr Wallace) on 6 February 1990 at column 597.

Mallet Blow Exercises

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for the years 1975 to 1989 (a) the number of Mallet Blow exercises, (b) the number of missions in each exercise, (c) the types of aircraft involved in each and (d) the accidents involving low flying in each exercise.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Exercise Mallet Blow was not introduced until 1980. Records of exercises since that date have not been retained in their entirety. I am able, however, to supply the following details of Mallet Blow exercises since 1984:

Exercise	Missions flown	Offensive aircraft types[1]
Mallet Blow 84/1	66	A-10, Harrier, Jaguar, Tornado, F-111
Mallet Blow 84/2	42	A-10, Jaguar, Harrier, Tornado, F-111
Mallet Blow 84/3	139	A-10, F-111, Draken, Tornado, Jaguar, Harrier
Mallet Blow 84/4	83	Draken, Tornado, A-10, F-111, Harrier, Jaguar
Mallet Blow 85/1	77	Harrier, Tornado, Jaguar, F16, A-10, F-111, Dracken, Buccaneer
Mallet Blow 85/2	88	Jaguar, Tornado, Harrier, F-16, Draken, RF-4, F-111
Mallet Blow 85/3	73	Tornado, Jaguar, Draken, F-111, Harrier, A-10
Mallet Blow 86/1	42	Harrier, Tornado, Jaguar, Draken, F-111
Mallet Blow 86/2	123	Tornado, Harrier, Jaguar, F-16, F-111, Buccaneer
Mallet Blow 86/3	63	Jaguar, Harrier, Tornado, Draken, F-5, F-16, F-111, Mirage, F-18
Mallet Blow 86/4	85	Tornado, Jaguar, Harrier
Mallet Blow 87/1	60	Tornado, Harrier, Jaguar, Draken, F-111
Mallet Blow 87/2	133	Tornado, Jaguar, Harrier, F-16, F-111
Mallet Blow 87/3	12	Harrier, F-111, Tornado, Jaguar
Mallet Blow 88/1	86	Tornado, Harrier, Jaguar, Draken, F-111
Mallet Blow 88/2	100	Tornado, Harrier, Jaguar, F-111
Mallet Blow 89/1	74	Tornado, Jaguar, Harrier, Draken, A-10
Mallet Blow 89/2	193	Tornado, Jaguar, Harrier, F-111, F-16, F-18

[1] A number of other support aircraft (tankers, air defence fighters and airborne early-warning aircraft) participate in Mallet Blow exercises but these do not take part in low-level flying in the Otterburn area.

There have been two major accidents to low-flying aircraft involved in Mallet Blow exercises: a German air force Tornado aircraft crashed during Mallet Blow 86/4, and two RAF Harrier aircraft collided in mid-air during Mallet Blow 87/3.

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the bases where aircraft involved in the Mallet Blow exercise from 26 to 31 March will fly from.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Aircraft participating in Exercise Mallet Blow 90/1 from 26 to 30 March 1990 will fly from the following bases:

RAF Brize Norton
RAF Coltishall
RAF Coningsby
RAF Cottesmore
RAF Honington
RAF Leeming
RAF Leuchars
RAF Linton-on-Ouse
RAF Marham
RAF Waddington

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of the Mallet Blow exercise from 26 to 31 March.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The full costs of individual exercises are not kept centrally and their calculation would involve disproportionate cost and effort.

Service Accommodation

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent in each year since 1979 on improving grade 4 service accommodation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Figures for works expenditure are not kept in the format requested and could not be provided without incurring disproportionate expense.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much money has been spent in each year since 1979 on the improvement of service accommodation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Department places a high priority on the improvement of service accommodation and consequently expenditure on improving this type of accommodation has increased substantially over the past two or three years. Figures for works expenditure are not, however, kept in the format requested and could not be obtained without incurring disproportionate expense.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans exist for bringing grade 4 service accommodation up to standard with civilian housing.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Service accommodation is graded according to amenity, locational and environmental factors as well as physical condition and facilities, so that the grading of properties has only an indirect bearing on whether they require modernisation. It is not clear on what basis the standard of a property such as a barracks could be compared with that for civilian housing. However, all three services have extensive rolling modernisation programmes for married quarters and single living accommodation, regardless of grading. They plan to complete the modernisation of the former within 10 to 15 years. Single living accommodation will take longer.

Chieftain Tank

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the industrial implications of a reduction in the planned order for the replacement of the Chieftain tank.

Mr. Alan Clark: No decision has yet been made on tank numbers.

Fire Standard

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what criteria govern the application of the Government fire standards code to the major refurbishment of Ministry of Defence storage facilities;

(2) what is the status of the Government fire standards code;

(3) what regulations govern the liaison between the various military fire services and local civilian fire services in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) abroad;

(4) what was the annual amount of expenditure on improving fire safety standards in Ministry of Defence storage depots for each year since 1979;

(5) whether the Government fire standards code applies to Ministry of Defence storage facilities in other countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on Wednesday 28 March 1990.

Community Charge

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the total amount of expenditure spent to date on reimbursing service personnel in Scotland in compensation for community charges that are above the average.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The estimated total expenditure for 1989-90 is £146,426.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average service community charge in Scotland, as calculated for the purposes of reimbursement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is £291 for 1989-90.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated average service community charge in England and Wales, as calculated for the purposes of reimbursement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: For the purposes of accommodation charge refunds after 1 April 1990, the average service community charge for England, Scotland and Wales will be used. The actual figure will be available shortly. My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage of service personnel in Scotland who are liable for community charges (a) below and (b) above the average, as calculated for the purposes of reimbursement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some 35 per cent. of personnel in service accommodation in Scotland in 1989-90 are paying community charge below the service average, and 65 per cent. are paying above the average. I have no information on the community charge liability of service personnel living in their own homes, who are not eligible for accommodation charge refunds.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage of service personnel in Scotland who will be responsible for community charges above the average, as calculated for the purposes of reimbursement, but are not eligible for reimbursement of accommodation charges.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some 50 per cent. of those in service accommodation, in 1989-90, fall into this category.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the percentage of service personnel in Scotland who will be responsible for community charges above the average, as calculated for the purposes of reimbursement, and will be eligible for reimbursement of accommodation charges.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some 15 per cent. of those in service accommodation, in 1989-90, fall into this category.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of the timing for starting negotiations for the reduction of nuclear systems, relative to implementation of any reductions under CFE; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our policy remains as set out in the comprehensive concept adoped by NATO Heads of State and Government at their summit in May 1989.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in respect of the timing of a decision on the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons, relative to the West German election; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A decision on a replacement system for our WE177 free-fall bomb is not expected before the latter part of this year. With regard to the following on to Lance system, the agreed position remains that NATO will not take a decision before 1992.

Service Spouses and Children

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps the Ministry of Defence has taken to improve employment opportunities for the spouses and older children of service personnel stationed in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany and (c) Cyprus.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Banks (Foreign Debts)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to have a precise figure for loss of mainstream corporation tax receipts from banks due to provisions on doubtful foreign debts incurred in Third world lending for the year 1985-86.

Mr. Lilley: The precise amount will be determined only when all banks with sovereign debt have agreed their tax assessments for the appropriate accounting period with their tax inspector. It is not possible to forecast with certainty when this will be. In any event, it would involve disproportionate expense to collect centrally information about all the adjustments which will be made by every bank, so the information collected centrally will remain an estimate with some degree of imprecision.

Professional Bodies (Membership)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to allow unemployed professional people to claim tax relief on their membership of professional bodies as if they were employed.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The general position is that, under section 201 of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988, an employee may have tax relief for annual subscriptions to a professional body if the subscription is paid out of the employee's pay, it is paid to a body approved by the Inland Revenue under section 201(3) of the 1988 Act and the activities of the body are relevant to the duties of the employment. A professional subscription paid during a period of unemployment would not normally satisfy the conditions for relief, but where a subscription is paid during a period of unemployment and the individual was employed during the same tax year (in a job to which membership of the professional body was relevant) tax relief would usually be given against the income from that employment. We have no plans for changing the rules of this tax relief.

Civil Service Medical Centre

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service how many persons made use of the civil service medical centre for vaccinations and inoculations in 1989; and what records are kept of such treatment of individuals.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 27 March 1990]: In 1989, about 4,000 persons received 10,929 vaccinations and/or inoculations at the central London clinic of the civil service occupational health service. The occupational health service maintains records of these items for administrative purposes. Each individual is supplied with a personal record of the procedure undertaken.

TRANSPORT

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commission for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Atkins: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the past 10 years is as follows:

	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989	[1]—	[1]—
1988	26	4
1987	24	1
1986	23	1
1985	17	nil
1984	34	4
1983	28	2
1982	23	4
1981	33	5
1980	33	2

When the PCA upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Company Cars

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from Friends of the Earth concerning the use of, and costs allowed to taxpayers through the use of, company cars.

Mr. Atkins: A number of branches of Friends of the Earth raised the issue of company cars in their responses to "Traffic in London" and the London assessment studies.

Light Rail Development

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations the Department has given to the development of light rail in London.

Mr. Portillo: The docklands light railway opened in 1987 and is being extended to Bank and through the royal docks to Beckton. London Regional Transport is developing a case for a southern extension to Greenwich and Lewisham. In 1986 London Regional Transport and British Rail jointly published a report "Light Rail for London", which identified other possibilities. As a result, London Regional Transport and British Rail, together with the London borough of Croydon, are undertaking a detailed feasibility study of a light rail system in the Croydon area. The Government will consider carefully the financial and economic case for such schemes and their priorities, when they are brought forward.

A427, Theddingworth

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now designate the A427 at Theddingworth, Leicester, as a trunk road.

Mr. Atkins: No. A new trunk road route, the M1-A1 link (A14), now under construction parallel to the A427, will offer a more appropriate route for longer-distance east-west traffic.

Wheel Clamping, Newham

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East of 20 March, Official Report, column 506, if he will authorise wheel clamping in Green street and Katherine road, in Newham.

Mr. Atkins: Following a request by the local highway authority, wheel clamping is authorised by the Secretary of State for Transport, if he is satisfied that it is justified.

Stockport Bypass

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest estimate of the cost of the A6 (M) Stockport north-south bypass.

Mr. Atkins: A total of £89 million for works and land.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 28 March 1990]: We estimate that our expenditure in the financial year 1989-90 will be £4·0 million. A list of contracts awarded is in the table. The provisional budget for the financial year 1990-91 is £3·5 million.

Comprehensive records of all contracts with consultancy firms are not held centrally. It would be disproportionately expensive to collect all the information required. The list identifies those management and computing consultancies which began in 1989-90 and are valued at £10,000 or more:

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disabled People

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on his proposals to extend help with the extra costs of disability to less severely disabled people of working age and below.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Rugby and Kenilworth (Mr. Pawsey) on 5 March at column 525-26.

Child Benefit

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people without a job or YTS place have had child benefit terminated in advance of the cut-off date.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The precise information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, a study of summer school leavers in 1988 indicated that in some 1,200 cases, child benefit was terminated during the extension period (12 September 1988 to 1 January 1989) other than by reason of the child finding work or a YTS place. In 90 per cent. of those cases, the termination was because the child had reached the age of 18, the remainder being for a variety of reasons such as the child going abroad or into care.

National Insurance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the yield from a 1 per cent. contribution by employed and self-employed persons, respectively, on all earnings above the upper earnings limits for class 1 and class 4 contributions in 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is estimated that a 1 per cent. contribution on earnings in excess of the upper earnings limit would yield £275 million in class 1 and £70 million in class 4 national insurance contributions.

Social Fund

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Monklands, West, Official Report, 26 March, column 31, on the social fund, how many personnel in his Department are involved in reviews; and where they are located.

Mr. Scott: In 447 local offices, there are social fund officers whose statutory functions include first-tier reviews. In addition, there are 44 social fund inspectors whose sole function is to undertake second-tier reviews. Social fund inspectors are independent of the Department. They are appointed by and accountable to the social fund commissioner, and their office is located in Birmingham.

Students

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many students in each of the last three years received housing and other benefits valued in current prices in excess of (a) £310 and (b) £420 in (i) England, (ii) Wales, (iii) Scotland and (iv) Northern Ireland.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Leeds, West (Mr. Battle) on 16 February at column 893.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts; excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The estimated expenditure on management and computer consultancy contracts in the financial year 1989-90, excluding hardward and software purchases, is £42·1 million. Details of the individual contracts are given in the table.

For the financial year 1990-91, the Department has budgeted to spend £29·3 million.

PRIME MINISTER

Juno Project

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she has any plans to involve Her Majesty's Government in the future of the Juno project; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The enterprise shown by the Juno initiative is welcome and we regret that it is encountering financial difficulties. However, Juno is a one-off private sector initiative angled at commercial sponsorship and media interest. Diversion of public resources from the Government's longer-term scientific and commercial space objectives would not be justified. Accordingly, the Government do not intend to intervene.

Quangos

Mr. Battle: To ask the Prime Minister if, pursuant to her reply to the hon. Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Ewing), Official Report, 20 March, column 513, she will deposit in the Library a list of the quangos operating now and in June 1979, giving alongside their areas of responsibility.

The Prime Minister: The Library of the House has copies of the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies 1989", which lists all non-departmental public bodies, and Cmnd. 7797, "Report on Non Departmental Public Bodies", published in January 1980.

British Nuclear Forum

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister if she will place in the Library a copy of her correspondence with British Nuclear Forum in the last year.

The Prime Minister: It is not my practice to do so.

Acid Rain

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if she will place in the Library a copy of her address to the Royal Society conference on acid rain on 22 March.

The Prime Minister: A copy is available in the House Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Property Services Agency

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research he has undertaken into the benefits of the privatisation of the Property Services Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: It is clear that competition will make the PSA more efficient, and privatisation will give it freedom to compete more effectively. Both processes will benefit the PSA's customers.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what organisational changes he will effect in the Property Services Agency from 1 April.

Mr. Chope: On 5 May 1988, my right hon. Friend the Member for Cirencester and Tewkesbury (Mr Ridley) announced that the PSA should become a commercial organisation. The PSA has made good progress towards that objective and, as from 1 April 1990, will be split into two oganisations—Property Holdings and PSA Services. Of the 13,700 non-industrial staff and 7,500 industrial staff in the PSA at present, some 700 non-industrial and 1,050 industrial staff will transfer with Property Holdings to DOE(C). The rest will remain with PSA Services.

Property Holdings will perform the Government's landlord functions for the common user estate as well as other long-term Government activities. Property Holdings will become an integral part of the Department of the Environment.

PSA Services, with initial staffing of £13,000 non-industrial personnel, comprises four operating divisions and a central headquarters group. The operating divisions will deal with maintenance and property management, design and project management, provision of specialist advice and overseas work. PSA Services will operate on simplified commercial accounts from 1 April 1990 and full commercial accounts will be introduced from 1 April 1991.

PSA Services will compete with the private sector for business from other Government Departments including Property Holdings, but will also be allowed some freedom to bid for work outside Government. PSA Services will be privatised as soon as the business is ready for it, probably in the second half of 1992, and the enabling Bill is presently under consideration in another place.

Disabled People (Housing)

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his Department will revise the code of guidance on homelessness procedures to ensure that disabled people who are in residential or hospital care and who wish to have a home of their own are accepted as homeless by their local housing authority.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No. Health authorities and social services authorities may negotiate nomination arrangements with local housing authorities or housing associations but it cannot be right to give their ex-patients an automatic right to jump the queue for subsidised housing.

Surface Water (Acidification)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department will make funds available to enable the work of the surface water acidification programme to continue.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for the Isle of Wight (Mr. Field) in the Official Report on 23 March at column 770.

The Department, with other Government Departments, will continue to fund wide-ranging monitoring and research programmes on the nature and impacts of acid deposition. Total Government expenditure in this field in 1990-91 is planned to exceed £2 million.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department had at the Royal Society conference on water acidification in London between 19 and 22 March.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answers 29 March 1990]: The surface water acidification programme (SWAP) final conference was attended by scientific experts from my Department. Additionally, many of the United Kingdom-based scientists participating in the SWAP research also have contracts from my Department to carry out parts of our continuing £1·5 million research programme into the processes, impacts and abatement of United Kingdom acid deposition.

Waste

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the 20Environment what consideration has been given to the European Commission proposal for a Council directive on civil liability for damage caused by waste, COM[89]282 final-SYN 217, dated 15 September 1989.

Mr. Trippier: The Government's initial consideration of the proposed Council directive was incorporated in an explanatory memorandum put before Parliament on 27 October 1989.

West Yorkshire Residuary Body

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what amount of money has been received by Kirklees metropolitan council from the West Yorkshire residuary body, in each year since the abolition of West Yorkshire metropolitan county council.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information is as follows:

	1986-87	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Revenue balances	0·92	nil	nil	nil
Capital receipts	0·64	1·05	1·03	1·83

Sewage Sludge (Dumping)

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of ending the dumping of sewage sludge at sea for each water authority in England and Wales for each year to 1998.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: We have begun discussions with the sewerage undertakers concerned to work out the details of the necessary programmes of work required to end sludge dumping at sea by 1998. The time scales of these programmes and their associated costs will depend on the particular circumstances in each undertaker's area.

Merseyside Residuary Body

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Merseyside residuary body will complete its work and be dissolved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Merseyside residuary body will be formally dissolved today by an order made under section 67 of the Local Government Act 1985. During the four years since abolition, the residuary body has sold or transferred to successor authorities 5,735 former county council property interests. It has distributed some £37 million from property sales and revenue balances for the benefit of local ratepayers.

The Merseyside residuary body is the fourth of the seven residuary bodies to wind up. It inherited a considerable number of property interests, rights and liabilities from the former Merseyside county council, not least those in respect of Croxteth hall and country park. It is a credit to all concerned that successful solutions were achieved with the full co-operation of the successor authorities.

The order transferred the remainder of the residuary body's property, functions, rights and liabilities to the city of Liverpool and the metropolitan boroughs of Knowsley, St. Helens, Sefton and Wirral on 31 January 1990. The residuary body's superannuation and compensation responsibilities were transferred to Wirral district council in October 1987. The residuary body's final report is being laid before Parliament today.

The two remaining metropolitan residuary bodies are on target to complete their abolition-related work within the five-year time scale.

London Residuary Body

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the London residuary body will complete its GLC-related business; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The bulk of the London residuary body's remaining GLC-related property, rights and liabilities were today transferred to the London boroughs and other functional successors by an order made under sections 67, 100 and 101 of the Local Government Act 1985. This marks the virtual completion of the residuary body's role in relation to the abolition of the GLC.

The residuary body inherited a considerable number of property interests, rights and liabilities, and a wide and complex range of tasks from the former GLC. To date, £184 million in revenue balances and £478 million in capital receipts have been distributed to the boroughs, with more to come. This is an impressive achievement by any standard, and I congratulate the chairman and board members of the residuary body on the effective manner in which they have carried out their tasks. The financial benefits to ratepayers and charge payers of abolishing the GLC are now increasingly apparent.

The London residuary body will continue to have responsibility for a limited number of ex-GLC tasks, including the disposal of County hall and the distribution to the London boroughs of the receipts generated. However, its main task from 1 April will be to act as the residuary body for ILEA functions, property, rights and liabilities which are not transferred to inner London boroughs on the abolition of that authority.

Local Authority Housing

Mr. Wolfson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what freedom he will give local authorities that dispose of all or most of their housing to new landlords to spend the resulting receipts; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Government want to encourage innovative approaches to the ownership and management of subsidised rented housing and some local authorities are achieving this through large scale voluntary transfers of their housing to private bodies—usually housing associations. I am now in a position to announce decisions on the treatment of capital receipts in these cases.

Local authorities who transfer all or most of their housing will be required to set aside 75 per cent. of the receipt or an amount equivalent to the debt on the housing being transferred, whichever is the greater. The remainder of the receipt will be a usable receipt as defined in the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. One way in which authorities will be able to use this part of the receipts is to secure the provision of additional low-cost housing through housing associations and the private sector. I hope they will make full use of the opportunity thus provided.

In view of the potential scale of these receipts, we believe that authorities should show restraint in the rate at which they are spent. We will discuss authorities' plans for spending their receipts with them before giving consent to transfers.

I know that a number of authorities have been waiting to find out what use they could make of voluntary transfer receipts. I hope that removing the uncertainty today will help those who are considering whether to pursue a transfer. Since the trend towards voluntary transfers is still at a relatively early stage, we will keep these arrangements under review to establish whether they are working satisfactorily for the Government and the local authorities concerned.

I have placed in the Library a note giving our guidelines on the use of such receipts. A copy of the note is being sent to the local authority associations and other interested bodies.

Non-domestic Rates

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps the Government propose to take to ensure that holiday caravans remain within the non-domestic rating system in England and Wales.

Mr. Chope: During the consideration of the Local Government Finance Bill in 1988, the Government, in response to representations made by the caravan industry, introduced an amendment intended to provide that holiday caravans should remain within rating, while the owners of caravans not occupied as sole or main residences but used as second homes should be subject to the standard community charge. The distinction was drawn according to whether or not the caravan was on a protected site, within the meaning of the Caravan Sites Act 1968. No holiday caravans were understood to be on such sites.

It has now become apparent, however, that many sites primarily occupied by holiday caravans are protected sites. A high proportion of holiday caravans may therefore attract the standard community charge. This was not the Government's intention and, even though we have prescribed a maximum standard community charge multiplier of one for caravans and drawn to local authorities' attention their discretion to set a lower multiplier still, it is likely that many holiday caravan owners in England and Wales would face a burden considerably greater than if their caravans had been rated.

After discussion with the caravan industry, therefore, the Government have decided to introduce shortly legislation to amend the Local Government Finance Act 1988 to provide for all caravans other than those occupied as a sole or main residence to be treated as non-domestic and subject to rating rather than attracting the standard community charge, whether or not they are stationed on a protected site. The legislation will provide for this amendment to the 1988 Act to take effect from 1 April this year. It will further provide that any standard community charge which may have been paid on a caravan before the legislation comes into force will be repayable. Once the legislation is in force, valuation officers will alter local non-domestic rating lists in respect of the affected sites to reflect the contribution that the caravans make to the assessment of the site as a whole.

My Department and the Welsh Office are today writing to all charging authorities in England and Wales to inform them of the Government's intentions. The legislative position is different in Scotland, where holiday caravans are not liable for the standard community charge unless they are able to be used for all year round residence. However, the change we are proposing may lead to caravans in England being subject to non-domestic rating which, in comparable circumstances in Scotland, would be liable to the standard charge. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland has concluded that legislative change is therefore required in Scotland and the necessary provisions will be included in the Bill which we will bring forward.

Shops Act 1950

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to monitor how much money has been spent by local authorities in the monitoring of shops' compliance with the Shops Act 1950 and on prosecutions for breaches of the Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 19 March 1990]: My Department has no plans to collect such information.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Accountancy Bodies

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy as a condition of recognition to require the accountancy bodies seeking supervisory recognition under the Companies Act 1989 to ensure that persons from the accountancy firms criticised by his Department and the joint disciplinary scheme are not nominated to any policy-making committees.

Mr. Redwood: No. To impose such a condition as a general rule would be unreasonable.

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Forth: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

Year	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989	[1]—	[1]—
1988	26	—
1987	21	1
1986	10	2
1985	13	1
1984	13	1
1983	15	—
1982	14	4
1981	15	—
1980	19	1

When the PCA upholds a complaint, it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy, agreed with the PCA.

Trading Standards Officers

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to extend the powers of county trading standards officers.

Mr. Forth: I consider that county trading standards officers have adequate powers to enforce consumer protection legislation and I have no plans to extend those powers.

Auditing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary State for Trade and Industry on how many occasions the auditors of any company have been replaced as a consequence of issuing a qualified opinion; and if he will publish the latest available statistics.

Mr. Redwood: This information is not collected.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will withdraw his representatives from any auditing policy-making organisation which allows any individual from the auditing firms criticised by his Department to influence the formulation of policy.

Mr. Redwood: My Department will continue to seek to make a constructive contribution to the development of guidance for the accountancy profession. An arbitrary policy of withdrawal in the circumstances suggested by the hon. Member's question would therefore be self-defeating.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation giving him powers specifically to investigate the affairs of auditing firms which according to his inspectors have performed poor audits.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 March 1990]: No, but under the Companies Act 1989, which will provide a new supervisory system for company auditors, it must appear to the Secretary of State that recognised supervisory bodies have effective arrangements for the investigation of complaints against company auditors.

Currency Swaps

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will issue accounting recommendations to companies for the accounting treatment of currency swaps.

Mr. Redwood: No. This issue is being considered by the accounting profession and my Department is watching developments closely.

Plastics (Recycling)

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress is being made in recycling plastics in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Forth: The United Kingdom plastics industry already recycles more than 95 per cent. of its in-house process scrap, and good progress is now being made in recycling used plastics such as agricultural and supermarket film, more than 150,000 tonnes being reprocessed last year. This figure is expected to increase in 1990 as newly installed plant comes fully on stream. A range of recent industry initiatives to recover and recycle post-consumer plastics waste, such as bottles, are also now beginning to have an impact. Methods of stimulating plastics recycling are being considered in the light of international practice by a working party set up by the recycling advisory group. Its recommendations will help inform the Government's consideration of policy options in the context of the forthcoming White Paper on the environment.

Computer-Aided Design Exhibition

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what contribution his Department made to the computer-aided design exhibition and conference in Birmingham between 27 and 29 March.

Mr. Forth: The Department made no financial contribution to the computer-aided design exhibition and conference. The Department was however represented by DTI west midlands offering advice on the enterprise initiative and by industrial material markets division providing information on the materials matter programme.

Atlas Steel Foundry

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with the Director General of Fair Trading and the Monopolies and Mergers Commission about the purchase of the Atlas steel foundry in Armadale by William Cook plc.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 March 1990]: This purchase is at present being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading under the merger control provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973. He will advise the Secretary of State as soon as possible on the question of reference to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in the normal way. It would not be appropriate for me to take a view on the merits of the purchase or otherwise comment on it in advance of the director general's advice.

Hearing Aids

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many registered hearing aid dispensers there are in each district health authority area; and what criteria govern their approval.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 March 1990]: There are 617 hearing aid dispensers registered by the Hearing Aid Council. These are not recorded by the district health authority in which they practise.

Only registered persons may practise as hearing aid dispensers. In order to be registered, it is necessary to satisfy the standard of competence published by the council and pay the appropriate fee under the terms of the Hearing Aid Council Act 1968, as amended.

National Engineering Laboratory

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if a decision has been taken on the appointment for the new director of the National Engineering Laboratory; and if he will make a statement on the appointment.

Mr. Ridley [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1990, c. 44]: A new chief executive has been appointed. He is William Edgar. Mr. Edgar will take up the appointment on 1 June 1990.

WALES

Homelessness

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many homeless households there are in bed-and-breakfast accommodation and in other temporary accommodation in Wales in each of the boroughs and districts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The figures are as follows:

Numbers of households in temporary accommodation on 31 December 1989

	At end of quarter
	Total	Bed and breakfast
Alyn and Deeside	28	1

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are homeless in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: In the period October to December 1989, 1,618 households were accepted as homeless by local authorities in Wales. I announced a package of measures to tackle homelessness in Wales on 11 December.

Offshore Dumping

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list where, in offshore areas of Wales, the dumping takes place of (a) sewage sludge, (b) fly ash and (c) industrial wastes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Sewage sludge is dumped in Liverpool bay and in two sites in the Bristol channel (one of which is used in bad weather only). No fly ash or industrial wastes are currently dumped in offshore areas of Wales.

My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on [illegible] March that the Government intended that all dumping at sea of sewage sludge would end by 1998.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will pay transitional relief for the poll tax for five years in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: No. The introduction of the community charge will promote the accountability of local government. An over-extended transitional period would preclude the early realisation of that accountability. The three-year transitional period for which I have provided strikes the right balance between protecting the interests of the charge payers affected by the structural changes to local government finance, and ensuring that full accountability will be obtained relatively quickly.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Welsh councils have not supplied him with all the details required of their spending plans and community charge for 1990-91 by the appropriate deadline; and if he will describe any action he will now take.

Mr. Grist: The information required by the Department relating to district council transfers from, and county council precepts upon, collection funds has been received from all Welsh local authorities. The information requested by the Department relating to the community charges set by Welsh local authorities is not due until 2 April, although most councils have already provided this.

Mentally Ill People

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report, for the latest available date, the numbers of mental illness beds in secure accommodation in each district health authority and those district health authorities where no secure accommodation is available; what action he has taken to promote the development of comprehensive secure provision, including that for those chronically mentally ill and behaviourally disturbed people not appropriate for regional secure units, in pursuance of the recommendation of the inter-departmental Home Office and Department of Health and Social Security working group; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I understand from returns submitted by health authorities that, as of 31 December 1988, the latest date for which information is available centrally, the number of mental illness beds in permanently locked accommodation in each district health authority in Wales was:

	Numbers
Clwyd	20
East Dyfed	10
Gwent	Nil
Gwynedd	Nil
Mid Glamorgan	Nil
Pembrokeshire	Nil
Powys	Nil
West Glamorgan	5

On 21 February this year I announced proposals for the establishment of a departmental advisory group to determine a comprehensive policy for forensic psychiatric services in Wales in the context of the document "Mental Illness Services—A Strategy for Wales" published in May 1989, which sets out comprehensive proposals for the development of mental illness services. At the same time I announced that Clwyd and Mid Glamorgan health authorities have been asked to prepare proposals for interim secure facilities to be available until substantive medium secure units have been established.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in the Official Report the hospitals for the mentally ill and handicapped which will become empty over the next five years, the number of patients in each at the latest available date, the district health authority in which each is situated; and whether it is in or near an urban area.

Mr. Grist: Proposals for any substantial variation in the service provided in a district, such as the closure of a hospital, are a matter in the first instance for the health authority. No proposals have been approved by my right hon. Friend which would lead to the closure in the next five years of a mental illness or mental handicap hospital in Wales.

Wrexham Art College

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to Wrexham art college to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Roberts: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Services Committee, arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 7 May to 11 May 1990.

Manufacturing Investment

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state in the Official Report the value of manufacturing investment, including leased assests, in Wales for each year since 1978, in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Peter Walker: The following table shows, at current (cash) prices, the value of net capital expenditure in Wales from 1978 to 1987. Data for later years are not yet available. The data exclude the value of assets leased from the financial industries as this information is not available for Wales. Constant price data are available only for the United Kingdom as a whole.

Home Improvement Grants

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library a copy of the new means-testing scheme relating to home improvement grants to be introduced in April 1990.

Mr. Grist: My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 22 February that implementation of the major provisions of part VIII of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 relating to home improvement grants in England and Wales is being deferred to 1 July 1990. The relevant circulars will be published and placed in the Library before that date.

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Peter Walker: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989-90	[1]	[1]
1988-89	9	—
1987-88	6	—

1982-83	4	—
1981-82	9	—
1980-81	6	2

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Hospital Treatment

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those medical conditions which cannot be treated by hospitals within Wales but can be treated by hospitals within England.

Mr. Grist: Information on every medical condition which cannot be treated by hospitals within Wales but can be treated by hospitals within England is not held centrally. However, there are a number of health services which, to be clinically effective and economically viable, need to be provided to a population greater than that of Wales or any single English region. Those services, known as supra-regional services, which are provided to the population of Wales and England by hospitals in England, are as follows:

Chorioncarcinoma Services
Craniofacial Services
Endoprosthetic Service for Primary Bone Tumours
Heart Tranplantation
Liver Transplantation
Non-Transplant Liver Services
Neo-natal and Infant Cardiac Surgery
Psychiatric Services for Deaf People
Retinoblastoma Services
Stereotactic Radiosurgery

Public Expenditure

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on which date he will publish the 1990 Welsh Office public expenditure commentary.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 9 March.

Colwyn Bay Disaster Fund

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his office has contributed to the disaster fund recently set up by the lord mayor of Colwyn Bay.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department has conributed £135,000 to the fund established by the mayor of Colwyn. In addition, £12,000 has been donated to the appeal fund at Rhuddlan, and £3,000 to the fund at Delyn.

Teachers (Courses)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each local authority area the number of teachers in each of the last three years who have undertaken INSET and other courses of professional development (a) during school hours and (b) after school, at weekends and during school holidays.

Mr. Roberts: This information is not held centrally.

Radioactivity

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his response to the conclusions in the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority report on "Artificial Radioactivity on the Coasts of Wales", about the influence of Sellafield on radioactivity levels found on beaches and in the sea.

Mr. Grist: The conclusions of the report, which are reassuring, have been noted, in particular the view that environmental concentrations were generally low and that the total dose by all pathways reflected in the results was found to be a small fraction of the recognised limit.

Flood Prevention

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has proposals to appoint or create a single body to take charge of sea defences and flood prevention in the light of the recent flood disaster in north Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I have no plans to change the present arrangements.

Education System

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to provide non-teaching time in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools to enable them to implement (i) the teaching, testing and assessment provisions of the national curriculum and (ii) the proposals of the Elton report on school discipline.

Mr. Roberts: The organisation of the school day and the duties to be undertaken by individual teachers in their 1,265 hours of directed time are matters for head teachers. The Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions has recently drawn attention to the scope that exists for LEAs and governing bodies to develop policies to increase teachers' non-contact time. Through the education support grant, the Government are supporting in-service training for teachers in the management of pupil behaviour. We are providing extensive support through ESG and the LEA training grants scheme for training in the introduction and assessment of the national curriculum.

EMPLOYMENT

Silicon Chips Industry

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list all the dangerous substances or chemicals with which workers involved in the silicon chips industry come into contact.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) does not hold detailed information on all the substances and chemicals used in the silicon chip industry.

However, in 1985-86 HSE carried out a survey among factories manufacturing semi-conductor devices, including silicon chips, and found that the following substances were widely used:

arsine and other inorganic arsenic compounds, diborane, borontrifluoride, phosphorous oxychloride, organometallic compounds, hydrofluoric acid, glycol ethers, phosphine, phosphorus, silane, germane, gallium, and indium.

Wages Councils

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many persons are employed in each of the sectors covered by the 26 wages councils.

Mr. Nicholls: I would refer the hon. Lady to the first part of table 3 of the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Coventry, South-East (Mr. Nellist) on 14 March, at columns 252-56.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which wages councils he plans to abolish (a) in the current year and (b) at a later stage.

Mr. Nicholls: I would refer the hon. Lady to the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to my hon. Friend the Member for Erith and Crayford (Mr. Evennett) on 6 March, at column 543.

Health and Safety

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans he has for improvements in health and safety legislation.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Commission is responsible for bringing forward proposals for the progressive modernisation of health and safety legislation. Details of the commission's future legislative programme will be contained in its plan of work for 1990-91 and beyond, which the commission hopes to publish in May.

Mrs. Kay Jackson

Mr. Evennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how he intends to respond to the recent employment appeal tribunal decision on the case of Mrs. Kay Jackson; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: In line with the assurance given to the House in debate on 8 November 1989, the decision of the employment appeal tribunal will now be honoured in the case of Mrs. Jackson as well as in all the other outstanding tribunal cases. No appeal against it will be made. Following the decision the Treasury solicitor is in touch with the applicants to review their respective positions.

In making a child care allowance available to lone parents on ET, the Government sought to give special help and support to a group known to be particularly disadvantaged in the labour market and to face disproportionate difficulties in taking up training.

The resources that the Government can commit to child care are necessarily limited. The Government believe that it is right that lone parents should have the first claim on those resources. An order made under the Employment Act 1989 and effective from 19 December 1989 allows the continuation of current special arrangements to lone parents.

"Next Steps"

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the employment service will be established as a "next steps" agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The employment service becomes a "next steps" agency on Monday 2 April 1990. The employment service has 35,000 staff dealing directly with the public, helping unemployed people into jobs and paying £4·6 million in benefits for unemployment, making the agency the biggest and the most significant to be set up so far under the "next steps" initiative.

I will be publishing on Monday the agency framework document, which describes how the agency will operate in relation to the Department, and its annual performance agreement, which describes the specific performance targets the agency is aiming to achieve in 1990-91. Copies of these documents will be placed in the Library.

My hon. Friend the Minister of State is writing to all Members with more details about the agency arrangements and the responsibilities of the agency's chief executive.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lithuania

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what direct representations he has made to the Soviet Union about the desirability of negotiations between the Soviet Union and Lithuania; and whether he intends calling for such negotiations to take place on neutral territory.

Mr. Maude: We have made a number of direct representations to the Soviet authorities urging that progress should be made through dialogue between the Soviet Union and the Lithuanians. We have not made any recommendation as to where such negotiations should take place.

Romania

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made in alleviating the plight of Romanian orphans.

Mr. Maude: Since the Romanian revolution we have given over £6 million of medical and food aid to Romania (though not specifically to the orphanages) directly or through the EC.

Charitable organisations in the UK have sent food, clothes and medical aid to the orphanages. British doctors and nurses are helping, and arrangements are being made for two Romanians to receive training in the UK. We have made small cash grants to help with this, and also to other organisations in the same field.

We are now considering what more we can do.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current stock of ivory available in Hong Kong for trading.

Mr. Maude: The latest available figure for the current stock of elephant ivory held in Hong Kong with valid CITES documentation and therefore available for trade (to the nearest tonne) is 356 tonnes, comprising 102 tonnes of worked ivory and 254 tonnes of raw ivory.

SCOTLAND

Silicon Chips Industry

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people in Scotland work full or part-time in the silicon chips industry; and how many of them are in regular contact with (a) chemicals or substances dangerous to their health and (b) hydrofluoric acid.

Mr. Lang: The information requested is not available.

Sport

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many students in (a) secondary and (b) higher education in Scotland regularly take part in sporting activities.

Mr. Lang: Physical education, which may include sport, is a recommended part of the curriculum for all school pupils. Figures for participation by post-school students are not collected centrally.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many full-time hazardous waste inspectors there are in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Six professional staff are engaged for part of their time on waste inspectorate duties, amounting to the equivalent of three full-time officers.

Water Quality

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many scientific staff are employed by the river purification boards in Scotland to issue and enforce consents and to monitor water quality.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The numbers and types of staff employed by river purification boards are matters for each board to determine in the light of its circumstances. Such information is published annually in the reports of the boards which are lodged in the Library.

Waste Disposal

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will outline what measures have been taken to establish which waste disposal sites in Scotland pose a pollution problem from the escape of noxious leachate.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is a statutory requirement that river purification authorities (RPAs) be consulted on proposals for development of waste disposal sites. They will indicate whether there may be leachate requiring a discharge consent. Such consents would be given only subject to conditions aimed at ensuring that the discharge will not cause pollution of surface or groundwater. Any breach of discharge consent conditions, and any unconsented discharges, would be investigated by the RPAs as part of their statutory function.

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which waste disposal authorities in Scotland have still not submitted to him a waste disposal plan.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Final waste disposal plans have not yet been submitted by three district councils: Banff and Buchan, Kirkcaldy, and Skye and Lochalsh.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures have been taken to establish the extent and location of contaminated land in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Development Department carried out a pilot survey of vacant land in Scotland in 1988 in collaboration with the Scottish Development Agency and the regional and district councils. This initial survey revealed 48 sites, comprising 402 hectares, that were known to be contaminated and a further 189 sites, comprising 834 hectares, that were suspected of contamination. A follow-up survey will be carried out shortly.

European Structural Fund

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which projects have to date attracted European Commission structural fund suppport, and how much.

Mr. Lang: To the end of 1989, Scotland has benefited from project awards[1] of around £1,268 million from the European Community structural funds. Details of the individual funds are set out in the table:

	£ million
European Regional Development Fund	869
European Social Fund	277
European Agricultural Guarantee and Guidance Fund	122

It is not practicable to list the projects individually because of the very large number which have been assisted.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimate of the additional poll tax that will have to be levied in each of the Scottish regions to cover the cost of the reduction of dumping of sewage sludge for each year to 1998.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is entirely a matter for the authorities concerned.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many tonnes of sewage sludge were dumped at sea by each of the Scottish regions in each year since 1979;

(2) how many tonnes of sewage sludge will be dumped at sea by each of the Scottish regions in each year to 1998.

Mr. Lang: The information is set out in the table:

	(Wet tonnes) millions
	Lothian	Strathclyde
1979	0·33	0·70
1980	0·32	1·71
1981	0·29	1·51
1982	0·25	1·47
1983	0·22	1·57

[1] These figures relate only to projects: the Structural Funds have also provided, through the Agricultural Guidance Fund, assistance to pre-funded schemes such as livestock subsidies—some £290 million between 1979 and 1988.

1984	0·23	1·71
1985	0·21	1·69
1986	0·17	1·70
1987	0·25	1·70
1988	0·25	1·70
1989	0·25	1·70

The Government have already announced that the dumping of sewage sludge at sea will cease by 1998. Until then, local authorities wishing to continue the practice will require, as at present, to seek annual renewal of their sea disposal licences. It is not possible to say precisely how much sewage sludge will be dumped at sea in the future. However, the quantities of contaminants in the sludge will require, as at present, to be contained within 1987 levels.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimated cost of ending the dumping of sewage sludge at sea for each of the Scottish regions for each year to 1998.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The only authorities affected by the ending of the dumping of sewage sludge at sea are Strathclyde and Lothian regional councils. They will be called upon to submit programmes before the end of 1990 for changing to land-based disposal routes. Preliminary assessments indicate that the capital cost of incineration as an alternative to sea disposal might be about £52 million for Strathclyde and £12 million for Lothian but, until the authorities' programmes are available, it is not possible to say what expenditure will be incurred in each year.

Mental Illness and Mental Handicap

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (a) mentally ill and (b) mentally handicapped persons are at present in prisons in Scotland; and in which prisons.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest figures for 1989 show that medical attention was needed for 4,896 inmates suffering from neurosis or mental disorder. Only 82 inmates, however, were diagnosed as suffering from psychoses and 10 inmates were found to be mentally handicapped in these establishments.

	Psychoses Sufferers

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the amount spent on compensation for farmers experiencing bovine spongiform encephalopathy so far (a) at the full animal value and (b) at the 50 per cent. animal value.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available in the form requested. In total, £4,135,729 was paid in compensation from the introduction of the compulsory slaughter policy on 8 August 1988 to the end of February 1990.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy notified in the United Kingdom since June 1988; and if he will give the annual figures.

Mr. Maclean: The information is as follows for Great Britain:

Year	Suspect cases notified
1988[1]	2,517
1989	8,446
1990[2]	3,987
Total	14,950

[1] From 21 June, when BSE became notifiable.
[2] Up to 23 March.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what other countries apart from the United Kingdom have suffered from bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will list the number of animals and countries concerned.

Mr. Maclean: Nineteen cases of BSE have been confirmed in the Republic of Ireland and two cases in cattle exported from Britain to Oman.

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made in the discussions with West Germany relating to the resumption of normal export trade of British beef to that country.

Mr. Maclean: The Germans did ask for supplementary guarantees to accompany consignments of beef from the United Kingdom. However, following the European Community's scientific veterinary committee's endorsement of our view that British beef is not a danger to public health they are no longer seeking such guarantees for the great majority of our sales to them.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list in the Official Report the plants and animals which can harbour salmonella enteritidis.

Mr. Maclean: Any animal or plant has the potential to harbour salmonella enteritidis.

Sewage Sludge

Mr. Graham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of sewage sludge will be dumped at sea by each of the water authorities in England and Wales in each year to 1998.

Mr. Curry: It is impossible to estimate.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what weights of sewage sludge have been dumped in or off (a) the Bristol channel and (b) Liverpool bay each year since 1979; what licences he expects to issue before the end of 1998; and what weights of sewage sludge are covered under each licence.

Mr. Curry: The amounts of sewage sludge dumped in the Bristol channel and Liverpool bay each year since 1979 are as follows. About 95 per cent. of the weight is water.

tonnes, wet weight

	Bristol Channel	Liverpool Bay
1979	358,280	1,653,521
1980	482,000	1,759,883
1981	328,040	1,692,680
1982	319,880	1,642,410
1983	230,145	1,299,200
1984	305,200	1,282,800
1985	262,513	1,498,973
1986	257,405	1,541,456
1987	237,956	1,626,036
1988	273,609	1,628,937
1989	306,414	1,645,609

Licences are currently held as follows:

		Licensed tonnage (wet weight)
Bristol Channel	Wessex Water	300,000
	Welsh Water	55,000
Liverpool Bay	North West Water	1,970,000

I have announced that the Government intend to terminate sea disposal of sewage sludge as soon as possible, and at the latest by the end of 1998. Licence holders will be required to develop and implement plans for alternative disposal methods and a prediction of future disposals is not therefore practicable.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of sewage sludge were dumped at sea by each of the water authorities in England and Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Curry: The information will take a little time to prepare, and will be supplied as soon as possible.

Veterinary Executive Agencies

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further progress has been made towards establishing the central veterinary laboratory and the veterinary medicines directorate as executive agencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Further to the Minister's written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Ludlow (Mr. Gill) on 26 February 1990 at column 69, I am pleased to confirm that the central veterinary laboratory and the veterinary medicines directorate will become executive agencies with effect from 2 April 1990.

The efficiency of both agencies will be judged primarily through cost recovery. Additional performance measures relating to their objectives will also be used to measure operating efficiency and quality of service and will be developed through the agencies' corporate plans.

The financial targets for the central veterinary laboratory for 1990-91 will be:

- 100 per cent. recovery of full costs;
- an overall efficiency gain of 1·5 per cent.;
- a reduction of 1·5 per cent. on the 1989-90 index of representative unit costs for diagnostic tests.

The financial targets for the veterinary medicines directorate for 1990-91 will be:

- 100 per cent. recovery of full costs;
- an overall efficiency gain of 1·5 per cent.;
- a reduction of 1·5 per cent. on unit costs for appropriate areas of licensing work and residue sampling.

The performance indicators for both agencies are set out in their framework documents, copies of which are being placed in the Library of the House.

Animal Feed (Irradiation)

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food to what extent irradiation is used in respect of animal feed; what controls exist over kilogram dosage; what labelling requirements exist to inform end-users that irradiation of foodstuffs has taken place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: No United Kingdom animal feedingstuffs are irradiated.

HEALTH

Agency Nurses

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the number of agency nurses employed in the National Health Service.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of agency nursing and midwifery staff (whole-time equivalent) employed in the National Health Service in England at 30 September 1988, the latest date for which figures are available, was 6,240.

Hypnosis

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to extend his policy governing practitioners of hypnosis to practitioners of subliminal techniques; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Hypnosis is subject to legislation only when used for entertainment purposes. We have no plans to seek to control the therapeutic use of hypnotism or similar techniques.

District Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he can now announce details of the outstanding appointments of district health authority chairmen from 1 April.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have today announced the following appointments:

Chairman	District	Term of Office
Mr. T. Benyon	Milton Keynes	2 years
Cllr. D. G. Lloyd	Shropshire	2 years
Mr. F. S. Cronin	Sunderland	2 years

One appointment is still under consideration and I expect to make an announcement on this shortly.

Dental Practitioners (Retirement)

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether it is intended to pay compensation to general dental practitioners who, having attained the age of retirement prescribed in the NHS (General Dental Services) Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1989, SI 832, will have their names removed from dental lists on 1 April.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Yes. I have made a determination under section 8(3) of the Health and Medicines Act 1988 specifying the rates at which payments shall be made to eligible dentists whose names are compulsorily removed from the lists on 1 April 1990. Parliamentary approval of this new expenditure will be sought in the main estimate for family practitioner (part) and other services, England (class XIII, vote 2). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £250,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Medicines

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) who attended the meeting of the Committee on Review of Medicines that reviewed the alcohol content of gripe water; who gave evidence to the meeting; and what conclusions were reached;

(2) if he will introduce legislation to permit publication on the deliberations and conclusions of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and the Committee on Review of Medicines;

(3) what alcohol limits are permitted in gripe water currently on sale;

(4) who are the members of the Committee on Review of Medicines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no present plans to amend section 118 of the Medicines Act, 1968 which generally prohibits the disclosure of information obtained in pursuance of the Act. The statutory appeal procedures are not complete in the cases to which the right hon. Member refers. It would be inappropriate to comment in any way prejudicial to them.

The current membership of the Committee on Review of Medicines is as follows:

Professor D. H. Lawson (Chairman) MD FRCP
Consultant Physician, Royal Infirmary, Glasgow
Visiting Professor University of Strathclyde

Mr. A. G. Amias FRCS FRCOG
Consultant Obstetrician and Gynaecologist, St. Georges Hospital, London

Professor T. H. D. Arie MA BM BCh FRCP FRCPsych FFCM DPM (Eng)

Dr. L. E. Ramsey MB ChB FRCP
Consultant Physician, Royal Hallamshire Hospital, Sheffield

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimated annual cost to his Department of monitoring the promotion of prescription medicines to ensure that companies do not infringe the Medicines Act.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Approximately £8,000.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions he has prosecuted pharmaceutical companies for infringing the Medicines Act through their promotion of prescription medicines.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Once. All notifications of possible infringements are investigated.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how often during the years 1983-88 he referred complaints regarding the promotion of prescribed medicines to the code of practice committee of the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Eleven. In addition, staff of the Medicines Control Agency (MCA) take up direct with companies issues which it would not be appropriate to refer to the ABPI committee such as those which should be considered for formal enforcement or warning letters.

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce legislation to require the Association of the British Pharmaceutical Industry (i) to have fewer than half the members on the code of practice committee from the industry, (ii) to give complainants the same right to hearing as defendants, (iii) to hold its hearings in public, (iv) to publish its reports and (v) to introduce a right of appeal.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no present plans to do so.

GP Budgets

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the cash and percentage increase in absolute and real terms of the £360 million cash-limited budget of general practitioner premises and ancillary staff for 1990-91 and 1989-90, broken down by family practitioner committee;

(2) what is the cash and percentage increase in absolute and real terms of the £360 million cash-limited budget for general practitioner premises and ancillary staff for 1990-91 and 1989-90.

Mr. Freeman: The estimated total spend in England in 1989-90 on the direct reimbursement of GPs' ancillary staff and premises improvement cost is £267 million. The preliminary allocation to FPCs of £359 million for similar expenditure in 1990-91 therefore represents a cash increase of 34 per cent. and a real term increase of 26 per cent. Details of actual expenditure in 1989-90, and the final expenditure by each FPC, will not be available until after the end of the current financial year. The allocations for 1990-91 will not be finalised until FPCs have reported their actual level of commitments for practice staff reimbursement and premises improvements as at 31 March 1990. A further allocation will be made in June and July to meet any difference between the preliminary allocation for 1990-91 to fund existing commitments, and the actual level of commitments.

Eye Tests

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to undertake a survey of the effect of charging for eye tests; and when he expects to publish the results.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington (Mr. Bradley) on 23 January at columns 654-55.

Data Submissions

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many district health authorities were unable to submit to his Department all the data items in Korner minimum datasets for the year 1988-89; and how many of these district health authorities are unlikely to be able to provide complete data for 1989-90.

Mr. Freeman: Korner minimum datasets contain hundreds of individual data items, not all of which are centrally required. It is not possible to say which district health authorities failed to collect particular data items. However, the overall picture shows that 92 per cent. of finished in-patient episodes were submitted, of which 76 per cent. had actual diagnostic information. The remainder of centrally required information is provided by aggregate returns, and 98 per cent. of the expected returns for 1988-89 have been received.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it has now been decided which sets of Korner data will be collected from National Health Service hospital trusts; and if similar data will be required from hospitals in the private sector.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No decision on data to be collected from National Health Service hospital trusts or private hospitals has yet been taken. Consultation on information required as a consequence of the NHS review is in progress. Recommendations based on comments received will be made in a final report currently scheduled for 31 May 1990.

Nurse Training

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses have been trained exclusively in the private sector in each year since 1985 in (a) basic nurse training and (b) post-basic nurse training.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 8 March at column 828.

Private Patients

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each district health authority, SHA and regional health authority and England as a whole the amount written off as bad debts for private in-patients.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested derived from the 1988-89 annual accounts of district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals has been placed in the Library. The 1988-89 annual accounts of the 14 regional health authorities record no amounts written off for this category of income.

I should point out that we expect health authorities to take all reasonable action to collect their debts and that sums written off in a particular financial year sometimes include amounts due from earlier years.

For 1988-89, the total sum written off in respect of private in-patient debts (£575,819) represented approximately 1 per cent. of the equivalent income (£62,422,151 net of sums written off) for that year, which represented a valuable resource for the health authorities concerned.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give for each year from 1979 to 1989 the number of hospitals (a) totally closed and (b) partially closed.

Mr. Freeman: The number of hospitals which were approved for permanent total or partial closure from 1979 to 1989 are shown in the table:

Year of approval	Total closure	Partial closure
1979	29	6
1980	38	4
1981	37	17
1982	18	10
1983	58	18
1984	59	27
1985	24	19
1986	48	29
1987	33	34
1988	64	[1]81
1989	22	[1]60

Source: health authority returns.

Hospital closures are an integral part of local health authorities' planning and management. They are made for many reasons and are often balanced by new openings or other reprovision.

Blood

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the fee charged to non-National Health Service hospitals for handling each unit of blood for each year since 1982.

Mr. Freeman: Handling charges for whole blood supplied to non-National Health Service hospitals were introduced on 1 April 1984. The charges do not include any element for the blood itself, which is donated free of charge to the National Blood Transfusion Service for use where it is needed.

Charges for each year from 1984-85 to 1989-90 are given in the table:

1 April to 31 March	Per unit of whole blood £
1984-85	19·75
1985-86	19·75
1986-87	21·00
1987-88	23·00
1988-89	26·25
1989-90	29·25

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total units of blood supplied in each year since 1982 to non-National Health Service hospitals.

Mr. Freeman: Blood issued to non-National Health Service hospitals is shown in the table:

National Blood Transfusion Service: England and Wales[1]
Units of blood issued to non-National Health Service hospitals

Year	Units
1982	31,437
1983	40,786
1984	49,232
1985	54,327
1986	64,040
1987	80,002
1988	75,961

[1] The figures relate to Wales and 12 regions in England as information is not available for Oxford region.

Information Technology

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 28 November, Official Report, columns 228-31, whom he is consulting about his strategy for information needs and use of information technology which he announced when he launched his document on 17 January.

Mr. Freeman: The proposals for information needs and the use of information technology were summarised in working paper 11 "(Framework for Information Systems: Overview)" which was sent to all Members of Parliament for England. This document was supported by two consultative documents for IT and information, the latter including 13 stand-alone annexes. The working papers and annexes are available in the Library. Working paper 11 and the full set of documents were sent to the general managers of all regions, districts, family health services authorities and special health authorities, to all relevant professional associations and trade unions, academic and research institutions, suppliers of IT and consultancy services as well as to other charitable and client group-based organisations. In addition, sets were sent to NHS staff who had contributed to the working groups making the proposals. During the consultation process, requests have been made for further complete sets of documents or for individual annexes. There have been in all approximately 4,000 copies of the main text of both the information and IT consultative documents and 3,100 of each annex distributed for consultation.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his reply of 28 November, Official Report, columns 228-31, whether, once the National Health Service computer network is capable of linking family practitioner committees and individual practitioners, he plans to extend it to link them with district health authorities.

Mr. Freeman: The National Health Service communications network has been designed to cater for the wide area networking needs of all bodies in the NHS. Organisations such as regional and district health authorities will be encouraged to link to the network, so long as it is competitive on cost and service.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to repeat the waiting list initiative; and if he will make a statement about the previous initiative.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: There are no such plans. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. King) on 18 January 1990 at columns 403-04.

Registrar-General

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whom he consulted about his plans to change the name of the groupings of occupations now described as the Registrar-General's social classes; how long the consultation period lasted; and whether any press release was issued to publicise the consultation.

Mr. Freeman: "Social classes" is the name given to groupings of occupations which are used in the statistical analysis of census, mortality and other data. The name has been criticised because the classification is actually based entirely on occupation. The OPCS therefore decided to consult on whether the name should be changed before the tables to be produced from the 1991 census were specified. "Occupational skill groups" was suggested as a possible alternative.

Consultation took place in October 1989 with other Government Departments and externally through the OPCS census advisory committees, medical advisory committee and demographic liaison group. There was no press release. Responses were originally sought by the end of November, but the deadline was extended into December to suit, in particular, the BMA.

The consultation revealed some support for change, but there was also opposition. In particular, it was pointed out that, although the classification is indeed based on occupation, it is related to other factors, and is applied to all members of a family or household, including those without occupations.

In the light of these points, it was decided to retain the name, "social class", but to extend it, to make its basis explicit, to "social class as defined by occupation". In using the expanded name, the OPCS will also make it clear whether individual people are being classified by their own occupations or by that of someone else in the family or household.

The consultation also included a proposal to change the name of class II from "intermediate" to "managerial and technical"—again to clarify the basis of the classification. This change was welcomed, and it too is now being implemented in OPCS publications.

Disability

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he has any plans to enable local authorities to pay family members or individuals for taking over the care of disabled people now living in residential homes;

(2) if he has any plans to enable local authorities to pay family members or individuals for the care they give to disabled people living in their homes or those of members of their family.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 27 March 1990]: As my hon. Friend the Minister for Health explained to the Standing Committee on the National Health Service and Community Care Bill on 22 February at column 1230, we are looking into the possibility of empowering people assessed by local authorities as needing community care services and unable to pay for them out of their own resources to arrange the services of their choice by making it possible for local authorities to make payment to them. Our conclusions will be announced in due course.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The estimated expenditure in the financial year 1989-90 on management and computer consultancy contracts (excluding hardware and software purchases) is £10·3 million. The amount budgeted to spend in 1990-91 is £8·5 million.

A list giving details of each health-related management or computer consultancy awarded in 1989-90 has been placed in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Waddington: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld in the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) Complaints made	(b) Complaints upheld
1989-90	[1]—	[1]—
1988-89	31	6
1987-88	32	4
1986-87	28	3
1985-86	25	3
1984-85	34	6
1983-84	25	1
1982-83	30	4
1981-82	39	2
1980-81	50	6

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the PCA upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Prison Officers

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current ratio of prison officers to prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: On 1 March there were 20,360 officers (including senior and principal officers) in post in establishments and the national inmate population was 46,984, giving an overall ratio of 2·3 inmates per officer. The ratio of inmates to officers varies considerably between the different types of establishment.

Private Security Firms

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what safeguards there are on the suitability of private security firms.

Mr. John Patten: A number of trade associations in the industry have developed standards and codes of practice, which their members are required to follow, and which are subject to inspection.

My right hon. and learned Friend is considering, in the light of the report of a Home Office working group on the self-regulation of the industry, the scope for improving existing regulatory arrangements.

Vehicle Removal

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis as to how many unlawfully parked vehicles have been removed in Green street and Katherine road in the London borough of Newham by vehicle removal teams.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that two unlawfully parked vehicles have been removed from these roads since 1 January.

Broadcasting Standards Authority (Chairman)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the current powers of the chairman-designate of the Broadcasting Standards Authority; and what is his current pay in that capacity, and from what date.

Mr. Mellor: The Broadcasting Bill, if approved by Parliament, will establish the Broadcasting Standards Council as a statutory body and confirm its existing functions as statutory powers. It will have the power to draw up a code of practice on the portrayal of violence and sex and on matters of taste and decency, the general effect of which the broadcasters will be obliged to reflect in their own programme codes; it will have the power to undertake and commission research; to consider and examine complaints and require broadcasters to publish its findings on the complaints in whatever form it considers appropriate; and to monitor programmes which originate within the United Kingdom and those broadcast to the United Kingdom from abroad. These powers are invested in the Council as a whole, rather than the chairman as an individual. The salary of the council's chairman, Lord Rees-Mogg, is £31,500 per annum with effect from 1 April 1989.

Mr. Les Huckfield

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable for Merseyside into the amount of time, the number of police personnel and the cost to the police authority of the inquiries that have been conducted into the affairs of Mr. Les Huckfield.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Chief Constable of Merseyside that to date five police officers have been involved in the inquiries at different times, each on a part-time basis. It is not possible accurately to estimate the time spent and the cost of the inquiries.

Young Offenders

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any plans to prohibit the practice of housing young offenders in adult jails while prisons built to cater for the young are closed or reclassified; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No. Our plans are progressively to rationalise the prison estate so that the places needed are provided in the most cost-effective and efficient mix of new establishments and improvements to existing establishments. In particular, we are seeking to reduce the levels of overcrowding in adult prisons and to allow more young adult remand prisoners, currently held in adult prisons, to be held in discrete establishments.

Accommodation which is no longer needed for sentenced young offenders may be converted to adult or remand use where it would be practical and cost-effective. It would not however be sensible to retain uneconomic, poorly located or below standard young offender accommodation where this has no practical alternative use and is expected to be surplus to future requirements.

Police Force (Civilian Staff)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has any plans concerning trade union rights for civilian staff within the police force; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he has received any representations from the Association of Chief Police Officers concerning trade union rights for civilian staff within the police force.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Association of Chief Police Officers has suggested that civilian staff working within police forces might be represented by a single union. Any such development would be a matter for the staff themselves and their local authority employers. My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to require police civilians to belong to a single union or to restrict their trade union or bargaining rights.

Drug Addiction

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people in Wales are addicted to heroin and cocaine in each health authority area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In 1989 doctors in Wales notified persons addicted to heroin and concaine as follows:

Number of persons

	Persons notified in 1989 as addicted to:
District health authority	Heroin[1]	Heroin and cocaine[2]	Cocaine[3]	Total
Clwyd	69	1	—	70
East Dyfed	7	—	—	7
Gwent	39	7	1	47
Gwynedd	3	—	—	3
Mid-Glamorgan	10	2	—	12
Pembrokeshire	—	—	—	—
Powys	3	—	—	3
South Glamorgan	35	1	2	38
West Glamorgan	6	—	1	7
All Wales	172	11	4	187

[1] Alone or with other drugs excluding cocaine.
[2] Alone or with other drugs.
[3] Alone or with other drugs excluding heroin.

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were the figures for the spending by the Metropolitan police on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 12 March 1990]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that expenditure by the Metropolitan police on all forms of recruitment and other advertising, and other promotional literature, in each financial year since 1979-80 is as follows (it is not possible to disaggregate total spending in the way requested for years prior to 1987-88):

1979-80	759,000
1980-81	967,000
1981-82	1,062,000

1982-83	1,028,000
1983-84	1,675,000
1984-85	1,747,000
1985-86	1,868,000
1986-87	2,269,000

	Television advertising £	Radio advertising £	Newspaper advertising £	Other promotional literature £
1987-88	—	3,000	1,722,000	1,111,000
1988-89	—	6,000	1,881,000	1,258,000
[1]1989-90	472,000	15,000	1,587,000	868,000

Detailed decisions on expenditure for 1990-91 have not yet been taken, but the budget estimate is £3,124,000.

Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure by the Metropolitan police on press and public relations in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 12 March 1990]: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that expenditure on staff and accommodation costs of the directorate of public affairs, and on recruitment and other advertising and other promotional literature, in each financial year from 1985-86, is as follows:

1985-86	3,622,861
1986-87	4,444,103
1987-88	4,555,000
1988-89	5,475,000
[1]1989-90	5,508,000
[2]1990-91	5,845,000

[2] Budget estimate.

Figures for 1979-80 to 1984-85 are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Birmingham Six

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken in the light of recent representations submitted to him about the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six.

Mr. Waddington [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1990, c. 633]: I have always made it clear that I will consider very carefully any evidence which might cast doubt on the safety of the convictions. I have seen the television programme "Who Bombed Birmingham?" and have received from Granada Television a copy of documents in its possession, one of which concerns the Birmingham public house bombings in 1974.

The programme did not put forward new evidence. The allegations about the ill-treatment of the convicted men while in police custody and about the forensic science evidence were fully considered by the Court of Appeal in 1987.

The document which was referred to in the television programme and a copy of which has now been sent to me is a police report about terrorist activities in the west midlands which was written in 1975. I understand from the Chief Constable of the West Midlands police that the people named in the programme were included in the police investigations into the Birmingham public house bombings and other terrorist activities at the time. One person, Michael Murray, stood trial with the Birmingham Six, and was convicted of conspiracy to cause explosions and causing an explosion, and sentenced to 12 years and 10 years' imprisonment respectively, to run concurrently. However, no sufficient evidence was found to justify prosecuting the people named in the report for the public house bombings. It was not the prosecution case that the Birmingham Six were the only people involved in the bombings, and the report does not contain information which might cast doubt on the safety of their convictions.

In 1986 the Home Office asked the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin), who was not then a Member of this House, to discuss with the West Midlands police the information that he claimed to have at the time of the publication of his book, "Error of Judgement". At an interview with the assistant chief constable he refused to identify the people he claimed had been responsible. The police examined his book and tested the allegations made on the basis of the limited information that he provided. The police reported their conclusions to the Home Office in October 1986. Their report satisfied the then Home Secretary, the right hon. Member for Witney (Mr. Hurd), that the claims which had been made had been fully considered but did not constitute new evidence. He did, of course, refer the case to the Court of Appeal in 1987 on the basis of new evidence relating to the scientific evidence and alleging police ill-treatment. It would have been open to the appellants to raise in court the allegations made by the hon. Member for Sunderland, South. They chose not to do so and he did not give evidence to the court.

Further representations were made to me in December last year by the solicitor representing the Birmingham Six. On 23 January 1990 the West Midlands police provided me with a copy of the report which it is now clear is the same as the one which had come into the hands of Granada Television. (The people mentioned in this report were the subject of the report to the then Home Secretary in 1986). The information that it contained was carefully examined and I concluded that it did not constitute new evidence which might cast doubt on the safety of the convictions of the Birmingham Six. I have, however, passed to the chief constable of the West Midlands police a copy of the solicitor's representations. The Devon and Cornwall police will inquire into the existence of any relevant information as part of the investigation they have been asked to undertake by the chief constable of the West Midlands police.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all the organisations and individuals that have made submissions to him since the publication and on the subject of "Supervision and Punishment in the Community: A Framework for Action".

Mr. John Patten: None as yet. We have asked for comments by 30 June.

ENERGY

Offshore Installations

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what regulations and guidance notes are in force governing the design, operation and construction of offshore installations and associated facilities; when these requirements were introduced; on what dates they have been revised, in respect of which platforms; and what dates and for what period exemptions to the regulations and requirements have been granted, and in what terms.

Mr. Peter Morrison: A detailed answer to the hon. Gentleman's question can be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, I am arranging for copies of my Department's evidence to the Piper Alpha public inquiry on the offshore safety regime to be placed in the Library of the House. This details legislation and guidance relevant to offshore safety. The following regulations have been made since the production of this evidence:

SI 1989 No. 840. The Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 (Application Outside Great Britain) Order 1989.

SI 1989 No. 971. The Offshore Installations (Safety Representatives and Safety Committees) Regulations 1989.

SI 1989 No. 978. The Offshore Installations (Included Apparatus or Works) Order 1989.

SI 1989 No. 1029. The Offshore Installations (Emergency Pipeline Valve) Regulations 1989.

SI 1989 No. 1671. The Offshore Installations and Pipeline Works (First Aid) Regulations 1989.

SI 1989 No. 1672. The Offshore Installations (Operational Safety, Health and Welfare and Life Saving Appliances) (Revocations) Regulations 1989.

Electricity Licences

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he intends to issue a general authority under section 6(1) of the Electricity Act 1989 to enable the Director General of Electricity Supply to grant licences authorising the generation, transmission or supply of electricity.

Mr. Wakeham: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have now issued the general authority to the director. Copies have today been placed in the Libraries of each House.

Subsidence

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the time limits for claims arising from coal mining subsidence damage.

Mr. Baldry: My Department has been discussing with British Coal the need for improved guidance for those householders affected by damage arising from coal mining subsidence. We intend to publish in the near future a new leaflet setting out claimants' rights. This will incorporate a unified approach to handling subsidence claims that has been voluntarily adopted by British Coal and which, in the Government's view, will give claimants the more advantageous elements of the two existing statutes governing such claims in anticipation of the enactment of new legislation. As regards time limits for making claims, British Coal has agreed to accept claims within six years of the damage occurring or within six years from which it would have been reasonable for a claimant to have known that damage had occurred.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what are the total public funds allocated for research and development on (a) nuclear energy, (b) solar energy, (c) wind energy, (d) tidal wave energy, (e) hydro-electric energy and (f) other alternative sources of energy, for each year since 1976.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The figures requested are as follows (all figures in £ million):

	Nuclear[1] energy	Solar energy	Wind energy	Tidal energy	Hydro[2] energy	Other renewables
1976-77	110·0	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—	[3]—
1977-78	100·1	[4]—	[4]—	[4]—	[4]—	[4]—
1978-79	127·4	0·2	0·3	0·0	—	3·1
1979-80	145·5	1·5	1·1	0·6	—	6·2
1980-81	186·2	1·2	1·4	1·4	—	9·1
1981-82	205·4	1·5	2·1	0·4	—	17·4
1982-83	214·8	1·7	4·6	0·0	—	12·2
1983-84	203·8	1·6	4·5	0·0	—	9·0
1984-85	196·1	0·8	6·6	0·3	—	9·6
1985-86	189·6	1·0	7·5	0·1	—	7·3
1986-87	174·5	1·0	6·0	0·1	—	7·4
1987-88	140·8	1·2	7·3	1·4	0·8	9·2
1988-89	159·1	1·5	8·5	1·2	0·8	9·4
1989-90	136·8	1·9	5·0	1·0	0·2	9·4

[2] Hydro expenditure not separately identified until 1987-88.

[4] All renewables 1·3.

Notes:

1. Figures for 1989-90 are forecasts.
2. The table incorporates expenditure on renewable energy by Government Departments, SERC, NERC, and CEGB.
3. Renewables expenditure for 1976-77 and 1977-78 includes energy conservation expenditure.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will consult pensioners' organisations, local authorities, the electricity consultative councils and the proposed new electricity consumer committees before allowing the price increases proposed for the below 1 MW tariff market in England and Wales for the year commencing 1 April to proceed;

(2) if he will permit the Director General of Electricity Supply and the electricity consumer committee to review retrospectively the price increases applying to the tariff market in England and Wales from 1 April and announced during March; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will permit the Director General of Electricity Supply to review the pricing arrangement for above 1 MW and less than 1 MW, pursuant to the Electricity Act 1989 and vesting day on 31 March;

(4) if he will require the Director General of Electricity Supply on 1 April to review the proposed price increases for the below 1 MW captive tariff market, as though the price increases had been announced on 1 April or thereafter.

Mr. Baldry: Prices are a matter for the individual boards concerned, subject to their statutory and other obligations. All the boards have consulted their respective consultative councils about their proposals. I have no reason to believe that the boards have acted unlawfully in fixing their tariffs.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will close the nuclear power stations at Heysham and Hartlepool; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: No. Both the design and the operation of these stations conform to the highest standards of safety. From their inception, the two stations have been subject to inspection and to the licence conditions required by the independent nuclear installations inspectorate (NII) of the Health and Safety Executive. Siting of the installations was one of the factors extensively considered before the NII granted a licence for the construction of the plants.

The NII has full powers to order the shutdown of any nuclear installation which it judges to constitute a threat to safety.

Energy Technology

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Provan of 26 March, he will list the team members of the major research and development programme aimed at developing commercially viable and environmentally acceptable energy technologies and their qualifications.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In addition to seven full-time technically qualified officials in my Department, currently 41 full-time and six part-time scientific and engineering staff at the energy technology support unit at Harwell are engaged on the research and development programme supported by Government into sources of renewable energy.

However, this does not include those involved in the bulk of the research work in the United Kingdom, which is carried out by the industrial and academic sector. The number of qualified staff working in these sectors is not available.

Written Answers to Questions

Monday 2 April 1990

TRANSPORT

Coastal Railway Lines

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contingency transport plans exist in the event of storms destroying railways that run alongside the sea.

Mr. Portillo: Railway operations are the responsibility of British Rail, which has drawn up contingency plans covering a wide range of possible events. In the case of the recent flooding of the railway line at Towyn, full rail services were resumed after six days. British Rail operated a local bus service while rail services were disrupted.

Dunstable-Luton Railway Line

Mr. Madel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether, following further representations from the hon. Member for Bedfordshire, South-West he has yet heard from British Rail as to whether it intends to re-open the Dunstable to Luton railway line for passenger traffic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail management are continuing to appraise several options but they tell me that there has been a delay due to the heavy demands on the staff and computer programmes involved in appraising new projects. It will, I regret, be some time yet before they are in a position to take a decision.

Inventions and Proposals

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy for assessing transport proposals, inventions and ideas put up by members of the public to address particular transport problems.

Mr. Atkins: Where ideas or suggestions relate to my Department's responsibilities, they are naturally subject to analysis by my officials. Otherwise they are passed on to the appropriate public transport operator or local highway authority.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy on part-funding research and development of proposals, inventions and ideas proposed by (a) the private sector and (b) private individuals.

Mr. Atkins: The Department welcomes proposals, inventions and ideas for research and development. Practical assistance is being made available by the Department, in association with the Science and Engineering Research Council under a new £5·9 million LINK transport infrastructure and operations programme to be announced very shortly.

Under this programme, aimed specifically at small to medium-sized businesses and individuals, up to half the cost of transport research projects can be made available. It is intended that this combination of public and private funding will stimulate a net increase in research into basic transport-related processes and technologies. However the costs of developing specific products for the market place must be borne by the companies and individuals concerned.

Road Works

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action is being taken to improve the co-ordination of statutory undertakers' road works.

Mr. Atkins: Statutory undertakers' rights to excavate in roads in order to lay and maintain their apparatus are governed by the street works code in the Public Utilities Street Works Act 1950. The Government accept that a fundamental reform of this legislation as recommended by the Horne report is required. A Bill will be introduced as soon as a suitable opportunity can be found. This will include a new duty on highway authorities to co-ordinate all excavations in the highway with a view to minimising the disruption to road users and avoiding undesirable combinations of excavations.

Road Pricing Schemes

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will investigate the effectiveness or otherwise of Sweden's road pricing scheme and its implications for future United Kingdom road transport policy.

Mr. Atkins: My Department monitors a wide range of developments in the transport field and as part of its brief will keep developments in road pricing in Scandinavia and elsewhere under review.

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which organisations have submitted correspondence on road pricing schemes since the beginning of the year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A wide range of organisations and individuals have corresponded on the subject of road pricing since the beginning of the year. A number of organisations discussed road pricing and other forms of restraint in their responses to "Traffic in London" and the London assessment studies.

Ferries (Safety)

Sir David Price: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has received the report and recommendations of the steering committee supervising his Department's programme of research into the safety of roll-on roll-off passenger ferries; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: Immediately after the Herald of Free Enterprise capsised outside Zeebrugge harbour in March 1987 the then Secretary of State announced a public inquiry into the causes of the disaster.

The Sheen inquiry reported in July 1987, and its recommendations have been vigorously followed up by the Department. Firstly, by legislation, both in the Merchant Shipping Act 1988 and in no less than eight sets of statutory instruments laying new requirements on United Kingdom-flag ships. Only one issue—concerning the detail of cargo securing—is still under review. Most of these requirements have also been extended to non-United Kingdom ro-ro passenger ships operating into United Kingdom ports.

Secondly, by requiring all United Kingdom-flag ferries not only to meet all current international stability standards, but in addition, and irrespective of age, to meet the United Kingdom residual stability standards introduced for new vessels in 1980. These standards exceed those applicable to foreign-flag ships, including those trading into United Kingdom ports. All but a handful of the older United Kingdom ships, which are at present being phased out, now meet these higher standards.

The third main Sheen recommendation was for a programme of research to examine the capability of ro-ro passenger ships to survive after sustaining collision damage. It should be noted that Sheen did not imply that current standards of intact stability were inadequate. In fact, all present evidence suggests that any undamaged United Kingdom ferry which complies with today's prescribed standards of intact stability and is operated in a proper and reasonable manner will successfully withstand the rigours of wind and sea likely to be encountered.

The Department of Transport made available £1 million for the research programme. To assist and advise the Department in the management of this programme, a steering committee, including eminent naval architects, was established. I am pleased to say that this important work has now been completed and I have received the steering committee's report. I have today placed copies of the report in the Library, and arranged for copies to be sent to interested parties.

The research programme, carried out by contractors selected by open tender, considered the risks of travel on passenger ro-ro ships; collision resistance; future hull design; internal structure; and how far existing ships met design standards for survivability recently adopted by the IMO and to come into force in April 1990 in respect of new passenger ships. In addition, models were tested in various wave conditions to determine the standards of stability necessary to provide protection against the possibility of rapid capsize of damaged vessels.

An overview report was commissioned to draw together and summarise the results of the research. This report comments in detail on each project, and on the various measures proposed for enhancing survivability, in terms of practicability, benefit and cost. A great deal of valuable information has emerged which should help designers and operators to develop the most suitable ways of improving the survival capability of ro-ro passenger ships. A copy of this overview accompanies the steering committee's report.

The main conclusions and recommendations in the steering committee's report are:

(a) that the new internationally agreed standards of residual stability after damage, applicable to all passenger ships built after 29 April 1990, appear to provide reasonable protection against rapid capsize, the United Kingdom should make the report and the overview publicly available. It should be offered to IMO and designers so that account can be taken of the various measures which, if incorporated in future designs, would enable vessels to meet the higher stability standards;

(b) that current international standards are not sufficient to rule out the possibility of capsize in respect of existing ferries, the United Kingdom should request IMO to give urgent consideration to the adoption of a higher standard of residual stability for existing ships;

(c) if it does not prove possible to achieve early international agreement on an acceptable level of residual stability for existing ro-ro passenger ships, and if the discussions in the IMO forum become unduly protracted, the UK should initiate discussions with European marine administrations. Should that approach fail then the UK should consider the possibility of unilaterally introducing higher standards of residual stability for all existing ro-ro passenger ships operating into UK ports regardless of flag;

(d) to assist international consideration, full details of the results of the research programme should be submitted to the fifty-eighth session of the IMO maritime safety committee (21-25 May 1990);

(e) further model testing should be carried out with a view to validating conclusions of the theoretical studies on the value of the various measures investigated to improve survivability;

(f) ship designers should be urged to pay special attention to the study on collision resistance, and the importance of stem construction and profile shape particularly when bulbous bows are fitted, as they can present a special hazard in the event of collision;

(g) the Department should commend the IMO guidelines for safe ship management for adoption by the industry.

I have already taken steps to ensure that these proposals are considered at the IMO maritime safety committee meeting this May. In addition, in order to promote discussion of this very important work, an international symposium devoted entirely to the results of the research programme will be held in London on 26-27 April. I am pleased that the Royal Institution of Naval Architects has agreed to co-sponsor this event, and I expect it to have a major impact internationally on the further development of ro-ro passenger ferry safety.

Learner Drivers (Supervision)

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to complete consideration of his proposals to amend the Motor Vehicles (Driving Licences) Regulations qualifying the age and experience of those who are supervising learner drivers.

Mr. Atkins: We are currently considering the reponses to our consultation document. In the light of those, I shall consult shortly on the necessary regulations with a view to bringing them into effect this summer.

Road Signs

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to introduce a more flexible policy on road signs for tourist sites and other tourist attractions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Signs to tourist destinations are traffic signs which are prescribed by regulations subject to confirmation by Parliament. Policy and guidance on the provision of tourist signs are currently being reviewed in consultation with the English tourist board and the local authority associations. Following this we shall be consulting more widely with a view to an announcement by the autumn.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much spent nuclear fuel is transported by road through Clwyd via the A5.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 29 March, Official Report, column 272.

Company-assisted Travel

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to take into account the material used, and conclusions reached by, the study commissioned from Earth Resources Research Ltd. by Friends of the Earth into the financial and environmental costs of such vehicles in his commissioned research into company-assisted travel.

Mr. Atkins: The professional research commissioned by the Department is based on surveys of the travelling public and it would be inappropriate to incorporate material from other studies. The question of company car taxation is a matter for the Chancellor of the Exchequer. However, in so far as the research by Earth Resources Research Ltd. affects my Department's responsibilities, I shall be happy to take its findings into account.

Severn Crossing

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the likely final cost of the completed improvement works to the existing Severn crossing.

Mr. Atkins: The final cost of stengthening and resurfacing the Severn crossing is estimated at £70 million.

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the progress to date and likely completion date of improvement and strengthening work to the existing Severn crossing.

Mr. Atkins: Strengthening work on the Severn crossing will be completed during the course of 1990. Resurfacing of the crossing is due to be completed by early 1991.

Efficiency Unit

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further progress he has made towards the implementation in his Department of the recommendations in the efficiency unit's report entitled, "Improving Management in Government: The Next Step"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: I am today establishing three further executive agencies in my Department: the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency (DVLA), the Driving Standards Agency (DSA) and the Vehicle Certification Agency (VCA). I am delegating clear responsibilities for improvements in efficiency, effectiveness and customer services to the chief executives. Those delegations are set out in the agencies' published framework documents; I have arranged for copies to be placed in the Library.

Each year, I shall set these agencies demanding financial and service targets, and those targets will be published in annual business plans. I have arranged for copies of the 1990-91 business plans to be placed in the Library. The agencies will also publish annual reports; again copies will be put in the Library.

DVLA has some 5,500 staff, the majority based at its headquarters in Swansea. It is responsible for the registration and licensing of vehicles and drivers, and for the collection and enforcement of vehicle excise duty. Following an open competition I am appointing Mr. Stephen Curtis, formerly chief executive of Companies House, to be DVLA's first chief executive. DSA is responsible for the testing of drivers and driving instructors. Most of its 2,000 staff are driving examiners, who conduct driving tests from the nationwide network of driving test centres. I am appointing Dr. Christopher Woodman to be DSA's first chief executive. VCA is a small specialised organisation less than 100 strong, which is responsible for testing new models of vehicles and vehicle parts for conformity to specific safety and environmental standards. Most of its staff are based at its headquarters in Bristol. I am appointing Mr. Derek Harvey as VCA's first chief executive.

I wish the chief executives and their staffs every success for the future. I am confident that the enhanced responsibilities which they will have in the areas of finance, contracts and personnel, will enable them to meet their twin objectives of providing yet further improvements in service to the public while giving better value for money.

Where hon. or right hon. Members have queries about matters relating to the operation of those agencies, I hope they will write in the first instance to the chief executives. I and my hon. Friend the Minister with responsibility for roads and traffic will of course continue to deal with questions of policy or where there is dissatisfaction with an agency's reply.

CIVIL SERVICE

"Next Steps"

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement about the progress of the "next steps" initiative.

Mr. Luce: The "next steps" initiative which my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister launched in February 1988 continues to go well, and is starting to deliver results.

There will be 30 agencies established by the end of this week, covering some 66,000 people. We expect more to be set up by the summer, taking the total involved to some 80,000. A list of agencies and announced candidates is set out in the table and work continues in many other areas of Government. By the end of 1991 we expect that "next steps" will have been applied to at least half the civil service.

The establishment of agencies is only the first step. The aim of "next steps" is to deliver greater efficiency and better service to the public. Achieving one at the expense of the other is not good enough. Demanding performance targets, financial and non-financial, are being set, and will be refined and improved as experience is gained, and further freedoms and flexibilities and delegations are given.

Results from the early agencies are promising. Each agency will publish annually a report and accounts which amongst other things will set out what is looked for and what is achieved. To help the House and the public see what is happening, we propose to publish annually, starting later this year, a general report on the initiative overall including summaries of developments and results in individual agencies.

The "next steps" initiative although directed in the first place at activities within the civil service is of broad application and its benefits should be sought more widely within the public sector. Accordingly the Government have decided that these disciplines should be applied to non-departmental public bodies which have executive functions, where this is appropriate and where this is likely to improve their performance. I am announcing more details about this separately.

Overall, "next steps" is showing its worth in the delivery of improved performance and better service to the public. The Government will continue to press this important initiative forward with energy and urgency.

[2] Figures in Command 814: since revised downwards.

In addition work continues in many other areas of Government, including Inland Revenue, Customs and Excise, and other parts of the Ministry of Defence.

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what progress he has made with the creation of executive agencies within his Department.

Mr. Luce: In addition to the civil service college, which became an agency in June 1989, I am happy to announce that I have today launched the civil service occupational health service (the OHS) as an executive agency.

The occupational health service was set up in 1986 to implement the recommendations of a scrutiny by the Prime Minister's efficiency unit. Its job is to promote the health and safety of civil servants at work. Government Departments, like other employers, have to prevent or deal with the distinctive health problems which affect their staff by reason of their work or workplace, not only to meet their legal obligations but to reap the benefits of a fit, productive and well-motivated organisation. And large employers are increasingly finding it best to do so by means of their own dedicated health service.

The occupational health service has a key role to play in supporting management in Government Departments and in executive agencies. It provides expert advice on the statutory responsibilities of employers and on all aspects of occupational health, from recruitment to retirement. And it offers a complete range of supporting services like medical examinations, training in first aid, in the handling of hazardous substances and in the implications of legal changes; and tailor-made information and advice for civil servants working abroad.

This relatively new service has already risen to the challenge of change, and is admirably fitted to perform even better an executive agency. It carries out well-defined executive functions; it recovers its full costs from charges to customer departments, which may obtain services elsewhere where they see this as providing better value for money; and it is responsive to customer demand, designing new services as required to meet changing priorities on the job.

The OHS has a framework document which is designed to enhance its status, to sharpen its objectives, to encourage its customer-orientation, and to give its staff the incentives and the tools to go from strength to strength in improving the quality and efficiency of the service they provide.

The OHS framework document identifies two key indicators by which the performance of the organisation will be monitored. These are the cost per productive professional day (that is the fully loaded cost of the time of its professional staff) and the unit cost of advising on cases referred to the OHS for advice on sickness absence and the health of potential recruits to the civil service. The OHS is also committed to devising an indicator by which the quality of its services can be monitored in future.

Copies of the OHS framework document have today been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Sir Hall Miller: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service what action the Government are taking to apply the "next steps" approach to non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. Luce: The Government have drawn up a programme of action for the selective application of the "next steps" approach to executive non-departmental public bodies. This will extend the benefits of "next steps" more widely within the public sector. It continues to be Government policy that new NDPBs will not be set up unless it can be demonstrated that creating a new public body is the most appropriate and cost-effective solution to the task in hand. When a new body is set up, it is important to ensure it starts off on the soundest possible managerial footing.

Sponsoring Departments will in future prepare a management statement, broadly on the lines of a "next steps" framework document, for all new executive NDPBs. The overall aim will be to delegate responsibility to the maximum extent practicable to the body, within an agreed framework which unambiguously sets out the relationship between each body and its sponsoring Department. The approach is designed to improve managerial responsibility for performance and the delivery of results, to improve service to the public, and to enhance accountability.

A similar approach will be applied selectively over a period to existing bodies. Departments and NDPBs have already put a great deal of effort into improving management arrangements. The existing system of comprehensively reviewing each NDPB at least every five years gives Departments the opportunity to consider which NDPBs will most benefit from the early preparation of a management statement, building on what is already in place, and taking account of the statute which sets the framework for each NDPB's relationship with its sponsoring Department. Details are set out in a note prepared by Cabinet Office (Office of the Minister for the Civil Service) and the Treasury. I am placing a copy in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Manufacturing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing in value terms for each year from 1970 to 1989 his estimate of gross and net output for manufacturing; and if he will add figures to show gross output after the elimination of transfers within the manufacturing sector.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information on gross and net output for manufacturing industry is published annually at current prices in Business Monitor PA1002, report on the census of production, summary volume. Copies of this volume up to 1987, the latest available year, are available from the House of Commons Library.

Transfers of goods produced by a business to departments not covered by the census (including other businesses in the same enterprise group) are treated within output as sales, valued as if sold to an independent buyer.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Warren: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Government have implemented regulations under all the opportunities available under the European Economic Community value added tax directive relating to not-for-profit organisations covered under article 13 of the directive relating to the reimbursement by Her Majesty's Government of value added tax paid by such organisations and similar relief on donations listed as sales for a nominal amount to such organisations.

Mr. Ryder: Article 13 of the EC sixth VAT directive includes various activities where services and goods supplied by charities or non-profit-making organisations shall be exempted from VAT.

Under the normal EC VAT rules, when a business donates equipment it is required to account for VAT on the supply, but donors are not obliged to pass this VAT charge on to the recipient of the equipment.

There is no provision in EC legislation for national Governments to reimburse VAT incurred by non-profit-making organisations on their exempt or non-business activities.

Rateable Values (Fylde)

Mr. Jack: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which office of the rating and valuation service holds the records of the rateable values of the domestic properties within the Fylde constituency.

Mr. Lilley: The statutory valuation list was prepared for Fylde borough council by the valuation officer, Lancaster. A copy of this list is held for public inspection in the office of Fylde borough council.

Treasury Bills

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the total value of the Treasury bills issued for each of the last 12 months.

Mr. Ryder: The results of the weekly Treasury bill tender are contained in table 3.8 of "Financial Statistics." Table 3.7 shows the distribution of holdings of Treasury bills.

Royal Mint

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made in developing the Royal Mint as an executive agency.

Mr. Ryder: I am pleased to announce that the Royal Mint will today become an executive agency under the "next steps" initiative. The present Deputy Master of the Mint, Mr. A. D. Garrett will be chief executive of the agency.

The mint has been a Government trading fund since 1975 and since that time has consistently achieved a high level of profitability. Its contribution to exports has been recognised by the Queen's Award on four occasions.

As an executive agency the mint will have greater management freedom to develop its thriving business on sound commercial lines in accordance with best private sector practice, and to maximise the efficiency, effectiveness and profitability of its operations. This is reflected in the framework document governing the operation of the agency, copies of which are being placed in the Library of the House today.

A Treasury minute setting the new financial target for the mint of an average 12½ per cent. current cost return on assets for the period 1990-91 to 1992-93 was laid on 27 March 1990 in accordance with section 4(1)(b) of the Government Trading Fund Act 1973.

I wish the deputy master and chief executive and his staff every success in achieving their objectives.

Employee Share Ownership

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to evaluate the tax reliefs introduced in recent years to encourage employee share ownership.

Mr. Lilley: Information from the returns made by employers shows that impressive progress in developing employee share ownership has already been made with the help of the existing tax incentives, and the Government hope to see this progress maintained. To supplement the information already available, I have recently authorised the Inland Revenue to commission research into employers' attitudes to employee share ownership including, in particular, the factors which influence them in the introduction and operation of employee share schemes. The terms of reference for the study are being placed in the House Library.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will outline the information which Her Majesty's Government are required to provide to the European Economic Community Commission in terms of the European documents considered along with his Budget statement; if this information is at present collected by Her Majesty's Government; and what will be the cost in future years of the collection and supply of the information so required.

Mr. Ryder: The European Commission's annual economic report is based on its own information and analysis. Member states may offer comments before the report is approved by ECOFIN. The cost to the United Kingdom of so doing is not significant.

Budget Yields

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish information in respect of (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Wales, (c) England, (d) Scotland and (e) Northern Ireland for the Budget years 1988-89 and 1989-90 on (i) total yield of national insurance, (ii) total yield of corporation tax, (iii) total net yield of value added tax, (iv) vehicle excise duty, (v) petrol and derv duty, (vi) tobacco duty and (vii) alcohol duty.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Figures for the United Kingdom as a whole are as follows:

Social security contributions (including national insurance)	33·00	33·1
Corporation tax	18·5	21·4
Value added tax	27·3	29·7
Vehicle excise duty	2·8	2·9
Petrol and derv duty	8·5	8·6
Tobacco duty	5·0	5·0
Alcohol duty	4·5	4·6

[1] Estimate

Data for central Government revenue are not generally broken down by territories. Of those categories requested, only for social security contributions is information available. Latest estimates suggest that these are made up as follows:

United Kingdom security contributions, percentage of total

	per cent.
England	85
Scotland	9
Wales	4
Northern Ireland	2
Total	100

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief

Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing (a) the total cost of mortgage interest tax relief in 1990-91, (b) the average value of relief per mortgagor and (c) the numbers receiving mortgage relief, broken down in the income ranges: under £4,000, £4,000 to £5,000, £5,000 to £6,000, £6,000 to £7,000, £7,000 to £8,000, £8,000 to £9,000, £9,000 to £10,000, £10,000 to £12,000, £12,000 to £15,000, £15,000 to £20,000, £20,000 to £25,000, £25,000 to £30,000 and over £30,000.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 30 March 1990]: Estimates for 1990-91 are not yet available. Estimates for 1989-90 were given in my reply to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East (Mr. Brown) on 19 February, Official Report, column 519.

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer of higher rate tax relief on mortgage interest in the year 1990-91; and what is (a) the likely number of beneficiaries and (b) the average size of the mortgage involved.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 30 March 1990]: Estimates for 1990-91 are not available. In 1989-90, the estimated cost of relief at excess over the basic rate of income tax is £430 million. About 700,000 mortgagors are beneficiaries and their average mortgage is estimated at £28,500. Estimates are provisional.

PRIME MINISTER

Art Treasures

Mr. Wray: To ask the Prime Minister what specific measures have been taken by Her Majesty's Government, alone or with other European Community countries, in order to (a) identify and (b) protect from permanent removal from the United Kindom national artistic treasures after the single market comes into completion in 1992.

The Prime Minister: The Waverly system has worked well in enabling us to identify and protect national artistic treasures without infringing the rights of owners and unnecessarily impeding the operation of the market. We are considering what measures might be needed to strengthen its operation in the changed conditions after 1992.

Members of Parliament (Bribery)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister which action she is taking on the Salmon committee recommendation that Parliament should consider bringing corruption, bribery and attempted bribery of an hon. Member, acting in his parliamentary capacity, within the ambit of the criminal law.

The Prime Minister: The corruption, bribery and attempted bribery of Members of Parliament acting in their parliamentary capacities would be a contempt and would be a matter for the Committee of Privileges to deal with. We would consider bringing forward legislation to make the corruption or attempted corruption of hon. Members a criminal offence only if there was clear evidence that the present arrangements were ineffective and the House agreed.

European Monetary System

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will seek to ensure that each Department affected publishes a statement on the implications for its activities of the joining of the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

The Prime Minister: No. The Government have made it clear that sterling will join the exchange rate mechanism (ERM) when the conditions set out at Madrid are met.

President Havel

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what matters were discussed during her meeting with President Havel of Czechoslovakia on 21 and 22 March.

The Prime Minister: I discussed with President Havel his ideas for the future shape of Europe and some of the security problems which arise from the new situation. I also announced the extension of the know-how fund to Czechoslovakia.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Appeals

66. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average period between a conviction and the hearing of an appeal against that conviction; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: In England and Wales the average period between lodgment of a notice of appeal against a decision of the magistrates court and hearing of the appeal in the Crown court is 8·36 weeks.

Of appeals to the Court of Appeal, criminal division, against convictions in the Crown court 32·3 per cent. are ready for hearing within six months and 84·3 per cent. are ready within 12 months. The time taken for an appeal to be heard is governed by the amount of preparatory work involved, and in trying to list cases with the minimum of delay the registrar of criminal appeals must ensure that counsel and solicitors acting for each appellant have adequate time to prepare their cases. Where delays in listing appeals occur they tend to be caused by the court's obligation to balance the conflicting needs of applicants who all wish their appeals heard as soon as possible. Those with leave to appeal against conviction, or short sentences, are, wherever possible, given earlier consideration than those appealing against long sentences.

Estate Agents

69. Mr. Favell: To ask the Attorney-General what recent representations he has received on the proposals to reform the legal profession in so far as they affect estate agents.

The Attorney-General: Since the publication of the Courts and Legal Services Bill on 6 December 1989, the Lord Chancellor has received eight representations concerning estate agency. The representations have been concerned with the suitability of allowing estate agents to offer conveyancing services as well as providing financial services in the house purchase market.

Director of Public Prosecutions

70. Mr. Allen: To ask the Attorney-General when he last met the Director of Public Prosecutions; and what was discussed.

The Attorney-General: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Walsall, North (Mr. Winnick) earlier today.

County Courts

72. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Attorney-General if there are any proposals to change the level of staffing in the county courts; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The number of court staff will be increased by about 350 in the coming financial year, and subsequently by up to a further 100 during the transitional period while new initiatives are being introduced.

At the same time the introduction of a computerised summons production centre and the curtailment of the county court banking function will release staff time savings equivalent to about 350 staff.

Immigration Appeals

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average length of time taken by the independent appellate authority in dealing with an appeal against a decision of an entry clearance officer on an immigration matter.

The Attorney-General: The immigration appellate authorities (IAA) do not record information on the average time taken to deal with appeals. It is, however, possible to give an estimate of the average time taken by the IAA to deal with appeals at each stage of the proceedings, as follows:

(a) from the date of receipt of the notice of appeal and the explanatory statement at the IAA's headquarters to the date of dispatch of the case papers to the parties' representatives in the United Kingdom: two to three months;

(b) from the date on which both parties indicate readiness to proceed to a hearing to the date of the hearing: one and a half to two months;

(c) from the date of hearing to the date of dispatch of the adjudicator's determination to the parties' representatives in the United Kingdom: one month.

Thus, the current estimate of the average time taken by the IAA to deal with a case is four and a half to six months, to which must be added the time taken by the parties' representatives in the United Kingdom to indicate readiness to proceed after receipt of the case papers from the IAA. This latter period can vary considerably but the current estimate is from two to six months.

In addition, an appeal from a determination by an adjudicator to the immigration appeal tribunal is estimated to take four to six months.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Functions

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what functions his Department carries out at the regional level; where the regional offices are located in each of the regions; what staff are employed and at what grades; what proportion of his Department's budget is spent in each of the regions; and what geographical boundaries determine his Department's regions.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The regional network of the Department of Trade and Industry comprises eight regional offices in England together with their sub-offices and satellites. Their main tasks are:

(1) To promote a better understanding of Government policies in the regions, to gather intelligence about industry and commerce, and to represent regional interests to Government.
(2) To promote and administer all parts of the Enterprise Initiative.
(3) To co-operate with other Government Departments, particularly through the City Action Teams, and with regional development organisations, local authorities, chambers of commerce, local enterprise agencies and other regional and local bodies.

Details of the geographical boundaries and location of the regional offices are contained in the DTI guide for business, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library.

While some DTI programmes have a strong regional emphasis, the vast majority are delivered nationally and it is not therefore possible to provide precise figures for expenditure by region for all schemes. For areas where programme spend can be attributed to individual offices the proportional spends are as follows:

	Per cent. of spend under The Industrial Development Act 1982	Per cent. of spend under The Consultancy Initiatives
DTI NE	39·6	4·8
DTI NW	25·6	17·4
DTI YH	16·0	11·2
DTI EM	3·2	6·6
DTI WM	9·2	12·2
DTI SE	2·1	19·3
DTI SW	4·2	7·0
DTI East	—	5·4
Scotland and Wales	—	16·6

The budget for administrative expenditure in 1989-90 by the regional offices is £18·8 million, some 6 per cent. of the total administrative expenditure of the Department. The expenditure by region is as follows:

	£ million
DTI EM	1·6
DTI NE	3·4
DTI WM	3·0
DTI SE	2·7
DTI YH	2·3
DTI NW	3·7
DTI East	0·5
DTI SW	1·5

A breakdown of staff by grade in each of the regional offices is as follows:

In addition to its regional office structure, a number of other operations of the Department are sited, in whole or in part, in the regions. These include the inner-city task forces; provincial offices of the insolvency service; offices of the radio investigations service and the Department's financial investigations division; and a number of the Department's research establishments. Information broken down by region on the administrative costs of these operations is not readily available.

The staff that they employ, however, represent some 14 per cent. of total DTI staffing (excluding Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland) and are located as follows:

Staff in post as at 1 January 1990

	Number
North East	58
North West	184
Yorks and Humberside	100·5
East Midlands	87
West Midlands	276

Government Expenditure

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will provide the information contained in tables 4.11, 4.12 and 4.14 of "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93" for Wales only.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am afraid that this information is not available.

Buy British Campaign

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received in favour of a Buy British campaign; and what response he has made.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Secretary of State has received a number of representations on this topic. Our response recognises the advantages of purchasing United Kingdom goods and services where they are competitive in design, quality and price.

Telecommunications

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) if he will set out the terms of reference of the telecommunications review due to start later in the current year;

(2) what plans he has to extend the present duopoly in the provision of basic telephone services.

Mr. Forth: The Government will review the present duopoly in the provision of telecommunications over fixed links starting in November of this year. The terms of reference of the review have yet to be decided. I do not at present have any plans to extend the current duopoly.

Computer Programs (Copyright)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community that result from the Commission's 1989 draft directive do not permit (a) unfair competition and (b) trade secrets embodied in proprietary software to be published.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We—and, I believe, all other member states—are concerned to ensure that competition in the supply of computer software is fair. There is no provision in the draft directive requiring the publication of trade secrets embodied in such software.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community do not prevent Britain from restraining unauthorised imports of copies of computer programs marketed outside the EEC.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are no provisions in the draft directive which would prevent the owners of the United Kingdom copyright in a computer program from taking action to restrain the importation of infringing copies of that program from outside the EEC.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community that result from the Commission's 1989 draft directive protect (a) members of the British software industry against uncontrolled access by competitors to the details and workings of their proprietary software and (b) the investment in research and development incurred by the British software industry in creating proprietary software;

(2) what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community resulting from the Commission's 1989 draft directive provide sufficient protection to encourage long-term research and development;

(3) what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community that result from the Commission's 1989 draft directive do not undermine the protection presently afforded the British software industry by the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988 and other relevant legislation;

(4) what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community resulting from the Commission's 1989 draft directive do not discourage innovation;

(5) what steps are being taken to ensure that the proposals for harmonised copyright protection for computer programs in the European Community that result from the Commission's 1989 draft directive do not by permitting limited access for specified reasons allow details and workings of proprietary software to become available to commercial competitors.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The draft directive does not provide for uncontrolled access to the details and workings of proprietary software, although the question of whether access should be allowed in certain limited circumstances is receiving further consideration. Investment by the British software industry will continue to be safeguarded in the United Kingdom by the rights accorded under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, which is not undermined by the draft directive. The draft directive would, however, improve the general level of protection of computer programs in the Community and should therefore further encourage investment, innovation and long-term research and development in this field.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give the total of European regional development fund moneys given to the borough of St. Helens in each of the last five years.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The totals of commitments from the European regional development fund in respect of projects in St. Helens, Merseyside in the last five years have been as follows:

	Industrial £	Infrastructure £	Total £
1985	55,783	142,500	198,283
1986	144,002	29,500	173,502
1987	45,057	185,400	230,457
1988	12,057	—	12,057
1989	50,958	—	50,958

The absence of commitments to infrastructure projects in 1989 is due to the European Commission's delay in approving the Mersey basin programme which includes St. Helens. With the recent approval of this programme commitments will resume.

Televisions

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many British-made televisions were exported to European Economic Community countries, and how many were sold on the British market, in the latest available 12 months.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A total of 1·2 million British-made television sets were exported to European Economic Community countries and 1·82 million British-made sets were sold on the British market in 1989.

Company Accounts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his policy as a condition of recognition to require the accountancy bodies seeking supervisory recognition under the Companies Act 1989 to make the minutes of their council meetings available (a) to their members and (b) to any member of the public on payment of a small fee.

Mr. Redwood: No. It is for a supervisory body itself to decide what arrangements are appropriate for informing its members and the public about its proceedings.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether his Department has any plans to legislate to strengthen controls over auditors establishing whether or not a business is a going concern.

Mr. Redwood: No. I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave to his questions on 5 March at column 415 and 27 March at column 125.

European Postal Monopoly

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals have emerged from the European Economic Community Commission on the establishment of a European postal monopoly; what assessment has been made of the implications for the United Kingdom and for private delivery services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Discussions on postal policy in Europe are taking place in Brussels between member states and the European Commission but no proposals have yet been made by the Commission and it is too early to speculate what the implications might be for the United Kingdom and for private delivery services. I understand that the Commission intends to publish a Green Paper in June.

Radiocommunications Division

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made towards establishing his Department's radiocommunications division as an executive agency.

Mr. Ridley: I am establishing the radiocommunications executive agency today. It is the seventh executive agency to be established within DTI.

Operating as an agency will give the agency further incentive in its efforts to provide an effective, quality service to radio users throughout the country. To that end I have set the radiocommunications agency the following efficiency and quality of service targets for 1990-91:

(a) to achieve an efficiency increase of 3 per cent. in its overall operations;

(b) to maintain and improve existing levels of quality of service in its licensing and enforcement activities through a comprehensive set of quality of service targets as follows:

(i) Licensing

Aeronautical—90 per cent. of new applications to be processed and despatched within one working day;

Aircraft—90 per cent. of new applications to be processed and despatched within two working days;

Ships radio—80 per cent. of licences to be issued within one month;

Maritime business radio—90 per cent. of cases to be actioned within three months;

Private mobile radio

Average time for processing applications:

New applications—within 15 working days;

Amendments—within 30 working days;

On-site paging—90 per cent. of new applications and amendments to be processed and, where appropriate, despatched within three working days.

In each case the target is for action within the number of days specified, following receipt by the agency;

(ii) Enforcement:

95 per cent. of safety of life services complaints to be handled within 24 hours;

95 per cent. of business complaints to be handled within five working days;

95 per cent. of domestic complaints to be handled within one month.

I propose in due course to set the radiocommunications agency similarly challenging targets for the improvement of efficiency in later years.

Textile and Clothing Industry

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if any studies have been conducted on the likely impact of the changes in central and eastern Europe on the textile and clothing industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 28 March 1990]: I am not aware of any such study.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consulting firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 28 March 1990]: My Department's expenditure on consultants engaged in the financial year 1989-90 is estimated to be £6,979,000 of which £3,967,000 is for computer consultancy contracts excluding hardware and software purchases. The allocation for 1990-91 will be set shortly in the light of the Department's annual activity and resource management review. Expenditure on management consultants is not recorded separately.

Chatlines

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will immediately take steps to ensure that in future 0898 telephone services shall be provided only to Government, commercial and private subscribers following an opt-in decision by the subscriber, communicated to the telephone company in writing.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 30 March 1990]: This is a matter for the Director General of Telecommunications, who has already taken firm action to control certain of these so-called premium rate services. He is keeping the matter under close review.

British Aerospace

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what (a) correspondence and (b) meetings his Department has had with the European Commission concerning subsidies to British Aerospace.

Mr. Ridley [holding answer 27 March 1990]: There have been various meetings and exchanges of correspondence with the Commission concerning its inquiries into the terms of the sale of Rover Group to British Aerospace. The Commission has not yet concluded its inquiries. My Department is also in regular contact with the Commission about support to the partners in Airbus Industrie, which includes British Aerospace.

Inspectors' Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the investigations carried out by his inspectors in which they have alleged fraud or other irregularities, along with a list of the auditing firms that failed to detect and report such frauds and irregularities.

Mr. Redwood: No. It does not follow that if inspectors report fraud or other irregularities there has necessarily been some failure on the part of the auditors.

Trade Surplus

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry with which Group of Seven countries the United Kingdom has a trade surplus.

Mr. Redwood: Information on United Kingdom imports and exports with the Group of Seven countries is published in the "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", Business Monitor MM20, table 1b.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the prospects for British exports to eastern Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: Prospects for British exports to eastern Europe vary from country to country and from industrial sector to industrial sector. Valuable opportunities for trade and investment exist in many sectors, including food processing and packaging, health care and medical equipment, computers, control equipment and office equipment. However, exports are limited by the lack of hard currency available and by competition from other major western suppliers. It is important that United Kingdom companies with the patience and persistence to tackle these markets should keep a high profile and be ready to seize new opportunities as they arise. This is particularly true at present in Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Poland and the German Democratic Republic, as they leave the command economy behind them. United Kingdom companies should also take into consideration the various aid and multilateral investment funds available for economic reconstruction.

Single European Market

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates he has available concerning the potential trade diversion from developing countries to members of the European Community when the single European market is established in (a) primary food products, (b) metal products, (c) petrochemicals and fertilisers and (d) manufactured food.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 March 1990]: Completion of the single market will remove the remaining barriers to trade between the member states. This will also make it easier for overseas trading partners to do business throughout the Community. At the same time the Community is negotiating vigorously in the Uruguay round of GATT negotiations for the further liberalisation of international trade.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimates he has made of the consequences of the single European market on investment in developing countries.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 March 1990]: Commercial investment decisions are determined by the laws in force in the countries concerned. Completion of the single market, including removal of controls on capital movements by member states, should have a beneficial effect from which all the Community's trading partners can benefit.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much (a) raw and (b) worked ivory has been imported into the United Kingdom since 1988.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 March 1990]: For 1988 and 1989 combined, imports into the United Kingdom were (a) £678,000 for raw ivory (including powder and waste) and (b) £271,000 for worked ivory and articles of ivory. There were no imports of raw ivory in the last six months of 1989. No figures for early 1990 are yet available.

ENERGY

Offshore Oil Platforms

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) in respect of the Argyll production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(2) in respect of the Forties production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(3) in respect of the Tartan production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(4) in respect of the Thistle production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(5) in respect of the Balmoral production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(6) in respect of the Beatrice production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(7) in respect of the Brent field production platforms, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what were the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(8) in respect of the Claymore production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what were the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(9) in respect of the Beryl A production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(10) in respect of the Beryl B production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(11) in respect of the Central Brae production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(12) in respect of the South Brae production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Offshore Installations (Construction and Survey) Regulations (S.I. 1974 No. 289) provide, inter alia, for the appointment by the Secretary of State of persons or bodies to certify offshore installations as fit for purpose and to carry out periodic surveys. On receipt of an application for a certificate of fitness or a renewal thereof the certifying authorities carry out, or ensure that there is carried out, an independent assessment of the design and method of construction of the installation and the provisions of its operation manual, and carry out a major survey of the installation. Thereafter there are regular annual surveys, which can be supplemented as necessary, for example where an installation has been damaged, shows signs of deterioration or its equipment has been modified.

All offshore installations are subject to this regime, and it is an offence to operate an installation without a certificate of fitness. In addition, the marine directorate of the Department of Transport conducts biennial surveys of life-saving appliances and fire-fighting equipment and plans, as provided under the Offshore Installations (Life-Saving Appliances) Regulations (S.I. 1977 No. 486) and the Offshore Installations (Fire-fighting Equipment) Regulations (S.I. 1978 No. 611).

My Department's safety directorate conducts inspections of offshore installations, during which it may look at any aspects of the installation and the working environment. The frequency with which installations are inspected varies according to the installation; an inspection rating system takes account of the nature of operations on the installation, the number of persons on board, an assessment of the effectiveness of management control, the lapse of time since the last inspection and other factors.

In line with these criteria, the most recent inspection of the Deepsea Pioneer (the Argyll floating production facility) took place in October 1989, of Forties FA in June 1989, of Forties FB in October 1989, of Forties FC in February 1989, of Forties FD and South East Forties in January 1990, of Tartan in September 1989, of Thistle in October 1989, of Balmoral in January 1990, of Beatrice A, B and C in May 1989, of Claymore in February 1990, of Brent A in January 1990, of Brent B in September 1989, of Brent C in December 1989, of Brent D in April 1989, of Beryl A in October 1989, of Beryl B in August 1989, and of Brae A in December 1989. Central Brae is a subsea drilling and production template to Brae A.

In common with other regulatory agencies, it is not the Department's practice to publish inspection reports. Operators are informed of any defects discovered and remedial action required at the time, and this is subsequently confirmed in writing.

The questions of regulations, guidance notes and exemptions in force were covered in my reply to the hon. Member of 30 March.

The dates on which the platforms in question were installed are as follows:

There have been four fatalities on these platforms during the last five years: on Brent C in March 1987, on Claymore A in May 1987, on Forties FB in October 1987 and on Brent D in November 1988. My Department investigates all fatal accidents.

Over the same period, there have been seven convictions for breaches of United Kingdom safety legislation on these platforms following investigations by my inspectors. The details are as follows:

Company	Installation	Date of conviction	Penalty £
Rigblast Offshore Ltd.	Beryl B	12 February 1985	1,000
Mobil North Sea Ltd.	Beryl A	17 January 1989	10,000
BP Development Ltd.	Forties FD	5 February 1985	15,000
Bawden International Ltd.	Forties FB	10 June 1985	1,750
Shell UK Ltd.	Brent C	28 August 1985	350
Jack Tighe (Offshore) Ltd.	Brent C	25 September 1985	900
Shell UK Ltd.	Brent D	19 October 1989	5,000

My safety directorate does not make estimates of the life of an installation; this is a matter for the operators and the certifying authorities. However, all offshore installations have to be registered in line with the provisions of the Offshore Installations (Registration) Regulations (S.I. 1972 No. 702). This provides for registration to expire at the end of 25 years in the case of a fixed installation or 10 years in the case of a mobile installation, although applications for re-registration can be made.

Mersey Barrage

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the bid by the Mersey Barrage Company to construct a barrage on the River Mersey.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The current phase of work on the proposed Mersey tidal barrage is still under way. Various proposals for the way forward have been submitted by the Mersey Barrage Company, and these are being considered by the Department.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will estimate the share of the electricity generation industry of England and Wales that would be taken by the nuclear sector in the absence of any nuclear levy or nuclear subsidy.

Mr. Baldry: The non-fossil fuel obligation together with the fossil fuel levy will ensure that we continue to enjoy the strategic and environmental benefits of around 8GW of nuclear power.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish his correspondence with the Commissioners of the European Community regarding the nuclear levy and the nuclear subsidy.

Mr. Wakeham: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Haynes) on Monday 26 March at column 5.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will publish his correspondence with the directors designate of Nuclear Electric plc, regarding the directors' obligations to cease trading when their company is technically insolvent.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave on 27 March at column 122, and to the departmental minute that he laid before the House on 6 March. I have arranged for a copy of the letter of comfort to be placed in the Library of this House.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will extend the period for contracts under the non-fossil fuel obligation for renewable energies to 15 years.

Mr. Baldry: The first order setting the level of the non-fossil fuel obligation in respect of renewables-sourced electricity generating capacity will cover the period from 1990 until 1998, and this is the period for which the fossil fuel levy will initially run. However, the arrangements that they make in order to meet their respective obligations are a matter for the public electricity suppliers.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Development Assistance

78. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he plans to announce the figures for the percentage of gross national product spent on official development assistance in 1989.

Mrs. Chalker: I expect to be able to provide this information in June.

97. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards attaining the 0·7 per cent. of gross national product level of aid/development spending.

Mrs. Chalker: In 1988 United Kingdom official development assistance as a percentage of gross national product was 0·32 per cent. The Government have accepted the United Nations target for official development assistance of 0·7 per cent. of GNP, but, like previous Administrations and many other donors, have not set a timetable for achieving it. Progess must depend on economic circumstances and other claims on resources.

South Africa

79. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much has been spent by the Overseas Development Administration in the past year on aid for black people in South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: Over the past year we have spent about £9 million on aid for black South Africans, including our share of European Community aid.

Cambodia

80. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to re-establish the British Council in Cambodia.

Mrs. Chalker: I understand that the British Council has no plans to return to Cambodia at present.

Palestine

81. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Israeli Government about aid to Palestine.

Mrs. Chalker: It has not been Her Majesty's Government's practice to consult the Israeli Government about our bilateral assistance to the occupied territories.

Developing Nations (Aid)

82. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will take steps to increase the expenditure on aid to developing nations.

Mrs. Chalker: Expenditure on aid is increasing. The Government's Autumn Statement published on 15 November 1989 records that the aid programme is planned to rise from £1,500 million in 1989-90 to £1,587 million in 1990-91, £1,680 million in 1991-92 and £1,750 million in 1992-93. This represents a cash increase of 16 per cent. over the next three years.

Natural Resources Institute

83. Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been achieved through the work of the Overseas Development Natural Resources Institute.

Mrs. Chalker: I am glad to have this opportunity to pay tribute to the Natural Resources Institute's role in the aid programme. It possesses a wealth of scientific expertise, developed over almost 100 years; and has done celebrated work across the developing world in land resource assessment, insect pest management, and food science and crop utilisation.

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress has been made with plans for the Overseas Development Natural Resources Institute to become an executive agency.

Mrs. Chalker: As foreshadowed in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 19 December 1989, at column 121, the institute has been established as an executive agency under the Government's "next steps" initiative with effect from 1 April. The institute's aims, objectives and operating principles as an agency are set out in a framework document, copies of which have been deposited in the Libraries of both Houses. In accordance with "next steps" principles, the institute will be free to propose further adaptation if changing circumstances make this appropriate.

The institute's performance will be judged principally in terms of its ability to satisfy customers while covering its full economic costs. I have set NRI the target of improving its efficiency, as measured by unit costs, by 5·5 per cent. in the three years 1990-91 to 1992-93. Over the same period the institute plans to increase the volume of business it undertakes.

The institute's name will be the Natural Resources Institute or NRI.

Ethiopia

84. Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about current aid to Ethiopia.

98. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the current arrangements for delivering relief supplies to northern Ethiopia.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) and the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 26 March at column 18.

ODA Training (Women)

85. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to increase the percentage of women taking part in Overseas Development Administration-financed training schemes.

Mrs. Chalker: Our comprehensive women in development (WID) strategy includes dialogue at all levels with aid-recipient Governments on opportunities for women as well as requests that they nominate more women for ODA training awards. ODA and British Council officials are seeking more nominations for women on all types of courses. We are exploring opportunities for more in-country courses, where representation of women is often higher than for courses in Britain, and we have sought to remove obstacles which are particularly daunting for women in attending United Kingdom courses. But all our efforts will be ineffective if developing country Governments are not willing to nominate more women for training awards.

UN Development Fund for Women

86. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what his estimates are for the United Kingdom contribution to the United Nations development fund for women in 1990.

Mrs. Chalker: Subject to parliamentary approval, £100,000.

Brazil (Forestry Projects)

87. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many forestry projects have been approved under the memorandum of understanding between Her Majesty's Government and the Brazilian Government.

94. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what forestry projects have been agreed with the Brazilian authorities for financing from the overseas aid programme.

Mrs. Chalker: One forestry project, on climate research, has been agreed with the Brazilian authorities. Details of this were given in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 1 March, column 283. We have also recently told the Brazilian authorities that we are ready to provide finance to an ITTO-sponsored forest management project in the Tapajos reserve, the detailed project agreement for which is now under discussion between Brazil and the ITTO.

A further dozen proposals are under preparation or are being considered by the Brazilian Government. We hope to reach agreement shortly on some of these, to allow them to begin in the second quarter of this year.

India

88. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on current levels of British aid to India.

Mrs. Chalker: Last financial year (1988-89) British gross bilateral aid to India amounted to about £85 million, including £14 million from the Commonwealth Development Corporation. It continues to be the largest British bilateral aid programme.

Aid and Trade Provisions

89. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures Her Majesty's Government have taken, or propose to take, in co-ordination with other countries, to reduce the amount of aid which is tied to trade provisions.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government played an active part in the discussions between member countries of the OECD in 1987 to produce a package of measures to improve discipline in the use of aid for projects tied to procurement in the donor country. Those measures are now under review within the OECD and the United Kingdom will again play its full part in achieving further multilaterally agreed measures to avoid the possible aid and trade distortion that can result from the use of such aid.

Turkey (Refugees)

90. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom aid for Iranian and Iraqi refugees in Turkey.

Mrs. Chalker: Her Majesty's Government have provided two grants totalling £550,000 to assist Iraqi Kurds in Turkey and ethnic Turkish refugees from Bulgaria. Both the initial grant of £250,000 made in November 1988 and the £300,000 announced during my visit to Turkey in July 1989 were provided through the Turkish Red Crescent Society.

UNHCR is currently negotiating with the Turkish Government a new programme of assistance for which I have agreed to provide £250,000.

Developing Countries (Debt)

91. Mr. John Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action the Government are taking to resolve the debt crisis of developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The Government will continue to provide financial assistance for indebted countries through IMF and World Bank, the rescheduling of official debt in the Paris Club and, where appropriate, bilateral aid. We will also continue to implement the special measures for the poorest debtors agreed at the 1988 Toronto economic summit. For middle-income debtors, specific support for commercial bank debt reduction will continue to be available through the IMF and World Bank. All this assistance is conditional on debtor countries pursuing economic reforms to lay the basis for sustained growth, as such reforms are essential for a lasting resolution of their debt problems.

99. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with members of the European Commission and Ministers of member states concerning the writing-off of debt owed by developing countries to the European development fund.

Mrs. Chalker: Discussion has concentrated on whether to cancel outstanding repayments on transfers made under the Stabex system during the first Lomé convention. I expect a decision to be taken shortly.

Nicaragua

92. Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to restore bilateral aid to Nicaragua.

Mrs. Chalker: We have decided to start a modest bilateral technical co-operation programme to Nicaragua. We are in touch with our ambassador in Costa Rica, who has responsibility for our relations with Nicaragua, about how the programme could best be deployed.

93. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has made an assessment of Nicaragua's needs for international assistance since the election of Violetta Chamorro.

Mrs. Chalker: EC Ministers will be meeting their central American colleagues in Dublin on 9 and 10 April, and will be able to discuss the needs of the countries of that region, notably Nicaragua, then. Our main channel of international assistance in Nicaragua is through our contribution to EC aid to that country and, as indicated in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 12 March, we will seek to ensure that EC aid to Nicaragua is maintained, and possibly increased, once Senora Chamorro's democratically elected Government take office.

South-East Asia

95. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much he plans to provide in aid for the countries of south-east Asia in 1990-91.

Mrs. Chalker: I expect to provide approximately £15 million in 1990-91 to the countries of south-east Asia, most of it to Indonesia. Assistance is also likely to be provided under the aid and trade provision, but this cannot be quantified at present.

Elephant Conservation Schemes

96. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent reports he has received on elephant conservation schemes currently receiving British Government development aid.

Mrs. Chalker: Elephant conservation forms part of our wider assistance to African wildlife in general. We are supporting an increasing number of long-term wildlife and conservation projects on which we receive regular reports. However, many of these projects are at an early stage of implementation and it is too soon to assess their full impact. We remain willing to consider further requests for help. The conservation projects receiving our support are as follows:

BRITISH SUPPORT FOR WILDLIFE CONSERVATION IN AFRICA

Country and activity

Botswana

Provision for one United Kingdom expert as Deputy Director of Department of Wildlife and National Parks to assist the Government of Botswana to develop a Wildlife Department which can effectively manage the wildlife resources of the country. Likely costs approximately £92,000.

Cameroon

Jointly funding with the International Council for Bird Preservation a project to conserve forest resources in the Oku mountains. Approximate cost £80,000.

Kenya

The provision of three United Kingdom experts (one wildlife adviser and two gamewardens) working in Kenya Wildlife Department. One gamewarden acts as co-ordinator of Kenya Rhino Rescue Project. Approximate annual cost £130,000.

The provision of spare parts for and rehabilitation of 19 ex-Army Bedford trucks previously gifted by Ministry of Defence for use in anti-poaching efforts. The provision of seven new Landrovers for the Department of Wildlife and a review of radio communications needs. Total cost likely to be £250,000.

Nigeria

Assistance planned for the Foresty Sector could include the management and conservation of forest reserves in the Cross River and Bendel States encompassing the Oban Hills National Park and the Okomu forest sanctuary. Costings not yet available.

Rwanda

Landrover presented to Karisoke Research Centre, internationally renowned for its research on gorillas. Cost £15,000.

Tanzania

Joint funding of the Faith Foundation's Operation Rhino Rescue Project, a scheme designed to provide sanctuary for Tanzania's dwindling rhino population. Cost £50,000.

Three Landrovers have been presented to the Ruaha Game Park for use in anti-poaching activities.

UK consultants have undertaken a study to identify possible ways of helping with wildlife conservation. Their proposal to assist with planning and management at Ruaha National Park is under consideration. Estimated cost of the study is £10,000. Final cost of proposal to be determined.

Zambia

Funding of a Wildlife Management Consultancy to review the management of wildlife in Mpika District. No costs available as this forms part of a wider District Development support project.

Zimbabwe

Equipment and buildings to Chirundu Conservation Education Camp in the Zambezi Valley. Cost approximately £9,000.

Co-financing Action Plan: an education programme aiming to promote conservation and sustainable use of natural resources. (The environmental health magazine produced as part of this project is also distributed throughout schools in Botswana and Zambia.) Cost £85,000.

Communal Areas Wildlife Management Projects in Northern Zimbabwe, to help local people develop the ability to manage their wildlife resources sustainably. Cost appoximately £800,000.

Wildlife Disease Epidemiology Project involving the provision of one UK expert and support equipment to carry out wildlife disease research and establish a database of the incidence and distribution of wildlife diseases. Estimated cost £340,000.

Regionally

£1 million block grant to World Wide Fund for Nature (formerly World Wildlife Fund) to help conserve forest and other resources, important habitats for many endangered wildlife species. Projects are being funded in Cameroon, Ethiopia, Kenya, Liberia, Madagascar, Nigeria, Tanzania and Zambia.

Caribbean

100. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current level of assistance given to islands in the Caribbean.

Mrs. Chalker: We provide assistance both bilaterally and through multilateral institutions. Bilateral aid in 1988 (the latest year for which figures are yet available) was:

	Country programmes[1]	£'000s Commonwealth Development Corporation
Anguilla	1,599	—
Antigua	1,164	—
Barbados	505	—
British Virgin Islands	511	2,200
Cayman Islands	—	1,600
Cuba	2	—
Dominica	1,973	—
Dominican Republic	114	—
Grenada	1,225	—
Haiti	9	—
Jamaica	5,367	—
Montserrat	2,286	—
St. Kitts/Nevis	2,095	—
St. Lucia	808	2,040
St. Vincent	869	—
Trinidad	146	—
Turks and Caicos Islands	4,233	—

[1] There is also a regional technical co-operation allocation of about £2 million a year from which all the developing Commonwealth countries in the Caribbean region benefit, but it is not possible to attribute specific amounts to individual recipients.

We also provide disaster relief when the need arises. In 1988, we committed £3 million to Jamaica, following Hurricane Gilbert, of which £348,000 was spent in 1988.

It is also possible to calculate the share of multilateral aid attributable to the United Kingdom. In 1987 (the latest year for which the calculation can be made) the total was £15·540 million, of which £9·9 million was through the European Community.

Eastern Europe

101. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether any aid planned for eastern Europe will come from the overseas development budget.

Mrs. Chalker: The expenditure on aid for eastern Europe for which we have sought parliamentary approval in main estimates is additional to the official United Kingdom aid programme.

Rain Forests

102. Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentages of Overseas Development Administration funds intended to help protect tropical rain forests, including and excluding funding for the Oxford Forestry Institute, are to be channelled through the tropical forestry action plan.

Mrs. Chalker: The tropical forestry action plan is not a fund or organisation to which donors contribute funds. It is a mechanism under which recipient countries review their forestry sectors and donors can co-ordinate assistance. Of the 51 bilateral projects currently under consideration for funding from the further £100 million for tropical forestry announced by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister last November, 19 are in the context of national forestry action plans. Some of the future projects which come forward for funding from the £100 million will also be so. Most of the support we give the Oxford Forestry Institute is for research, outside the context of national forestry action plans.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Learning Difficulties

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will ensure that CATE criteria include a provision for professional studies of the needs of pupils with specific learning difficulties in reading and writing.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Government's revised criteria for the accreditation of initial teacher training courses, which are set out in DES circular 24/89, include a requirement that the educational and professional studies of all students should develop in them the capacity to identify pupils with special educational needs or with learning difficulties and to understand the ways in which the potential of such pupils can be developed.

Universities (London)

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what assessment he has made of the additional financial problems facing universities within the London area.

Mr. Jackson: This is a matter for the Universities Funding Council and for the universities concerned.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether in its bid to his Department as part of the 1990-91 Public Expenditure Survey Committee round, the Universities Funding Council supported the case for an additional £10 million per annum for universities in London facing exceptional costs because of their locations; and whether such a sum was included in the Universities Funding Council allocation for 1990-91 and identified as such.

Mr. Jackson: In line with long-established practice, advice from the Universities Funding Council on aggregate funding levels is confidential. It is entirely for the council to allocate its share of the 1989 public expenditure settlement between universities. Parliamentary sanction would be required under the Education Reform Act 1988 before my right hon. Friend could direct the council's action in relation to a particular university.

In-service Training

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish for each local authority area the number of teachers in each of the last three years who have undertaken in-service training and other courses of professional development (a) during school hours and (b) after school, at weekends and during school holidays.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not collected centrally. However, the Department does collect data on volumes of training for which release is or is not required, expressed as training days. I will reply as soon as possible.

Education Expenditure

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total expenditure in education in the years 1978-79 and in 1988-89; and if he will give the relevant figures for higher education.

Mr. Jackson: Total DES expenditure on education and science (covering schools, further education, polytechnics and colleges of higher education in England, universities in Great Britain, and the science budget for the United Kingdom) in the years in question was as follows:

£ million

	1978-79 (outturn)	1988-89 (estimate)
	7,754	18,412

Within these totals, DES expenditure on higher education (covering grants to universities in Great Britain, funding for local authority higher education in England, expenditure on mandatory awards for undergraduates in England and Wales and postgraduate awards) in the years in question was as follows:

£ million

	1978-79 (outturn)	1988-89 (estimate)
	1,668	3,891

Teachers

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he will now publish the final report of the university of Bath study on teacher shortage initiatives referred to by the right hon. Member for Mole Valley (Mr. Baker), Official Report, 22 February 1989, column 634;

(2) if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn, Official Report, 26 March, column 31, he will publish in full the evidence received and the results of his Department's survey of bursary holders referred to in his answer.

Mr. MacGregor: Yes. I shall place a copy of the report in the Library.

Exchange Programmes

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the outcome of the first scientific support and exchange (stimulation) programme of the European Communities; and what progress has been made in developing a successor programme to SCIENCE within the European Communities and European Free Trade Association member states.

Mr. Jackson: Overall, 417 projects were financed under the first EC stimulation programme (1985-88) linking 1,257 laboratories all over Europe and involving 3,721 researchers (counted on a full-time equivalent basis). The successor to the first stimulation programme, SCIENCE (1988-92), is already operating successfully in the European Community. Agreements to include Austria, Finland, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland in the SCIENCE progsamme are at present under discussion.

Student Awards

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many undergraduate students in each local authority area received discretionary awards; and what percentage they formed of all undergraduates in receipt of awards in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Jackson [holding answer 30 March 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

History Teaching

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he intends to publish the final report of the national curriculum working party on history; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) when he first received the draft of the final report of the history working party;

(2) when he first received the final report of the history working party;

(3) on what dates in the last year he has met Commander Saunders-Watson, chairman of the history working party;

(4) when he expects to publish the final report of the history working party.

Mrs. Rumbold [pursuant to her reply 28 March 1990, c. 184]: The final report of the national curriculum history working group will be published tomorrow, Tuesday 3 April. Copies of the report will be placed in the Library.

HEALTH

Food Poisoning

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will identify the general locations of the food poisoning outbreaks occurring in 1989 in which the food vehicle was suspected to be mayonnaise made with fresh shell eggs.

Mr. Freeman: The three outbreaks of food poisoning in 1989 in which mayonnaise made from fresh shell eggs was suspected to be the cause occurred within the boundaries of the Trent, Oxford and Wessex health regions.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what criteria his Department uses to assess whether an outbreak of food poisoning has been caused by eggs;

(2) what distinction his Department draws between the phrases "associated with" and "caused by" in relation to food poisoning.

Mr. Freeman: The evidence linking eggs and salmonella infection in man is based on many different kinds of information. There is no absolute distinction between the phrases "caused by" and "associated with"; both include these different kinds of information. I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Honiton (Sir P. Emery) on 14 March at column 281.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has issued any specific guidance to caterers who use raw shell eggs for the production of mayonnaise as to how to prevent the multiplication of salmonella or other organisms.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave her on 9 March at column 896. The Department asked chief environmental health officers to advise caterers in a letter of 2 September 1988.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many laboratory confirmed cases of salmonella food poisoning were reported by the communicable disease surveillance centre in the weeks ended 23 February, 2 March and 9 March; if he will show in tabular form how many were salmonella typhimurium, salmonella virchow and salmonella enteritidis; and of the enteritidis figures how many were phase type 4.

Mr. Freeman: The information is as follows:

	Week ending
	23 February	2 March	9 March
Salmonellas total	208	175	77
Salmonella typhimurium	33	48	19
Salmonella virchow	6	3	1
Salmonella enteritidis	130	88	46
Phase type 4	99	67	33

Any weekly reporting system will inevitably be subject to short-term anomalies. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave her on 9 March at columns 895-96. A local postal strike has resulted in fewer reports being received by PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre in recent weeks. This has now ended and coming weeks may therefore show spuriously high totals.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the food poisoning outbreak associated with coleslaw made with commercial mayonnaise at a golf club in the north-west, referred to in the memorandum submitted by the public health laboratory service to the Agriculture Committee, first report, Session 1988-89, HC 108, arose from the use of mayonnaise which had been made with pasteurised eggs.

Mr. Freeman: Coleslaw made using commercial mayonnaise was reported to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre as a suspected vehicle of infection in this outbreak. No further information as to the type, or manufacture, of the mayonnaise is available.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Crown premises have been associated or involved with food poisoning in each of the last five years in which eggs or egg products have been identified or suspected of being vehicles of infection.

Mr. Freeman: The outbreaks formally reported to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre as having occurred in Crown premises in the past five years, where eggs or egg containing food were suspected vehicles of infection are as follows:

1985	0
1986	1
1987	0
1989	2

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many food premises and National Health Service hospitals have been prosecuted or are under consideration for prosecution under the Food Act 1981 or the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970 for offences relating to outbreaks of food poisoning in which eggs or egg products were identified or suspected of being vehicles of infection.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held centrally for commercial food premises. We are not aware of any prosecutions or proposed prosecutions against NHS hospitals in relation to food poisoning involving eggs or egg products.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his assessment of the balance between the incidence of food poisoning caused by eggs and by egg products.

Mr. Freeman: In the context of outbreaks, the balance between the incidence of food poisoning caused by eggs, or by egg products or egg containing foods, is overwhelmingly in the direction of egg containing foods. This is because the only egg dishes which are normally free of other components are single cooked eggs such as a boiled egg, and a boiled egg is, by its nature, unlikely to cause an outbreak, because it is normally eaten by only one person.

A study of sporadic cases of infection with S. enteritidis PT4 (BMJ 1989; 299: 771-3) has shown an association between illness and eating egg dishes lightly rather than well cooked, and with other egg products. Without such a study most cases of sporadic food poisoning cannot be linked to a particular food vehicle with any confidence. Consequently there are insufficient data in sporadic cases to assess the overall balance of risk between eggs and egg products.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to ask the chief medical officer to withdraw his warning on eggs.

Mr. Freeman: The chief medical officer continues to keep under review all circumstances and evidence relevant to his current advice on the consumption of eggs.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the risk to humans of contracting salmonella from eating cooked salmonella-infected hens; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Birds from laying flocks which are infected with salmonella and are to be disposed of under special licence and controlled conditions will be slaughtered and sent to processing plants which use an industrial heat treatment process which achieves the temperatures necessary for the destruction of salmonella.

Providing poultry is cooked thoroughly and subsequently is handled hygienically there is minimal risk to health. I also refer the hon. and learned Member to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Billericay (Mrs. Gorman) on 9 March at column 896.

Registered Homes Act 1984

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he will introduce legislation to extend the provisions of the Registered Homes Act 1984 to all caring establishments irrespective of size and establishment.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We intend to seek a legislative opportunity to bring homes with fewer than four residents under statutory control.

HIV

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has any plans to enact policies to prevent discrimination against carriers of HIV.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As the Government's response to the Social Services Committee (Cm 925) made clear, one part of our strategy on HIV infection and AIDS is:

> "Through a range of measures to foster a climate of understanding and compassion, to discourage discrimination, and to safeguard confidentiality, within the wider context of public health requirements."

We believe these objectives will best be achieved by educating and informing people, and not by adding to existing legislation.

Bathing Waters (Pollution)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence is available to his Department that differs from that included in the 10th report of the Royal Commission on environmental pollution regarding the health risks posed by bathing in grossly polluted bathing waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: There is no evidence to dispute the conclusion of this report that the risk of contracting serious illness from bathing in the sea off the United Kingdom appears to be extremely small.

Research outside the United Kingdom has reported a small risk of contracting minor illnesses such as gastro-enteritis and skin complaints, but gives conflicting reports of which sewage indicator organisms give the best correlation with illness. We wish to be better informed about the position of minor illnesses in United Kingdom waters and the Department of the Environment has already carried out a pilot study to test the proposed methodologies.

Hepatitis E

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether there have been any cases in England whereby hepatitis E has been contracted from faecally infected drinking water.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not available because there is, as yet, no diagnostic test for hepatitis E virus, though one is under development in the United States of America.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds a formal application for National Health Service trust status will not be approved by his Department.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No units will apply for NHS trust status until Parliament has approved the necessary legislation. Each application will be considered by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State on an individual basis in the light of local circumstances, following consultation by the region.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the Health Service units listed in his Department's press release 89/471 have now indicated that they do not wish to proceed with a first wave application for National Health Service trust status.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: As my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State indicated in press release 89/471, formal applications for NHS trust status will not be invited until Parliament has given approval to the necessary legislation. It will be only at this stage that the number of units applying for trust status in April 1991 will be known.

I understand that five of the original 79 units intending to prepare draft applications for NHS trust status in 1991 have indicated that they may wish to develop their application over a longer time scale. However, I also understand that a number of other units have since indicated that they may prepare draft applications for trust status in 1991.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the waiting lists for each district health authority, SHA and regional health authority for 30 September 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I am arranging for these summaries to be published in the next couple of weeks. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health with what frequency waiting list information is collected; and if he will consider publishing the regional and national totals on a quarterly basis.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 March at column 828. We intend to continue the practice of routine twice-yearly publication of waiting list information so as to maintain a consistent series of statistics, without incurring unnecessary expense.

Manpower Statistics

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to be able to give the figures published in section III (manpower) of the health and personal social services statistics for 1988.

Mr. Freeman: The information will be published in full in this year's edition of health and personal social services statistics, which is expected to be available in August.

Menopause

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he proposes to make resources available to organisations which specialise in helping women overcome the trauma of menopause; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We already provide funds under the section 64 scheme to two voluntary organisations, Women's Health Concern and the Amarant Trust, which specialise in offering advice to women who are undergoing the menopause.

Health Authority Membership

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the 14 regional health authorities and details of the members' role, as under part I of schedule 5 to the National Health Service Act 1977.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Details of the membership of regional health authorities have been placed in the Library.

Members of regional health authorities are appointed by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to help him discharge his duties to promote a comprehensive health service. Broadly, the role of members is to guide the work of their authority's chief officers, and help them to determine regional policies within the constraints of national policies and priorities.

Private Nursing Homes

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish his Department's guidelines on the transfer of the infirm from National Health Service care to the private sector with special reference to the procedure to ensure that a person's medical needs are met.

Mr. Freeman: Circular HC(89)5 which was issued to health authorities in February 1989, together with a booklet "Discharge of Patients from Hospital" emphasised that proper arrangements should be made for any necessary continuing care before patients are discharged from hospital. A copy has been placed in the Library.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the problem of the premature removal of old people from private nursing homes on the instructions of owners, in circumstances where such individuals have been accepted by the owners and then a decision by the owners taken subsequently that the home could not cope with a person's medical needs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: None. The primary role of a nursing home is to meet the nursing needs of its residents and the person responsible for the home has a duty to ensure that sufficient and suitable services are provided.

Health authorities inspect each home at least twice a year to ensure that the conditions of registration are being met. But inevitably some patients will deteriorate to a point where they need the level of medical care that can be provided only in a hospital.

Abortion

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the foetuses aborted during 1988-89 showed signs of handicap or disability.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally, but in 1988, the latest full year for which figures are available, 1,797 abortions were performed in which the ground of substantial risk of the child being born seriously handicapped was mentioned by the certifying medical practitioners. The provisional equivalent figure for the first six months of 1989 is 818.

Embryos (Experiments)

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any human embryos have been used in the United Kingdom for medical experimentation during the past two years; and under what statutory provisions such work is performed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Medical experimentation on human embryos is not at present controlled by legislation. However, the Interim Licensing Authority (ILA), which was established by the Medical Research Council and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologists, currently approves centres which carry out embryo research. The Government have introduced the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Bill to provide a legal framework for scientific developments in the field of human reproduction and embryology.

Radiation

Dr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has yet received advice from the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment in respect of the case control study on leukaemia and lymphoma in young people resident in West Cumbria undertaken by the Medical Research Council epidemiology unit at Southampton university and published in February.

Mr. Freeman: Yes. The Government are grateful to COMARE for its preliminary advice and accept all the committee's recommendations. We note that COMARE agrees with the study methodology, and with the broad thrust of the main conclusions.

The committee advises that there is evidence of a statistical association between the recorded external radiation dose of those employed at Sellafield and the incidence of childhood leukaemia in their offspring. However, we note that the committee is cautious in its interpretation of the results since the study conclusions are based on very small numbers and that further evidence from other studies currently under way is called for. In particular, we note COMARE's view that the case control study demonstrates a statistical association, but no causal relationship. The committee has stated in its advice that workers with relatively high external radiation exposures may also be subject to other factors. In the committee's view, these include possible internal radiation exposure, the possibility of contaminated materials being carried off the site, or other factors, including chemical exposure or contamination. The committee suggests that it is possible that one of these factors, or a combination, could be important.

In response to the Government's request for advice on possible risks to workers receiving relatively high radiation doses, we accept COMARE's view that it is unable to make specific recommendations on this until the results of other studies are known and there is further information on possible causal mechanisms. However, the committee strongly supports the actions that have been taken to continue to reduce occupational exposures.

In response to the committee's specific recommendations on studies of the offspring of radiation workers, and on the need for co-ordination of research effort, the relevant Government Departments have set up arrangements to enable them to take this work forward as speedily as possible. COMARE will be kept informed at all stages and will be consulted as appropriate.

Following publication of the case control study, the Department and the Health and Safety Executive have received a number of related research proposals from various individuals and organisations. In addition to these expressions of interest, we will be advertising more widely to invite formal research proposals. Any such proposals will be subject to the usual independent review procedures, but will be considered as swiftly as possible.

Following is the full text of COMARE's preliminary advice:

"COMARE STATEMENT of ADVICE

Subject:

The Case-control study of leukaemia and lymphoma among young people near the Sellafield nuclear plant in West Cumbria

M. J. Gardner, M.P. Snee, A. J. Hall, C. A. Powell, S. Downes and J. D. Terrell.

BACKGROUND

1. In 1984, the Independent Advisory Group chaired by Sir Douglas Black, reported on the possible increased incidence of cancer in West Cumbria.[1] The group recommended that a case control study of leukaemia and lymphoma in young people resident in West Cumbria should be carried out. The study was commissioned by the Department of Health in 1984 and was undertaken by the Medical Research Council Environmental Epidemiology Unit at Southampton University.

2. The study was designed to examine whether the observed excess of childhood leukaemia and lymphoma near BNFL Sellafield was associated with established risk factors or with factors related to the plant. The results were published in the British Medical Journal dated 17th February 1990.[2]

3. The Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health has referred the study to this Committee for urgent consideration and preliminary advice.[3]

Results of the case control study

4. The study documents an association between the excess of leukaemia and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in children living in the vicinity of Sellafield, and employment of the fathers of the affected children at Sellafield over the period 1950 to 1985. The statistical association with employment at Sellafield generally and the risk of leukaemia in employee's offspring is raised, but is similar to that in the offspring of fathers employed in some other industries in West Cumbria namely the iron and steel, chemical and farming industries.

5. In particular, the study documents an association between the raised incidence of leukaemia and non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in young people and the recorded level of external radiation dose received by the father, while working at Sellafield, before conception of the affected child.

6. The authors comment that other factors, including ante-natal exposure to x-rays, maternal age, employment elsewhere, eating seafood and playing on the beach did not explain these relationships. The authors also conclude that these results can explain statistically the observed geographical excess of leukaemia and lymphoma in young people in Seascale.

Government's request to COMARE

7. The Government noted the results of the study with concern and, in view of its importance, the Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Health referred the study to COMARE for our urgent consideration and preliminary advice. We were asked to consider the study further in the longer term, in conjunction with the results of other studies, completed, underway or planned, recommended in the Black report[1], or in our own second and third reports[4,5].

COMARE's preliminary advice to Government

METHODOLOGY

8. The Committee consider that the methods of investigation were appropriate to the aims of the study.

Conclusions

9. We agree with the broad thrust of the study's main conclusions which are outlined as follows. Although the number of cases is small, there is evidence of a statistical association between the recorded external radiation dose of those employed at Sellafield and the incidence of childhood leukaemia in their offspring during the study period. We note that the association between paternal occupational external radiation exposure and the incidence of leukaemia in their offspring could be sufficient to explain statistically the initial observation of an excess incidence of leukaemia in young people in Seascale.

10. We note that the risk of leukaemia in employees' offspring for some other industries in West Cumbria, namely iron and steel, chemicals and farming, is similar to that for employment at Sellafield generally. This study was not set up to investigate other industrial occupations in detail. The possible existence of health effects in offspring of workers in occupations other than those at Sellafield might be the subject of other investigations but they lie outside the scope of our own enquiries. Taken altogether, these results suggest to us that employment at Sellafield itself may not be such an important factor as certain specific occupations within Sellafield which are (in this study) characterised by a relatively high external radiation dose.

11. The important conclusions of this study are unavoidably based on very small numbers and as these are novel observations which have not been recorded previously, we are cautious in our interpretation. Further evidence from other studies currently underway and planned will enable us to make a firmer assessment of the implications of these results.

Possible causes

12. The case control study has demonstrated a statistical association between recorded external radiation dose and childhood leukaemia incidence but this type of study cannot provide evidence of causal relationship. Workers with relatively high recorded external exposures may also be subject to other factors. These include possible occupational internal radiation exposure (rather than external radiation exposure) which might involve radioactivity being concentrated in body fluids or tissues and might lead to a pre-conception or post-conception effect on their offspring; the possibility of contaminated materials being carried off the site leading to unexpected exposure of workers and their families; or other factors, including chemical exposure or contamination. The possibility that one of these factors or a combination of these factors could be important, needs to be investigated. In particular, the full occupational history of the group characterised by high recorded external exposure needs to be studied in detail.

13. The results from this study place greater emphasis on occupational rather than environmental factors. This is consistent with the view, as stated in our first report[6], that "the increased doses [to the local population from the discharges from the Sellafield site] are still well below those that would readily explain the observed cases of leukaemia in Seascale using conventional risk estimates". However, we cannot exclude environmental radiation as a possible contributory factor because causal mechanisms have not yet been identified.

14. We have already postulated in our second and third reports that the excess of childhood leukaemia observed around the nuclear sites that we have investigated, could be partly related to parental occupation at those nuclear installations. We discussed possible mechanisms by which parental occupational exposure could be implicated. This study supports the case for further investigation of factors related to occupation.

Recommendations to Government

15. In our second and third reports, we have already recommended that case control studies around Dounreay and Aldermaston and Burghfield should be set up to investigate the importance of parental occupations and other relevant factors which might be associated with the increased incidence of childhood leukaemia [and other cancers] in those areas.

> Recommendation 1. We now recommend that these case control studies, which are already underway, should be completed as soon as possible, subject to the maintenance of a high scientific standard.

16. In our second and third reports, we specifically recommended that epidemiological studies should be set up to consider any possible health effects in the offspring of parents occupationally exposed to radiation. The results of the current study strengthen the basis for those recommendations.

> Recommendation 2. We therefore recommend that these studies should be given high priority. A study involving direct approaches to workers to obtain information on their children's health and also a study linking records of all radiation workers to national records of childhood cancer and leukaemia would be complementary and we recommend that both should be undertaken.

17. We recognise that there are a number of areas of research where studies are necessary to confirm or refute these findings and further biological research is required to investigate possible causative mechanisms. However, we do not wish to see multiple independent studies which would cause undue inconvenience to the small numbers of individuals and families concerned.

> Recommendation 3. We, therefore, recommend that there needs to be some form of coordination of research, to ensure the best possible use of resources and to avoid unnecessary duplication of effort. This committee would wish to be consulted in any such research coordination.

18. In the longer term, as requested, we will reconsider the results from this study once the results of the various studies that we have recommended previously [4],[5] become available.

Interim action

19. At the request of Government, at the end of last year, we began a review of the situation around Sellafield.[7] This includes both current epidemiological evidence and information on discharge and environmental data. We propose to investigate any unexpected potential routes of exposure to radiation including routes via workers. We understand that initiatives have been taken by both the Health and Safety Executive and BNFL in collaboration with the MRC Environmental Epidemiology Unit, to investigate the situation on the Sellafield site in more detail and, in addition, relevant experimental studies are being done by NRPB and others. We would wish to be kept informed about progress of these investigations as they relate to our own review.

20. We wish to reiterate that the result of the Cumbria case control study documents an association between occupational external radiation exposure of parents and the incidence of leukaemia in their offspring. However, these findings require confirmation from other studies currently in progress. Furthermore, the causal mechanisms which might lead to this observation are not known. Thus, we are unable, at present, to make specific recommendations to reduce possible risks. We strongly support the actions that have been undertaken to continue to reduce occupational exposures, particularly to those likely to have children, and to counsel workers on the possible risks.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Bathing Facilities)

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many baths or showers there are; and how often each prisoner has use of a bath or shower in Leeds, Wandsworth, Birmingham and Wormwood Scrubs prisons, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: The information is as follows:

	Showers	Baths
Leeds	42	5
Wandsworth	69	6
Birmingham	69	9
Wormwood Scrubs	177	2

Prisoners have a minimum of one shower/bath each week, and are allowed more in certain circumstances (eg. following physical exercise or work).

Prison Statistics

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are currently being held in Leeds, Wandsworth, Birmingham and Wormwood Scrubs prisons, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: On Friday 30 March 1990 the number of prisoners being held in Leeds, Wandsworth, Birmingham and Wormwood Scrubs prisons was as follows:

Establishment	Population
Leeds	1,243
Wandsworth	1,501
Birmingham	981
Wormwood Scrubs	923

Electronic Tagging

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give a summary of the results of the recent electronic tagging experiment.

Mr. John Patten: The trials of electronic monitoring in three areas have yet to be fully evaluated, but it is already clear that the technology works and is extremely effective in detecting any violations of bail conditions, however slight.

We expect to make available later this year an evaluation of the outcome of these trials.

Prisoners' Pay

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he has taken following the outcome of the case of Leach v. Home Secretary on deductions from prisoners' pay; what is his estimate of the total amount of underpayment; what plans he has to make retrospective adjustments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There has been no such judgment. On 22 February 1990 an instruction was sent to governors to stop taking automatic weekly contributions of 3p from prisoners' pay to their general purposes fund. Any such contributions taken after that date will be refunded from the general purpose fund.

Entry Certificates

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many entry certificates for visitors from Gambia to the United Kingdom have been (a) granted and (b) refused for the latest period of 12 months for which figures are reasonably available.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information available covers the total number of applications in Gambia in 1989 for entry clearance to the United Kingdom by visitors, students, passengers in transit, working holidaymakers, returning residents and persons for employment or self-employment for a period of six months or less; 1,030 such applications were granted initially or on appeal, and 40 were refused initially.

Trespass

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many responses he has received to the consultation on section 39 of the Public Order Act 1986; if it is his intention to publish those responses in due course; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are giving careful consideration to the 36 responses received. We have no plans to publish them. It is too early to say when we shall have concluded our evaluation of section 39.

Diminished Responsibility

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in how many cases involving killing or rape, pleas of diminished responsibility have been accepted by the courts in the past 10 years.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not available centrally on the number of offences of rape where a plea of diminished responsibility was accepted by the court. Data for 1979 to 1988 on the number of convictions for manslaughter where a plea of diminished responsibility was accepted by the court are given in the table.

Data for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

Pentonville Prison (Unconvicted Prisoners)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of holding a remand prisoner in Pentonville prison for one year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: In 1988-89 (the latest information available) the average cost per annum of holding a prisoner in Pentonville was £15,132. Information on remand prisoners is not held separately.

Colombia (Mercenaries)

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Derbyshire, North-East of 21 March, Official Report, column 608, whether he holds any information on organisations involved in the supply of mercenary services to groups in Colombia; and whether he has taken action to prevent British mercenaries from going to Colombia.

Mr. John Patten: While I am aware of suggestions that at least one British citizen has renewed an association with drug traffickers in Colombia, I am not aware of information on which criminal proceedings in this country might be founded. We are in touch with the Colombian authorities and have reaffirmed our readiness to co-operate with them in their investigations.

Police Housing Allowance

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by what method the police arbitration tribunal recommended that rent allowance should be updated in the 29 police forces in England and Wales where rent allowances were last reviewed in 1988; and how this method differed from the existing method of notional rental values.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is not clear whether the tribunal ever addressed the question of forces in England and Wales which were due for an uprating and the recommendation from the Police Negotiating Board is apparently defective on this point. My right hon. and learned Friend is prepared, however, to accept that both bodies probably intended to endorse updating by an index partly based on the Building Societies Association's index of house prices and partly taken from the housing costs element of the index of retail prices. Rates increases were to be added.

Under the existing system force maximum limits of rent allowance are based on the district valuer's assessment of what a typical police house in the force area would fetch if let on the open market, plus rates.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost (a) of uprating rent allowance in the 29 police forces whose rent allowance was last reviewed in 1988 by the agreed index recommended by the police arbitration tribunal and (b) by the movement in the retail prices index since their force maximum limit was last reviewed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Only the broadest estimates are possible because the situation is a hypothetical one with wide regional variations. On the assumption, however, that the index agreed by the Police Negotiating Board would produce increases of the same order as those produced by the rent allowance reviews held in 1989, the likely cost would be at least £55 million in England and Wales. On the basis that the rise in the retail prices index might be 13·7 per cent. indexation on that basis is estimated to be likely to cost about £26·4 million a year in England and Wales.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of uprating police force housing allowance by employing a formula consisting of the movement in the housing costs element of the retail prices index and the movement in housing costs in an area as expressed in the building societies index for each of the next two years; and by how much less he estimates the allowance will be uprated by relating it only to the total movement in the retail prices index.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: None. There is no basis on which to make a realistic comparison of the likely performance of these indices over the next two years.

Prisoners (Mental Health)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) mentally ill and (b) mentally handicapped persons are in prison in England and Wales and in which prisons.

Mr. Mellor: On 30 September 1989, the latest date for which information is available, 329 prisoners in England and Wales were considered by medical officers to meet the criteria for detention in hospital, as set out in the Mental Health Act 1983; 264 of these prisoners were considered to be mentally ill, within the meaning of the Act. The term "mentally handicapped" is not one of the four specific categories of mental disorder defined in part 1 of the Act.

Immigration

Mr. Wells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of new immigrants admitted for settlement and the total immigration to and emigration from the United Kingdom, giving a net total, for each of the years 1978 to 1989, for Pakistan, India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Hong Kong, Kenya, Tanzania, Uganda, Jamaica, Guyana, Barbados and Trinidad.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Estimates of total migration to and from the United Kingdom, including British citizens and all people intending to reside in, or out of, the country for a year or more, are published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in "International Migration 1988", a copy of which is in the Library.

These estimates are on a different basis from the figures of persons accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom. The total number of acceptances for the nationalities specified in the years 1978-89 are given in the following table. Further details are published in the annual Home Office volume "Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom" (most recently for 1988, Cm 726).

[1] Includes those accepted after initial admission to the United Kingdom for a limited period, as well as those accepted on arrival.

Mr. Soames: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has any proposals to improve the operations of the immigration service at Heathrow;

(2) what steps he has taken to expedite immigration procedures for tourists at Heathrow and Gatwick.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The operations of the immigration service at Heathrow and Gatwick are kept under regular review and available resources allocated to meet peak demands. Selective embarkation checks were introduced in April 1987 and a streamlined arrival channel for British and other EC passengers was introduced in March 1989. Both these measures have expedited the movement of passengers through the immigration control at Heathrow, Gatwick and elsewhere. I shall continue to monitor the situation closely.

Drugs

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information is available on the number and names of police forces which (a) already routinely refer drug possession offenders to independent drugs advice agencies and (b) have plans to do so.

Mr. Mellor: The Home Office is supporting an arrest referral pilot project which aims to put drug misusers arrested at Southwark police station in touch with the local community drug team whether or not they are also charged with a criminal offence. We do not collect information centrally on arrest referral schemes, but a recent survey by the Institute for the Study of Drug Dependence found that seven police forces have instituted similar arrangements and many more are planning to do so.

We greatly welcome schemes on the lines of the Southwark one, which were the subject of a specific recommendation in the "AIDS and Drug Misuse Part 2" report of the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs.

Official Information (Disclosure)

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish a complete list of the statutory provisions bearing upon the disclosure of official information, other than the Official Secrets Act, in order to update the list of provisions published in appendix V of the Franks report (Cmnd. 5104);

(2) if he will publish a list of the clauses containing provisions bearing upon the disclosure of official information which appear in Government Bills published to date during the current parliamentary Session.

WALES

A5 (Accidents)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many accidents were reported during the period January 1988 to December 1989 on the stretch of the A5 which passes through Clwyd.

Mr. Roberts: There were 150 personal injury accidents reported during the period January 1988 to December 1989 on the stretch of the A5 which passes through Clwyd. Figures for 1989 are provisional.

Consultancies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will state (a) the target figure for consultancies per month in Wales under the Government's consultancy initiatives and (b) the spending on consultancy initiatives in Wales for (i) 1988-89 outturn, (ii) 1989-90 estimated outturn, (iii) 1990-91 plans, (iv) 1991-92 plans and (v) 1992-93 plans.

Mr. Peter Walker: Formal targets are not set on a regional basis, but take-up of the consultancy initiatives in Wales has consistently been above the level that would be expected from the proportion of eligible firms in Wales. Expenditure on completed consultancies in 1988-89 was £343,000; in 1989-90 the latest figures available (to January) show expenditure at £1,622,000. (A regional analysis for total expenditure on consultancy initiatives, to include evaluation, administration and promotions is not available). It is not possible to provide a regional breakdown of provision for future years as the scheme is demand-led.

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the number of workplaces providing nursery care and the number of employees using such facilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Information on which to base reliable estimates is not available centrally. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Welsh Craft Initiative

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of the Welsh craft initiative.

Mr. Peter Walker: The craft initiative was launched in early 1988. Crafts business advisers have been appointed and have contacted more than 1,000 Welsh businesses to tell them when help is available. The "Data Crefft" information system for buyers and producers of crafts in Wales is in place and there have been craft initiative stands at all Welsh fairs. Showcases for Welsh craft products have also been set up at the national folk museum (St. Fagans), at the David Morgan department store in Cardiff and at the Wales Centre in Piccadilly, London. There has also been a strong Welsh presence at major trade fairs outside the Principality. A series of marketing and publicity weekends for craftspeople is in progress. An evaluation of the campaign's impact will be carried out once the final year, which starts on 1 April 1990, is complete. I am delighted at the progress that has been made in the improvement of both marketing and quality control.

Radioactive Dust

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what assessment he has made of the danger to Towyn residents of contamination by radioactive dust left behind by the floodwater; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what proposals he has to clean up radioactive dust left behind by floodwater in Towyn earlier this year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Government scientists have visited Towyn and have measured external gamma dose rates, and the radioactivity in the sediment left by the floodwater. The gamma dose rates were indistinguishable from those expected due to natural radiation. The doses of radioactivity which could result from the radioactivity in the sediment were within the normal variations in the natural background exposure to the United Kingdom population.

The levels of radioactivity in the sediment are such that no special precautions are required for clean-up of the area or disposal of the sediment.

The impact of the radioactivity in the sediment on livestock is still being assessed.

School Meals

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table showing the expenditure on school meals for each year from 1978-79 to the latest date available, in current and constant prices.

Mr. Roberts: Local authority current expenditure on school catering for each year since 1979-80 is given in the table. Information for 1978-79 is not available. Catering includes both school meals and milk. The school meals element is not available separately.

Conwy Tunnels

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the original estimated cost of the work on the Conwy tunnels; and what is the current estimate of the total cost.

Mr. Roberts: In 1986 when the formal decision to proceed was made and the main contract let, the estimated full cost of the scheme was £158·4 million of which the main contract comprised £102 million. The balance of £56·4 million comprised land, advance works, design and supervision costs.

The latest estimate of the total cost of the scheme is £170·8 million, as set out in the Welsh Office commentary on public expenditure in Wales 1990-91 to 1992-93, published in March.

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what date work commenced on the Conwy tunnels; what was to be the original date of completion; and what is now the estimated date of completion.

Mr. Roberts: Work commenced on Conwy crossing on 3 November 1986 and the projected date for completion at the time was January 1991. However, the contract date for completion is currently August 1991.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on faults reported in the cooling circuits of British nuclear submarines and their effect on the operation of the nuclear-powered submarine fleet.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers that I gave him on 5 and 12 February, Official Report, columns 460 and 117 respectively. The programme of inspections of our nuclear-powered submarines is progressing.

Meteorological Office

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress towards establishing the Meteorological Office as an executive agency.

Mr. Tom King: I am pleased to announce that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement today visited the Meteorological Office in Bracknell to mark its launch as the first executive agency in the Ministry of Defence.

The Meteorological Office is a familiar part of our national life. As the United Kingdom's national weather service, it also plays a leading role in the international structure on which modern weather forecasting depends. It has established, over its 135-year history, an unrivalled reputation in its field. Its staff include some of the world's foremost experts in climatic prediction and research. Utilising these resources, one of the office's key aims will be to provide timely and authoritative advice on climatic change to Ministers nationally and internationally through the auspices of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climatic Change.

Over the next five years I will be setting the agency a range of targets to ensure that it delivers progressive improvements in the quality and efficiency of the weather-related services it provides to defence, civil aviation, commercial customers and the general public. The initial targets I have set for the Meteorological Office during the period 1990-95 are:

to devise and implement a system of performance measurement in each of the major activity areas based on output quantity, quality and timeliness and on input costs, to enable publication by 31 March 1991 of targets which require improvements to efficiency that will make a significant contribution to the efficiency targets of the Ministry of Defence as a whole;

to improve the efficiency of commercial services, measured as the ratio between revenue earned and the cost of provision of such services;

to reduce by 15 per cent. the standard-error of 48-hour forecasts of mid-atmosphere pressure fields over the North Atlantic and North West Europe;

to achieve measurable improvement in the quality of public warnings and services to MOD and the CAA, within available resources; to achieve measurable improvement in the productivity of operational support services through the use of new technology, automation and the integration of functions; to reduce net operating costs in real terms by 1 per cent. in 1990-91 and to continue to achieve this performance with the aim of doubling it by the end of the period; to achieve a 6 per cent. per annum cumulative increase in the uptake of meteorological services as measured by revenue generated from commercial services offered to the public, commerce and industry, exclusive of services to the CAA; and to achieve a 10 per cent. per annum cumulative increase in the contribution of commercial service revenue to offsetting core costs.

NATO Nuclear Planning Group

Mr. Caborn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters he expects to discuss at the next NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend will discuss a wide range of current nuclear issues with his NPG colleagues.

German Unification

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will next be meeting his NATO counterparts to discuss the defence and security implications of a united Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend will next be meeting his NATO counterparts at the nuclear planning group meeting in Canada on 9-10 May.

Low Flying

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what monitoring arrangements exist to assess the frequency of low-level aircraft training flights in those areas of the country where these exercises frequently occur.

Mr. Neubert: Current records are maintained of usage of the United Kingdom low flying system and these may be supplemented by information from covert surveys of low-flying activity in particular areas, including those where exercises frequently occur, which are carried out by the Royal Air Force police.

Exhibition (Upper Waiting Hall)

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department has considered an application for an exhibition relating to the Royal Navy to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I understand that under procedures agreed by the Services Committee arrangements have been made with the authorities of the House for an exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 25 June to 29 June.

RAF Bentwaters

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) on what date he was first made aware of the purpose of the proposed flight simulator facility at RAF Bentwaters;

(2) what aircraft type would be supported by the proposed flight simulator building at RAF Bentwaters;

(3) what is the cost of the proposed flight simulator building at RAF Bentwaters;

(4) what is the scheduled date for the start of construction of the proposed flight simulator building at RAF Bentwaters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answers that I gave him on 7 March 1990 at columns 705-6. Her Majesty's Government have as yet taken no decision regarding approval for the additions and alterations to the flight simulator facility at RAF Bentwaters for which United States congressional funding approval has been granted. It is not for me to comment on the detail of United States internal planning proposals.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leyton of 6 February 1989 Official Report, columns 515-16, if he will seek information from the United States authorities with respect to their intentions regarding construction projects at RAF Bentwaters and as to when the process of seeking funding approval was first set in hand; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to my answers to the hon. Member on 6 February 1989 (columns 515-16), and 7 March 1990 (columns 706-7) and to the hon. Member for Carlisle (Mr. Martlew) on 6 February 1990 (columns 603-4).

F-15E Aircraft

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects any decision to be made on deployment of F-15E aircraft to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 6 February 1990 at column 604.

Radar

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the planned new radar to be constructed at Brawdy; what will be the contribution to costs paid by the United Kingdom; and for how long negotiations have been under way with the United States Government on the project.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on Friday 30 March at columns 328-29. The United Kingdom share of the trial including our share of the running costs will amount to some £15·5 million.

UK-US Defence Agreements

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what bilateral defence agreements he (a) has signed and (b) expects to sign with the Government of the United States in 1990.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have a variety of bilateral agreements under negotiation, and likely to be signed this year, dealing with host nation support, equipment, operations, and other matters. It is not our practice to disclose details of such agreements in advance of their conclusion, and some of them will be classified when finalised.

No major agreements have been signed this year but we expect a memorandum of understanding to be signed shortly to cover a joint trial in the United Kingdom of a United States "over-the-horizon" radar.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farms

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the trend in the number of farms on which it is the farmer's sole occupation to run the farm; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Information is not available in the precise form requested. The following table gives the number of whole-time farmers, partners and directors in England over the last 10 years as collected at the June agricultural census:

Year (at June)	Number of whole-time farmers, partners and directors
1980	136,565
1981	134,428
1982	133,579
1983	132,922
1984	131,682
1985	129,830
1986	128,473
1987	126,671
1988	124,518
1989	122,351

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to help young entrants into farming.

Mr. Curry: As the Minister said in his reply of 8 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Elmet (Mr. Batiste), Official Report, column 839, this Department gives grants to young farmers under the farm and conservation grant regulations at rates 25 per cent. higher than for other farmers.

We had also hoped to introduce a scheme to lend milk quota to new entrants. However, the Commission has ruled that there is no basis in Community law for such a scheme and has declined to propose the necessary changes at this stage. In view of strong objections to a scheme based on outright grant of quota, the Government have decided not to proceed with such a scheme.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many people are employed for each one hundred hectares on farms of (a) under 200 hectares, (b) between 200 and 1,000 hectares and (c) over 1,000 hectares.

Mr. Curry: The information for England is given in the table, and is taken from the June 1989 agricultural census. Persons employed here cover all categories of the work force (full-time or part-time) including farmers, partners, directors, managers, family and hired workers, and seasonal or casual employees.

Total area of holding	Persons employed per 100 hectares
Under 200 ha	6·3
200 and under 1,000 ha	2·2
1,000 ha and over	1·2

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department has any plans to introduce definitions of small, medium and large farms.

Mr. Curry: We have no plans to introduce such definitions, which would have limited relevance given the variations in types of farms and in farming conditions.

Extensification

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Community proposals for extensification.

Mr. Curry: We shall shortly be announcing decisions on pilot schemes for extensification of beef and sheep following consultations with interested organisations and with the Commission. We are also intending to issue a consultation document outlining a possible extensification scheme under which grant aid would be available to farmers wishing to convert from conventional to organic production.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the quantities of salmonellas found in the stocks of intact grade A eggs.

Mr. Maclean: Stocks of intact grade A eggs are not required to be examined for the presence of salmonellas and no information is therefore available. However, I also refer my hon. Friend to the reply given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health on 9 March, Official Report, column 895.

Hydatid Disease

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to eradicate hydatid disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Ministry, in conjunction with the Welsh Office Agriculture Department, has completed a six-year pilot project in Powys for this disease, where the problem is greatest. The objective of the project was to determine the feasibility of controlling or eradicating the disease through the regular dosing of dogs with a de-worming drug. This has resulted in a significant reduction of hydatid infestation in the area. We have no plans to introduce a national eradication policy for this disease.

NORTHERN IRELAND

St. Leonards Home

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he is taking concerning the closure of St. Leonards home, Warrenpoint, County Down.

Mr. Needham: This is primarily a matter for the Southern health and social services board which is currently exploring, with housing associations and voluntary groups, the possibilities of providing more suitable accommodation. Decisions on the future of the home will be taken only on completion of this investigation and will fully involve the existing residents.

Downpatrick Hospital

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what actions have been taken about the time scale and construction of a new hospital in Downpatrick on the site of the Downshire hospital site.

Mr. Needham: It is for the Eastern health and social services board to bring forward proposals. The Department of Health and Social Services will then consider the priority of any agreed scheme. The board is at present evaluating a report on the options.

Education Redundancies

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many redundancies are estimated as likely to occur among (a) lecturers and (b) ancillary staff in each education and library board area in Northern Ireland arising from new funding arrangements for further education colleges.

Dr. Mawhinney: Colleges of further education are currently finalising their business plans and these should identify the implications of the new funding arrangements for the staffing of the colleges. It is not yet possible to estimate how many redundancies, if any, are likely to arise as a result of these arrangements.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the pupil-teacher ratio for (a) primary and (b) post primary schools in Northern Ireland at the present time;

(2) what will be the pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary and (b) post primary schools for the academic year 1990-91 in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: The latest available information on pupil-teacher ratios for 1989 is as follows:

	Pupil-teacher ratios
Primary	23·2
Post-primary	14·9

Information about pupil-teacher ratios in 1990-91 is not available.

Discretionary Teaching Posts

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what was the total number of applications for discretionary teaching posts received for the 1990-91 academic year by area boards and DENI;

(2) what is the total number of discretionary teaching posts allocated by (a) area boards and (b) DENI for the 1990-91 academic year to each sector of education in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information in respect of full-time posts is as follows:

	Primary		Secondary
	Requested	Allocated	Requested	Allocated
Education and library boards	[1]534	[1]431	[2]n/a	170
DENI	701	631	486	268

Notes:

[1] Information in the form requested is available in respect of four boards only since the other board—the South-Eastern education and library board—has adopted a different procedure for the allocation of teaching posts.

[2] The total number of applications to boards for discretionary posts is not available.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will publish details of the numbers of discretionary teaching posts allocated to each sector of education in Northern Ireland in each of the last three years by area board.

Dr. Mawhinney: The numbers are as follows:

Board	1987-88 Pri	Sec	1988-89 Pri	Sec	1989-90 Pri	Sec
Belfast	307	93	318	113	320	116
Western	212	46	223	67	250	68
North-Eastern	222	69	226	92	248	115
South-Eastern	239	56	251	66	n/a	n/a
Southern	185	60	190	83	181	94

Grammar Schools

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what protection exists for pupils deemed suitable for an academic grammar school course when the grammar school of the parents' choice declines to enrol the child.

Dr. Mawhinney: Under the arrangements for transfer from primary to secondary education pupils are not deemed suitable or unsuitable for any type of school. All schools are required to admit pupils up to an approved admissions number and within an overall enrolment number. If a school is oversubscribed it must apply its admissions criteria to select which pupils should be admitted. If the parents of a child who has been refused a place in the school of their choice think the school has not applied its admissions criteria properly they can appeal to an independent statutory appeals tribunal.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the Department of Education for Northern Ireland can ensure that a transferring pupil from primary school deemed suitable for a grammar school course of study in Northern Ireland will have a higher priority for a grammar school place than a fee-paying preparatory pupil with lower academic potential at such a grammar school.

Dr. Mawhinney: No. The admission of any pupil to a grammar school this year is a matter for the school's board of governors acting within its admissions criteria. The Department of Education (NI) has, however, advised school authorities that if academic ability is a criterion it would be inappropriate for pupils from the preparatory departments of grammar schools to be admitted to secondary departments of grammar schools in preference to other applicants who are judged to have greater academic ability.

Robberies

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what information he has been given by Ministers from the Irish Republic concerning the number of bank, post office, wages and comparable robberies carried out in the Irish Republic since the beginning of 1989; which have been deemed attributable to the Provisional Irish Republican Army or other paramilitary groups; and what amounts of moneys were involved in those robberies;

(2) whether he has had discussions with Ministers from the Irish Republic on the extent of funding obtained by the Provisional Irish Republican Army or other paramilitary groups from bank, post office, wages and comparable robberies in the Irish Republic.

Mr. Cope: There have been several exchanges through the Anglo-Irish Conference and secretariat about the funding of terrorist organisations. It would not be appropriate to divulge the details.

Extradition

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will place a copy of the Irish Republic's Supreme Court judgment in the Finucane and Clarke extradition case in the Library.

Mr. Cope: I have already done so.

Prisoners (Mental Health)

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) mentally ill and (b) mentally handicapped persons are in prisons in Northern Ireland and in which prisons.

Mr. Cope: On 29 March 1990 there were 12 prisoners undergoing psychiatric treatment or observation as in-patients in prison hospitals in Northern Ireland. Of these, seven were in Her Majesty's prison, Maghaberry, four in Her Majesty's prison, Belfast, and one in Her Majesty's YOC, Hydebank. None is described as mentally handicapped. Other prisoners may be referred to a consultant forensic psychiatrist from time to time as appropriate.

Sexual Harassment

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his Department's policy on sexual harassment at work; whether guidance on reporting complaints has been issued to all staff; how many complaints have been reported in the past five years; and what disciplinary action has been taken.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 5 March 1990]: Both the Northern Ireland civil service and the home civil service regard sexual harassment at work by their employees as a disciplinary offence.

Guidance on reporting complaints was issued to Northern Ireland civil servants on 12 October 1988. In the past five years, 13 cases have been recorded by its equal opportunities unit, two of which are still under consideration and five have resulted in disciplinary action being taken.

With regard to the home civil service part of the Northern Ireland Office, revised guidance on reporting complaints is shortly to be issued to staff. There is no record of any complaints of sexual harassment having been reported to the equal opportunities unit in the past five years.

Public Relations

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure by his Department on press and public relations in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 12 March 1990]: The information is as follows:

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the figures for the spending by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 12 March 1990]: The information is not available in the form requested except at disproportionate cost; however the figures for the spending on all advertising and other promotional material in Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office for the years requested is as follows:

1979-80	468,972
1980-81	487,393
1981-82	613,464
1982-83	1,550,896

Management Consultants

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the total fees paid out by his Department to management consultants in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 12 March 1990]: The information for 1979-80 to 1983-84 throughout Northern Ireland Departments, and the Northern Ireland Office is available only at disproportionate cost. Information for the years 1984-85 to date and the budget for 1990-91 is as follows:

1984-85	2,352,311
1985-86	2,427,200
1986-87	2,742,192

1990-91	[2]3,266,600

[2] Budget.

Internal Audit

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the subject matter of the internal audit report which was brought to the attention of a Minister in his Department in 1989.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The relevant part of the report dealt with the administration of the sheep annual premium scheme and was referred to as background information in proposals for improving controls.

Civil Servants

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show the number of civil servants employed in each Department of Health and Social Services office by district council area in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: The table gives the number of staff in post at February 1990, employed by the Department of Health and Social Services, by district council areas.

Fisheries Research

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers of staff and salary scales and the total salaries projected for the full complement of scientific staff for the research vessel Lough Foyle in each of the present and the next two financial years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The information is as follows:

Grade	Average salary costs (1990-91 prices) £k	Staff in post 1989-90	Predicted staff in post 1990-91	Predicted staff in post 1991-92

Total salary costs		[1]£9,570	£223,000	£237,000

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 7 March, Official Report, column 661, he will publish a table showing (a) the period of each charter of the vessel Lough Foyle since it came into Government ownership, (b) the lessee for each of those charters, (c) the average costs for each day and each charter, (d) the sum paid per day for each of those charters, and (e) the sum paid for each charter.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: No.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 6 March, Official Report, column 571, he will publish a table to show (a) the projected total cost of the current year, (b) the projected total cost for each of the next three years or financial years and (c) the projected cost of (i) crew salaries, (ii) scientific staff salaries, (iii) shore-based staff, (iv) depreciation and replacement costs of the vessel, and (v) other costs associated with the vessel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The information is as follows:

(a) Estimated running costs of the DANI research vessel for 1989-90		504,600

(b) Projected running costs for the DANI research vessel:	1990-91	617,900
	1991-92	662,500
	1992-93	680,100

(c) Projected salary costs for next three financial years:

(i) Crew salaries	1990-91	277,000
	1991-92	299,000
	1992-93	323,000
(ii) Scientific staff salaries (shore-based and sea-going staff)	1990-91	652,000
	1991-92	691,000
	1992-93	733,000

(iii) See (ii) above

(iv) Depreciation is estimated at 6 per cent. per annum. Replacement of the vessel has not yet been considered.

(v) None.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment has been undertaken of the total job loss to the Coleraine area, including spouses employment, staff employed in spouses' business full-time and part-time, as a consequence of moving the fisheries research laboratory to Belfast; and whether any assessment of the cost to state benefits has been taken into account as part of a cost benefit analysis.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: None.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what computer links exist between (a) the Coleraine fisheries laboratory and its Belfast headquarters and (b) the headquarters and the freshwater biological unit at Antrim.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The answer is:

- (a) A PDP 11/73 computer at Coleraine is linked to a VAX 6320 computer at Belfast via a 1200 baud dedicated British Telecom line.
- (b) A computer terminal at Antrim is linked to a VAX 6320 computer at Belfast via a 1200 baud dedicated British Telecom line.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the cost of the new building work required in Belfast to provide accommodation for (a) the scientific staff for the research vessel Lough Foyle, (b) the transferred fisheries research laboratory staff and (c) the transferred freshwater biological unit staff; and what is the size of the building required to house them.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Staff from the research vessel Lough Foyle, the fisheries research laboratory and the freshwater biological investigation unit will be accommodated in the new building of 17,175 sq ft at the Department's agriculture and food science centre, Newforge lane, Belfast, at an estimated cost of £1·4 million excluding VAT but including 6 per cent. contingencies.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the market value of (a) the fisheries laboratory building at Coleraine and (b) the building occupied by the freshwater biological unit at Antrim.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The estimated market values of the fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine and the freshwater biological investigation unit at Antrim are £100,000 and £225,000 respectively. The latter accommodation will be fully utilised by Greenmount agricultural college when the accommodation becomes available.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the size of the building at Antrim presently occupied by the freshwater biological unit; and whether it is occupied to capacity.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The freshwater biological investigation unit building at Antrim is some 5,128 sq ft and is fully utilised by DANI staff at the freshwater biological investigation unit.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the size of the fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine; and whether it is occupied to capacity.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine is approximately 9,400 sq ft and is fully utilised.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research into salmon in the Foyle system has been carried out by the fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine in each of the last five years; and how much time and money was expended on such research in each of those years.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: None.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

USSR (Emigrants)

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has made any representations to the Government of the USSR regarding emigrants from that country to the state of Israel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Hostages (Middle East)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about British efforts to free the hostages held in the middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister of 30 January to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Brown).

Zimbabwe

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to meet his Zimbabwean counterpart.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no such plans.

Horn of Africa

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the situation in the Horn of Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: The escalation of fighting in northern Ethiopia has set back both the relief operations and the peace talks. We welcome the recent agreement to allow relief supplies across the lines from the south. The first food convoys are now entering Tigray by this route. Peace talks between the Government and TPLF have resumed in Rome. We are urging the resumption of talks between the Government and the EPLF. In Somalia, the Government have announced political and economic reforms, but the rebels refuse to negotiate.

Union of Soviet Socialist Republics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley, 19 February, Official Report, column 559, what are the respective numbers of representatives currently allowed residence in each country.

Mr. Waldegrave: The present agreed overall limit for officials and certain other categories of representative in each country is 205.

Fiji

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will obtain copies of the latest proposals for a new constitution for Fiji and make them available to hon. Members.

Mr. Sainsbury: We are seeking copies of the latest proposals which were discussed at the recent Great Council of Chiefs meeting. I shall make arrangements for copies to be placed in the Library of the House.

India

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his statement of 22 March, Official Report, column 1338, how many of the (a) 1,839 Indian students admitted to the United Kingdom in 1988-89 and (b) 130 Indian students, awarded special Foreign Office scholarships for this financial year, are of Sikh origin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Her Majesty's Government-funded scholarships are awarded to Indian students regardless of religion or race, and no record is maintained of their religious or ethnic background.

Iran

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what protests he has conveyed through diplomatic channels to the Government of the Islamic Republic of Iran regarding the broadcast on Tehran radio on 6 March of a speech by the President of the Supreme Court of Iran regarding the alleged duty of Muslims to murder Mr. Salman Rushdie; and whether he will make it clear to the Iranian authorities that normal relations between the United Kingdom and the Islamic Republic will be impossible so long as prominent Iranian figures continue to repeat these threats.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made it clear to Iran on many occasions that the threat to the life of Mr. Rushdie must be lifted. We can have normal relations with Iran only if she fulfils her international obligations, in particular by removing the use or threat of violence against citizens of other countries.

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will raise at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights the speech broadcast on 6 March by the President of the Supreme Court of Iran in which the President claimed that the Islamic Republic was implementing sentences such as stoning to death for adultery; and whether he will request that such punishments be investigated by the commission.

Mr. Waldegrave: The United Kingdom has played an active role in discussions on Iran in the United Nations Commission on Human Rights. We hope that when the UN special representative pays his second visit to Iran he will be given the opportunity to investigate thoroughly all aspects of human rights there by the Iranian authorities. We shall pay close attention to his findings.

Iraq

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will instruct his Department to convey to the official representatives of the Arab League in London the views of Her Majesty's Government on the resolution of the Arab League Council on 26 March supporting Iraq and criticising Her Majesty's Government regarding the killing of Mr. Farzad Bazoft; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Arab League in Tunis was fully briefed on our reaction to the Iraqi execution of Farzad Bazoft. We see nothing to be gained from pursuing this matter further.

Hong Kong

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the 25,000 citizenships offered to Hong Kong people by the Government of Singapore have been taken up, at the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Maude: We understand that, at the end of February, 8,605 Hong Kong people had been granted approval in principle under the Singaporean Government's scheme for permanent resident status in Singapore (citizenship is not offered under the scheme). Of those granted approval, 588 are now settled in Singapore, of whom 494 had already been living there when the scheme was introduced.

EC Directives

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many European Community directives are the subject of legal action by the Commission against the United Kingdom; when each directive, respectively, entered into force; and what is the stated reason in each case for action taken by the Commission.

Mr. Maude: There are currently three cases brought by the Commission before the European Court of Justice involving alleged failure of the United Kingdom to implement EC directives correctly. The directives are:

—the Equal Treatment Directive (76/207), due for implementation on 12 August 1978;

—the Drinking Water Directive (80/778), due for implementation on 18 July 1982;

—the Bathing Water Directive (76/160), due for implementation on 31 December 1977.

EC Regulations

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many regulations have been issued by the European Commission since the United Kingdom joined the European Communities; and how many of these regulations Her Majesty's Government have not accepted.

Mr. Maude: Since the United Kingdom's accession to the EC a total of 21,806 regulations have been adopted, of which 4,946 are still in force. (Many regulations are short-lived, for example, in the agriculture sector). Regulations are directly applicable in all member states.

EC Court of Auditors

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the Court of Auditors of the European Communities.

Mr. Maude: The role of the Court of Auditors of the European Communities is set out in detail in article 206a of the treaty establishing the European Economic Community. The latest Court of Auditors report on the Community budget was published in the Official Journal (C312) on 12 December 1989 and was placed in the Library of the House.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish in the Official Report a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Maude: The Foreign Affairs Council meets today. Ministers are expected to consider proposals from the Commission on European Community policy on Japanese car imports, and to discuss central Europe. The Commission will report on its explanatory talks with senior officials from the EFTA countries concerning a possible comprehensive EC/EFTA agreement to create an enhanced free trade area. Ministers will discuss preparations for the inter-governmental conference, and the implications of rising third country immigration into the Community. The already agreed EC/Argentina trade and economic co-operation agreement is expected to be signed in the margins of the Foreign Affairs Council, with Foreign Minister Cavallo signing for Argentina.

The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 23 April for a further discussion of economic and monetary union and to prepare for the spring IMF/IBRD meetings. Ministers will discuss the proposal to amend directive 69/169/EEC on intra-Community travel. As a transitional step towards completion of the internal market, the Commission proposes progressive increases in tax-paid allowances in intra-Community travel until they are completely lifted on 1 January 1993. ECOFIN will also discuss the package of three tax measures (the draft mergers directive, parent/subsidiaries directive and arbitration procedure) which are designed to encourage co-operation between companies based in different member states. There may be a discussion of the proposed increase in the EURATOM borrowing limit, on the proposal for a revision to the financial perspective and on the takeover directive.

The Agricultural Council will meet on 25-26 April to discuss the non-food uses for agricultural produce and beef balance sheet import quotas. It will possibly also discuss agriculture price proposals, the intra-EC trade in horses and veterinary medicines.

EMPLOYMENT

Wages Councils

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will update the breakdown, by wages inspectorate division, of the information given in his answer of 1 March 1989, Official Report, columns 199-201, regarding the establishments underpaying and prosecutions for underpayment of wages council rates.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is given in the following tables:

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 28 March 1990]: I estimate that the total expenditure by my Department (excluding the Training Agency) in the financial year 1989-90 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases, will be £3·1 million. The budget for the financial year 1990-91 is £5·0 million.

The following firms were awarded consultancy contracts by the Department of Employment, excluding the Training Agency, during the financial year 1989-90:

Firm and subject of assignment

Algis Consultants—Service excellence in personnel work

Arthur Anderson—Optical Technology. Planning for NUBS2.

Anderson Limited—BRPS2 Development.

Asset Technology plc—Customisation of optical character recognition interface.

Yale Data Computer Consultants—Extraction package study on statistical system. Facilities management study. Small systems development.

SCOTLAND

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Rifkind: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

When the Parliamentary Commissioner upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Gun Clubs

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will give details of the number of licensed gun clubs in Scotland; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list all registered gun clubs in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are currently 271 approved gun clubs in Scotland. I will write to the hon. Member with a list of the approved clubs and place a copy of my letter in the Library.

Any rifle or pistol club can apply to become an approved club. Before granting approval my right hon. and learned Friend requires to be satisfied, among other things, that the club is bona fide and has a proper constitution, that the principal officers are responsible persons, that the security arrangements for the storage of club firearms and ammunition are satisfactory, and also that a probationary period of at least six months' duration applies in respect to new members during which the probationary member is given a course of regular instruction on the safe handling and use of firearms.

Where approval is granted, the club may obtain a firearm certificate to purchase or acquire firearms and ammunition for the use of club members in, or in connection with, target practice. Club members do not require personal firearms certificates in these circumstances.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary announced in reply to a question on 23 January from my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, South-East (Mr. Paice); at columns 592-93, new and stricter conditions relating to membership of approved gun clubs covering such issues as probationary and novice members, day membership and guest days. That reply made it clear that my right hon. and learned Friend would adopt the same policy for approval of gun clubs in Scotland.

Appointments

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list all the appointments he has made annually since 1979 where the remuneration for duties was in the ranges (a) £20,000 to £25,000, (b) £25,000 to £30,000, (c) £30,000 to £35,000, (d) 35,000 to £40,000 (e) £40,000 to £50,000 and (f) above £50,000 per annum.

Mr. Rifkind: Information about appointments made in each year is not consistently available in the form requested. Listed in the table are the current appointments made at the requested salary levels. The Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies" produced annually gives for each Government Department details of current appointments, including remuneration, as at 1 July each year.

In addition, I make some appointments jointly with other Secretaries of State.

Hospitals, Clydesdale

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will visit Birkwood hospital in Lesmahagow to speak to the staff and patients about their concern about the future of the hospital; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will visit Law hospital in the Clydesdale constituency to discuss the future of the hospital with patients, members of staff and community groups.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have no immediate plans to visit either hospital. Developments there are a matter for Lanarkshire health board in the first instance and it is in touch with the views of the patients, staff and community groups.

Gun Controls

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reply he has sent to the Strathclyde police force on its demands for stricter gun controls.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has not received any recent representations from Strathclyde police about gun controls.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had from each of the Scottish chief constables on the need to have stricter gun controls.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has had no recent representations from any of the chief constables.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Scottish Police Federation to discuss gun control.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend and I last met representatives of the Scottish Police Federation on 8 February. The subject of gun controls was not raised.

Crime

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what resources he will give to the Scottish police authorities to enable them to combat the increases in violent crime and drug-related crimes.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The provision of resources to police forces is in the first instance a matter for police authorities. My right hon. and learned Friend stands ready to pay police grant on authorities' net approved expenditure on the police service. The level of police grant was increased from 50 to 51 per cent. on 1 April 1986 in recognition of the additional demands being made on the police, including the tackling of violent crime and drug-related crimes.

Speech Therapy

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill of 26 March, what assessment he has made of the effect of shortages in cover for maternity leave taken by speech therapists in Scotland; what information he has available on the average waiting time for children with speech difficulties (a) in Scotland as a whole and (b) on a regional or sub-regional level; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No central assessment of cover for maternity leave has been made. No information is available centrally about average waiting times for speech therapy treatment.

Wildlife Protection

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking for the protection of the capercaillie.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The capercaillie is presently listed in part 1 of schedule 2 to the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 and may be killed or taken only outside the closed season, that is, between 1 October and 31 January. In view of the decline in numbers of capercaillie, I have recently written to a wide range of interests proposing that a statutory ban on their shooting should be introduced from 1 October 1990. Under my proposals, the ban would be reviewed annually, following consultation. A copy of my consultation letter has been placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the accounting system in the Scottish Office indicated that £4 million was available to fund poll tax ex gratia payments; and from which spending head this money came.

Mr. Rifkind: This finance will be provided as part of the normal process of managing the resources available to me in the course of 1990-91.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has held with Mr. Michael Hirst on the spending head from which he has found £4 million on the Scottish Office budget to finance additional poll tax ex gratia payments.

Mr. Rifkind: None.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the accounting system in the Scottish Office has now identified any further savings over and above the £4 million allocated to poll tax ex gratia payments; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: It is too early to identify the full extent of the changes in requirements for specific spending programmes which may occur during the financial year.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will prepare a table illustrating the impact, in each islands and district council area, of a system which combines local income tax with capital value-based domestic rates, making the same assumptions as those used by the hon. Member for Wirral, West (Mr. Hunt) in respect of a similar table prepared for English local authority areas in a written answer to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on 6 November 1989, Official Report, column 415.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The table provided in the answer of 6 November 1989 referred to in the hon. Member's question was prepared on the assumption that English local authorities would budget for 1990-91 in line with their standard spending assessments, the Scottish equivalent of which is grant-aided expenditure (GAE) figures.

As it is now clear that some Scottish authorities have budgeted to spend below their GAE figure and others above it, I do not think I can justify committing the substantial resources needed to producing a table which would clearly be of no practical significance.

Court Reporting

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the function of shorthand writing in Scottish courts has been put out to tender.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Those shorthand writing services in the Scottish courts provided under Government contract have been put out to tender, and contracts awarded from 1 April 1990.

Sport

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sports properties in the category of (a) stadia, (b) playing fields, (c) club houses and (d) sports grounds there are in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 30 March 1990]: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the measures he is carrying out to encourage sporting activities of (a) secondary and (b) higher education students in Scotland.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 30 March 1990]: Further action is required to reverse the present decline in school-aged team sport. The report of the Scottish Sports Council's school-aged team sport inquiry group made a number of welcome recommendations on which views are currently being sought. Participation in sport is also to be encouraged among post-school students. This is primarily a matter for the governing bodies of the institutions concerned.

ENVIRONMENT

Construction Works

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement regarding progress on construction of the two-stream nuclear refitting and refuelling complex at Rosyth.

Mr. Chope: Works currently in construction are of a preparatory nature and are on programme.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current state of progress of Cementation Construction Ltd. in meeting acceptance, availability and safety standards for the construction of the shiplift at Faslane.

Mr. Chope: Acceptance of the shiplift depends upon stringent availability and safety standards being met to the satisfaction of the nuclear safety and quality assurance authorities at all stages of the contract. This is being done.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current state of progress of construction of the floating jetty at Faslane.

Mr. Chope: The timetable is very tight, but construction is still on programme to meet the requirements of Trident.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what extensions of time have been awarded by the Property Services Agency to Cementation Construction on the contract for the shiplift at the submarine operating base at Faslane;

(2) what extensions of time have been awarded by the Property Services Agency to Tarmac Construction on the following contracts at the submarine operating base at Faslane: (a) asbestos decontamination and (b) north and south fences;

(3) what extensions of time have been granted by the Property Services Agency to Tarmac Construction on the contracts at RNAD Coulport for (a) jetty shore area and associated road, (b) explosives area and (c) advanced works.

Mr. Chope: Any extensions of time granted to the contractors have been in accordance with the terms and conditions of their contracts. Details of actual extensions of time are commercial and confidential.

Walkers and Climbers

Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many walkers and climbers are estimated to have spent time on the paths, hillsides and crags of (a) the Brecon Beacons national park, (b) the Snowdonia national park, and (c) National Trust coastlines of Pembrokeshire and the Gower in 1987, 1988, 1989 and 1990.

Mr. Roberts [holding answer 27 March 1990]: I have been asked to reply. The information requested is not collected.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate for each district council in Lancashire the levels of local income tax that would result in order to maintain the revenue raised by the community charge in 1990-91.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government, in deciding to replace rates by the poll tax, took into account the administrative cost; and if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimate of the cost of administering the poll tax and rates as a percentage of the revenue yield to one place of decimals.

Mr. Chope: Administrative costs were taken into account in introducing the new arrangements. The latest estimate of the cost of administering the community charge and the national non-domestic rates as a percentage of the revenue yield is 1·9 per cent.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, in calculating Brighton's standard spending assessment, what account was taken of (a) community charge collection costs, (b) inflation and (c) the population increase between 1989-90 and 1990-91.

Mr. Chris Patten: The standard spending assessment (SSA) for Brighton was calculated in the same way as that for all other authorities. The method of calculation is set out in section 3 of the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England), which has been approved by the House. Community charge collection costs are included in the all other services block, the calculation of which is described in part VI of annex A to the report. SSAs are scaled to the control totals shown in annex B to the report (net total standard spending). These, together with specific grants, amount to total standard spending of £32·8 billion, an increase of 11 per cent. over the equivalent figure for 1989-90. Population assumptions were based on the most recent estimates from the Registrar General for England and Wales.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham of 22 February on the difference between Brighton council's grant-related expenditure for 1989-90 and its standard spending assessment for 1990-91, whether he will publish a table in the Official Report giving this figure for all councils.

Mr. Chris Patten: I have today placed a table in the Library showing the information requested.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the reasons for the net reduction in real terms in Government grant paid to Brighton council.

Mr. Chris Patten: External finance to local authorities in 1990-91 is designed to enable authorities to set a community charge of about £278 (subject to the safety net) if they spend at the level of their standard spending assessments (SSAs). This is as true for Brighton as it is for all other local authorities. Previous levels of grant are not one of the factors used in calculating SSAs, and there is no reason why grant calculated under the new system should bear any specific relationship to grant under the old. What is important is the level of expenditure which will enable an authority to provide a standard level of service. It is worth noting, however, that under the new system (which is based on population rather than rateable values) Brighton has to bear a smaller percentage of the county precept, and to that extent its grant requirement is less.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what would Brighton's grant-related expenditure for 1989-90 have been had it been calculated on his Department's present criteria.

Mr. Chris Patten: It is not possible to calculate the figure requested. Many of the necessary factors are either not available in the form required, or do not exist.

Ballykelly (Fraud)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, further to the answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 20 March, when the possibility of a fraud squad operating at Ballykelly was brought to the notice of the Royal Ulster Constabulary; when it began its investigations; when he expects those investigations to be completed; when he was informed of the police investigation; and whether any investigations were carried out by the military police or any other military body before the Royal Ulster Constabulary was informed of possible fraud.

Mr. Chope: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member on 20 March 1990 at column 600.

Council Housing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the relative state of repair of council housing (a) currently and (b) in 1980.

Mr. Chope: Assessments of the state of repair of council housing currently and in 1980 are not available. Estimates provided by the quinquennial English house condition survey show 76,000 local authority and new town dwellings in serious disrepair in 1981 and 85,000 in 1986. These figures represent 1·5 per cent. and 1·9 per cent. of the local authority and new town stock in these years.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to review the Government's new financial regime for local authority housing.

Mr. Michael Spicer: No fundamental review is necessary. We are committed however to developing certain aspects of the policy further; we will, for example, consult on proposals to define more closely the items in the housing revenue account (HRA) and to target HRA subsidy on management and maintenance needs. We shall also follow the customary practice with a new policy of evaluating its effect over the first few years.

Grants, St. Helens

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the totals of (a) urban development grant and (b) derelict land grants in the borough of St. Helens in each of the last five years.

Mr. Moynihan: No project in St. Helens had received an urban development grant (UDG) by the time of the cessation of UDG in May 1988. Under the successor to UDG, city grant, I approved a grant of £6·33 million in October 1989 for a scheme to reclaim a derelict and contaminated site for a new housing development close to the town centre. This is the largest city grant so far awarded.

The totals of derelict land grant are as follows:

	£ million
1984-85	0·455
1985-86	0·694
1986-87	0·007
1987-88	0·498
1988-89	0·405

Sewage

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those viruses that are not destroyed by passing through a sewage treatment works.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The best estimates that we have are that primary treatment removes up to 50 per cent. of viruses and that secondary treatment removes up to 99 per cent. of viruses from sewage effluent.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions the new EEC draft directive on waste water contains on discharges in sewer outfalls in coastal waters within 5 km of bathing beaches.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The EC proposed municipal waste water treatment directive generally requires secondary treatment of sewage prior to discharge, but primary treatment may suffice for coastal discharges where it can be shown that there is no adverse environmental effect. These requirements are in line with my right hon. Friend's statement on sewage treatment policy on 5 March at column 452. A copy of the explanatory memorandum on the municipal waste water directive is in the Library.

Planning

Sir Gerard Vaughan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each instance when a Secretary of State has re-examined a planning decision once granted as the result of local public opposition, other than as the result of a court decision.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Once my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has issued a decision on a planning application or appeal, his jurisdiction ends. He can re-determine a planning decision taken by himself only if that decision is quashed by the courts. The Secretary of State has powers to revoke a planning permission under section 276 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971. My rt. hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard), then Minister for Housing and Planning, set out the Government's policy on revocation in his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) on 20 December 1989 at column 329.

Mr Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response his Department has received on the draft planning policy guidance consultation on (i) housing, (ii) regional guidance and structure plans and (iii) the countryside and the rural economy.

Mr. Moynihan: Several hundred responses have been received to each of these draft guidance notes. Comments are now being analysed, and final versions of the notes will be issued in the spring or early summer.

Efficiency Scrutiny

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the efficiency scrutiny of the control of administrative costs of sponsored bodies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: I am today publishing the report of this efficiency scrutiny into administrative costs of non-departmental public bodies (NDPBs) and my Department's response to it. Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library of the House and are being sent to the NDPBs concerned.

This scrutiny was set up to look into current systems of contol over staffing and administrative costs in NDPBs, and to bring forward proposals which would enable more flexible and efficient use of administrative resources by NDPBs whilst still retaining an appropriate degree of departmental control.

The scrutiny's main finding, which the Department accepts, is that direct controls on manpower and administrative expenditure should be removed in favour of a system of strategic control, provided that the body's internal control mechanisms are sufficient to ensure that such strategic control would be effective. A single cash ceiling on administrative running costs should be introduced and rolled forward each year. This will provide NDPBs with an opportunity for more freedom to manage their own affairs and scope for greater administrative efficiency.

The action plan in the Department's response will be implemented primarily in the current round of financial management and policy reviews of NDPBs over the next three years.

Housing Improvement Programme (Liverpool)

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the amount of Liverpool city council's bid for its housing improvement programme;

(2) what was the amount of the Liverpool city council's allocation of housing improvement grant.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 27 March 1990]: If the hon. Member intended to refer to the housing investment programme, the answer is that the bid was for £155·077 million and the allocation was £33·687 million—the third highest in the country.

Voluntary Organisations, Islington

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list all those voluntary organisations in the London borough of Islington serving the needs of the ethnic minority communities which have been agreed by his Department in the past four years for funding under partnership arrangements; and if he will indicate the amount of Government contribution in each case.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Voluntary organisations play a major role in the delivery of urban programme and partnership objectives, especially for ethnic minorities, one of the Department's target groups for urban programme support. Urban programmes are critically examined before being approved by my Department. The local authority is required both to monitor the performance and output of all approved projects and to evaluate each project in detail at least once during its lifetime.

The following is the information requested showing the full cost of support through the Islington partnership urban programme. The Government's contribution is 75 per cent. of these amounts. Of the 40 schemes listed 22 are being supported in the financial year 1989-90.

Urban programme schemes where at least 30 per cent. of the benefits of the project will go to ethnic minority groups

Shopping Centre, Trafford Park

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is now in a position to announce his decision in respect of the proposed regional shopping centre at Dumplington Circle, Trafford park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moynihan [holding answer 20 March 1990]: No. Before reaching a final decision my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State must fully consider the traffic implications of this scheme, and other retail proposals, now before him. He cannot at this stage express any view about the likely outcome.

EC Environmental Matters

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals for environmental directives he has received from Directorate General XI on (a) environmental protection and pollution, (b) consumer protection from contamination and (c) nuclear safety since 1 January.

Mr. Trippier: Proposals from the European Commission for Council directives are deposited in Parliament. The following environmental proposals have been deposited since 1 January:

4353/90 Proposals for a Council directive amending for the 11th time directive 76/769/EEC on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions of the member states relating to restrictions on the marketing and use of certain dangerous substances and preparations.

8065/88 Amendment to a proposal for a Council decision authorising the Commission to negotiate and approve on behalf of the Community certain measures as part of the implementation of international agreements of a regional nature relating to environmental protection to which the Community is a contracting party.

4467/90 Proposals for a Council directive amending for the seventh time directive 67/548/EEC on the approximation of the laws, regulations and administrative provisions relating to the classification, packaging and labelling of dangerous substances.

4733/90 Amendment of the proposal for a Council directive concerning the protection of fresh, coastal and marine waters against pollution caused by nitrates from diffuse sources.

4704/90 Proposal for a Council directive amending directive 70/220/EEC on the approximation of the laws of the member states relating to measures to be taken against air pollution by emissions from motor vehicles.

4822/90 Proposal for a Council directive amending directive 76/464/EEC on pollution caused by certain dangerous substances discharged into the aquatic environment of the Community (Article 12).

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports on environmental matters produced by the European Parliament he has received since 1 January; and what responses he has made to them.

Mr. Trippier: The European Parliament has delivered opinions to the Council of Ministers on the following environmental matters since 1 January:

Proposal for a Council regulation on the establishment of the European Environment Agency and the European environment monitoring and information network.

Proposal for a Council decision amending a Council decision (85/338/EEC) in order to provide for the continuation of the Commission work programme concerning an experimental project for gathering, co-ordinating and ensuring the consistency of information on the state of the environment and natural resources in the Community. (CORINE)

Proposal for a Council directive on the contained use of genetically modified micro-organisms.

Proposal for a Council directive on the deliberate release of genetically modified micro-organisms.

In addition, the Parliament has delivered a report on a programme of regional actions to be initiated by the Commission on the subject of the environment. (ENVIREG).

Opinions and reports delivered by the Parliament are taken into account in discussions in the Council of Ministers.

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of European Council decision 85/338/EEC, the CORINE programme on data collection on the state of the environment in the European Community; and what support was afforded to CORINE by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: Following the European Council decision (85/338/EEC), the CORINE experimental project for gathering, co-ordinating and ensuring consistency of information on the state of the environment and natural resources in the Community was set up. The project was due to run for four years, but the Environment Council agreed on 22 March 1990 to extend it for a further two years to consolidate the progress made and to prepare for the transfer of the work to the proposed European Environment Agency. An interim report on the progress of the project was published in 1988.

United Kingdom consultants have played a leading role in developing the project, both in terms of the required computerised system and in individual topic areas. Officials from the Department of the Environment are members of a committee of national experts which oversees and steers the project.

Rainham Marshes

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the radioactive contamination of Rainham marshes in Essex.

Mr. Trippier: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution has investigated the suggestion that radioactive waste was disposed of in Rainham marshes in the early 1960s. Any disposals before the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 came into force on 1 December 1963 would not have required authorisation under the Act. There is no record of any subsequent authorised disposals.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

15. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on the arrangements for income support payments to persons in residential homes.

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) earlier today.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to review income support regulations as they affect elderly people seeking to enter nursing or rest homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) earlier today.

Residential Homes

16. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list showing the average proportion of private sector nursing home costs that can be met by his Department in the major cities of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Newton: As I informed the House on 28 March, I accept the need for more and better information about the true costs of running residential care and nursing homes and I hope to approve the commissioning of the necessary research in the near future. Meanwhile, I have to say that the information sought by my hon. Friend is not available.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what specific items in his Department's budget for 1990-91 will be reduced; and what is the saving on each, in order to fund the extra £25 million he has made available to meet increased income support limits for residential and nursing homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No specific new action to make reductions is required. Review of current evidence on actual expenditure, and of the effectiveness of existing control mechanisms, shows that it will be possible to accommodate with the Department's planned total expenditure of £55·6 billion in 1990-91 the £22 million expenditure on increased limits which will not be met from the reserve.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the reply of 26 March, Official Report, column 77, how many of his Department's staff have, since 1979, been given permission exceptionally to hold a financial interest in private residential or nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Authority to deal with requests for permission to take up private activities or occupations is delegated to local management. Records are not held centrally.

Benefit Fraud

17. Mr. Dickens: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the success rate of detecting those making fake claims for benefit and still working within the black economy; how many officers are deployed nationwide on these duties; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We do not record as a separate category the number of successful fraud investigations against claimants working in the black economy. However, I can say that in 1988-89, the total of successful social security benefit fraud investigations was 238,255, the majority of which involved claimants who were concealing their employment. That effort produced estimated benefit savings of £343 million which reflects the commitment of both this Department and the Department of Employment to maintain a vigorous campaign against those who defraud the social security system.

The number of full-time equivalent posts engaged in the investigation of benefit fraud in both Departments in 1988-89 was 4,310.

For 1990-91 DSS has set an overall benefit savings target of £320 million against £280 million for the current year. DE has set an investment return target of £3·00 to £3·40 benefit savings for each £1 expended on fraud investigations.

Over-80s

18. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has received any recent representations about the 25p increase in the state pension for the over-80s; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In the last 12 months 164 representations have been received on the subject of the age addition to retirement pensions for over-80s.

"The Way Ahead"

19. Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people will benefit from the proposals set out in "The Way Ahead".

Mr. Scott: The proposals set out in "The Way Ahead" (Cm 917) and the interim measures that we announced in October 1989 will give extra help to an estimated 850,000 people.

Child Benefit

20. Mr. Rees: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current percentage uptake of child benefit.

24. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current percentage uptake of child benefit.

36. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current percentage uptake of child benefit.

62. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current percentage uptake of child benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Virtually 100 per cent.

23. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in child benefit since 1987.

46. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in child benefit since 1987.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in child benefit since 1987.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have, however, since then devoted considerable extra resources totalling some £350 million in real terms to the least well-off families—those on income support and family credit—who do not gain from an increase in child benefit of itself and who are now therefore better off than they would have been if child benefit had been uprated.

26. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received on the uprating of child benefit; and if he will make a statement.

52. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received on the uprating of child benefit; and if he will make a statement.

57. Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received on the uprating of child benefit; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West (Mr. Morgan) earlier today.

30. Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current value of child benefit if it had been uprated in line with inflation over the last three years.

31. Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the current value of child benefit if it had been uprated in line with inflation over the last three years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Members to the reply given to the right hon. Member for Salford, East (Mr. Orme) earlier today.

34. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the application of the criteria used to assess potential changes in benefits policy to the decision to freeze child benefit in the last financial year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The considerations which led my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to his decision not to increase child benefit from April 1990 were fully explained by him in his statement to the House on 25 October 1989 at columns 841-45.

49. Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the value of child benefit at 1979 prices.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply my right hon. Friend the Member for Chesham and Amersham (Sir I. Gilmour) on 12 December 1989 at columns 583-84.

Benefits, Coventry and Warwickshire

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the latest figures of how many people are dependent on (a) income support, (b) family credit and (c) housing benefit, broken down into claimants, dependants and children in his Department's offices in Coventry and Warwickshire.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 5 March 1990]: The available information is listed in the table. The figures for income support show the number of claimants on 30 November 1989. Data are derived from a 100 per cent. count of cases in action which include a number where benefit payments have ceased but other action is continuing. The figures for housing benefit show the total number in receipt of housing benefit on 30 November 1989. The family credit figures are based on those living in the areas covered by the local social security offices at the time their award was made on 23 February 1990. All of these figures include those who had made a claim where the award has yet to be made.

No figures are available for dependants or children and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

	Income support	Family credit	Housing benefit[2]
Coventry	32,830	1,534	37,249
Warwickshire[1]	24,207	1,802	37,155

[1] Excluding the Coventry total.

One-parent Families

21. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest figure for the number of lone-parent families in receipt of income support; and how many such families were receiving supplementary benefit five years ago.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest date for which information is available is May 1988 when there were 722,000 lone-parent families in receipt of income support. In 1983 the number of lone parents receiving supplementary benefit was 471,000.

Notes:

1. Source—Annual Statistical Enquiries for 1983 and 1988.
2. The figures do not include prisoners' partners.

Advertising Costs

63. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the cost of advertising and explaining the community charge rebate.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Members to my reply to the hon. Member for Truro (Mr. Taylor) on 5 March at column 522. Additionally, a campaign will be launched in the national press shortly to publicise the budget changes to the upper capital limits for all the income-related benefits.

Occupational Pension Schemes

25. Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to restrict self-investment by occupational pension schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Social Security Bill contains a power to restrict occupational pensions investing in employer-related investments—a practice which we believe has a potential for conflicts of interest. We are arranging a survey to provide up-to-date information on the extent of self-investment to guide us in the regulations which we hope to introduce as soon as practicable after Royal Assent.

39. Miss Widdecombe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what powers the pension ombudsman will have to resolve any grievances held by members of occupational pension schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: It is intended that the pensions ombudsman should have extensive powers to help resolve grievances brought to him by members of occupational personal pension schemes. He will be able to investigate and determine both complaints about alleged maladministration and disputes about fact or law.

The pensions ombudsman will have similar powers to those of the county court in England and Wales; and of the sheriff court in Scotland. He will be able to examine witnesses and require the production of documents, and he will issue a written statement of his determination and the reasons for it to those concerned. His determinations will be binding on the parties involved, and will be enforceable in a county or sheriff court.

Benefits (Long-term Sick and Disabled)

27. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average annual real increase in spending on benefits for long-term sick and disabled people over the period (a) 1974 to 1979 and (b) 1979 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The average annual real increase, at 1989-90 prices, was as follows:

	£ million
(a) 1974-75 to 1978-79	220
(b) 1978-79 to 1988-89	370

Social Fund

28. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on his review of guidance to local offices concerning budget restrictions on social fund loans.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. and learned Member to my statement of 26 March at columns 21-40. A copy of the revised guidance is in the Library.

35. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications for grants and loans from the social fund are approved on review after initial rejection.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is contained in the national summary statistics which are placed in the Library monthly.

53. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether the repayments of loans to the social fund are available in full for the making of further loans or grants.

Mr. Scott: Yes, but allocations to budgets remain a matter for judgment as appropriate.

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was for the Leven, Dunfermline, Cowdenbeath and Kirkcaldy social security offices the proportion of income support claimants repaying social fund budget and crisis loans for each quarter between January and December 1989.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Information about the local income support caseload is collected on a quarterly basis and the percentage of loans being repaid on the last day of each quarter is shown in the table.

1989	Budget Loans per cent.	Crisis Loans per cent.

Pensioners

29. Mr. Roger King: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioners are receiving income from savings or occupational pensions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: In 1987, 73 per cent. of pensioners received income from savings and 52 per cent. of pensioners had an occupational pension. This compares very favourably with 1979 when the corresponding figures were 62 per cent. and 41 per cent.

Source: Family Expenditure Survey.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the increase in pensioners' average net incomes for (a) 1974 to 1979 and (b) 1979 to date.

41. Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security by how much pensioners' average net incomes have increased since 1979.

48. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the most recent figures he has for the increase in pensioners' incomes from savings since 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Between 1974 and 1979, pensioners' average total net incomes rose by 3 per cent. in real terms. Recently available figures show a rise between 1979 and 1987 of over 31 per cent. in real terms. The same figures also show that pensioners' average income from savings more than doubled over the same period.

Pensions

32. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to restore the link between the level of pensions and the higher of the increases in the retail prices index and earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to do so. The link between retirement pension and increases in earnings is not the key factor in improving pensioners' incomes. What matters most to pensioners is their total income; between 1979 and 1987 pensioners' average total net income increased by more than 31 per cent. in real terms.

47. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to ensure that the requirement for occupational pensions schemes to revalue pensions in payment is applied in the same way to money purchase schemes and personal pension schemes.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to ensure that the requirement for occupational pensions schemes to revalue pensions in payment applies in the same way to money purchase schemes and personal pension schemes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: My right hon. Friend recently announced our further proposals to protect members of occupational pension schemes. Schemes, except those providing a money purchase benefit, will have to pay annual increases to members for their pension rights which they build up after an appointed Day. Rather different considerations apply in the case of money purchase and personal pension schemes. Their members already have the opportunity to use the proceeds of their investments to choose a pension that increases after retirement. We intend to consider the question of requiring members of such schemes to take any annuity providing pension increases as part of the next review of the terms of contracting-out of the state earnings related pension scheme.

61. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he has any plans to index-link pensions with earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to him on 7 March at column 679.

22. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much he estimates has been spent in 1990 on advertising (a) personal pensions schemes and (b) the state earnings-related pension.

40. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the total that has been spent in 1990 on advertising (a) personal pensions schemes and (b) the state earnings-related pension.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much he estimates has been spent in 1990 on advertising (a) personal pension schemes and (b) the state earnings-related pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Nothing has been spent in 1990 on such advertising by the Department of Social Security.

50. Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the latest estimate of the number of people who have taken out appropriate personal pensions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Harlow (Mr. Hayes) earlier today.

Expenditure

33. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total spending in his Department in 1979, 1983 and 1987 and currently in real terms; and what percentage that is of total Government spending.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is in the table.

Year	Expenditure (cash)	Expenditure (1989-90 prices)	Difference from 1989-90 expenditure	Total Government spending (cash)	Percentage of total Government spending
1979-80	19,416	39,119	13,464	77,600	25·0
1983-84	35,159	48,579	4,004	120,400	29·2
1987-88	48,769	55,968	−3,385	142,500	34·2
1989-90	52,583	52,583	—	161,900	32·5

Note:

Figures for the years 1979-80 and 1983-84 are based on the old planning total: those for 1987-88 and 1989-90 on the new.

42. Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total expenditure by his Department in (a) 1978-79 and (b) 1989-90.

Mr. Scott: Total expenditure in 1978-79 was £16,437 million in cash terms, or £38,677 million at 1989-90 prices. Estimated total expenditure for 1989-90 is £52,583 million.

AIDS

37. Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the adequacy of income support for people with AIDS; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received a number of representations on this topic. Almost without exception they refer to a need for people with AIDS or HIV infection to follow a special diet, said to cost £30 or more each week. Although we understand that people with AIDS are often advised to follow a high protein/calorie diet, there is research in the public domain which indicates that such a diet can be devised for little more than half that cost. The healthy eating plan which people with HIV infection are advised to follow is no more than a normal balanced diet.

Benefits (Disabled People)

38. Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is proposing to improve social security benefits for people who become disabled after reaching pensionable age.

Mr. Scott: Measures introduced in October 1989 targeted £200 million of additional help on less well-off, elderly and disabled pensioners. These changes mean that 2·6 million pensioners will gain, by up to £2·50 a week in the case of single people and £3·50 a week for couples. Provision in the current Social Security Bill will enable pensioners who are terminally ill to receive attendance allowance without having to serve the normal 26-week qualifying period.

58. Dr. Twinn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people will gain from the improvements in benefits for disabled people which are being introduced this month.

Mr. Scott: An estimated 452,000 people are expected to gain from the improvements in benefits for disabled people to be introduced this month.

Operational Strategy

43. Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in implementing his Department's operational strategy.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department's highly complex £1·7 billion strategy for the computerisation of the social security benefit payment system is proceeding as planned. The pilot exercise in 23 local offices has been completed and the systems are being introduced nationally office by office. By the end of March 1990, 199 offices had received the departmental central index (DCI) system; 198 the retirement pensions system; and 93 the income support system—out of an eventual target of 440 offices.

Maintenance Payments

44. Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to ensure that more maintenance is recovered from absent parents.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on the Government's progress on ensuring that eligible fathers pay maintenance to their families.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Rochford (Dr. Clark) earlier today.

Disability Allowance

45. Mrs. Rosie Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to abolish the six-month qualifying period for disability allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The proposed qualifying period for the new disability allowance which will be introduced in 1992 is three months. If the hon. Member has in mind the six-month qualifying period for attendance allowance, the current Social Security Bill includes provision to remove it for terminally ill people. We do not propose to abolish it for other people. Attendance allowance is targeted at people with long-term attendance needs, and the qualifying period ensures that resources are concentrated on that group.

Housing Benefit

51. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will increase housing benefit in real terms in the next financial year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The uprating of housing benefit and community charge benefit personal allowances and premiums takes effect in April 1990 and will take expenditure on those benefits to more than £6·3 billion in the financial year 1990-91. Expenditure on comparable items in the current financial year is estimated at £5·6 billion. In April certain premiums are being increased above the amount required to maintain their value in real terms; these are the family disability, disabled child and lone parent premiums. In October, the lone parent's earnings disregard is to increase from £15 to £25, and a carer's premium is being introduced.

The recently announced increases in the capital limits, to £16,000 for housing benefit and community charge benefit and to £8,000 for income support and family credit, also take effect from April. The change will benefit up to a quarter of a million people at a new cost for social security benefit estimated at £120 million a year.

Relocation

54. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress has been made in relocating his Department's staff away from the London area.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given on 14 November 1989 to my hon. Friend the Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) at column 170 in which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that a substantial amount of the Department's work in London was to be relocated to Leeds. A site for the new headquarters building in Leeds has been identified and we expect that the relocation of posts from London will begin from the end of 1991.

Incentives to Work

55. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment has been made by his Department of the impact of changes in recent years in social security benefit payment on financial incentives to work.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The effects of changes which may affect financial incentives to work are monitored constantly. As indicated in the Government's expenditure plans 1990-91 to 1992-93 (Cmnd 1014, chapter 14, paragraph 35), the impact on incentives is one of the criteria used to assess potential changes in social security benefit policy.

The Government have made considerable progress on improving financial incentives by alleviating the unemployment trap and eliminating the worst effects of the poverty trap. Far fewer people are now financially better off not working than only a few years ago. It is estimated that of 14 million working heads of households, only about 15,000 would receive more in benefit than they receive in wages from employment. The Government have virtually eliminated the possibility that a person can experience combined tax and national insurance deduction rates of 100 per cent. or more, which means that virtually no one now suffers a reduction in net income as a result of increased earnings. There have been significant increases in the real value of take-home pay through reductions in income tax, increased tax thresholds and restricting of national insurance contributions. Real take-home pay for a married couple with two children on average earnings has increased by 34 per cent. in real terms since 1978-79.

Public Service

56. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps have been taken to improve his Department's service to the public.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Since the Government reforms were introduced in 1988, the social security system has become simpler for claimants to understand and easier for staff to operate. As a result there have been very real all-round improvements in standards of service to the public. In particular the average 1989-90 times taken to clear income support claims and callers have improved by 25 per cent. and 24 per cent. respectively when compared with pre-reforms' performance.

We are aware that there is still room for further improvement, particularly in certain inner cities. We are tackling this by relocating some work, which requires no face-to-face contact, away from London to areas where we have fewer problems over staff recruitment and retention. In addition between now and 1991, we expect our programme to computerise social security operations in all local offices to make a major impact on the speed and accuracy of the service they provide.

Glasgow Social Security Centre

59. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the working of the Glasgow social security centre; and what plans he has to extend benefit-processing work away from south-east England.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Monitoring and evaluation of performance at Glasgow indicates that claims for income support are being processed faster and more accurately than before relocation of the work from London.

There are currently no plans to extend benefit-processing work away from south-east England beyond the 21 London offices already identified for relocation.

Disabled People (Employment)

60. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a further statement on the measures he is introducing to make it easier for disabled people to take up employment.

Mr. Scott: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon Friend the Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) on 26 February at column 59.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he has given to those issuing information about entitlement to community charge rebates to those in receipt of income support and housing benefit; what reports he has received about couples not receiving the rebate in cases where one partner applied for housing benefit; what action he is taking to ensure both partners receive rebates; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Local authorities have statutory responsibility for the administration of community charge benefit and housing benefit. Advice on providing information about entitlement to community charge benefit is issued to local authorities in circulars and in the housing benefit guidance manual. Transitional arrangements were made for local authorities to treat existing claims for housing benefit as claims for community charge benefit and DSS local offices conducted a take on exercise for income support claimants not in receipt of housing benefit. Where a couple claims community charge benefit, one partner is required to make the claim on behalf of both and community charge benefit is awarded accordingly to both partners.

Information Technology

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will place in the Library a copy of the framework document of the Information Technology Services Agency.

Mr. Newton: I have placed copies of the framework document and business plan for the Information Technology Services Agency, launched today, in the Libraries of both Houses. I am confident that new arrangements outlined in these documents will introduce greater efficiency into my Department's computer and telecommunications operations and through this an improved service to the public.

I will remain accountable to Parliament and the public for all aspects of my Department's work, but within the framework of ministerial policy there will be maximum delegation of responsibility for operational matters to the chief executive of the agency.

War Pensions

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many nuclear test veterans are currently awaiting determinations by his Department.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available, as such claims are not separately recorded.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the reasons for the delays being experienced by Mr. John Hall of 35 Shetland avenue, Leicester, in obtaining a war pension.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: A claim was received from Mr. Hall on 8 October 1989. It is necessary to obtain full details of service and medical history before a claim for a war pension can be considered. Unfortunately this often takes some time. The Department's doctors are to examine Mr. Hall's papers this week and he will be contacted about his claim soon afterwards.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time it takes to process a war pension application for a nuclear test veteran.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that the information is not available.

Benefits, Bradford

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families are in receipt of (a) family credit, (b) housing benefit and (c) income support in the Bradford area.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The available information is listed in the table. The figures for income support show the number of claimants on 30 November 1989. Data are derived from a 100 per cent. count of cases in action which include a number where benefit payment has ceased but other action is continuing. The figures for housing benefit show the total number in receipt of housing benefit on 30 November 1989. The family credit figures are based on those living in the areas covered by the local social security offices at the time their award was made on 23 February 1990. All of these figures exclude those who had made a claim where the award was yet to be made.

No figures are available for dependants or children and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Cost Savings

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department achieved the target of a 5 per cent. saving in purchasing costs in 1988-89 through use of the central unit on purchasing.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The DHSS secured value for money improvements in purchasing of almost £30 million in 1988-89. This represented 4 per cent. of purchasing spend.

Occupational Pension Rights

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to deal with the question of occupational pension rights on divorce.

ting-

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he has any plans to bring forward legislation on occupational pension rights on divorce.

Mr. Scott: It is for employers to determine normally following consultation with their employees, what benefits are provided by an occupational pension scheme and to whom they are payable. Except where scheme benefits are payable as a condition for the scheme to be used for contracting out of the state earnings-related benefit scheme there is no requirement on schemes to provide any specific benefit whether on divorce or otherwise.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how occupational pension rights are transferred on divorce.

Mr. Scott: Transfers of pension rights may take place when a member leaves a pension scheme and wishes to put his or her pension rights into a new scheme. Any member of an occupational pension scheme who has completed two years' pensionable service in the scheme and whose service terminated at least one year before the scheme's normal pension age, has the statutory right to ask the scheme trustees or manager to transfer the cash equivalent of his pension rights, to acquire rights in another occupational scheme or a personal pension scheme, or to purchase one or more annuities from one or more insurance companies. This right exists on divorce or at any other time.

The question of assigning pension rights between former spouses after a divorce is a matter for the individuals concerned, subject to restrictions in social security and income tax legislation.

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received on the issue of occupational pension rights on divorce.

Mr. Scott: We have from time to time received letters from members of the public on the issue.

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information required is provided in the table.

Community Care Grants

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many community care grants have been refused on the grounds that a person moving from institutional to residential care did not fall within the terms of his direction 4 to social fund officers.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not collected. However, community care grants are intended for people moving into the community from institutional or residential care, not for those moving from one form of care to another.

Appeals

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals have been made to (a) medical appeals tribunals and (b) social security tribunals in each standard planning region in each of the last 10 years; how long on average it has taken to deal with these appeals each year; and what has been the shortest and longest time any appellant has had to wait for a decision in each year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret the Department does not hold the information requested for medical appeals tribunals. However, the office of the president of social security and medical appeal tribunals keeps certain statistics and the hon. Member may care to contact him direct.

Information is also not available in the form requested for social security tribunals prior to 1984. The tables give the required information from 1984 to the quarter ending 30 September 1989 (the latest figures available). Statistics are not kept on the shortest and longest time any appellant has had to wait for a decision.

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 3 April 1990

TRANSPORT

Severn Crossing

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now announce a decision about the awarding of the contract to finance, design, build and operate the second Severn crossing.

Mr. Portillo: I will announce a decision when it has been taken, and will make clear whether we have chosen a private sector or public sector option.

Scottish Airports

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the evidence received in the course of his consultation on Scottish lowland airports policy suggesting that a change in policy would benefit economic investment in Scotland.

Mr. McLoughlin: Many of the responses to my right hon. Friend's consultation addressed in detail the possible economic effects of the policy options, and all the points made were assessed and taken into account. We do not intend to make public the responses which were received, some of which we were asked to regard as private.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the submissions to his consultation on Scottish lowland airports policy favoured retaining Prestwick's exclusive gateway status; how many expressed no preference; and how many favoured open skies.

Mr. McLoughlin: In reaching his decision on future policy for the lowland airports, in consultation with his right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland, my right hon. Friend was principally concerned with the strength of the arguments mounted in support of the different policy options.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will place copies of the submissions to the consultation on Scottish lowland airports policy in the Library;

(2) if he will publish the submissions to the Scottish lowland airports policy submission.

Mr. McLoughlin: We do not intend to make public the submissions made in response to the consultation. Some respondents asked that their response be regarded as private and it would give an unbalanced picture if only the remainder were to be made public.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set out the changes in tariffs for freight and passenger services at Prestwick and Glasgow airports necessitated by his announcement on Scottish lowland airports policy.

Mr. McLoughlin: BAA has said that it will move to a common tariff at Glasgow and Prestwick for long-haul traffic. The hon. Member will wish to seek information on the details of the tariffs from BAA plc direct.

Merchant Shipping Fleet

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to introduce to reverse the decline in numbers of the United Kingdom merchant shipping fleet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We have no plans to introduce such measures. We shall continue to keep under review the availability of adequate merchant shipping for defence purposes.

European Railways

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will hold talks with the chairman of British Rail on the European Economic Community proposals for a directive on the development of Community railways.

Mr. Portillo: The Department is keeping in close touch with British Rail on these proposals.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has prepared to improve the compatibility of British rail systems with other European rail systems after 1992.

Mr. Portillo: The first step is to explore at Community level the best way of improving compatibility between the various national rail systems. We are playing a full part in these discussions.

A46-A47 Link Road

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to visit Leicester to discuss the A46 to A47 link road.

Mr. Portillo: No. The A46-A47 link road is a local authority scheme for which statutory orders have recently been made and submitted to the Secretary of State for confirmation. Leicestershire county council will determine the need for a public inquiry if it is unable to resolve any objections which may be made to the orders.

Cycle Accidents

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the Government is taking following the conclusions of the transport and road research laboratory report on the relative frequency of cycle accidents occurring at road junctions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Data on the numbers of cycle accidents occurring at different kinds of junctions is contained in table 42 of the Department's casualty report "Road Accidents Great Britain 1988", which was published in November 1989. The transport and road research laboratory has reported on issues determining the frequencies and rates of all kinds of traffic accidents at mini-roundabouts. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library.

The Department has a continuing programme of research on cycling, which is guided by information on accident rates. We draw on it in giving day-to-day technical advice to highway authorities and others, and in publishing more general advice on cycling issues. In recent months my hon. Friend the Minister for Roads and Traffic has referred the hon. Member to the range of publications issued by the Department, many of which give information on traffic engineering techniques which can be used to improve conditions for cyclists at various kinds of junction.

Heavy Lorries

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he will take to ensure that lorries arriving in the United Kingdom via the Channel tunnel are subject to the same weight controls now operating at United Kingdom sea ports.

Mr. Atkins: Discussions are in progress between the Department and Eurotunnel on the provision of a weighbridge at Coquelles in France. In this way we can ensure that lorries arriving in the United Kingdom via the Channel tunnel are subject to the same weight controls as apply at United Kingdom ferry ports.

M40 (Traffic Flow)

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the annual average traffic flows recorded for cars, buses, light goods vehicles and heavy goods vehicles on the M40 (a) at Gerrards Cross and (b) at Beaconsfield for each year from 1979 to 1988, inclusive.

Mr. Portillo: The available information on annual average daily traffic flows is:

A46, Leicester

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when a decision on the report into the A46 Leicester western bypass is to be made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: The Secretaries of State for Transport and for the Environment will be issuing a decision letter on 5 April.

Radioactive Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when Her Majesty's Government expect to sign the United Nations convention on the international transport of radioactive wastes and nuclear materials, opened for signature on 1 February.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 2 April 1990]: We know of no such convention.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Discretionary Grants

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide a list of the local education authorities which carry out monitoring of the awarding of discretionary grants by local education authorities for full-time and sandwich courses.

Mr. Jackson: This information is not collected centrally.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the level of expenditure in 1988-89 by local education authorities on discretionary awards to 16 to 18-year-olds.

Mr. Jackson: The data requested for 1988-89 are not yet available.

History Teaching

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will now publish the report of the history working party; and if he will make a statement on his response to it.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have today published the final report from the national curriculum history working group. Copies have been placed in the Library.

The report has been published without statutory proposals, and I am inviting comment from a wide range of representative bodies with an interest. I am also writing to the chairman of the School Examinations and Assessment Council to seek the council's advice on whether the group's proposals would secure the effective assessment of pupils' mastery of historical knowledge.

PRIME MINISTER

Defence Policy

Q7. Mr. Latham: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on the progress of the review of Government defence policy in the light of recent developments in eastern Europe.

The Prime Minister: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has told the House, we are examining options for change in the structure and deployment of our armed forces which will enable us to continue to meet those commitments which are of greatest importance towards maintaining our nation's security.

South Africa

Q12. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister what representations she has recently made to or received from the state President of South Africa.

The Prime Minister: We have made regular representations to the South African Government on a wide range of issues, most recently during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to South Africa.

Tokyo

Q47. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Prime Minister when she next expects to pay an official visit to Tokyo.

The Prime Minister: I have no plans at present to do so.

Chancellor Kohl

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Prime Minister what matters were discussed during her meetings with Chancellor Kohl in Cambridge on 29 March and in London on 30 March.

The Prime Minister: Chancellor Kohl and I discussed German unification, the future of NATO, Lithuania, South Africa and the European Community. I announced a programme of scholarships and help with English language teaching in the GDR.

Year 2000

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement about plans, including any public building projects, to mark the year 2000.

The Prime Minister: Plans to mark the year 2000 will be developed in due course.

Engagements

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 April.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 April.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 April.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 3 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I shall attend a state banquet in honour of President Venkataram of India.

THE ARTS

Public Libraries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister for the Arts how many public libraries have been wholly or partially closed since 1978-79.

Mr. Luce: This information is not held centrally. Returns by local authorities in England to the Chartered institute of Public Finance and Accountancy over the period 1978-79 to 1987-88 are incomplete; statistics from the same 103 authorities in these two years show that the number of libraries within their responsibility fell from 4,124 to 3,922 but that the number of libraries open 10 hours a week or more has risen. The biggest reduction is in the "less than 10 hours a week" category, probably reflecting rationalisation and a conscious effort to make better use of resources. In the same period the total number of service points in these areas rose from 13,163 to 19,264.

Recent research suggests that in the three years to December 1989 more than 75 new library buildings or substantial extensions to existing premises were completed.

British Library

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will consider the retention in public ownership of the five acres of land to the north of the new British library at St. Pancras to ensure the possibility of the library's future expansion.

Mr. Luce: In 1988 when Ministers agreed to authorise the construction of the completion phase of the new British library building at St. Pancras, they also agreed to dispose of that land at the site which may ultimately be surplus to requirements.

The area of land which will be surplus and the optimum timing and method of its disposal are still being examined.

Corporate Sponsorship

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will give a breakdown by (a) region and (b) art form of current levels of corporate sponsorship for the arts.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Figures for overall corporate sponsorship of the arts are not available. The latest regional and art form breakdowns for sponsorship under my business sponsorship incentive scheme are set out in the table.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Auditing Practices Committee

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the content of his letter to the Auditing Practices Committee regarding its policy on the release of information following the Privy Council Office's letter to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby on 11 August 1989.

Mr. Redwood: As foreshadowed in the letter to which the hon. Member refers, my Department has raised with the Auditing Practices Committee its policy on the release of information about its proceedings. The matter is now being considered by the committee.

Auditing

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation requiring social audits to be compulsory for all large companies.

Mr. Redwood: No, but I welcome the increasing recognition by business of its social responsibilities.

Sinking of Marchioness (Compensation)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will investigate co-operation between the insurance companies of both ships involved in the sinking of the Marchioness on payments to relatives ; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: No. The insurers of the Marchioness and Bowbelle have agreed a formula for settlement of claims without either party restricting the right to sue the other. I see no reason for any investigation.

Auditors

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation enabling members of the public to take legal action against auditors who have been criticised by his inspectors, and to cite his inspectors' report as evidence.

Mr. Redwood: Whether a member of the public has a right of action against an auditor depends on whether that person is owed a duty of care by the auditor and has suffered damage as a result of the auditor's negligence, irrespective of whether the auditor's performance has been criticised in an inspectors' report. Section 441 of the Companies Act 1985 provides for an inspectors' report to be admissible in any legal proceedings as evidence of the inspectors' opinion.

Company Accounts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will seek to amend section 363 of the Companies Act 1985 to require the letter of representation issued by the directors of a company to the auditors to be filed with the Registrar of Companies.

Mr. Redwood: No. The Government do not accept that any benefits that might be obtained from imposing such a requirement would outweigh the administrative costs involved.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will bring forward proposals for requiring all large companies to have audit committees.

Mr. Redwood: No. Although we would encourage companies to set up such committees, we believe that the decision as to whether or not to do so is one that is best left to individual companies.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will introduce legislation to require companies separately to identify all holdings gains in their financial statements.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans to add to the existing legislative requirements.

Car Sales

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will seek to advise car buyers of the legal obligations of garage proprietors who offer 0 per cent. interest to finance the purchase of cars.

Mr. Forth: Under the Consumer Credit Act, it is the function of the Director General of Fair Trading to disseminate such information and advice as it may appear to him expedient to give to the public about the operation of the Act, the credit facilities available to them and other matters within the scope of his functions under the Act. I will draw the hon. Member's question to the director general's attention for consideration.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what steps he will take to increase the monitoring of the practices of garage proprietors who offer 0 per cent. interest to finance the purchase of cars;

(2) whether he will arrange for his officials to meet representatives of the SMMTA to discuss the need to protect motorists from unscrupulous practice arising from offers of 0 per cent. interest to finance the purchase of cars.

Mr. Forth: The Consumer Credit Act 1974 prohibits misleading credit advertisements and the Consumer Credit (Advertisement) Regulations 1989 contain specific provisions on the use of expressions such as "interest free". Enforcement of this legislation is a matter for local authority trading standards departments and for the Director General of Fair Trading. I will ask the director general to write to the hon. Member about this matter.

Scania Saab

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice was given by officials in response to inquiries as to whether regional selective assistance would be available if Scania Saab were to locate a new plant in the north of England.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Officials told the company that the Government would be prepared to consider an application for regional selective assistance. However, any grant would require clearance by the European Commission under the rules of the Community framework on state aids to the motor vehicle industry. In the Department's judgment, the prospects for approval were not good.

Textile and Clothing Industry

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has insisted on any regulatory point to meet the new situation brought about by the changes in central and eastern Europe if regulation of the textile and clothing industry passes to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The precise arrangements for the return of trade in textiles and clothing to GATT rules and for the necessary transitional period before that happens are still the subject of negotiation. Recent developments in central and eastern Europe will be only one of many factors to be considered by the United Kingdom in trying to influence an EC negotiating position on these matters.

EC Price Determination

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement outlining the procedures of the EC Commission for determining normal prices under their anti-clearing procedures; if the producer firms have any entitlement to be advised of the basis of calculations of the Commission; and if the procedures have been approved by the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 2 April 1990]: In establishing whether dumping is taking place, the Commission assesses whether a product is sold abroad at prices below what is termed the "normal value". In most cases this "normal value" is the price which the foreign supplier charges for comparable sales in his own country. Where there are no such sales, or when they do not permit a proper comparison or are made at a loss, then the normal value may be established, that is to say "constructed", by reference to either the foreign supplier's domestic costs of production or his price to other export markets. The precise procedures are laid down in the Council regulation (EEC) No. 2423/88, which is available in the Library of the House.

Foreign producers involved in anti-dumping proceedings are entitled under the regulation to request to be informed of the essential facts and considerations on which Commission's proposals for definitive anti-dumping duties will be based. The procedures laid down in the regulation for assessing dumping conform with the GATT anti-dumping code.

United Kingdom Japanese-owned Car Firms

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the new Japanese-owned United Kingdom car producers will be producing cars for sale; if these cars will be permitted to be sold in the EC on the same basis as other British-produced cars; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Nissan has been producing cars in the United Kingdom for sale since 1986. Its cars are sold in the EC on the same basis as other British-made cars. Honda plans to begin producing cars here at the end of 1991, and Toyota in late 1992. The Government are determined to ensure that all cars produced here by Japanese-owned firms should be treated in the EC in exactly the same way as other British-made cars.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Right to Buy

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the policy of the Department of Environment for Northern Ireland on the right to purchase residential property occupied by employees of the Department of Environment for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Residential property is offered to employees when it is no longer needed, at a price which takes account of market circumstances, including the existence of the tenancy.

Fruit of the Loom

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the amount of grant that has been allocated to the Fruit of the Loom company for the development of a new mill at Londonderry.

Mr. Needham: Details cannot be disclosed as this matter falls under the normal arrangement of strict confidentiality which exists between the Industrial Development Board and its client companies.

Donaghadee Ring Road

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present status and programme for the proposed ring road at Donaghadee, County Down; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: There are no proposals for a ring road at Donaghadee.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing executive agencies in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: The training and employment agency became an executive agency of the Department of Economic Development yesterday. It will comprise some 1,700 staff. The agency's principal task will be to implement those training and employment service functions of Government which are the responsibility of the Department. Agency status should ensure greater efficiency and effectiveness in the delivery of these functions, including an improved standard of service to customers. It will also emphasise to employers and individuals the value of training. The establishment of the agency coincides with the high priority now to be given to training and development of the work force in the interests of a competitive economy. Performance targets have been set against which the agency's effectiveness and efficiency will be measured. The framework document for the agency makes provision for the chief executive to propose additional management flexibilities in the future where these will contribute to better performance. Copies of the framework document have been placed in the Library and the Vote Office.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Grants and Loans, Scotland

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the budgetary totals for offices in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole, for (i) community care grants and (ii) crisis loans from the social fund 1988-89, 1989-90; and what are his estimates for 1990-91.

Mr. Scott: Details of budget allocations and expenditure for loans and grants for each social security region and local office are kept in the Library. These figures are available for each year since 1988. In my statement on the social fund to the House on 26 March at columns 21-40 I announced that the budget allocations for the year 1990-91 had been placed in the Library.

Local Government Finance

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to the reply of 28 March, if he will make an estimate of the proportion of the 1,053 items of correspondence concerning the poll tax benefit scheme which related to poll tax rebate in Scotland.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 28 March at columns 204-5. It is not possible to estimate now many of the 1,053 items of correspondence referred to community charge rebate in Scotland.

Social Fund, Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the final expenditure for each local social fund office in Wales for the latest available year separately for loans and grants, expressed as a proportion of the total annual allocation made to each office.

Mr. Scott: Details of budget allocations and expenditure for loans and grants for each local office are kept in the Library.

Area Computer Centres

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department took to notify British companies about the contract to run the area computer centre at Norcross, Lancashire, and to give them the opportunity to tender.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Three companies were invited to tender for the contract to run ACC1 Livingston. On the basis of the responses to that invitation, and the need to bring ACC2 into operation on schedule, it was decided to invite Electronic Data Systems to run ACC2 on similar terms. No other company was asked to tender.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether any British companies were invited to tender for the contract to run the area computer centre at Livingston; what was the name of the company other than Electronic Data System which tendered; and whether Electronic Data System submitted the lower tender.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: All three companies invited to tender for ACC1 Livingston are incorporated in the United Kingdom. The contract was awarded to Electronic Data Systems on the basis of best value for money, in accordance with normal practice. It is not the practice to give details of unsuccessful tenderers.

Attendance Allowance

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security from what date babies above six months but under two years old in April will receive attendance allowance providing they meet the condition when the new extension of the benefit is made.

Mr. Scott: These babies will qualify for attendance allowance from 9 April.

Income Support

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest available data on the number of claimants of income support, together with the number of dependants, in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Liverpool; and if he will give comparable data for 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 22 March 1990]: Data on the number of dependants are unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Data of the number of claimants of income support are unavailable by parliamentary constituency. Data for the Department's offices covering Liverpool as a whole are in the table:

Local Office	Income Support Live Load (1) 1979	1990

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the latest available data on the number of claimants of income support, together with the number of dependants, in each of the Wirral parliamentary constituencies; and if he will give comparable data for 1979.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 22 March 1990]: Data on the number of dependants are unavailable and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Data on the number of claimants of income support are unavailable by parliamentary constituency. Data for the Department's offices covering Wirral as a whole are in the table:

ENERGY

Electricity Generation

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Garston (Mr. Loyden), of 13 November, Official Report, column 98, if he will consider increasing the size of future tranches of renewable generating capacity; and when he expects to be seeking applications for these tranches.

Mr. Peter Morrison: A total of 600 MW of capacity has been reserved for renewables within future tranches of the non-fossil fuel obligation and this could be increased if necessary. My right hon. Friend expects to announce the arrangements for the first additional tranche later this year.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give for each area electricity board this year's percentage increase or decrease for the average (a) domestic user, (b) non-domestic user taking less than 1 MW and (c) user taking more than 1 MW.

Mr. Wakeham: Electricity prices are a matter for the industry.

Gas Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 13 March, Official Report, columns 141-44 about gas privatisation, what was the role of Wood Mackenzie and James Capel in the gas privatisation.

Mr. Wakeham: Wood Mackenzie and James Capel were appointed by Her Majesty's Government to assist the lead brokers Cazenove and Company in the British Gas offer for sale.

Energy Imports and Exports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the total export and import of oil, gas and coal, respectively, in February in tonnes and value on the same basis as his answer of 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68.

Mr. Wakeham: The equivalent information for exports and imports of oil, gas and coal for February 1990 as set out in my earlier answer of 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68, is as follows:

Table 1—February 1990

	Thousand tonnes
Exports (f.o.b.)
Oil[1]	6,004
Coal	181
Imports (c.i.f.)
Oil	5,292
Gas[2]	1,433
Coal	893

Table 2—February 1990

Imports (c.i.f.)
Oil	853
Gas	108
Coal	48

[1] Contains a small amount of natural gas exports.

[2] Coal equivalent.

[3] Figures at 1985 constant prices have been derived by applying the unit value for exports in 1985 to the relevant volumes in 1990.

Sizewell B

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest estimate of the date of Sizewell B's (a) completion, (b) commissioning and (c) run-up to full power.

Mr. Baldry: The timetable for completion of Sizewell B is a matter for Nuclear Electric plc. The CEGB indicated in its last annual report and accounts that it aimed to achieve full commercial load in May 1994, six months after the start of fuel loading.

Renewable Energy

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will provide additional incentives to renewable energy generators in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My Department is already providing substantial incentives. We support a major research and development programme aimed at developing commercially viable and environmentally acceptable renewable technologies to contribute to future energy supply. Over £50 million is earmarked for expenditure on renewable projects during the next three years. Provision for 1990-91 is around £20 million.

Renewables also benefit from the non-fossil fuel obligation.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his current estimate of the maximum potential for renewable generating capacity on the United Kingdom electricity network.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The most recent estimates of the potential contribution from renewable energy sources were published in energy paper 55, "Renewable Energy in the UK: The Way Forward", copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Magnox

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list each Magnox station's current life expectancy; and when each will next be reviewed.

Mr. Baldry: The maximum life for each Magnox station is an operational matter to be determined by Nuclear Electric subject to continuing compliance with the nuclear site licence issued by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate.

The current review dates for each Magnox reactor are set out in my answer to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 January 1990, at column 819.

HEALTH

Hepatitis

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish for each of the last five years the number of people who have contracted (i) hepatitis A, (ii) hepatitis B, (iii) hepatitis C, (iv) hepatitis D and (v) hepatitis E in England and Wales, separately distinguishing the figures by health authority areas.

Mr. Freeman: The figures for laboratory reports to the communicable disease surveillance centre of the public health laboratory service are as follows:

Year	Clinical hepatitis A	Acute hepatitis B
1985	2,254	1,785
1986	2,217	1,329
1987	2,785	785
1988	4,167	644
1989	[1]5,334	[1]605

[1] Provisional figure.

It is not possible to provide the breakdown requested by health authority area, but the percentages of the above reports by area over the five-year period were:

Region	Percentage of reports
	Hepatitis A	Hepatitis B
Northern	4	5
Yorkshire	11	11
Trent	7	8
East Anglia	2	3
North West Thames	8	7
North East Thames	7	6
South East Thames	6	8
Wessex	3	4
Oxford	4	4
South Western	8	8
West Midlands	10	8
Mersey	3	6
North Western	12	13
Wales	5	4

Reliable figures for hepatitis C, D and E are not available, because the diagnostic tests for these viruses are at different stages of development and use.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the present number of (a) private nursing homes and (b) publicly owned nursing homes; and what is the number of inspectors to check the standards of care and facilities in nursing homes.

Mr. Freeman: Centrally collected data do not distinguish between hospitals and nursing homes registered under section 23 of the Registered Homes Act 1984. By deducting the number of premises with operating theatres (that is, hospitals) from the total number of premises registered, a figure of about 3,000 nursing homes can be obtained for the year ending 31 March 1989.

Figures on publicly owned nursing homes are not held centrally. The Government consider continuous nursing care services to be an integral part of NHS provision for those people who require them. However, the actual level of service to be provided by a health authority is a matter for that authority to decide for itself based on local needs and practice.

Figures for the number of inspectors of nursing homes and hospitals are not held centrally. Registration and inspection is delegated to district health authorities. It is for each health authority to decide the number of inspectors required, taking into account local circumstances. Authorities must inspect each home or hospital at least twice a year.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his assessment of the effect of more invasive salmonellas than salmonella enteritidis and typhimurium on the incidence of food poisoning outbreaks.

Mr. Freeman: Food poisoning due to salmonella is not generally regarded as an invasive disease. However, some salmonella strains are more likely than others to cause septicaemia or meningitis. For example, 28 per cent. of strains of salmonella dublin received by the PHLS division of enteric pathogens during 1981-89 were isolated from blood cultures, compared with only about 2 per cent. for all other serotypes. However, salmonella dublin is rare in humans; it accounted in 1989 for less than 1 per cent. (none in 1988) of outbreaks of food poisoning reported to the PHLS communicable disease surveillance centre. In contrast, salmonella enteritidis and salmonella typhimurium together accounted for 82 per cent. of reported outbreaks in 1989 (76 per cent. in 1988). These two strains therefore represent the greatest burden of human illness.

North West RHA

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health by how much National Health Service waiting lists have changed between 1979 and 1989 in each district health authority within the North West regional health authority for (a) in-patients and (b) out-patients.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information on in-patient waiting lists is given in the table. Data on out-patient waiting lists are not collected centrally.

Eye Tests

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many eye tests have been carried out in the northern region in each year since 1980.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of sight tests since 1983-84, paid for by the family practitioner committees which approximate the northern region, are set out in the table. The figures were supplied by the following family practitioner committees:

Cleveland, Cumbria, Durham, Northumberland, Gateshead, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, North Tyneside, South Tyneside and Sunderland.

Number of sight tests in Northern Region 1983-84 to 1988-89

Year	Number of sight tests
1983-84	596,216
1984-85	592,048
1985-86	599,981
1986-87	627,573
1987-88	679,969
1988-89	740,424

Information is not held on sight tests paid for before 1983-84. Figures for 1989-90 are not yet available.

Cervical Smear Tests

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cervical smear tests have been carried out on women for each year of the past decade; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of cervical smear tests carried out by the NHS in England and Wales in the last decade is shown in the table:

(thousands)

Year	Number of smears
1977	2,545
1978	2,587
1979	2,749
1980	2,928
1981	2,999
1982	2,951
1983	3,200
1984	3,417
1985	3,897
1986	3,908
1987-88	4,322

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many health authorities in England and Wales have a computerised recall system for cervical cancer smear tests; and if he will list them;

(2) what measures the Government have undertaken to ensure that women are called and then recalled for cervical smear tests; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: All 190 health authorities in England have computerised call and recall systems for cervical cancer screening. All women aged 20 to 64 are to be invited for screening by March 1993 and recalled at least every five years. Cervical cancer screening in Wales is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time for results from cervical smear tests, by region; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Livingston (Mr. Cook) on 21 February at column 834.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women have died from cervical cancer in each of the past 10 years; if he will give the figures region by region; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is shown in the table:

[2] Provisional.

Allergy

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on research into allergies and the facilities available under the National Health Service for sufferers.

Mr. Freeman: The Medical Research Council (MRC) is the main agency through which the Government support medical and related research in the United Kingdom. The MRC receives its grant-in-aid from the Department of Education and Science and is currently conducting research into allergies; the total expenditure for these projects is £1 million.

NHS treatment for allergies is widely available. The amount of resources devoted to it is for decision by health authorities in the light of their knowledge of local needs, priorities, and resources.

Disability

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how he plans to use the information gained under section 11 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 to develop good community care services; and if he will make a statement;

(2) on what date he expects section 11 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986 to be fully implemented;

(3) what steps his Department is taking and will be taking to publicise the information collected under section 11 of the Disabled Persons (Services, Consultation and Representation) Act 1986; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Section 11 came into force on 18 December 1989 and the first report was laid before the House on 21 December 1989. The report has been subsequently printed and distributed to health and local authorities. It is hoped that the information in the report, on services for people with a mental illness or mental handicap, will be of assistance to authorities in developing good community care services in line with the Government's policies.

Experimental Drugs

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce statutory regulations controlling payments by pharmaceutical companies and individual consultants in exchange for participation in tests using experimental drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have no powers to make such regulations.

Private Hospitals

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued by his Department to private hospitals and clinics with regard to ensuring that patients who are treated are in a position to pay for such treatment.

Mr. Freeman: No such guidance is issued; payment for private treatment is a matter for the parties concerned.

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 13 March, Official Report, column 183, what accounts for the shortfall in estimated expenditure for publicity in 1989-90 of £15·876 million, from the budget given in his answer of 13 March 1989, Official Report, column 69.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The £19·586 million budget, quoted in the reply of 13 March 1989, included £4 million which was transferred during 1989-90 to the Health Education Authority to fund additional health promotion campaigns carried out by the authority.

Incontinence

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) from which budget the provision of incontinence pads will come; and which profession will be responsible for the provision of incontinence advice and supplies, following the reorganisation of the National Health Service;

(2) if his Department is carrying out research into the development of minimum standards for incontinence pads, including the microbiological aspect of pads;

(3) what representations he has received on the delivery of incontinence advice and the provision of incontinence pads; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The provision of incontinence services will not be altered by the National Health Service and Community Care Bill. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Minister for Health gave my hon. Friend the Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) on 8 March 1990 at columns 823-24.

The Department is funding an evaluation project at St. Pancras hospital, London, including microbiological examination of reusable pads after laundering, which will not be completed until the end of March 1991. The project is looking into all four categories of incontinence pads. One of the aims of the project is to provide basic information which will be used by the British Standards Institution and the International Standards Organisation in the development of standards.

We receive representations on the provision of incontinence pads occasionally, but have received no representations on the delivery of incontinence advice. The Department has funded a number of projects designed to promote awareness of the problems of incontinence.

Traffic Casualties

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many district health authorities make charges under section 155 of the Road Traffic Act 1972 for payment for emergency treatment of traffic casualties;

(2) what is the estimated cost to a district health authority of making a charge under section 155 of the Road Traffic Act 1972;

(3) what is the total income received by the National Health Service under the provisions of the Road Traffic Act 1972.

Mr. Freeman: The total income from emergency treatment fees and charges under sections 157 and 158 for in and out-patient treatment recorded in the accounts of district health authorities was £8·7 million for 1988-89 in England. Income from emergency treatment fees is not separately identified. However, the indications are that most, if not all, district health authorities have collected income from this particular source. No information on the cost to district health authorities of collecting these charges is available centrally.

Aspirin

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any food or drink offered for sale in the United Kingdom contains aspirin as an additive.

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

Aspirin is not listed as a permitted additive to food or drink by regulations made under the Food Act 1984.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will consider abolishing income tax and social security liabilities in regard to persons employed at sea in United Kingdom shipping companies' merchant ships; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The Finance Act 1988 relaxed for seafarers the rules for qualification for the 100 per cent. foreign earnings deduction. A total exemption from income tax and social security liabilities would give seafarers an unjustified advantage over other groups of employees.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list those years in the period 1974 to 1989 when public expenditure was reduced in real terms; and for each of those years if he will indicate the main services where reductions took place.

Mr. Norman Lamont: General Government expenditure (excluding privatisation proceeds) fell in real terms in 1975-76, 1976-77, 1977-78, 1987-88 and 1988-89 as shown in table 21.2.1 of the 1990 public expenditure White Paper (Cm 1021). The reductions in the mid-1970s covered a broad range of services. The areas in which there were falls in the real level of expenditure in 1987-88 and 1988-89 are shown in table 21.2.11 of Cm 1021, which gives an analysis of general Government expenditure by function in real terms for 1978-79 to 1989-90.

Trade Balance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year from 1970 to 1989, on a balance of payments basis, his estimate of the balance of visible trade with the world and with the European Economic Community Twelve on the basis of (i) 1989 and (ii) 1985 prices; and if he will add figures for visible trade less oil and erratic items;

(2) whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing, for each year from 1970 to 1989, on a balance of payments basis, the balance of trade in manufactures less erratic items with the European Economic Community and with the rest of the world as a percentage of gross domestic product to two places of decimals.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Information from which United Kingdom world trade balances at constant prices may be derived can be found on the Central Statistical Office database, which may be accessed through the Library of the House. Estimates for trade with the European Community are available only at current prices, and information about manufactures less erratic items on a balance of payments basis is not available by area.

Natural Beauty Products

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions Customs and Excise officials had with the debenture holder immediately before or after their two visits to Natural Beauty Products earlier this year in pursuit of a distraint order; and what other action was taken.

Mr. Ryder: Customs has had no discussions with the debenture holder either before or after its visits to Natural Beauty Products.

The distraint was affected on 1 February 1990 and the administrative receiver was appointed on 2 February. Customs has maintained its distraint and has been in discussion with the administrative receiver about the sale of the business as a going concern.

EC Economic and Finance Council

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the outcome of the latest meeting of the European Community's Economic and Finance Council.

Mr. Major: The informal ECOFIN met at Ashford castle, County Mayo on 31 March for its first detailed discussion of the later stages of economic and monetary union (EMU). I made it clear that we believed it premature to give detailed consideration to the later stages before stage 1 had begun and that the United Kingdom's position had not changed. I repeated our willingness to participate fully in the inter-governmental conference and in its preparation. I made clear our opposition to binding limits on the level of budget deficits, but said that we were ready to contemplate binding rules against monetary financing of deficits and the bailing out of member states, and providing for procedures for surveillance. These rules would be desirable whatever the eventual form of EMU. Legal conditionality might also attach to any Community support loans. I expressed our reserve on the monetary aspects of EMU including the proposed European system of central banks (ESCB). Preparation for the IGC will continue in the relevant committees and ECOFIN will discuss the issues again at our meeting in June.

The German Minister for Finance outlined the latest developments in the preparations for an economic and monetary union between the Federal Republic and the German Democratic Republic. There was a brief discussion about the European bank for reconstruction and development. It was agreed that there should be further examination of the requests from some European countries for association of their currencies with the EMS.

Balance of Payments

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year from 1970 to 1989 on a balance of payments basis the balance of trade with the European Economic Community Twelve and with other countries on (a) manufactures and (b) invisible trade; and if he will add figures for manufactures less erratic items.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Estimates on a balance of payments basis for trade in manufactures with the European Community and with non-European Community countries are shown in the table:

Information for invisible trade is available for 1973 to 1988 on the Central Statistical Office database, which may be accessed through the Library. The information for 1978 to 1988 is also in table 10.1 of 1989 edition of the "The CSO Pink Book", which is available in the Library of the House.

Comparable data for manufactures less erratic items on a balance of payments basis are not available.

Tax Changes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1990 Budget, the information on tax changes contained in his reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West of 4 April 1989, Official Report, columns 7-8.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update, to take account of the 1990 Budget, the information on tax changes contained in his reply to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 21 October 1986, Official Report, columns 812-14.

Mr. Lilley [holding answers 28 and 29 March 1990]: The information is in the tables. For each financial year shown, the tables compare the yield from the tax regime in that year, with the 1978-79 tax regime, both assuming independent taxation. All estimates are based on a provisional 1990-91 income base projected from the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and all tax regimes have been indexed to 1990-91 levels (using the new independent taxation allowances) by reference to the statutory formula. The comparisons therefore reflect budgetary changes in income tax rates and allowances, but not (i) any changes since 1978-79 in the definition of the income tax base, or (ii) the change to independent taxation from 1989-90 to 1990-91. Information for other years could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

For the purposes of these calculations, the indexed regimes of 1978-79 and later years are applied directly to the income tax base of 1990-91. In practice, retention of these regimes, indexed as appropriate, would have led to changes in the income base.

Net Earnings

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update to April the information on net earnings provided in his reply to the then hon. Member for Fulham, on 10 February 1987, Official Report, columns 177-78.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Estimates of the levels of earnings at the top 5 per cent. point of the earnings distribution are not published. The information in the table is based on estimates of those levels derived from published figures in the relevant new earnings surveys. The latest estimates available are for April 1989. Earnings levels are for men or women as appropriate paid at adult rates with pay unaffected by absence. Taxpayers are assumed to have no reliefs or allowances other than the appropriate personal allowances.

Income Tax

Mr. Clay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much the value of income tax personal allowances has increased in real terms since 1979; and how this amount has been distributed to each band of income taxpayers, both in total and in amount per taxpayer.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 30 March 1990]: Since 1978-79, the main income tax allowances have increased in real terms by over 24 per cent. If, for 1990-91, the personal, married couple's, and higher age-related allowances were reduced to levels equivalent to the 1978-79 allowances indexed to 1990-91, total income tax liability would be increased by some £4·9 billion, distributed as follows:

[1] Individual taxpayers liable to tax when personal allowances are reduced to their indexed 1978-79 levels.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the number of married women in the current tax year claiming the transferable element of their husband's personal tax allowance.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 30 March 1990]: It is estimated that in 1989-90 approximately 500,000 married women, over 10 per cent. of all married women with income greater than the wife's earned income allowance, will receive part or all of their husband's married man's allowance. The estimate is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and is provisional.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent advice he has had from the EC Commission about the re-assessment of the United Kingdom's contribution to the EC; and what is the effect on the recent net contribution figures.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 2 April 1990]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave him on 21 March 1990 at column 610.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Community Charge

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what plans the Church Commissioners have to meet the full poll tax for those retired clergy renting houses from them on a maintenance charge basis.

Mr. Alison: Retired clergy in the rented arm of the Church's retirement housing scheme, where the accommodation is owned by the Church of England pensions board but largely funded by the Church Commissioners, have had their maintenance charges reduced to reflect the abolition of domestic rates. They will also receive a special addition to their pension for 1990 (£100 for full service) to help ease the changeover to the community charge system.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, what negotiations the Commissioners have had with the Secretary of State for the Environment over the effect of standard community charge levels on clergy who, while living in tied accommodation in their parishes, are buying, or have bought, a home for their retirement.

Mr. Alison: The Bishop of London, as chairman of the Churches Main Committee representing all the major denominations, has taken this matter up with the Secretary of State as most ministers of religion in this position are being asked to pay the maximum multiplier of twice the standard community charge. This is despite the Secretary of State's advice given to local authorities last October. The Commissioners fully support the bishop's approach.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Lithuania

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contacts Her Majesty's Government have had with the Lithuanian Government of Mr. Landbergis.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. Our criteria for recognition of a state were set out in an answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 19 March.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Ambassador has made to the Government of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics regarding their present policy in Lithuania.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have recently taken a number of opportunities to make our concerns known to the Soviet Union.

We have emphasised that it is vital that progress should be made through dialogue between the Soviet authorities and the Lithuanians, and that a settlement should be reached which is acceptable to both sides and which enables the Lithuanian people to decide their own future. We have stressed the need for restraint on all sides.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will be sending a representative to the international citizens congress for a nuclear test ban in Alma-Mata and Semipalatinsk, Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, in May.

Mr. Waldegrave: No.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations his Department has received in the current year concerning the continuing commitment of Her Majesty's Government to test nuclear weapons.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received a number of letters and appeals from various organisations and individual members of the public.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what stage negotiations over the convening of meetings of state parties to the partial test ban treaty in preparation for the meeting from 8 to 19 January 1991 in Geneva have now reached; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Parties to the partial test ban treaty have agreed that a preliminary meeting for the organisation of the conference will be held in New York from 29 May to 8 June 1990. Consultations on the details of the meeting are continuing.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to make it his policy to support the inclusion of talks concerning the cessation of nuclear testing at the conference on disarmament in Geneva.

Mr. Waldegrave: Consultations are under way at the conference on disarmament about possible discussions on the subject of nuclear testing. But we have made it clear that for the foreseeable future there will be a continuing requirement to conduct such tests.

Indonesia

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Indonesian authorities about East Timor independence demonstrations and human rights.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations the Government have made to the Indonesian authorities concerning the use of violence against demonstrations in East Timor for independence and against human rights abuses.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Members to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office on 29 March to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon).

Hong Kong

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has discussed with the Hong Kong Government the possibility of lowering the minimum voting age in Hong Kong to 18 years.

Mr. Maude: The Hong Kong Government have recently confirmed our decision, announced in the 1988 White Paper on the development of representative government, that the voting age would remain at 21.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the current queues in operation at each of the following posts and the numbers in each queue (a) Bombay, (b) New Delhi, (c) Karachi, (d) Islamabad, (e) Dacca, (f) Nairobi and (g) Dar-es-Salaam.

Mr. Sainsbury: Current queues and estimated waiting tims in months at end February 1990 were:

Post	Queue	Estimated	Numbers awaiting interviews
(a) Bombay	1	0	0
	2	6	367
	3	9	449
	4	10	106
(b) New Delhi	1	0	0
	2	3	309
	3	6	214
	4	9	65
(c) Karachi	1	1	2
	2	3	89
	3	3·5	19
	4	6	5
(d) Islamabad	1	3	96
	2	6	2,312
	3	9	486
	4	13	393
(e) Dhaka	1	3	418
	2	3	933
	3	3	119
	4	9	884

Note: Estimated waiting time is the time an applicant applying in February could expect to wait until interview.

Settlement queues are organised as follows:

Q1—Persons with a claim to the right of abode, dependent relatives over 70 years, special compassionate cases.

Q2—All spouses, and all children under 18 years.

Q3—Fiancé(e)s and others applying for the first time for settlement.

Q4—Re-applicants.

Nairobi —No queue. All applicants whether for visit or settlement, are interviewed within one to three days.

Dar-es-Salaam—All applicants requiring full interview are put in one queue with a current waiting time of three weeks.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the length of time taken by each of the posts to prepare an explanatory statement following refusal of entry clearance at (a) Bombay, (b) New Delhi, (c) Karachi, (d) Islamabad, (e) Dacca, (f) Nairobi and (g) Dar-es-Salaam; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: Current times taken to despatch explanatory statements from the following posts are (from date of receipt of appeal):

Post	Type	Time
Bombay	Settlement	4 months
	Visit	2 months
New Delhi	All	6 months
Karachi	Settlement	4 months
	Visit	2 months
Islamabad	Settlement	3 months
	Visit	1 month
Dhaka	All	3 months
Nairobi	All	1 week
Dar-es-Salaam	All	1-2 weeks

High Commission, India

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on when the British deputy high commission in Bombay, India, is to be resited.

Mr. Sainsbury: We hope that current leasing negotiations and subsequent fitting-out works will be completed in time for the deputy high commission to move by May 1991.

Geneva Convention

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what action he intends to take in the international community regarding the observance of article 51 of the fourth Geneva convention by the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics;

(2) what representations he has received regarding the position of former Lithuanian Russian army conscripts and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics' observance of article 51 of the fourth Geneva convention.

Mr. Waldegrave: None. The Geneva convention to which the hon. Member refers relates to the protection of civilian persons in time of war.

United States Embassy (Visa Section)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the United States embassy in London on the burdens imposed on the embassy visa section by travel firms who are charging for visas to visit the United States where these are no longer required.

Mr. Sainsbury: None. The United States visa waiver scheme applies only to visitors travelling by designated carriers. In other cases, visas are still required. We understand that some travel agents charge an administrative fee for obtaining visas.

South Africa

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications for British passports have been made by individuals resident in the Republic of South Africa in each month from January 1989 to the recent available date.

Mr. Sainsbury: Figures for applications received per month are not readily available but the numbers of passports issued are as follows:

	Number
1989
January	1,596
February	1,393
March	1,676
April	2,126
May	1,569
June	3,596
July	2,097
August	2,184
September	1,856
October	1,939
November	2,163
December	1,697
1990

	Number
January	1,884
February	2,134
March	2,439

These numbers include both first and replacement passports issued.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has on the number of people resident in the republic of South Africa who are eligible to be issued with a British passport for each category of citizenship under the British Nationality Act 1981.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Foreign and Commonwealth Office estimates that between half a million and 1 million British nationals reside in South Africa. There is no means of assessing accurately their categories of citizenship under the British Nationality Act 1981. However, it is likely that the majority are British citizens.

Eastern Europe

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with European counterparts about the proposals for nuclear and conventional force reductions arising out of recent developments in eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has discussed these matters in a number of recent bilateral meetings with European colleagues, including in the margins of the "Open Skies" meeting in Ottawa in February. There is a further meeting of NATO Foreign Ministers in June, and the implications of developments in eastern Europe for our security requirements will again be discussed there.

United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation

Mr. David Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has taken a decision on the question of United Kingdom membership of UNESCO.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have conducted a thorough review of United Kingdom membership of UNESCO as part of which we have consulted a large number of organisations with an interest in UNESCO activities. We have also taken into account the views expressed by the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House in its report on UNESCO dated 15 March. We have concluded that although there have been improvements at UNESCO over the past few years these are not sufficient to justify rejoining now.

As recommended by the FAC, we shall continue to keep the situation under review and we shall continue to maintain our observer section at UNESCO. We shall also continue to participate in the UNESCO programmes with which we are now involved.

I have today written to the right hon. Member in his capacity as Chairman of the FAC giving my detailed comments on its report. A copy of this letter has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Ivory

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress Hong Kong is making in introducing legislation to implement the CITES ban on all commercial trade in ivory before the withdrawal of the six-month reservation on 18 July 1990.

Mr. Hurd: The Hong Kong Government are enacting legislation to ensure that the CITES ban on international commercial trade in ivory is in force when we withdraw our reservation on 18 July. A draft enacting Bill was presented to the Executive Council on 20 March and will be introduced into the Legislative Council on 4 April, with a view to enactment in May. The legislation will come into effect when our reservation is withdrawn. In the meantime, the Hong Kong Government will continue to enforce strict licensing and monitoring arrangements to prevent any illegal trading in ivory. There has been an absolute ban on ivory imports into Hong Kong since the CITES conference last year.

SCOTLAND

Health Boards

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many health boards in Scotland were in deficit at the end of the previous financial year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The overall cash limit for health boards was underspent by £6,678,000 or 0·36 per cent.

Eye Tests

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details on the numbers of eye tests in Scotland in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information concerning the total number of eye tests in Scotland is not available centrally. The results of a survey on the total number of sight tests carried out in Sco[illegible]d in the first quarter of 1990 compared with earlier periods should be available by the early summer.

NHS Inflation

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the level of inflation in the Scottish Health Service in 1990; and what funding he will make available for extra costs to the Scottish health boards.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: No separate index has been constructed which relates to the movement of pay and prices within the Health Service in Scotland. Health boards will be provided with £2,061·498 million for their recurrent expenditure commitments on hospital and community health services in 1990-91, an increase of £158 million or 8·3 per cent. on the equivalent 1989-90 provision.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he is taking to stop elderly patients being evicted from private nursing homes because they cannot meet the extra charges imposed by the owners of the private homes.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for the board and lodging limits under income support lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security who announced on 28 March new limits for both residential and nursing homes which will mean £45 million of additional payments being made to residents this year. My right hon. Friend is also currently reviewing the general structure and level of these limits.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last visited a private nursing home in Scotland to meet elderly patients; whether he discussed the shortfall in charges between the Government's set limit and the extra charge imposed by the private home for their accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: My right hon. and learned Friend visited Newark Lodge nursing home for the elderly in Glasgow on 26 February 1990. During his visit he took the opportunity to discuss a range of topics with both staff and residents.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current number of (a) private nursing homes and (b) public nursing homes in (i) Inverclyde, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Scotland as a whole; and what is the number of inspectors to check the standards of care and facilities in nursing homes in (i), (ii) and (iii).

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no public nursing homes in Scotland. The information on private nursing homes, as at 31 March 1989, is as follows:

	Number
Inverclyde	3
Strathclyde	125
Scotland	270

The registration and inspection of private nursing homes are the responsibility of health boards and information on the number of staff engaged on these functions is not held centrally.

Dogs

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report those organisations which responded to the consultation paper on Action on Dogs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: One hundred and six organisations responded to the consultation paper. I am writing to the hon. Member with the details.

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what direction his Department has given to the working group discussing Action on Dogs; and whether any representatives of the British Veterinary Association are to be invited to give evidence.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The working group's remit will be discussed at its first meeting which we hope will be held later this month. The remit will be broad and will cover not only advice on the implementation of our Action on Dogs proposals but also the investigation of other measures which could strengthen the existing legislation on dogs, including measures which could help reduce the risk of dog attacks. The British Veterinary Association has been asked to nominate a representative to serve on the group.

Dentistry

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland by what date he will need to take a decision in order to ensure that the new Edinburgh dental hospital and postgraduate institute can be operative by the time of the closure of the present dental school.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This depends upon the outcome of Lothian health board's forthcoming appraisal of possible sites.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect of the present financial situation of the Lothian health board on the programme for the establishment of the new Edinburgh dental hospital and postgraduate institute.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have already made it clear that the Government will meet the capital cost of providing the new dental hospital and institute. The running costs will be considered once we have the results of the Lothian health board's option appraisal. By that time I expect to have the health board's proposals for bringing their income and expenditure into balance.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what factors he takes into account in determining the number of dental school places.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This is a matter for the Universities Funding Council and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what will be the numerical decline in the number of treatment consultations available from the Edinburgh dental hospital from their present annual level for each of the years of the rundown leading up to the closure of the present Edinburgh dental school.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Detailed predictions about the level of treatment consultations up to the closure of Edinburgh dental school is a matter for discussion between Lothian health board and the university of Edinburgh as part of their overall closure programme.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department announced its decision to rebuild the Edinburgh dental hospital.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: When the McCallum working party report, "Review of Dental Provision in Scotland", was published in June 1989, we welcomed the recommendation that a replacement dental hospital should be built in Edinburgh. I have already made it clear that the Government will meet the capital cost but progress depends upon the outcome of Lothian health board's forthcoming appraisal of possible sites.

Prisons

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many baths and shower-baths there are and how often each prisoner has use of these facilities in each of Her Majesty's prisons in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of baths and shower-baths and how often each prisoner has use of these facilities, in each of Her Majesty's prisons is set out in the table:

Establishment	Number of baths	Number of shower-baths	Access by prisoners
Aberdeen	2	19	At least once per week
Barlinnie	5	74	Unlimited access
Castle Huntly	—	18	Unlimited access during recreation

Polmont	—	43	At least twice per week
Shotts	26	51	Unlimited access during association
Total	94	664

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many prisoners are currently imprisoned in each of Her Majesty's prisons in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Her Majesty's prison	Population at 23 March 1990
Aberdeen	133
Barlinnie	848
Barlinnie special unit	8
Castle Huntly[1]	109

Agency Nurses

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his estimate of the number of agency nurses employed in the National Health Service in Scotland in each of the past five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information about agency nurses is collected twice yearly and the average whole-time equivalent for the quarter ending 30 September in each of the last five years is as follows:

Year	Whole-time equivalent
1985	79·8
1986	144·7
1987	193·0
1988	237·7
1989	128·4

Information is collected centrally only on the whole time equivalent of agency nurses employed in the National Health Service.

Children with Learning Difficulties

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many children with learning difficulties are now being integrated into mainstream schools who would formerly have been placed in special schools with trained teaching staff, in total and on a regional basis; and if he will give details of how the progress of such children is monitored.

Mr. Lang: The table shows the latest statistics of children with records of needs based in mainstream schools. It is not possible to say how many of these children might, in previous years, have been placed at special schools. Progress of recorded pupils is monitored through reviews carried out under the terms of section 65A of the Education (Scotland) Act 1980.

Recorde pupils based in mainstream schools

	Primary	Secondary

Argyll and Bute	24	15
Ayr	118	69
Dumbarton	27	17
Glasgow	41	12
Lanark	31	59
Renfrew	87	51

Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what specialist assistance is being provided for children with learning difficulties who have been or are being integrated into mainstream schools; and what is their position regarding testing at the ages of eight and 11 years old.

Mr. Lang: Education authorities are responsible for ensuring sufficient specialist assistance is provided for children with learning difficulties. This will vary according to the needs of each individual child.

So far as the testing of children with learning difficulty is concerned, the Government recognise that there are pupils whose records of needs may suggest that their inclusion within the arrangements for national testing would be inappropriate. It will, therefore, be left to the discretion of the education authority, in consultation with parents, to decide in such cases whether or not a child should participate in the tests.

Lafferty Group

Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many projects involving the failed Lafferty Group were funded by the Scottish Development Agency; what was the total amount of public money paid to the firm; whether any legal action has been taken over uncompleted contracts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Three projects involving F. Lafferty (Civil Engineering) Company Ltd., and two projects involving Lafferty Construction Ltd. were funded by the Scottish Development Agency. The amount of money paid is a commercial matter between the agency and the companies involved. The five projects carried out by F. Lafferty (Civil Engineering) Company Ltd. and Lafferty Construction Ltd. have all been completed.

Schools and Colleges (Finance)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what information he bases his decision about the level of capital financing for Scottish schools and colleges.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The amount of the resources made available for distribution to local authorities for capital expenditure on schools and colleges is determined after taking account of the financial plans and representations submitted by the authorities and of information obtained during school and college inspections. The amount provided for grant aided colleges takes account of their institutional plans and of professional advice.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye of 21 March, Official Report, column 647, when he expects to be able to reply to the specific questions raised with him by the Federation of Highlands and Islands Fishermen in their original letter of 3 May 1989 with regard to the grounds on which the claim for compensation by the Ullapool Boat Owners Association has been classed as an application for operating aid and as to why the claim for compensation conflicts with community law; and when he expects to be able to supply the documents requested by the federation in their letter of 3 May 1989.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Any assistance provided to industry to compensate for changes in circumstances is regarded by the European Commission as an operating aid. This ruling derives from the Commission's interpretation of sections 92 and 93 of the treaty of Rome. The Commission has made it clear that any derogation by them in favour of such an aid would only be given where the aid had a structural purpose. This would not apply in the case submitted by the Ullapool Boat Owners Association. A formal reply was sent to the Federation of Highlands and Islands Fishermen on 13 March 1990.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will explain the criteria for the distribution of non-HRA allocations for 1990-91, with specific reference to the sums allocated to Orkney Islands council and Shetland Islands council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Non-HRA capital allocations for 1990-91 were determined on the basis of relative housing needs taking account of the authorities' own plans and priorities for tackling these needs. On this basis, Orkney Islands council has received an allocation of £1·15 million and Shetland Islands council has received £0·45 million, the latter meeting the council's request for resources virtually in full.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Sir John Farr: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if all the research into bovine spongiform encephalopathy is being concentrated under the consultative committee run by Dr. David Tyrrell; and if he will list where the £12 million for research over the next three years is to be spent;

(2) if it is the intention of the consultative committee under Dr. David Tyrrell to publish at least annual reports into their activities in the future.

Mr. Gummer: A research consultative committee of scientific experts chaired by Dr. Tyrrell was asked by my predecessor and the Secretary of State for Health to advise on the research work in progress, and additional work required into the disease bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE) and to set out priorities for further work. I announced the Government's response on 9 January.

My Department has committed £6·1 million over the next three years to spongiform encephalopathy research at the Central Veterinary Laboratory, at the Institute for Animal Health, AFRC/MRC Neuropathogenesis Unit, Edinburgh; and at the Royal Veterinary College, North Mymms. In the same period, the Department of Education and Science has provided for expenditure of £6·3 million on similar research through the Agriculture and Food Research Council at the neuropathogenesis unit and other research establishments.

The Secretary of State for Health and I have decided to reconstitute the research consultative committee as the spongiform encephalopathy advisory committee. Dr. Tyrrell has agreed to continue as chairman. The other members are Professor F. Brown, former deputy director (scientific) of the Animal Virus Research Institute, Pirbright, Dr. R. J. Will, consultant neurologist at the Western general hospital, Edinburgh, Dr. R. H. Kimberlin, an independent consultant, and Dr. W. A. Watson, former director of the Central Veterinary Laboratory. Mr. R. Bradley of the Central Veterinary Laboratory will act as an observer and observers from the Medical Research Council and the Agriculture and Food Research Council will participate as necessary.

The new committee will be asked to advise my Department and the Department of Health on matters related to spongiform encephalopathies. Its work and reporting will therefore be on an ad hoc basis.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the estimate of the Southwood committee of the level of reporting of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; what is the current level of reporting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Southwood working party did not predict the level of reporting of suspect BSE cases. At present, around 380 new suspected cases of BSE are being subjected to restrictions each week.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what significance he attaches to the rising incidence of confirmed bovine spongiform encephalopathy cases; when he expects the number of confirmed cases to stop rising; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: All available evidence on BSE point to a common source epidemic, through feed infected with scrapie, which has been cut off since July 1988. Although the number of suspect cases being notified is continuing to rise at present it is still expected that, provided cattle to cattle transmission does not occur, the incidence of disease will fall after 1993 as the proportion of animals which will have been fed ruminant protein diminishes.

Pesticides

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, what use he has made of his powers to ban the export of toxic pesticides which are already banned from use on agricultural products in the United Kingdom; and if he will consider taking powers to ban the import of any food that has been treated with a pesticide, the use of which has been banned in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Maclean: The United Kingdom participates in the United Nations environment programme's (UNEP) notification scheme under which we notify the importing country of any exports of pesticides which are banned or severely restricted here. A pesticide which is not approved in the country may legitimately be permitted in other countries, since usage, climatic conditions and soil types all have an important influence on safety. In the United Kingdom statutory maximum residue levels have been set for some pesticides which are not approved for use here.

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the regulatory process by which pesticides are approved.

Mr. Gummer: Following is the answer:

1. The statutory framework for the approval of pesticides is laid down in Part III of the Food and Environmental Protection Act 1985 and under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986. A system of Departmental and independent assessment of data ensures that only pesticides found to be safe are approved for use. The independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides, supported by the scientific subcommittee, take account of risks to humans, animals and the environment in making recommendations to Ministers on approvals.

2. The introduction of statutory controls on pesticides under FEPA has led to a significant increase in the volume of work in MAFF's and HSE's Evaluation Units. Although the waiting time for applications to extend uses of approved products has been halved over the past year, two key tasks remain: to review to current standards those products approved some time ago, and to speed up the consideration of applications for new pesticides. These are objectives to which consumer, environmental and industry interests attach great importance.

3. To meet these challenges my colleagues and I are providing for further substantial increases in resources in order to improve the effectiveness of the evaluation process. Within the MAFF Evaluation Unit the numbers of scientific staff in post have risen from 25 in April 1986 to 54 currently. In the coming 12 months we shall increase these by a further 60 per cent. to 86. We have introduced special pay scales to recruit and retain the specialised scientific staff required.

4. The physical resources available to the Unit are also being enhanced. New accommodation is being acquired, which will bring the Unit together on a single site, at the AFRC's Harpenden complex. This will be the first MAFF office to be equipped in 1991 with computerised office systems, costing about £1 million, to enhance efficiency.

5. In addition to recruiting extra scientists, we are planning to contract out discrete blocks of work in order to increase throughput. Several independent laboratories have been approached and specimen contracts will be issued shortly as a pilot exercise. The contract work will of course be subject to close monitoring for quality assurance. The internal resources saved will be switched to the highly demanding emergency reviews.

6. Because of the high standards of safety which we apply, and the complexity of modern regulatory work, the training of the new staff will be given high priority. Although this will absorb significant resources we nevertheless aim to increase threefold the capacity to process new pesticides, from eight in 1990-91, to 12 in 1991-92, 20 in 1992-93, and 25 per year thereafter. This is a realistic plan and these targets are stretching but achievable.

7. Similarly the number of reviews of older pesticides, full and partial, will rise from 12 in 1990-91 to 29 in 1991-92, and 37 in 1992-93. The total number of pesticides registered in the United Kingdom before 1981 is over 250 and all these will be reviewed, subject to a priority ranking exercise which is being established, with the advice of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides. For agricultural pesticides, we intend this work to form part of a co-ordinated 10-year European Community programme for the review of older pesticides. Indeed, what we have proposed will more than match our likely share of the Community programme. We always of course check as a matter of urgency any approved pesticides against which doubts have been cast. On non-agricultural pesticides the United Kingdom Government has taken the lead in pressing the EC for a harmonised approach similar to that proposed for agricultural pesticides.

8. We have already approached all approval holders to alert them to the review programme and to ask whether or not they hold data packages for their products which are capable of meeting modern standards. Those who have not replied will shortly have their approvals withdrawn.

9. To ensure that such a large review programme does not recur we have decided that in future all approvals will be time-limited, so that regular reviews will be required automatically if re-approval is sought.

10. Inevitably the increase in resources will give rise to an increase in fees for the approval of a new active ingredient. The increase from £7,000 to £30,000 has taken effect from yesterday. The pesticides industry as a whole has made public its willingness to pay for the additional resources necessary to provide a better service.

11. A key element in maintaining public confidence in the safety of approved pesticides is the advice from the Advisory Committee on Pesticides which is impartial and of the highest level of expertise. My colleagues and I have decided that all evaluations prepared by the Committee and the data underlying them will be made available for public scrutiny in as open a way as anywhere in the world.

12. Although our data indicates that our food generally contains very low levels of pesticide residues I have been examining how we might obtain further reassurance on the safety of our food. The Government already carries out an extensive programme of testing food, feedingstuffs, human tissues and wildlife, costing £1·5 million per year. We have approached representatives of food manufacturers, retailers, and local authorities who also perform a significant number of tests and they have in principle agreed to make their results available to the Government. This will greatly enlarge the data available on residues. For example, we know already that the number of samples of wheat available to us will be multiplied at least ten times.

13. In relation to non-agricultural pesticides there is also a good story to tell. Since April 1987 the numbers of HSE scientists dealing with pesticide approval have increased from 6·6 to 18·5. This will further increase to 25·5 in April 1990, and it is intended to reach the complement of 31·5 by April 1991. However, as with MAFF, this will require that the training of staff is given a high priority and there is no significant loss of staff to outside organisations.

14. Thus it is envisaged that by 1994 evaluation work of new active ingredients will start immediately an application for approval is received.

15. HSE plans to have completed its review programme of older non-agricultural pesticides within the next 10 years. Reviews have already been initiated on a number of active ingredients on which there has been public concern, and a review programme drawn up for the rest.

Salmonella

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the pasteurisation of eggs from salmonella enteritidis infected flocks in the United States of America; and whether he has any information on the incidence of food poisoning from pasteurised eggs from salmonella enteritidis infected flocks in the United States of America.

Mr. Maclean: Very little information has been published on either pasteurisation of eggs from infected flocks or the incidence of food poisoning from pasteurised egg produced from eggs from infected flocks in the United States of America.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will describe the procedure through which pasteurisation of eggs from infected flocks can encourage cross-contamination in circumstances where raw liquid egg is commonly contaminated by salmonella.

Mr. Maclean: The risk of cross-contamination exists in any food processing plant and therefore the use of contaminated raw materials should be avoided as far as possible. The possible routes of contamination will depend on several factors, including plant design, hygiene procedures etc.

Irradiated Potatoes

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what will be the effect on the production and identification of solanin in potatoes exposed to irradiation.

Mr. Maclean: In 1986 the Advisory Committee on Irradiated and Novel Foods assessed extensive data relating to the irradiation of potatoes and found no evidence of adverse effects.

Nitrates

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will obtain for his departmental library a copy of the book, "Nitrates: The Threat to Food and Water", by Nigel Dudley, published by Green Print.

Mr. Curry: We have already done so.

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the pilot nitrate scheme.

Mr. Gummer: Following extensive consultations on the pilot nitrate scheme, I have decided, subject to Commission clearance under article 93,3 of the treaty of Rome, to confirm that 10 areas should be designated as nitrate sensitive areas (NSAs), and that intensive advisory campaigns should be conducted in a further nine areas.

This important new pilot scheme is aimed at tackling the problem, experienced throughout Europe and elsewhere, of unacceptable levels of nitrate leaching from farmland into water sources. It will provide valuable insights into a problem which is not scientifically fully understood, and point the way for future policy. I hope the scheme will be a major success and that it will receive the high level of support which it deserves.

As indicated in earlier announcements, payments will be made to those farmers in nitrate sensitive areas who voluntarily undertake to observe restrictions on their agricultural practices. I hope that as many farmers as possible will enter our basic scheme under which payments will be made for restrictions on all their NSA land which, while substantial, will enable them broadly to maintain current farming patterns. These payments will vary depending on the nitrate sensitive area in line with overall differences in the costs of compliance between different areas.

Farmers who participate in the basic scheme will in addition be able to enter the premium scheme, by converting some or all of their arable land to various forms of grassland. Payments will vary depending on the nitrate sensitive area (since overall assessments of the costs of compliance differ), the option chosen, and the proportion of a farmer's land affected, (since the latter affects the fixed cost savings). The premium scheme requirements will help to protect the environment generally and promote conservation.

The areas, basic rates of payment, and premium rates for conversion of arable to unfertilised ungrazed grassland are as follows, (£/ha):

Nitrate sensitive areas (NSAs)

	Basic	Premium [percentage of total holding] 0-25	25-75	75-100
1. Sleaford (Lincolnshire)	85	380	290	200
2. Branston Booths (Lincolnshire)	95	380	290	200
3. Ogbourne St. George (Wiltshire)	55	380	290	200
4. Old Chalford (Oxfordshire)	55	330	265	200
5. Egford (Somerset)	55	380	290	200
6. Boughton (Nottinghamshire)	75	280	240	200
7. Wildmoor (Hereford and Worcestershire)	70	280	240	200
8. Wellings (Staffordshire and Shropshire)	65	280	240	200
9. Tom Hill (Staffordshire)	70	280	240	200
10. Kilham (Humberside)	55	330	265	200

Premium rates (which are paid in addition to basic rates) will be adjusted, in relation to those shown above, as follows:

For unfertilised grazed grass	30/ha less
For grass with up to 150 kg N/ha	110/ha less
For grass and woodland	100/ha less

Though for the latter, payments under the farm woodland scheme should also apply.

Intensive pig and poultry farmers will receive individually assessed payments towards the cost of additional storage (pig farmers only) and/or transport requirements calculated against number of livestock.

The advisory areas will be as follows:

1. The Swells (Gloucestershire)
2. Bircham and Fring (Norfolk)
3. Hillington, Gayton and Congham (Norfolk)
4. Sedgeford (Norfolk)
5. Fowlmere (Cambridgeshire)
6. Far Baulker (Nottinghamshire)
7. Dotton and Colaton (Devon)
8. Cringle Brook (Lincolnshire and Leicestershire)
9. Bourne Brook (Warwickshire)

All farms in the advisory areas will be visited by an ADAS officer and encouraged voluntarily to follow practices designed to reduce the risk of nitrate leaching at little or no cost to themselves or even a small benefit.

Full details of the measures and payment rates have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. The Secretary of State for the Environment and I shall be laying before the House in due course a statutory instrument designating the NSAs and setting out the measures and payment rates under the basic and premium schemes. Our intention is for the order to come into effect by 1 June.

Bass

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he proposes to introduce his proposals for nursery areas for the conservation of bass.

Mr. Curry: I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Sea Fisheries Committees

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will list the membership of each sea fisheries committee; how many vacancies there are in each committee; and what organisation each member of the committee represents.

Mr. Curry: The membership of sea fisheries committees is made up of persons separately appointed by county or metropolitan district councils, the National Rivers Authority and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food or the Secretary of State for Wales. The relevant numbers appointed to each committee are currently as follows:

Committee	Councils	NRA	Ministers	Total
Cornwall	13	1	12	26
Cumbria	7	1	6	14
Devon	10	1	8	19
Eastern	10	1	9	20
Isles of Scilly	4	0	4	8
Kent and Essex	10	1	7	18
North Eastern	18	1	15	34
Northumberland	10	1	9	20
North Western and North Wales	18	1	16	35
Southern	10	1	8	19
Sussex	10	1	9	20
South Wales	10	1	9	20

The Sea Fisheries Regulation Act 1966 requires that those persons appointed by Ministers must be acquainted with the needs and opinions of the fishing interests of the district. Persons are not appointed, however, on the basis of their representing particular organisations. At the present time there are no vacancies amongst the Ministers' appointees.

Agricultural Workers

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average number of hours worked weekly by agricultural workers in each year since 1979.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested, based upon continuous surveys of the earnings and hours of hired agriculture workers conducted by the agricultural departments, is shown in the table.

Average weekly hours of regular whole-time hired male workers, 20 years and over, in agriculture, United Kingdom 1979–89

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the average level of gross weekly earnings for agricultural workers in each year since 1979 in cash, constant prices and as a proportion of national average manual earnings.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested, based upon continuous surveys of the earnings and hours of hired agricultural workers conducted by the agriculture departments, is shown in the table.

Land Drainage

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will indicate the arrangements which will need to be applied, following the introduction of the community charge, to precept drainage rates for those internal drainage boards which are not properly constituted under the Land Drainage Act 1976.

Mr. Gummer: The Internal Drainage Boards (Finance) Regulations 1990 which were laid before Parliament on 23 January, modify the powers of internal drainage boards to make and levy drainage rates under and in accordance with provisions of the Land Drainage Act 1976 or the provisions of any local Act. They apply to the raising of expenses for financial years commencing 1 April 1990.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what arrangements currently exist to ensure that internal drainage boards do not levy precepts on domestic dwellings that would otherwise be disproportionate to the resources devoted to agricultural land drainage; and whether any new arrangements will apply following the introduction of the community charge.

Mr. Gummer: The arrangements for financing internal drainage boards have been modified in the light of the new system of local government finance operative from 1 April: the changes, including the proportions of a board's expenses to be raised by drainage rates on the agricultural sector and special levies on the non-agricultural sector via charging authorities, are set out in the Internal Drainage Boards (Finance) Regulations 1990 which were laid before Parliament on 23 January. Provision has been made for boards to continue to be able to levy differential amounts in respect of areas (sub districts) considered to benefit less from their operations. Also charging authorities will be entitled to appoint members to the boards to which they contribute by virtue of special levies.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Allocations)

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what criteria he applies in determining the allocation of police to each county in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend considers applications for increases in police establishments on the basis of the demonstrated needs of forces and in the light of advice from Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary. The general criteria which govern assessment of applications for increases are set out in Home Office circulars 114/1983 and 106/1988, copies of which are available in the Library.

Imprisoned Mothers

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will consider allowing imprisoned mothers to have day parole to visit their children.

Mr. Mellor: Powers already exist for the temporary release of sentenced prisoners for this purpose and they are used in appropriate circumstances.

Marchioness

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to make all police and Government reports and associated papers available to the coroner's inquest into the deaths of those aboard the Marchioness.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Secretary of State does not have power to direct the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis or other Government Departments to disclose reports to a coroner's inquest, but in this particular case I am not aware that the coroner is experiencing any difficulties in obtaining the information that he needs.

Deportation

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been served with the notice of the intention to make deportation orders against them on the grounds that this would be conducive to the public good for reasons of national security in the past 12 months; and if he will provide a breakdown of their countries of citizenship.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 28 March 1989, 14 Iranians and one Iraqi have been served with notice of intention to make deportation orders against them on these grounds.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Manchester, Withington on 6 March, Official Report, column 560, at which institutes of education the 15 deported Iranian citizens involved in education were studying.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Seven were studying at the university of Manchester institute of science and technology, two at South Bank polytechnic, one each at Brunel university, the polytechnic of Central London, the City of London polytechnic, the university of Bradford and Middlesex polytechnic. The remaining student had previously studied at Hatfield polytechnic.

Asylum

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the Turkish Kurdish asylum seekers who sought entry in May and June 1989 whom he was minded to refuse have since been granted refugee status;

(2) how many of the Turkish Kurdish asylum seekers who sought entry in May and June 1989 and who were initially granted one year exceptional leave to remain have since been recognised as refugees.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: A total of 240 of the Turkish nationals who sought asylum on arrival in April, May and June 1989 have been recognised as refugees. Central records do not distinguish at what stage of the procedure applicants were granted refugee status and this could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what inquiries are made into the political affiliations and background of interpreters before they are used in asylum cases.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: All prospective interpreters are interviewed by a chief immigration officer or more senior officer to assess their linguistic qualifications and personal suitability. Other checks may be made if necessary.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the length of time it is taking to process applications to vary one year exceptional leave to remain permits to refugee status under the 1951 convention on refugees.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: These applications are dealt with as quickly as possible by the refugee section of the immigration and nationality department. Priority is however being given to resolving outstanding applications for asylum made by some 3,700 Turkish nationals on arrival in April, May and June 1989.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make a statement on the length of time it is taking for decisions to be reached on whether to grant entry clearance to the dependents of Turkish Kurdish asylum seekers who have been granted one year exceptional leave to remain.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no provision in the immigration rules for this purpose. Dependents are normally admitted to join a person granted exceptional leave if he is still in the United Kingdom after four years. However, all applications for entry clearance in these cases are referred to the Home Office to consider whether there are special circumstances which would justify earlier admission. Decisions on these applications are reached as soon as possible.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will place in the Library a copy of (a) the training manual for immigration officers who interview asylum seekers and (b) any written instructions that are given to interpreters.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is no single comprehensive training manual for immigration officers who interview asylum seekers. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given in reply to a question by him on 14 November 1989 at column 205. On the question of instructions for interpreters, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given in reply to a question by him on 14 November 1989 at column 203.

Interpreters

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the immigration service is still utilising the interpreting skills of Mr. Gurdenez.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Yes.

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there has been any change in selection and training procedures for interpreters following the case of Mr. Gurdenez.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No, but an interpreter employed for the first time is now required to give a written undertaking that he will translate faithfully and to the best of his ability.

Suicide

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a month by month breakdown of the information given in the table in his answer of 12 March, Official Report, columns 18-21, in respect of inmates in Armley prison, Leeds, for suicides and attempted suicides in 1989.

Mr. Mellor: The table gives the number of inmates who were found at an inquest to have committed suicide, and who attempted suicide, at Leeds prison in each month during 1989.

Suicides and attempted suicides at HM prison Leeds in 1989

Sir Charles Irving: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many suicides and how many attempted suicides have taken place in penal establishments in each of the last 10 years; and how many of these were (a) remand prisoners, (b) female prisoners, (c) prisoners under 21 and (d) prisoners from ethnic minorities;

(2) how many suicides and how many attempted suicides have taken place in each individual penal establishment in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Mellor [pursuant to his reply of 12 March at column 18]: I now understand that the figure of 64 given for the number of attempted suicides at Leeds prison during 1989 was incorrect. The correct figure is 58. The table is an amended version of table A in my earlier answer.

Notes:

[1] Figures in brackets are for attempted suicides.

[2] Inquests have yet to be held on seven inmates who died in 1989 and whose deaths are thought to have been suicides. These deaths occurred at Her Majesty's prisons Brixton, Cardiff, Long Lartin, Manchester, Rochester and Swansea and at Her Majesty's remand centre Risley.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether the presently proposed fees for (a) firearms certificates and (b) shotgun certificates cover the administration of both the 1968 and 1988 Firearms Acts;

(2) what proportion, or amounts of the presently proposed fees increase for (a) firearms certificates and (b) shotgun certificates are related to the Firearms Act 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The proposed fees do not include any costs arising from the administration of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988. These will be assessed during the course of the multi-force scrutiny being undertaken by the Association of Chief Police Officers.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he consulted the Firearms Consultative Committee before proposing increases in fees for firearms and shotgun certificates and their renewal or variation.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. It is for the Government to decide the level at which firearms fees should be set based on its policy of full recovery of the costs of administering the firearms licensing system. However, any views that the Firearms Consultative Committee may wish to put to the Home Secretary about the way in which firearms controls are administered will be carefully taken into account.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will place in the Library a copy of the views of the Firearms Consultative Committee on his proposals to increase fees for the issue, renewal or variation of firearms and shotgun licences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Firearms Consultative Committee is an independent statutory body. It is for the committee itself to decide whether any views which it may have on the proposed fees increase should be included in the annual report which it is required to make to my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary and which, once made, will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he intends to introduce further increases in the fees for (a) firearms certificates and (b) shot gun certificates this year.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We propose to adjust the fees for both firearm and shot gun certificates in the light of the findings of a multi-force scrutiny of the firearms licensing system being undertaken by the Association of Chief Police Officers. The results of the scrutiny should be known later this year, though it is not possible at this stage to say whether any further increases in fees will be introduced in 1990.

Tape Recorded Evidence

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what level of charges has been set, and on what basis, for the supply of copies of tape recordings made in the course of police investigation of criminal matters; and on what date such charges were introduced.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Whether charges are made and the level of those charges are matters for individual chief officers to determine.

Mr. Bermingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he proposes to take to ensure that those representing defendants in contested criminal matters are supplied with copies of tape recordings made during investigations; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Home Office circular 76/1988, which gives guidance to the police about tape recording interviews with suspects, gives the suspect and his legal representative a right of access to a copy of the master tape if he is to be prosecuted. In practice he will either receive a copy of the tape or be afforded facilities to listen to one at a police station.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Waddington [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The Home Office spent approximately £3,404,000 on management and computer consultancies, excluding hardware and software purchases, in 1989. The Home Office has budgeted to spend approximately £3,729,000 in the current year. The following contracts were awarded to management and computer consultants in 1989:

Overseas Travel

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people travelled overseas for the years ended September 1988 and September 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

It is estimated that United Kingdom residents made 28·1 million trips abroad in the year ending September 1988 and 30·8 million trips in the year ending September 1989.

ENVIRONMENT

Coventry City Council

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will establish an investigation into the conduct of the Coventry city council housing committee; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no powers to intervene.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will take steps to ensure that there is no use of undue or illegal pressure on tenants of Coventry city council in relation to their right to determine whether to transfer to alternative landlords.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has no powers to intervene.

Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received concerning the conduct of Coventry city council in relation to its tenants and the prospective establishment of housing associations; what response he has made; and if he will bring forward proposals for legislative powers to allow investigation of alleged malpractice in respect of the provisions for enabling local authority tenants to transfer to other landlords.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 30 January 1990]: It has been suggested to me that Coventry city council is opposed to its tenants exercising tenants' choice. Alternative landlords under tenants' choice are approved by the Housing Corporation in many areas of the country, including Coventry.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress Britain is making towards implementing the Montreal protocol on chlorofluorocarbon reductions.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 21 March 1990, c. 667]: I regret that my earlier reply incorrectly stated that the United Kingdom had reduced production and consumption of CFCs by 50 per cent. when the statement was true only in respect of consumption. Production has been significantly cut since 1986 but not yet by that much. The difference between reductions in production and consumption is largely accounted for by United Kingdom exports of CFCs and the fact that our trading partners have not been able to match our performance in the reduction of CFC consumption.

Planning Policy Guidance Notes

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the new planning policy guidance notes to replace the existing PPG3, "Land for Housing".

Mr. Moynihan: In the late spring or early summer.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each criterion used to assess the standard spending assessment for Kirklees council for the year 1990-91; how the appropriate level of Government grant is then calculated for each individual criterion; and what is the total amount of Government grant actually awarded to Kirklees council for each individual criterion.

Mr. Chope: The standard spending assessment (SSA) for Kirklees is calculated according to the formulae set out in the Revenue Support Grant Distribution Report (England) approved by this House on 18 January. Revenue support grant is distributed so that all authorities, including Kirklees, could set a community charge of £278 (before the safety net and special grants) in 1990-91 if they and the authorities' precepting on the collection fund in their area spent at the level of their standard spending assessments. In addition to revenue support grant for 1990-91 Kirklees will receive £37 million or £132 per adult from the combined effect of the safety net and the special grant for low rateable value areas.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether there are any community charge havens around the coast apart from Caldey Island.

Mr. Chope: No. The Caldey Island Bill, about to come before Parliament, would make residents of Caldey Island subject to the community charge.

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of financial support towards revenue expenditure to be provided by central Government for the first year of the new local government finance system in England.

Mr. David Hunt: Central Government are providing over £15 billion of financial support towards revenue expenditure for the first year of the new system.

In 1990-91 aggregate external finance of £23·1 billion will be provided to local government to finance local authority services in England. The redistributed proceeds of the new business rate pool will be £10·43 billion, while central Government are providing approximately £12·7 billion in financial support, made up of £9·4 billion of revenue support grant and £3·2 billion in specific grants.

Central Government are also providing around £2 billion for community charge benefit in England, which is in addition to the £0·4 billion cost (estimated on an England only basis) of the once-for-all uprating of income support in April 1989 to provide help towards the remaining portion of the charge. Local authorities are to be reimbursed in full for the cost of transitional relief, which in England in 1990-91 will be £350 million (part of the £810 million the Government will provide in the first three years of the new system).

Help will be provided towards councils' administrative costs for the transitional relief scheme amounting in 1990-91 to £21 million.

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has yet made regulations relating to the use of new economic development power for local authorities in section 33 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: I recognise the important role that local authorities have to play in this area. Local authorities have been invaluable in supporting start-up businesses where venture capital from the private sector could be less readily obtainable.

I know of many examples of existing good practice in economic development by local authorities, in many cases working with central Government or European Commission programmes. Regulations will ensure that local authorities' proposals are well-targeted and used in an effective and sensible way.

I have now laid before Parliament the Local Government (Promotion of Economic Development) Regulations 1990. The power for local authorities to take steps for the promotion of economic development came into force on 1 April 1990. Where local authorities choose to use their existing powers to promote economic development the regulations will not apply until 1 July 1990. Transitional provisions are also included for commitments entered into before 1 April 1990.

Section 33 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 provides a general power for local authorities to take steps for promoting the economic development of their area. It specifies a wide range of activities that a local authority can undertake for that purpose, but without prejudice to the generality of the power. The power also will enable local authorities to make grants to voluntary bodies to assist in the task of promoting economic development. However, there are certain activities that the Government consider are not appropriate for local authorities:

Local authorities will not, subject to certain important exceptions, themselves be able to undertake banking, investment business, insurance, estate agency, auditing, conveyancing, valuations, manufacturing or trading (regulation 5). They will, however, be able to assist others to do so.

There is no geographical restriction other than that on the power to give grants, loans and financial guarantees to undertakings conducted with a view to a profit, but only where that assistance exceeds £10,000 per annum to any one business (regulation 7). Where it does exceed that level the power to give such assistance is limited to those authorities in parts of the country which already receive some form of central Government priority, or where they form part of a travel-to-work-area with above average unemployment.

The regulations contain no restrictions on the giving of grants or subsidies to trainees or to the providers of training. However, with effect from 1 April 1991, the provision of training or education services by local authorities that are not education authorities, other than for their own members or employees, must be in line with a broad programme of such services agreed with the education authorities (regulation 8(2)). This will prevent conflict or unnecessary duplication of effort between authorities.

Direct wage subsidies to commercial undertakings are not permitted (regulation 6(2)) but there are specific exemptions. These cover grants towards the cost of employing persons who have been unemployed immediately before becoming employed by the grant recipient and grants towards the cost of employing trainees and those with particular skills. The regulations do not restrict such grants given as part of a central Government or European Commission scheme.

The regulations do not, otherwise, prevent the doing of anything connected with the provision of training facilities, the construction or maintenance of buildings or the management of any land in which the authority has an interest, the promotion of tourism or the provision of information to the public (regulation 5(2)).

Separate regulations will be made covering the procedures for the notification to the European Commission of local authority aid to industry under articles 92-94 of the treaty of Rome. Those regulations will not come into force before 1 July 1990.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a further statement on community charge liability for seafarers and offshore workers.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 April 1990]: I have nothing to add to the answer that I gave my hon. Friend on 21 March 1990 at column 660.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the total budgeted local government expenditure in England and Wales for 1990-91; and how much of this will be raised by (a) the community charge, (b) the uniform business rate and (c) Government grant;

(2) what was the total budgeted local government expenditure in 1989-90 for England and Wales; and how much of this was raised by (a) domestic rates, (b) non-domestic rates and (c) rate support grant.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Total budgeted local government expenditure in 1989-90 for England is £29,564 million. Domestic rate income, non-domestic rate income, and rate support grant are £9,679 million, £9,680 million, and £9,577 million, respectively. Total budgeted expenditure for all English authorities in 1990-91 is not yet available. Information relating to Welsh local authorities is a matter for the Secretary of State for Wales.

Residuary Body, London

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many buildings have been in the ownership of the London residuary body since the abolition of the Greater London council; how many of these have been sold to sitting tenants; how many have been transferred to the local borough council; how many have been transferred to Bromley borough council for onward sale; and what has happened to each of the remaining buildings.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Around 7,000 properties or managed units were vested in the London residuary body on abolition of the Greater London council. Without a case-by-case examination of all transactions, the number of sales to sitting tenants cannot be estimated. Some 550 properties have been transferred to borough councils and a further 50 to other public authorities. Schedule 2 to the London Residuary Body (Transfer of Property etc.) Order 1990 lists properties to be vested in the London borough of Bromley provided they had not already been disposed of when the order came into force on 29 March, and schedule 3 to the same order lists properties that have not otherwise been disposed of to be retained by the London residuary body.

Sewerage

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many short sea outfalls known to his Department discharge untreated sewage into the sea around the coast of England.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are 344 short outfalls—those less than 500m in length—in England which discharge to coastal or estuarial waters. At most of these sewage is discharged either with no treatment or with screening of gross solids only.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be publishing the results of his research into the survival of viruses in sewage-polluted bathing waters.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The research project by WRC on rotaviruses in sewage discharges is proceeding satisfactorily and we expect to receive the final report of the study shortly.

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Chris Patten: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) Complaints made	(b) Complaints upheld
1989-90	[1]	[1]
1988-89	51	11
1987-88	64	1
1986-87	57	2
1985-86	47	1
1984-85	53	1
1983-84	44	4
1982-83	63	3
1981-82	57	4
1980-81	70	5

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the PCA upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

EPOCH

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made in the European Communities climatology and natural hazards research programme; and how many institutions from the United Kingdom currently participate in EPOCH.

Mr. Trippier: The European Communities climatology and natural hazards research programme EPOCH runs for four years from its adoption on 20 November 1989. The European Commission has invited research proposals which are still undergoing selection with the advice of member states; it is not yet possible to say how many United Kingdom institutions will participate.

Association of London Authorities

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent meetings he has had with the chairman of the environment committee of the Association of London Authorities; and if he has any plans for a meeting.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has had no such meetings recently and has no plans for any. However, he is always willing to consider any representations the association may wish to put forward about environmental issues.

Low-level Waste, Warrington

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the reasons notified to him as to why certain low-level radioactive wastes are being deposited at Arpley meadows, Warrington, rather than at Drigg.

Mr. Trippier: The proposals made comply with the criteria published in "Radioactive Substances Act 1960, A Guide to the Administration of the Act", as suitable for disposal at landfill sites other than Drigg. I remain satisfied that such disposals are safe.

Fisons

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking over the agrochemicals company Fisons in respect of damage to (a) over 60 acres of peat bog at Thorne moors and Hatfield moor near Doncaster and (b) 62 acres on the north-west of Thorne moors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am advised by the Nature Conservancy Council that:

(a) The incident of damage to some 62 acres of peat bog occurred some two years ago. Contrary to recent media reports, the NCC has resolved the issue by discussion with Fisons plc. Negotiations to establish a nature reserve agreement over an area of land with the required potential for restoration are under way.

(b) Fisons plc is operating on Thorne moors with the benefit of planning consent. The NCC and Fisons plc have made considerable progress towards an agreed plan of working and restoration methods to be used. It would be a matter of considerable regret if precipitate action by either party should jeopardise this dialogue.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what applications for import licences have been received in respect of ivory exported from Zaire in June 1988 by Mr. Shiraz Virji of Ealing.

Mr. Trippier: The Department has received no such applications.

European Environment Agency

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on progress made in setting up the European Communities European Environment Agency; and what communications he has received from the chairman of the European Parliament's Environment Committee on the scope of the agency.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Amendments put forward by the European Parliament to the draft regulation on setting up the European Environment Agency were to a large extent agreed at the Environment Council on 22 March 1990, including a proposal to review the future scope of the agency in two years. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment met the chairman of the European Parliament's Environment Committee on 20 February and the scope of the agency was fully discussed. It is hoped that the regulation will be formally adopted at the next Environment Council this June.

Most member states have offered to host the agency's headquarters. The United Kingdom has nominated Cambridge as an ideal site but a decision on location has yet to be made.

Water Pollution Reports

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in his departmental library copies of research reports 1 to 11 in the water pollution report series of the European Commission's environment research programme within Directorate-General XII.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: These reports contain proceedings of a number of technical workshops organised by the European Commission under its environmental protection research programme and have been placed in the Library of the House.

Environment Research

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what financial or other resource commitment the United Kingdom has made towards the newly founded European environmental research organisation.

Mr. Trippier: None. It is our view that the European Environmental Research Organisation, which has very broad aims, should work within the framework of existing national and international bodies.

MIRAGE

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what role is played by (a) his Department and (b) United Kingdom scientists in the European Communities MIRAGE programme on the migration of radionuclides in the environment; and what benefits are expected to accrue from this programme for the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: My Department contributes to United Kingdom participation in the MIRAGE programme. United Kingdom scientists carry out research as part of this programme leading to an improved understanding of the mechanism and processes that control the migration of radionuclides in the geosphere.

EC Director-General (Environment)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the Director-General for the Environment (DG-XI) of the European Commission; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Trippier: The Director-General for the Environment (DG-XI) was present at the meeting of the Environment Council which my right hon. Friend attended on 22 March. The outcome of the discussions was reported in my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 March.

Council House Sales, Norwich

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further information he has on the determinations of the district valuer on council house sales in Norwich and the prices quoted by Norwich city council to update the information given in his written answer to the hon. Member for Norwich, North of 13 February, Official Report, column 186.

Mr. Chope: In the three months to 31 March, the district valuer made 36 determinations of value under section 128 of the Housing Act 1985 on the application of tenants of Norwich city council. The value determined was lower than the council's opinion of value in 33 cases by an average of £4,204 or 8 per cent. and the same in three cases.

Asbestos

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implementation of European Council directive 87/217/EEC on asbestos in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Trippier: As regards emissions to air, the Control of Asbestos in the Air Regulations 1990, which come into force on 5 April, give statutory force to the emission limit contained in the directive and impose a general duty not to cause significant environmental pollution by asbestos. All industrial plants involving the use of asbestos, as defined in the directive, are already subject to control by the relevant national air pollution inspectorates.

The statutory powers necessary to secure compliance with the directive's requirements on discharges of asbestos to water are contained in the effluent discharge requirements of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 and the Trade Effluent (Prescribed Processes and Substances) Regulations 1989.

The disposal of waste containing asbestos is controlled according to the directive's requirements by the site licence system under the Control of Pollution Act 1974, the Collection and Disposal of Waste Regulations 1988 and the Control of Pollution (Special Wastes) Regulations 1980, and by the containment and labelling requirements of the Control of Asbestos at Work Regulations 1987.

The directive is being implemented through parallel legislation in Northern Ireland.

Council of Environment Ministers

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting of the European Council of Environment Ministers on 22 March.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 March at columns 117-18.

Rent Arrears

Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the latest figures on the arrears of rent outstanding to each local housing authority in England.

Mr. Chope: I have today arranged for this information to be placed in the Library.

Waste Damage (Civil Liability)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he received a copy of the European Commission proposal for a Council directive on civil liability for damage caused by waste, COM (89) 282 Final Syn 217; and what consideration has been given to the proposals.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The Secretary of State received a copy of the draft European Commission proposal in late September 1989. The Government's initial consideration was incorporated in an explanatory memorandum put before Parliament on 27 October 1989.

Environmental Education

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department makes to the Foundation for Environmental Education in Europe.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The Foundation for Environmental Education in Europe (FEE Europe) is a voluntary organisation based in Holland. As a result my Department does not contribute to it.

Toxic Waste

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any notification from Leigh Environmental Ltd. for the development of a toxic waste disposal facility at Todmorden in the Pennines.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The Secretary of State has received no such notification. It is initially for the appropriate local planning authority to consider any application for the development of a waste disposal facility.

College Green (Demonstration)

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to whom, for what purpose and for how long he has granted permission to people to mount a demonstration on College Green.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Permission was given to four people to hold a protest against the community charge on Abingdon street gardens during park opening hours (5 am until midnight) from 9 am on 26 March until noon on 31 March.

EC Environmental Programme

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the European Council of Environment Ministers last discussed progress in implementation of the fourth environmental action programme; and what matters remain outstanding in the programme.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 30 March 1990]: On 19 October 1987 the Council of Ministers agreed a resolution on the European Community's fourth environmental action programme, which emphasised the importance of concentrating on certain priority areas. Since then Ministers have not specifically discussed the action programme, but all the priority areas have been addressed in meetings of the Environment Council.

Tourist Information

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reviews his Department is undertaking in respect of privatising local authorities' tourist information points; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I have been asked to reply.

My Department is not undertaking any such reviews.

Property Services Agency and Crown Suppliers

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the transitional arrangements for occupational pensions of employees of the Property Services Agency and the Crown Suppliers which will apply between the date of sale and the provision to be made by the new employers.

Mr. Chope: Occupational pension schemes will be effective from the date of sale or the start of trading as a wholly-owned Government company, as appropriate. The staff will be asked whether they wish to join the relevant scheme, and if so, whether they wish to transfer to it any benefits they have accrued in the principal civil service pension scheme.

Water Privatistion

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the administrative costs of the sale of the 10 water public limited companies.

Mr. Trippier: The costs to the Government in 1989-90 of the water share offers are estimated to be as follows:

	£ million
United Kingdom offers
Underwriting	33·2
Selling and broking commission	6·7
Marketing	17·5
Share information office	7·2
Prospectus production and distribution	11·5
Receiving banks	17·7
Advisers' fees	18·7
Total (United Kingdom offers)	112·5
Overseas offers	15·4
Total (United Kingdom and overseas offers)	127·9

These costs represent about 2·5 per cent. of the proceeds from the sale of shares in the water share offers, which are estimated at £5,113 million. The costs exclude stamp duty and VAT on services provided to the Government which are not net costs to the Exchequer.

The figures above also exclude the overall net capital injection into the plcs of £1,499 million, as explained by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Folkestone and Hythe (Mr. Howard) in reply to the question from my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 26 October 1989 and the costs incurred in earlier years which totalled £6 million (excluding VAT) as provided by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in reply to the question from the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 12 March 1990, Official Report, column 103.

WALES

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total publicity and advertising expenditure, including for privatisation, of his Department and public bodies for which his Department has responsibility in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Peter Walker: My Department's records show expenditure on its own promotional material in 1979-80 as £85,000. The estimated expenditure in 1989-90 is £2,169,000.

Planned expenditure on publicity by public bodies for which my Department is responsible was about £8 million in 1989-90. Comparable figures for 1979-80 are not available.

The Department contributed to the cost of the sale of the 10 water authorities in 1989. The overall costs of this sale have been outlined in a response to my hon. Friend the Member for Dulwich (Mr. Bowden) by my hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the figures for the spending by his Department on (a) television advertising, (b) radio advertising, (c) newspaper advertising and (d) other promotional material in 1979-80 and in each following year; and what is his latest estimate for the current year and budget for 1990-91.

Mr. Peter Walker [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1990, c. 14-16]: The table sets out corrected information:

Promotional expenditure by the Welsh Office

Year	Radio advertising	Television advertising £	Newspaper advertising £	Other £
1979-80	Nil		61,000	24,000
1980-81	Nil		62,000	22,000
1981-82	Nil		100,000	44,000
1982-83	Nil		99,000	28,000
1983-84	Nil		108,000	34,000
1984-85	Nil		66,000	100,000
1985-86	Nil	Nil	31,000	92,000
1986-87	Nil	27,000	49,000	331,000
1987-88	Nil	39,000	191,000	615,000
1988-89	Nil	64,000	112,000	1,105,000
1989-90	Nil	57,000	354,000	1,758,000

The total provision for promotional expenditure in 1990-91 is £2,772,000.

HIV Infection

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last five years by health authority (a) the total number of people who are HIV positive as the result of contaminated blood transfusions and (b) the number of haemophiliacs who are HIV positive as the result of contaminated blood transfusions.

Mr. Grist: No. For reasons of confidentiality, the AIDS (Control) Act 1987 requires health authorities to report cases numbering between one and nine (inclusive) as "less than 10". In Wales, the number of those infected by contaminated blood transfusion is small and to publish in the form requested could lead to the identification of individuals.

Drinking Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether any patients in Wales have become ill as a result of drinking water containing nitrates at levels above that specified in EEC directives.

Mr. Grist: No information is collected either by the Department or by district health authorities which would identify whether patients in Wales have become ill as a result of drinking water containing nitrates. The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989 No. 1147) incorporate the EC limits relating to nitrates and I am not aware of any case of excess being reported.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether there has been any cases in Wales whereby hepatitis E has been contracted from faecally-infected drinking water.

Mr. Grist: No.

Cardiac Technicians

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will meet representatives of cardiac technicians to discuss their role in health provision in Wales;

(2) what information he has on the relative pay levels of cardiac technicians in each district health authority in Wales;

(3) what representations he has received concerning the pay of cardiac technicians; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: An agreement was reached last year in the professional and technical "B" Whitley council for the introduction by 1 April 1990 of a single pay and grading system for a number of technician groups including cardiac technicians. As an interim measure, from 1 September 1989 cardiac technicians will have been automatically transferred, on the basis of their existing grades and pay codes to a new common pay spine ranging from £4,743 to £14,223. Employing authorities are currently reviewing the posts of all staff concerned in order to assign them to grades in the new structure by 1 April 1990. This review enables management to take account of the individual requirements of the different technician groups with the result that pay levels within each district authority will vary according to the needs of their own services. No representations have been received by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in this connection and I have no information about grading decisions taken by health authorities in Wales. I would consider that a meeting with representatives of cardiac technicians would be of relatively little value at the present time.

Hospices

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many hospices there are in Wales; and what plans he has to increase the number of hospices in Wales.

Mr. Grist: There is one voluntary hospice in Wales providing in-patient care and one joint NHS-charitable trust continuing care unit for the terminally ill. Additionally, there are four organisations providing services in the community for terminally ill people and their families. Plans for expansion of this type of care are for individual health authorities and the voluntary sector.

Council Houses

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many council houses have been sold to sitting tenants in Wales in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is given in the table:

Sales of Local Authority and New Town dwellings to sitting tenants Wales

	Number
1980	2,080
1981	8,810
1982	16,361
1983	9,337

1986	5,455
1987	5,710
1988	9,623
1989	12,793

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will update the figures given in his reply of 16 November 1989, Official Report, column 462, on council house stocks and sales, to the latest available date.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is shown in the table:

	Sales of local authority dwellings May 1979 to December 1989	Estimates of local authority stock April 1989[1]

[1] Revised. District stock estimates are only available at 1 April

[2] Excludes dwellings in Newtown

[3] Includes dwellings in Cwmbran. Records of sales in Cwmbran are only available since 31 March 1980.

Self-employed Persons

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the number of self-employed persons in Wales; what were the corresponding figures for 1980 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: In September 1989 there were estimated to be 192,000 self-employed persons in Wales. The corresponding figures for September 1980 and September 1985 were 118,000 and 148,000 respectively.

Housing Associations

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact of Government funding methods which involve housing associations finding a portion of their cash in the private sector on the median rents in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: The rent levels of housing provided under mixed funding is a matter for individual housing associations. Mixed funding, which was pioneered in Wales, has enabled Welsh housing associations to provide a record number of additional homes for people in need this year.

European Commissioner for Regional Development

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met the European Commissioner for Regional Development.

Mr. Peter Walker: I met Commissioner Millan as part of the discussions on the eligibility for EC aid of industrial areas. My officials regularly visit the regional policy directorate in Brussels.

Dampness (Housing)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to tackle dampness in houses in Wales.

Mr. Grist: Dampness which is prejudicial to health could render a house unfit. The current home improvement grant arrangements provide help towards the cost of dealing with severe dampness. Under the new renovation grant arrangements which replace this system on 1 July mandatory grant will be available to enable properties to meet the fitness standard. The new arrangements will ensure that maximum assistance goes to those in greatest need.

Teachers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what were the number of head teachers and deputy head teachers in Wales resigning or opting for early retirement in each year from 1985 to 1989;

(2) what were the numbers of mid-career school teachers resigning in each year from 1985 to 1989.

Mr. Roberts: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he proposes to meet teachers from Wales to discuss their salary levels.

Mr. Peter Walker: Responsibility for teachers' pay rests with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Science, who is currently undertaking consultation on the recommendation of the interim advisory committee report on school teachers' pay and conditions for 1990-91.

A55 Expressway

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the estimated completion dates on each of the sections of the A55 expressway currently under construction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: The contract completion dates on each of the sections of the A55 north Wales coast road currently under construction are:

	Date
A55 Travellers Inn improvement	October 1990
A55 Conwy crossing	August 1991
A55 Pen-y-Clip	November 1993

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the earliest date for the completion of the Conwy A55 expressway tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: As stated in reply to a question by the hon. Member for Newport, East (Mr. Hughes) on 2 April 1990 the contractual date for the completion of the A55 Conwy crossing is August 1991. Progress to date has been good with five of the six tunnel units in place. The bypassing of Llandudno junction is expected later this year.

Examinations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people sat (a) GCSE and (b) A level examinations in (i) politics, (ii) British constitution and (iii) political history in 1989.

Mr. Roberts: A total of 332 candidates sat GCSE and 279 sat A-level WJEC examinations in politics and government in 1989. The WJEC does not offer separate examinations in British constitution or political history. No information is available centrally on other candidates in Wales who sat examinations set by other examination boards.

School Closures

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which (a) infants schools, (b) primary schools and (c) secondary schools have closed in Wales in each of the last 10 years in each local education authority.

Mr. Roberts: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Art Colleges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the art colleges of Wales; and what is the cost to the Exchequer and local government of educating a student at art college who completes the course.

Mr. Roberts: There are no monotechnic art colleges in Wales. Courses in art are available at the following institutions:

South Glamorgan Institute of Higher Education
Gwent College of Higher Education
West Glamorgan Institute of Higher Education
North East Wales Institute of Higher Education
Carmarthenshire College of Technology and Art
Llandrillo Technical College
Gwynedd Technical College
Coleg Powys
Pembrokeshire College of Further Education
Crosskeys Tertiary College
Pontypool Tertiary College
Ebbw Vale Further Education College
Newport Further Education College
Pontypridd Technical College
Bridgend College of Technology
Ystrad Mynach College of Further Education
Merthyr Technical College
Coleg Glan Hafren
Barry College of Further Education
Afan Tertiary College
Gorseinon Tertiary College
Neath Tertiary College
Swansea Tertiary College

Information on the cost of individual art courses is not available centrally.

High Schools

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the high schools he has visited in Wales.

Mr. Roberts: Since September 1988 my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State or I have visited 11 maintained secondary schools in Wales.

I hope to visit a further three maintained secondary schools during this school year.

Parent-governors

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of parent-governors of local education authority schools he has met.

Mr. Roberts: Welsh Office Ministers regularly meet parent-governors during official and constituency engagements.

Porthcawl Town Council

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish any recent correspondence he has received from Porthcawl town council about Dunraven Court flats.

Mr. Grist: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Flood Damage

Sir Anthony Meyer: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if expenditure on financial assistance to farmers whose land has been affected by sea water will require access to the Contingencies Fund.

Mr. Peter Walker: Yes. As I announced on 14 March, parliamentary approval for this exceptional measure will be sought in a revised estimate for the agricultural services, etc. Wales vote (class XVI, vote 2). Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £150,000 will be met by repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what spending increases Welsh local authorities have budgeted for 1990-91; whether he intends to use his powers to limit the charges set by any Welsh authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has today made a statement about charge limitation in England. He indicated the criteria used to decide whether to designate authorities. Similar criteria have been adopted for Wales; under those criteria, no Welsh authorities are selected for designation.

I have today placed in the Library of the House tables showing the spending decisions of each county and district council, its community charge and associated information. Collectively Welsh local government has in this first year of the new system decided to set budgets which exceed the settlement by over £100 million. The result is that the community charge will average £232, rather than the £173 which I consider would have been necessary to maintain existing service levels and meet unavoidable new pressures.

There is a considerable variation in the position of individual authorities. While some have had the good sense to moderate their spending increases, to the great advantage of their charge payers, a number have decided on spending increases which are unnecessarily high and impose significant extra burdens on their charge payers. Councils which have imposed unnecessarily high charges will now have to account to their charge payers for their decisions. It is for Welsh charge payers to seek explanations for these high spending increases: it is for them to judge whether the explanations they are given are acceptable.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the number of people in Wales who will become eligible for a community charge rebate following the rise in the capital disregard to £16,000.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not available. Sufficient data are not available to provide a reliable estimate for Wales only.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts, excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Peter Walker [holding answer 28 March 1990]: We estimate that our expenditure on management and computer consultancies in the financial year 1989-90 will be £434,650. Details of those consultancies awarded in that year are as follows:

Firm	Subject of Assignment
South Glamorgan Institute of Higher Education	Review of Mudiad yr Meithrin (MYM)
Price Waterhouse	Management arrangements at the Polytechnic of Wales Training Needs Analysis Option appraisal of arrangements for the provision of nurse education in Wales
Peat, Marwick and McLintock	Review of the Valuation and Community Charge Tribunal
Ernst and Young	Setting up and launch of Welsh Health Planning Forum Final Performance Test on new finance computer
Leslie Hayes Consultancies Ltd.[1]	Evaluation of Regional Enterprise Grant (REG)
Deloittes	Review of cancer treatment service in North Wales
Touche Ross	Management Review of NHS Directorate
Wales and South West Regional Research Laboratories	IT strategy for the Department's Social Services Inspectorate
BIS Ltd.	Feasibility study into IT strategy for Welsh Office Agriculture Department

Budgets for 1990-91 have yet to be finalised.

[1] Jointly commissioned by DTI, Scottish Office and Welsh Office.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Force Survey

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give, from Labour Force survey evidence for the years 1984 to 1989, by male, married female and non-married female, the number of people in Great Britain classed as economically inactive according to ILO/OECD definitions in each of the categories (i) student, (ii) long-term sick or disabled, (iii) looking after family/home, (iv) retired from paid work, (v) believes no jobs available, and (vi) any other reason, by whether they stated they would like a regular paid job at the moment and were free to start work within two weeks, would like a regular paid job but were not free to start work within two weeks and would not like a regular paid job at the moment.

Mr. Nicholls: Estimates from labour force surveys, as requested, are shown in the following table:

Tourism

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if his Department has conducted on assessment of the likely impact on the tourist trade of displaying danger signs on beaches where the water fails the European Economic Community pollution levels for safe bathing.

Mr. Nicholls: My Department has not conducted any such assessment.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many basic inspection visits were paid by the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last five years to Shell Stanlow; and what precise qualifications the inspecting inspectors possessed.

Mr. Nicholls: The following table shows the number of preventive inspection visits paid by Health and Safety Executive inspectors to Shell Stanlow in each of the last five years.

Year 1 January to 31 December	Number of inspection visits
1985	6
1986	9
1987	6
1988	9
1989	17

The formal qualifications held by the inspectors who carried out the inspections are: honours degrees in chemistry, special chemistry, applied chemistry and geology; master's degree in combustion and explosion, PhDs in kinetics, and polymer chemistry; post-graduate diplomas in occupational safety and health.

In addition, during the same period, a total of 156 visits were paid to the site for other purposes, for example, to give advice, to check specific issues of compliance and to investigate accidents.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many fully trained and qualified inspectors the Health and Safety Executive Bootle area office chemicals group currently has; and if he intends increasing their number in the fiscal year 1990-91.

Mr. Nicholls: There are seven trained inspectors with inspection responsibility for the chemical industry based in the Health and Safety Executive's (HSE) Merseyside area office. There are no immediate plans to increase this number, but HSE keeps the allocation of inspectors to area offices and industry groups under review.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many improvement and prohibition notices have been issued to Shell Chemicals at Stanlow, whole site, in the last five years by the Health and Safety Executive; and if any prosecutions for non-compliance with health and safety legislation have been initiated.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive has not issued any improvement or prohibition notices or initiated any prosecution against Shell Chemicals, Stanlow, in the last five years.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when Shell United Kingdom Ltd., Stanlow, submitted to the Health and Safety Executive the safety case required under the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazard Regulations 1984.

Mr. Nicholls: Shell, Stanlow, which includes Shell United Kingdom Ltd, submitted the first part of the Safety Report required under the Control of Industrial Major Accident Hazards Regulations to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE) on 3 March 1989. The fourth and final part was received by HSE on 7 July 1989.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when the Health and Safety Executive began examining the safety case submitted by Shell Stanlow; and when the Health and Safety Executive expects to complete its vetting and approval of the safety case.

Mr. Nicholls: The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) began examining the safety report submitted by Shell, Stanlow, in March 1989. This examination is continuing.

HSE does not approve safety reports. They are used as working documents to aid future inspection.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing by standard category the unemployment levels in Greater Manchester at the latest available date and at the same period five and 10 years ago.

Mr. Nicholls: The information contained in the following table is available from the Library.

Unadjusted unemployment in Greater Manchester metropolitan county

February	Unemployed claimants
1990	94,368
1985	180,525
1980	73,558

Note: Direct comparisons over time are affected by various changes to the count and in particular the change in October 1982 from a count of registrants at jobcentres to one of claimants at unemployment benefit offices.

Hotels and Guest Houses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list by tourist board area the latest information he has on the mean percentage change in charges by (a) hotel and (b) guest house owners following the introduction of the uniform business rate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available.

Wages Inspectors

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report,, column 59, what was the number of wages inspectorate officers in the divisional offices with responsibility for Wales, by grade, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is given in the following table.

Until 1987, wages inspection in Wales was administered from a divisional office in Cardiff and the table shows the number of staff based there.

The Cardiff office closed in that year as part of a nationwide rationalisation of inspectorate offices. Responsibility for wages inspection in Wales transferred to Manchester and Bristol, but it is not administered separately from the other areas covered by those offices. The figures for 1987 to 1989 are, therefore, the totals employed at Manchester and Bristol in those years.

Employment Training

Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many filled employment training places there are in the borough of Ogwr; and what percentage this represents of the original departmental projections.

Mr. Nicholls: On 9 March, the latest date for which information is available, there were 370 people on employment training in the borough of Ogwr. Departmental projections are for internal management purposes only.

Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total expenditure on the £10 employment training trainee allowance in December 1989 for the borough of Ogwr.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is not available.

Mr. Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of unemployed receiving enterprise training within employment training between September 1988 and December 1989 for the borough of Ogwr.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is not available for the borough of Ogwr and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Youth Training

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is to be the face value of the credits he announced for the pilots in youth training; and in which geographical areas the pilots will take place.

Mr. Eggar: On 27 March, I published a prospectus inviting training and enterprise councils to bid to run pilot schemes of training credits for young people. It will be for the councils in their bids to propose the face value of credits in their area. At this stage, however, I think it is unlikely that any credit would carry a value of less than £1,000.

I will be looking for a geographical spread of pilots throughout Great Britain. The actual range will depend on the quality of bids received.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to increase the level of expenditure on youth training.

Mr. Nicholls: Planned expenditure on YTS is set out in the Public Expenditure White Paper, a copy of which can be found in the House of Commons Library.

In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend announced in a statement in the House on 27 March increases in expenditure for training and enterprise councils in England and Wales and local enterprise companies in Scotland to run pilot training credit schemes from April 1991 (Official Report, column 211).

Second Languages

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has undertaken any recent research into the demand by employers for British employees to have a command of a second language.

Mr. Eggar: My Department has not undertaken any such recent research.

Skill Centres

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will explain how rule 8 of the rules governing acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants was applied from autumn 1988 to the three civil servants who are directors of Astra Training Services Ltd.; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether the rules on acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants applied to the three civil servants who are also directors of Astra Training Services Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Members of the management buyout team did not form a company and become directors of it until May 1989. This was after my right hon. Friend's statement to the House of 13 March 1989 about the privatisation of STA, in which he announced the existence of a management buyout team.

The rules on acceptance of outside appointments by Crown servants do not cover the particular circumstances of a management buyout; nevertheless—as I explained in my reply to the hon. Member on 27 March—measures were taken in April 1989 to remove the three officers concerned from direct responsibility for sensitive decisions, well before they formed a company.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 27 March, why he is unable to provide the honourable Member for Bradford, South with the amount of fees and expenses paid to Deloittes and other advisers until summer 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have nothing to add to my answer to the hon. Member on 27 March at column 158. Total fees and expenses paid to all advisers from the start of the feasibility study in December 1988 up to 26 March 1990 were £514,850. This figure excludes VAT.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the grades and range of duties of the three civil servants forming Astra Training Services Ltd.

Mr. Eggar: The duties and grades of the three civil servants are: head of skill centre operations grade 5, head of finance and accounting service grade 6, head of product development grade 6.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the investment in plant and machinery allowed for in the next financial year to each skill centre being purchased by Astra Training Services Ltd.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The plans made by Astra Training Services Limited for those parts of the Skills Training Agency they will purchase include investment of over £11 million in the first three years of operation. The precise details of their intended investment is a matter for Astra.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the price to be paid by Astra Training Services Ltd. for the training college at Letchworth; why it is to be relocated at Milton Keynes; what is to happen to the existing premises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have agreed terms of sale with Astra Training Services Limited covering 46 skillcentres, together with the Skills Training Agency's head office, mobile training service, sales teams and colleges, and involving a payment from the Government to Astra of some £11 million. Any value Astra may have ascribed within the sale package to individual units such as the training college at Letchworth is a matter for them. It is Astra's decision to relocate the business to Milton Keynes. The existing premises at Letchworth will be offered for sale by the Government in due course.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who were the official advisers to the three civil servants who became directors of Astra Training Services Ltd. from autumn 1988; and who paid the fees involved.

Mr. Eggar: The three members of the management buyout (MBO) team who formed Astra Training Services Limited, appointed Coopers and Lybrand to advise on their bid for the Skills Training Agency and Irwin Mitchell to provide legal advice. As envisaged in the statement by my right hon. Friend the Member for Sutton Coldfield (Sir N. Fowler) on 13 March last year (Official Report, column 23), the Government offered the MBO team financial assistance to make a bid. That assistance will be repayable to the Government when the sale is concluded, leaving Astra to finance the full cost of advisers' fees as part of the costs of the acquisition.

Earnings

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average level of gross weekly earnings for (a) agricultural workers and (b) manual workers in the manufacturing industries in each year since 1979 in cash, constant prices and as a proportion of national average manual earnings.

Mr. Nicholls: Information for Great Britain, on the average gross weekly earnings of full-time manual male adult employees by industry in April of each year, is published in table 4 of part A of the annual new earnings survey reports, copies of which are in the Library. Information on the retail price index (all items) to deflate the cash figures to constant prices is published for April of each year in table 26 of the annual supplement to Economic Trends.

Working Hours

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average number of hours worked weekly by (a) agricultural workers and (b) manual workers in the manufacturing industries in each year since 1979.

Mr. Nicholls: Information for Great Britain on average weekly hours worked in April of each year by full-time manual male adult employees, by industry, is published in table 4 of part A of the annual new earnings survey reports, copies of which are in the Library.

Child Care Allowance

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many single parents are on each Government training scheme; how many single parents on those schemes take up the child care allowance available; what is the total annual cost of the child care allowances scheme; and what is the estimated cost of providing child care allowance on training schemes for all married women who could potentially enter those schemes.

Mr. Nicholls: Information about the number of single parents on training schemes run by the Training Agency is not available. Only single parents on employment training may claim child care allowances. At the end of December 1989, the latest date for which information is available, about 3 per cent. of all trainees on employment training were receiving child care allowances at an estimated annual cost for 1989-90 of £15 million. An estimate of the cost of providing child care allowances for all married women on training schemes could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Disabled People (Employment Review)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when his Department originally commissioned the ministerial review on employment services for people with disabilities; when his Department originally intended to publish the review; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The review of services provided by my Department for the employment of people with disabilities was commissioned in March 1988. It was always intended that the results would only be published after a thorough consideration of all the issues concerned.

As announced in my reply to the right hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, South (Mr. Ashley) on 12 March 1990 (Official Report, column 135], the preparation of the consultative document which will give the results of the review is almost complete. It will be published as soon as account can be taken in it of the results of the survey of people with disabilities in the labour market which my Department has commissioned. We currently anticipate that this will be during the course of June 1990.

DEFENCE

Weapons Projects

14. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons development procurement projects have exceeded their original estimates by more than 10 per cent.; and what is the total amount of overspend involved.

81. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons development procurement projects have exceeded their original estimates by more than 10 per cent.; and what is the total amount of overspend involved.

84. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons development procurement projects have exceeded their original estimates by more than 10 per cent.; and what is the total amount of overspend involved.

100. Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many weapons development procurement projects have exceeded their original estimates by more than 10 per cent.; and what is the total amount of overspend involved.

Mr. Alan Clark: Three major weapons projects currently in development or production have, in real terms, exceeded their original estimate by more than 10 per cent.; the total amount involved, in current prices, is £383 million.

Czechoslovakia

15. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the proposed pull-out of Soviet forces from Czechoslovakia.

36. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the proposed pull-out of Soviet forces from Czechoslovakia.

75. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the proposed pull-out of Soviet forces from Czechoslovakia.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the proposed pull-out of Soviet forces from Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Tom King: We warmly welcome the planned withdrawal of Soviet forces from Czechoslovakia, in keeping with the wishes of the Czechoslovak people, and hope that this will contribute to enhanced security for all European nations. The United Kingdom remains firmly committed to the NATO Alliance which offers the best guarantee of maintaining peace and security in Europe.

Nuclear Submarine Bases

16. Mr. Sillars: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from the Labour party in Scotland on nuclear submarine bases on the Clyde.

56. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has had from the Labour party in Scotland on the removal of nuclear submarine bases on the Clyde.

58. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from the Labour party in Scotland on nuclear submarine bases on the Clyde.

66. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received from the Labour party in Scotland on nuclear submarine bases on the Clyde.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I am not aware of any.

Arms Conversion

17. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing an arms conversion agency.

26. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing an arms conversion agency.

55. Mr. Litherland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing an arms conversion agency.

78. Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider establishing an arms conversion agency.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. As I informed the hon. Member for Leeds, West on 6 March, British industry is responsible for determining its product ranges, not the Government.

Mr. Colin Wallace

18. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set up a meeting between officials in his Department and Mr. Peter Broderick to consider the case of Colin Wallace.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No. I understand that Mr. Calcutt is in touch with Mr. Broderick about matters relevant to Mr. Wallace's appearance before the civil service appeal board. If Mr. Broderick has other information about Mr. Wallace's case which he believes should be considered by the authorities, he should submit it to the authorities.

Short-range Nuclear Weapons

19. Mr. Terry Fields: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is NATO's current policy on the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

27. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is NATO's current policy on the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

59. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is NATO's current policy on the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is NATO's current policy on the modernisation of short-range nuclear weapons.

Mr. Tom King: NATO allies are agreed that our peace and security will continue to depend on nuclear deterrence; for this policy to be effective, nuclear systems will need to be kept up to date where necessary.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent consultations he has had with his European counterparts in NATO about the deployment of short-range nuclear weapons in Europe; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend meets my NATO counterparts on a regular basis to discuss matters of mutual interest, including nuclear issues. They will next meet at the nuclear planning group meeting in Canada in May.

West Germany

20. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was discussed.

80. Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was discussed.

88. Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was discussed.

104. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was discussed.

Mr. Tom King: I last met Dr. Stoltenberg during the Anglo-German summit on 30 March. We discussed a range of current defence issues, including the security implications of German unification.

37. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the Defence Minister of the Federal Republic of Germany; and what subjects he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the West German Defence Minister; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Following their discussions during the Anglo-German summit last week, my right hon. Friend next expects to meet Dr. Stoltenberg at the nuclear planning group meeting on 9 to 10 May.

Strategic Defence Initiative

21. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next proposes to meet his United States counterpart to discuss the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Tom King: I expect to see Secretary Cheney at NATO ministerial meetings in May when we will be discussing a wide range of defence issues.

Low Flying

22. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received in respect of low-flying aircraft.

Mr. Neubert: During February 1990 the Ministry of Defence received 389 inquiries and complaints about military low-flying training in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he expects any change in the need for low-flying exercises over the United Kingdom due to changes in the role of NATO.

Mr. Neubert: For the United Kingdom to maintain a modern and effective air force, there will be a continuing need for low-flying exercises in the United Kingdom. Future training requirements will, however, naturally reflect force structures which, as my right hon. Friend has made clear, will need to take account of international developments and progress in arms control negotiations.

50. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representation he has received about the extent of low-flying training in northern England and the Borders.

Mr. Neubert: Between 1 January and 28 February 1990 the Ministry of Defence received 225 inquiries and complaints from northern England and the Borders about military low flying.

Central Europe

23. Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment his Department has made concerning the Soviet Union's ability to launch suprise, large-scale offensives in central Europe.

60. Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment his Department has made concerning the Soviet Union's ability to launch suprise, large-scale offensives in central Europe.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hendon, South (Mr. Marshall) on 2 March 1990, Official Report, column 382.

Radiation

24. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken following studies on radiation exposure in the Ministry of Defence work force since 1978.

72. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken following studies on radiation exposure in the Ministry of Defence work force since 1978.

74. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken following studies on radiation exposure in the Ministry of Defence work force since 1978.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken following studies on radiation exposure in the Ministry of Defence work force since 1978.

Mr. Neubert: In the 11 years since 1978 radiation exposures have been kept under continuous review to ensure exposures are authorised only on the basis that they are justified, comply with statutory limits, and are

"as low as reasonably practicable"

(ALARP). This review is MOD policy and will continue.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has considered any recent studies on the effects of radiation upon individuals and their children; and what implications these may have for armed service personnel and defence workers involved in nuclear defence.

39. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has considered any recent studies on the effects of radiation upon individuals and their children; and what implications these may have for armed service personnel and defence workers involved in nuclear defence.

63. Mr. Ray Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has considered any recent studies on the effects of radiation upon individuals and their children; and what implications these may have for armed service personnel and defence workers involved in nuclear defence.

103. Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has considered any recent studies on the effects of radiation upon individuals and their children; and what implications these may have for armed service personnel and defence workers involved in nuclear defence.

Mr. Neubert: We have noted the preliminary advice on the Gardner study given to the Department of Health by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment (COMARE). We accept COMARE's view that it is not possible for it to make specific recommendations on reducing risks until the results of other studies are known and there is further information on possible causal mechanisms.

The Ministry of Defence will, therefore, continue its current policy of authorising exposures to armed service personnel and defence workers only on the basis that they are justified, comply with MOD and statutory limits, and are

"as low as reasonably practicable"

(ALARP).

Dr. Owen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people in the royal dockyards in (a) Plymouth and (b) Rosyth have had more than a 100 milliSieverts lifetime dose since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: There are currently 96 employees at Devonport and 136 at Rosyth who have radiation dose records maintained by the approved dosimetry service (the defence radiological protection service), showing cumulative or lifetime radiation exposures in excess of 100 milliSieverts since the date of first starting radiation work.

Greenham Common

25. Mr. Benn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the future of RAF Greenham Common.

42. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the future of RAF Greenham Common.

73. Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent representations he has received concerning the future of RAF Greenham Common.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the right hon. and hon. Members to the answer given to the hon. Member for Falkirk, East (Mr. Ewing), at column 615 of Hansard dated 6 March.

Foxhunter Radar

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Foxhunter radar is currently performing according to its original specifications.

28. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Foxhunter radar is currently performing according to its original specifications.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Ashfield (Mr. Haynes).

Nuclear Test Veterans

29. Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on compensation paid to nuclear test veterans in other countries.

35. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on compensation paid to nuclear test veterans in other countries.

91. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on compensation paid to nuclear test veterans in other countries.

94. Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has on compensation paid to nuclear test veterans in other countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are aware that procedures exist in certain other countries by which compensation may be paid to nuclear test veterans in accordance with the laws and benefits systems in force in those countries.

Royal Army Veterinary Corps

30. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he is now in a position to announce the outcome of his review of the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We hope to be in a position to make an announcement shortly.

Procurement

31. Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the organisation of his procurement services of the activities of the defence contractors' lobbyists.

67. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the organisation of his procurement services of the activities of the defence contractors' lobbyists.

98. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the organisation of his procurement services of the activities of the defence contractors' lobbyists.

99. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for the organisation of his procurement services of the activities of the defence contractors' lobbyists.

Mr. Alan Clark: None. I would regard the representations of the defence contractors' lobbyists as being of a lower level of importance than those of right hon. and hon. Members with a constituency interest.

77. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on programmes for joint procurement for equipment within NATO.

Mr. Alan Clark: There are many programmes for joint procurement of defence equipment between NATO nations. The conference of national armaments directors (CNAD) and the independent European programme group (IEPG) have an important role to play. In addition, groups of NATO nations may decide on a joint programme outside these formal structures. A current list of joint procurements in which the United Kingdom participates is published annually in the statement on the Defence Estimates.

East Germany

32. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the result of the East German election.

53. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the result of the East German election.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom defence policy of the result of the East German election.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for City of Durham (Mr. Steinberg).

Defence Review

33. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the additional resources required to undertake a defence review.

46. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the additional resources required to undertake a defence review.

Mr. Tom King: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Wansbeck (Mr. Thompson).

NATO Nuclear Planning Group

34. Mr. Heffer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters he expects to discuss at the next NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

49. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters he expects to discuss at the next NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

68. Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what matters he expects to discuss at the next NATO nuclear planning group meeting.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 2 April, Official Report, column 445.

Argentina

38. Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contacts there have been between British and Argentine naval officers in the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: British and Argentine naval officers have met under official auspices on one occasion in the last five years. This took place on 22 February 1990 when HMS Endurance made a good will visit to the Argentine Antarctic base Jubany during her routine deployment to the Antarctic treaty area.

Military Doctrine

40. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department made to the military doctrine seminar held in Vienna under the confidence and security-building measures negotiations.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The British representatives made a substantial and well-received contribution to the military doctrine seminar in Vienna, including several presentations on United Kingdom military doctrine and defence policy.

NATO Secretary General

41. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the Secretary General of NATO; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 6 March at column 620.

48. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the Secretary General of NATO; and what subjects he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend regularly meets the Secretary General of NATO. Their next scheduled meeting is at the NATO nuclear planning group in Canada on 9 to 10 May when a range of defence issues will be discussed.

Comprehensive Concept (NATO)

43. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department is still working within NATO's comprehensive concept.

64. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department is still working within NATO's comprehensive concept.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Arms Control

44. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department is making to the process of verification within the arms control process.

101. Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department is making to the process of verification within the arms control process.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence plays a part, as the United Kingdom is the host nation, in the reception of inspections of the United States facilities at RAF Greenham Common and RAF Molesworth conducted by the Soviet Union under the intermediate nuclear forces (INF) treaty; and conducts and receives inspections of activities under the Stockholm document. The Department is also making a full contribution both nationally and within NATO to the development of proposals for the verification requirements of a conventional forces in Europe (CFE) treaty and a chemical weapons convention; and for the further development of confidence and security building measures (CSBMs) and related initiatives such as the proposed open skies treaty. The steps being taken to establish the joint arms control implementation group (JACIG) were described in my answer of 7 March 1990 to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell), column 622.

Training Exercises

45. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what major training exercises are planned for the next 12 months; and if he will give details of their timing and location.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Atomic Weapons Establishments

47. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the proposed contractorisation of atomic weapons establishments.

Mr. Neubert: Since the announcement on 5 December 1989 by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, further progress has been made towards the contractorisation of the atomic weapons establishment.

An implementation support group has been formed at AWE. Its first task is preparation for the initial phase, in which a contractor will be appointed to strengthen the management of AWE by bringing in a small number of experienced managers from the private sector. Invitations to tender will be issued shortly.

Conventional Forces in Europe

51. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been made of the effect on British military forces of a successful agreement at the CFE talks.

79. Mr. Harry Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been made of the effect on British military forces of a successful agreement at the CFE talks.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to my right hon. Friend's answer of 6 March to the hon. Member for Woolwich (Mr. Cartwright), Official Report, column 712.

Service Personnel

52. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures his Department is taking to retain trained service personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Cambridgeshire, North-East (Mr. Moss).

Maritime Measures

54. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has considered any proposals on maritime confidence-building measures.

102. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has considered any proposals on maritime confidence-building measures.

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has considered any proposals on maritime confidence-building measures.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill (Mrs. Fyfe).

Disarmament Conference

57. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contribution his Department is making to the conference on disarmament.

Mr. Archie Hamilton The Ministry of Defence contributes in a number of ways to the conference on disarmament, particularly through the provision of military, technical and scientific staff and advice to the United Kingdom delegation in Geneva.

Warsaw Pact

61. Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent contacts members of his Department have had with Warsaw pact countries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, North-West (Mr. Bellingham) on 29 March, Official Report, column 283.

Threat Assessment

62. Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department has altered its threat assessment.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Beaconsfield (Mr. Smith) on 6 February 1990, Official Report, column 600.

Military Assistance

69. Mr. Donald Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military assistance his Department has provided to overseas Governments in the past year.

82. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military assistance his Department has provided to overseas Governments in the past year.

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military assistance his Department has provided to overseas Governments in the past year.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on 6 March 1990, Official Report, column 619.

F15E Aircraft

70. Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions have been taken on basing the F15E aircraft in the United Kingdom.

76. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions have been taken on basing the F15E aircraft in the United Kingdom.

95. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what decisions have been taken on basing the F15E aircraft in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier today to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mr. Flannery).

United States Defence Secretary

71. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the United States Defence Secretary; and what issues he expects to discuss.

87. Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next intends to meet the United States Defence Secretary; and what matters he proposes to discuss.

89. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, when he next plans to meet the United States of America Defence Secretary; and what issues he expects to discuss.

90. Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he next plans to meet the United States of America Defence Secretary; and what issues he expects to discuss.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Orkney and Shetland (Mr. Wallace) on 6 February 1990 at column 597.

Nerve Agents

83. Dr. Moonie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the deployment of United States binary nerve agents on British soil.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) to the hon. Member for Leyton (Mr. Cohen) on 24 July 1986 at column 490, to which I have nothing to add.

Lance Missile

85. Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any plans for a replacement for the Lance missile to be deployed.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there are any plans for a replacement for the Lance missile to be deployed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The NATO Alliance has agreed to leave a decision on a replacement for the Lance missile until 1992.

Conventional Weapons

86. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made concerning Soviet production of conventional weapons over the past 12 months.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Soviet Union continued to produce large numbers of conventional weapons in 1989, although in certain categories, especially tanks and fighter aircraft, we believe there were significant reductions in output.

Vickers Factory, Leeds

92. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning his visit to Vickers plc tank factory in Barnbow, Leeds, on Friday 16 March.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend visited Vickers Defence Systems factory at Barnbow, Leeds, at the company's invitation as part of his series of visits to major defence contractors.

Defence Expenditure

93. Mr. Ashton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what changes in defence expenditure he has now planned for the financial year 1992-93.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to Cm. 1001, "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93," chapter 1, where the information requested appears in table 1.1.

Soviet Navy

96. Mr. Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the modernisation programme for the Soviet navy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Modernisation of the Soviet Navy continues in all key areas and its capability continues to improve with the acquisition of new and more up-to-date warships and submarines with modern, technologically advanced weapons systems.

Eastern Europe

97. Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the degree to which recent developments in eastern Europe have affected the requirements for the defence of the United Kingdom home base.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We welcome the recent developments in eastern Europe which have in large part been brought about by NATO's policy of dialogue and deterrence. We continue to believe that defence of the United Kingdom home base is best achieved by maintaining our commitment to the NATO alliance, which provides the best guarantee of peace and security in Europe.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Bristol, North-West (Mr. Stern).

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last discussed the future of the European fighter aircraft with his German and Italian counterparts.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he last met the Defence Ministers of Britain's partners in the European fighter aircraft programme; what was discussed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend met both his German and Italian counterparts during March. Useful discussions were held on a number of topics, including the European fighter aircraft.

Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make it his policy to announce his decision on the choice of radar for the European fighter aircraft by oral statement to the House.

Mr. Alan Clark: The manner of such an announcement will be decided at the time that a decision on the radar is reached.

Mr Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what year it is planned to bring the European fighter aircraft into service; and what is the current planned production offtake.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have nothing to add to the answers I gave to the hon. Member on 15 January, columns 125-26, on 28 February, column 354, and on 26 March, column 24.

Trident

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about the progress of the Trident programme.

65. Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the latest progress on the Trident nuclear missile programme.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Trident programme continues to progress to time and budget towards its in-service date of the mid-1990s.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many representations he has received over the past 12 months about the Trident nuclear programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has received a number of letters from individuals and organisations over the past year about the Trident programme.

British Aerospace (Strike)

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the effect on deliveries to the services of the recent British Aerospace strike; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The strike at British Aerospace has disrupted the delivery schedules of the Tornado and Harrier aircraft with seven Tornados and six Harriers delayed so far.

Action is in hand to recover the situation on Tornado which is produced at the company's Lancashire sites, where normal working was resumed earlier this month. But industrial action at the Kingston plant continues to affect the production of the Harrier.

There is as yet no impact on our operational capability.

Submarines

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he now expects to put proposals for the extremely low-frequency transmitter at Glengarry forest to the Highland regional council planning authority.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Houghton and Washington (Mr. Boyes) on 19 February, column 573.

Brawdy

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the proposed relocatable over-the-horizon radar at Brawdy, Wales, will be assigned to NATO.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what links are proposed between the projected relocatable over-the-horizon radar at Brawdy and the United Kingdom regional air operations centre.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what links are proposed between the relocatable over-the-horizon radar at Brawdy and the United Kingdom national joint ocean surveillance information centre.

Mr. Alan Clark: It would be premature to consider the possible operational assignment of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom before the results of its planned two-year trial have been fully assessed.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date agreement was reached with the United States authorities on the sharing of costs for construction of a relocatable over-the-horizon radar at Brawdy, Wales; what is the agreed apportionment of costs; and what will be the total cost to the United Kingdom defence budget of the construction of the facility.

Mr. Alan Clark: The arrangements agreed with the United States authorities to cover the two-year trial of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom are that the United States Government will supply the radar; the United Kingdom Government will provide and prepare the operational sites; and the running costs of the trial will be shared. These arrangements are encapsulated in a memorandum of understanding to be signed shortly. The total cost to the United Kingdom defence budget of the installation of the radar and the running costs of the trial will be about £15·5 million over the entire period.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date the decision was taken to select Brawdy as the site for the United States Navy relocatable over-the-horizon radar.

Mr. Alan Clark: The locations selected for the two-year trial of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom are St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, as the transmitter site, and Blakehill radio station, Wiltshire, as the receiver site. A formal decision to select these two locations for the trial was taken recently, following a survey of possible sites which began in 1987.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his plans for conducting an environmental impact assessment on the proposed construction of an over-the-horizon radar facility in Wales.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Gower (Mr. Wardell) on 30 March 1990 at column 328-29.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the proposed location of (a) the transmitter facility, (b) the receiver facility and (c) the operations control centre for the relocatable over-the-horizon radar proposed for construction in Wales; what is the total land area required for each site; and what proportion of the required land is already owned or leased by his Department.

Mr. Alan Clark: The locations selected for the two-year trial of an over-the-horizon radar in the United Kingdom are St. David's airfield, Pembrokeshire, as the transmitter site, and Blakehill radio station, Wiltshire, as the receiver site. The trial operations will be conducted from Blakehill. Both sites are owned by the Ministry of Defence. St. David's airfield is more than sufficiently large for the installation of the transmitter; at Blakehill, we will need to acquire some additional land adjacent to the present MOD boundary to accommodate the receiver.

Procurement Executive (Relocation)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the reasons for dispersal from London of the headquarters of his Department's procurement executive; and how his Department's policy has altered on this matter since 1979.

Mr. Neubert: The reasons for the relocation of procurement executive staff were set out in my reply of 27 March, col. 101, to the hon. Member for Wansdyke (Mr. Thompson).

As in 1979, efficiency, cost-effectiveness, and affordability are key factors in our decisions on such projects. A wide range of other considerations, including regional issues, are also given due weight.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will review the decision to disperse the procurement executive headquarters of his Department to Keynsham, near Bristol.

Mr. Neubert: No. The conclusion of the studies into the relocation of procurement executive staff were subject of comprehensive review before the decision I announced on 27 March, column 101.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the dispersal of his Department's procurement executive headquarters from London to Keynsham, near Bristol, refers to the same block of employees as were to be dispersed to St. Mellou's, near Cardiff, in 1978, pursuant to the Hardman report of 1975; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: The 1978 proposal included moving the procurement executive's land and air systems controllerates to Cardiff. These controllerates form the bulk of the staff that it has now been decided to relocate to Keynsham; however, the ordnance board and London-based defence contracts staff are now also included.

Select Committee on Defence

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy on the provision of information to the Select Committee of Defence.

Mr. Tom King: It is my policy to respond as helpfully as possible to requests from Select Committees.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 4 April 1990

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Marchioness

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General whether the Director of Public Prosecutions has now received the results of the police investigation into the sinking of the Marchioness; and when he expects to reach a decision on whether to prosecute.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Attorney-General whether it is proposed to bring any criminal prosecutions in relation to the sinking of the Marchioness; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The results of the police investigation of the sinking of the MV Marchioness have been submitted to the Director of Public Prosecutions, the final report having been received on 22 March 1990.

The evidence has been submitted to Treasury counsel for advice. Consideration of the case is proceeding with all proper expedition.

Mortgage Lenders

Mr. Speed: To ask the Attorney-General if he intends to prohibit mortgage lenders from offering loans to their customers on exceptionally favourable terms if more than one service is offered as part of the loan package.

The Attorney-General: The Courts and Legal Services Bill contains proposals to prevent the tying-in to the mortgage of any other service in the domestic property market. The Government believe, however, that packages can be in the interests of the consumer and propose that they will be permitted under the legislation.

THE ARTS

"The Three Graces"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts what proposals he has for the allocation of funds towards the purchase of "The Three Graces."

Mr. Luce: Purchase of works of art is a matter for the trustees of individual museums and galleries, who may apply to the national heritage memorial fund, which acts as a fund of last resort.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxation

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the proportion of gross income paid in income tax, national insurance contributions and value added tax by (a) a married man with a non-earning wife and two children and (b) a married man with an earning wife and two chilren at one half, one and a half, two, three, five and 10 times national average earnings in 1990-91; and what were the comparable figures in 1978-79.

Mr. Lilley: The information requested is set out in the table:

(a) Payments of income tax (less child benefit), NICs and VAT by a married couple with non-earning wife as a percentage of gross earnings.
Multiples of average male earnings.

	½	1	1½	2	3	5	10
1978-79
Income Tax less Child Benefit	−4·1	14·4	20·6	23·6	32·0	47·1	64·7
NICs	6·5	6·5	5·6	4·2	2·8	1·7	0·8
VAT	—	2·7	2·7	—	—	—	—
1990-91
Income Tax less Child Benefit	0·5	12·7	16·8	21·8	27·9	32·7	36·4
NICs	6·9	7·9	6·2	4·7	3·1	1·9	0·9
VAT	—	5·0	5·6	—	—	—	—

(b) Payments of income tax (less child benefit) and NICs by a married couple with wife working as a percentage of gross earnings.
Multiples of average male earnings.

	½	1	1½	2	3	5	10
1978-79
Income Tax less Child Benefit	1·1	6·4	15·2	19·7	25·9	32·9	50·6
NICs	6·5	6·5	6·5	6·5	5·4	3·4	1·7
1990-91
Income Tax less Child Benefit	−9·0	8·0	13·6	16·5	20·3	27·3	33·6
NICs	4·8	6·9	7·6	7·7	6·2	3·7	1·9

Notes:

1. Average male earnings in 1990-91 are assumed to be £303·80 per week, 8¼ per cent. higher than in 1989-90. This represents a real increase of 33 per cent. since 1978-79.
2. NICs are assumed to be paid at the class I contracted-in rate.
3. A married man's payment of income tax do not now depend on whether he has any children. But in order to provide comparability with 1978-79 when support for children was given partly through child tax allowances, the figures show income tax less child benefit.

4. From 1990-91 husbands and wives in two-earner couples will be taxed independently. Previously the tax liability of two-earner couples depended on their joint income. To permit comparisons between 1978-79 and 1990-91 the table therefore shows income tax (less child benefit) and national insurance contributions paid by a married couple as a proportion of their joint income, assuming that the husband and wife share the relevant multiple of earnings in the ratio 60:40.
5. Estimates of VAT payments depend on a family's income and its pattern of expenditure. Such estimates are subject to a substantial margin of error and cannot reliably be made outside a range of 75 per cent. to 150 per cent. of average male earnings. Estimates for a single earner couple with two children are set out above. Corresponding figures for a two earner couple with two children are not available. Estimates are based on 1985 Family Expenditure Survey and assume that 10 per cent. of disposable income is saved.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why no account is to be taken of transitional relief when the community charge is introduced into the retail prices index in April.

Mr. Lilley: For purposes of the retail price index transitional relief will not be treated as reducing the prices charged. This conforms to a general principle governing the treatment of subsidies and discounts, which was laid down by the retail price index advisory committee in a report submitted to and accepted by Ministers in 1986 (Cmnd 9848). The principle is that reductions in the amount charged are treated as price effects if they are equally available to all consumers facing the charge in question or if they are financed by the supplier of the goods or services concerned. Transitional relief does not qualify on either ground as it is available only to consumers fulfilling certain criteria and is funded not by the local authority making the charge but by a transfer from central Government. The community charges taken for the retail price index will be those made by authorities after allowing for the "safety net" since this affects all charge payers in any one area.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer since 18 June 1989, how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Major: Since 18 June 1989 Treasury Ministers have received 40 communications from Members of the European Parliament concerning local or United Kingdom matters. Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Central Office of Information

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress has been made towards establishing the Central Office of Information as an executive agency.

Mr. Major: I am pleased to announce that the Central Office of Information (COI) will become an executive agency tomorrow. I have set demanding targets against which performance will be measured. These will ensure that the steady improvement in COI's efficiency over recent years continues into the future. Copies of the framework document will be placed in the Library of the House.

Government Data Network

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will report the outcome of the price variation negotiations with Racal Data Networks Ltd. for the Government data network.

Mr. Ryder: Negotiations are still in progress and scheduled for completion by 30 June 1990. These negotiations are taking into account marketplace movements since the GDN contract was let and are reviewing general administrative arrangements in the contract associated with the GDN tariff.

Further consideration of the contract has shown that, contrary to earlier interpretations reflected in my right hon. Friend, the then Paymaster-General's answer of 22 June 1988, Official Report, col. 599-600, the contract does not necessarily prevent the cost of the GDN service from exceeding that of comparable public services. The Treasury and Racal Data Networks Ltd. are seeking to negotiate revisions to the contract which would incorporate a satisfactory basis for value-for-money comparison with available public services.

I will announce the outcome of these negotiations when they have been completed.

Civil Service Catering Organisation

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have for the future of the Civil Service Catering Organisation.

Mr. Major: I have commissioned a study of future options for the Civil Service Catering Organisation (CISCO).

The aim of the study will be to examine how CISCO might be placed on a more commercial footing for the future in an increasingly competitive environment for the provision of staff catering.

The study will centre on possibilities for the transfer of CISCO to the private sector. Operation in the private sector might provide a better basis and greater range of opportunities for building upon the success that CISCO has achieved to date. The options will include the possibility of management and employee participation in the privatisation of CISCO's business.

If this approach is found not to be feasible or desirable, the study will consider whether CISCO should be retained within the civil service as a "next steps" agency or whether the delivery of catering services is best devolved fully to Government Departments.

The study will involve discussions with Government Department clients of CISCO and consultation with relevant bodies in the catering trade. Consultation will also take place with the Council of Civil Service Unions and the joint co-ordinating committee for Government industrial establishments.

A decision will be made later in the year.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Creche

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Lord President of the Council, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 24, concerning child care facilities at the House of Commons, what arrangements are being made for consultation with and the full participation of each of the staff unions and the creche committee established by staff.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The Select Committee on House of Commons (Services) has asked for an urgent feasibility study to be undertaken into the cost and accommodation implications of providing child care facilities for the children of Members and staff employed in the House. A decision on whether a survey of potential demand is needed will be taken once the results of the feasibility study are known.

TRANSPORT

Traffic Director for London

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to his intention to appoint a traffic director for London, he will list the terms of reference for that post, the bodies and resources attached or available to it; and to whom the director will be responsible.

Mr. Portillo: Proposals concerning the traffic director are set out in paragraphs 7.34 to 7.38 of the discussion document "Traffic in London". We are considering the powers and duties of the post in more detail, and will consult local authorities and other interested bodies further.

Motorway Repairs

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what motorway repair works are scheduled for the M6 and M1 between April and October; and if he will publish full details of these in the Official Report.

Mr. Portillo: Capital maintenance schemes which have been given approval and are programmed[1] to be carried out at various times between April and October 1990 are as follows:

M1

Major schemes (over £0·5 million)
  Junction 8 to junction 9 (resurfacing)
  Junction 26 to junction 27 (reconstruction)
  Junction 29 to junction 30 (reconstruction)
  Junction 43 to M62[1] (reconstruction)

Non-major schemes
  Junction 2 slip roads (earthworks)
  Junction with A42 (part of national improvement scheme)
  Junction with M1-A1 Link (part of national improvement scheme)
  Junction 34 to junction 35 (earthworks)

M6

Major schemes (over £0·5 million)
  Junction 3 (reconstruction)
  Junction 8 to junction 9 (resurfacing)
  Junction 13 to junction 14 (resurfacing)
  Junction 17 to junction 29 (reconstruction)
  Junction 28 to junction 29 (resurfacing)
  Junction 41 to junction 42 (resurfacing)

Non-major schemes
  Junction 5 slip roads (safety fences)
  Junction 5 to junction 6 (resurfacing)
  Junction 6 slip roads (safety fences)
  Junction 6 to junction 7 (safety fences)
  Junction 7 slip roads (resurfacing)
  Junction 7 to junction 8 (resurfacing)
  Junction 22 to junction 27 (cable laying)
  Junction 27 slip roads (resurfacing and safety fences)
  Junction 29 slip roads (safety fences)
  Junction 36 to junction 38 (safety fences)

[1] Programme may be subject to alteration due to local considerations.

There will also be other urgent and routine works necessary on these roads during this time.

The Department will announce further details of schemes in due course.

Road Congestion

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on road congestion in the 1990s and the cost to the economy.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to my hon. Friend's reply of 6 March, volume 65, columns 545-46. We are concerned about the economic effects of congestion, and about the consequences for the environment and road safety. We have doubled the road programme to increase capacity on existing motorways and other strategic routes.

MOT Tests

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the public service vehicle failure rates of vehicles undergoing their annual MOT test in Government-controlled testing stations, in each year since the scheme's inception, listing regional variations.

Mr. Portillo: Statutory annual testing for PSVs was introduced in January 1982. Between 1982 and 1987 the results were collated by traffic areas. Since 1987 they have been collated by sub-regions of the vehicle inspectorate. The fail rates, not including vehicles with minor defects rectified at the time of test, are:

UK-US Air Routes

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what timetable he envisages for further talks with the appropriate American authorities on the future of air routes from the United Kingdom to the United States of America.

Mr. McLoughlin: No specific timetable has been established, but my right hon. Friend is in direct touch with his US counterpart.

Noise Insulation

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide additional resources to local highway authorities specifically to enable them to deal with properties which qualify for insulation from traffic noise under the revised interpretation of the 1973 Noise Insulation Regulations.

Mr. Portillo: No. There is no revised interpretation of the Noise Insulation Regulation. The hon. Member may, however, be referring to the greater exercise of discretionary powers in connection with the proposed motorway widening programme, as announced in the recent roads report, which refers to motorways and other major trunk roads. It is a wider application of the existing discretionary power by the Secretary of State in relation to his trunk road programme, for which of course local authorities are not responsible.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, since 18 June 1989, how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Portillo: Ministers at the Department of Transport have received 54 written communications from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters.

If there is no Community content at all in the MEP's letter and a constituency interest predominates, it is our general practice to suggest that the MEP should refer the case to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to MEPs' letters would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Stop Notices

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce legislation to confer upon highway authorities the power to issue stop notices in respect of development projects where public rights of way have been rendered unusable as a consequence of works being started in the absence of lawful authority being secured either to stop up or divert the right of way.

Mr. Portillo: This is not necessary. Highway authorities already have powers under section 143 of the Highways Act 1980 to secure the removal of unauthorised structures from highways. A grant of planning permission for such a structure is not of itself such an authorisation.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend made an official visit to Wales on 2 April when he launched the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in Swansea.

Roads (Private Financing)

Mr. Neale: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what further developments there have been in private financing for roads since the publication of the Green Paper, "New Roads by New Means"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Parkinson: The Green Paper set out proposals for new legislation and procedures to authorise privately financed roads. We invited comments from the private sector and from a wide range of other organisations concerned with roads and transport.

The response was encouraging, with over 160 interested parties commenting. A number of potential problems were exposed and debated, but the overall message was one of wide support for the Government's aims.

Today the Government have published their response to the consultation.

We are making some additions to the proposals in "New Roads by New Means". Their purpose is to enhance the attraction of major road schemes for private sector funding by reducing some of the uncertainties. The details are in the published response which I have placed in the Library of the House.

I am pleased to be able to announce a number of other developments and initiatives. Last year the Government set up a competition for the Birmingham northern relief road. The response to this challenge has been good. Three pre-qualifying bids were received from consortia which have assembled a wide range of expertise. Today I have issued final tender invitations to all three bidders. This means that we should receive, this autumn, firm indications of how the road can be built and operated in the private sector.

I am also inviting the private sector to come forward with preliminary proposals for a new privately funded road between Birmingham and Manchester, as foreshadowed in the Green Paper. We have recently announced a public scheme to widen much of the existing M6 motorway. This will relieve congestion on the route of the motorway, but there will be a further need for extra capacity between the two cities in the longer term. We are looking to the private sector to consider innovative ways of meeting this longer-term need well into the 21st century.

I am inviting views about the suitability of six other schemes for private finance. The schemes I have in mind are:

a lower Thames crossing, east of the M25,
a new crossing of the River Tamar,
a new Mersey crossing serving Liverpool airport,
a link between the M25 and Chelmsford, a new route parallel to the A127 from the M25 to Rayleigh in Essex, and a short link between the A1 and M1 at Scratchwood in north London.

The list is not a closed one. We are willing to consider proposals for the private financing of any scheme in the roads programme. We shall also welcome proposals for schemes not in the programme, since the Government do not have a monopoly of good ideas.

All roads financed by the private sector will be subject to the same form of environmental assessment as public schemes. The Government will insist that they are designed and built to the highest standards. We shall want to ensure also that road investment provides best value for money for taxpayers and users.

The response to the Green Paper shows that our proposals for the further development of private funding financing of transport projects enjoys widespread support. My new proposals will provide additional opportunities for the private sector to add to Britain's transport network.

Second Severn Bridge

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the successful tenderer in the competition to provide a second Severn bridge.

Mr. Parkinson: I intend to accept the proposal from the John Laing/GTM Entrepose consortium to design, build, finance and operate the second Severn bridge, in conjunction with taking over the financing and operation of the existing bridge. This privately funded proposal offers the best overall value for money of all those submitted; it will be the most effective means of securing completion of the second crossing at the earliest practicable date. The final decision was between two very strong contenders with good designs, and I am grateful to all the groups which participated.

The consortium's proposal is for a concession to collect tolls on the crossings for up to 30 years, depending on traffic levels. On current forecasts, tolls would be needed for only about 21 years. The consortium's proposal would minimise the impact on traffic by charging tolls in only one direction—westbound—on each crossing. Some increase in tolls would be necessary to cover the cost—some £270 million—of this major improvement in this part of the road network. These rises would be phased in gradually. For car users the initial increase in equivalent single journey tolls in 1992 would be about 20p in 1989 prices, rising ultimately to about 40p from 1995.

The new crossing—which I know is most eagerly awaited on both sides of the Severn—would more than double the road capacity across the estuary. It would relieve for the foreseeable future the traffic congestion already starting to be faced at peak times at the existing bridge. It would also include windshielding to minimise the need for traffic restrictions or closure.

This decision is subject to confirmation of the provision of finance and to a satisfactory conclusion to detailed negotiations on the terms of the concession. I shall make a further announcement when the necessary arrangements are confirmed.

I hope to introduce legislation at the earliest opportunity to seek the necessary powers for the provision of the new bridge and its approach roads. Subject to the necessary parliamentary approvals, construction could start at the beginning of 1992 and be completed in 1995.

This announcement on the Severn bridges demonstrates that the skill and initiative of the private sector can be employed to provide new infrastructure at good value for the public.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to be able to set financial objectives for London Regional Transport.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend expects to be able to set these objectives when the House reconvenes following the Easter recess.

EC Transport Council

Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the meeting of the European Community Transport Council yesterday.

Mr. Parkinson [holding answer 30 March 1990]: I attended the meeting of the European Council of Transport Ministers which was held in Brussels on 29 March.

A 40 per cent. increase in road haulage quotas was agreed for 1990. The Council also gave a commitment to take simultaneous decisions on the quotas for 1991 and 1992, and on the safeguard measures in the event of a crisis in the road haulage industry, at its next meeting in June.

The Council made further advances towards agreement of the second phase of aviation liberalisation. In particular it agreed on a zone scheme for fares, and on the treatment of region-to-region and hub-to-region services for capacity sharing purposes. Progress was also made on other aspects of the liberalisation package and several reservations were withdrawn. The Commission confirmed its intention of coming forward with proposals for dealing with anti-competitive practices in the context of the second package. The Council will return to the subject at its June meeting. There were also useful discussions on air traffic control and personnal licences in aviation. The Council agreed in principle that negotiations should get under way on a package of civil aviation measures with the European Free Trade Association, and further work will now be undertaken on the negotiating mandate.

I am glad to say that a debate on shipping cabotage enabled the presidency to conclude that a proposal should be prepared for positive debate in June.

In a short discussion on the establishment of a transport infrastructure fund, the United Kingdom and the Federal Republic of Germany maintained their unequivocal view that, although the Community could assist in planning, there was no need for a fund as such since member states were best able to decide their own funding priorities. Again, the Council agreed to return to the subject in June.

The June meeting of the Council will also consider again the issue of harmonisation, on which some helpful developments at the Council meeting were offset by the announcement by the Federal Republic of Germany that it intended to introduce, with effect from 1 July, a tax on foreign lorries travelling through Germany.

The Commission reported on the progress of negotiations with Austria, Switzerland and Yugoslavia on third country transit. There were discussions, but no conclusions, on the length of road trains, and on the hire of vehicles without drivers. The following topics were raised under other business: developments in East Germany and elsewhere in eastern Europe; the liberalisation of bus and coach transport; marine pollution; the revision of AETR (the European agreement concerning the work of crews of vehicles engaged in international road transport); the width of vehicles; rail policy; drivers' hours; noise reduction around airports; and concerns about delays caused by customs staff at some borders.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Exchange Programmes

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what exchange and collaborative research and educational development programmes exist between the United Kingdom and Belgium.

Mr. Jackson: The Department, through the central bureau, provides funds to support and encourage exchange activity in the following areas:

(i) A school links programme: there are currently some 11 schools known to have links with Belgian schools.

(ii) A foreign language assistants programme: in the current academic year there are 10 British language assistants working in Belgium and eight Belgian language assistants working in the United Kingdom.

(iii) Vocational and technical education links: there are five colleges of further education with links with establishments in Belgium. In addition, under the auspices of IAESTE (the International Association for the Exchange of Students for Technical Experience) there is a small-scale annual programme of course-related practical training placements for higher education students.

(iv) Teacher exchange programme: it is hoped that the 1990-91 academic year will see the first post-to-post teacher exchanges with Belgium.

In addition, there are arrangements for exchange and collaborative activity with Belgium under European Community programmes such as COMETT, ERASMUS and ARION.

United Kingdom scientific research collaboration and exchanges with Belgium occur mainly through common membership of a range of multilateral schemes. These include the European Science Foundation, the European Space Agency, CERN (the European particle physics organisation), the NATO science programme, and the European science exchange programme, as well as the various programmes within the European Communities research and development framework.

In addition, the British Council, under the cultural convention with Belgium, promotes exchanges and collaborative research in scientific and educational fields. Activities are agreed at biennial meetings of the mixed commission, the most recent of which, the 26th meeting, was held in December 1989. All activity with Belgium is fragmented, in that the Flemish and francophone communities function completely separately. Formal statistics of links are not kept because activity is agreed rather in terms of particular projects and budgets.

Professional visits between Britain and Belgium are arranged to study developments in education at all levels. These have led, for example, to the Belgian Ministry of Education seeking council assistance in the introduction of computers in schools, and to a project in drama education with the Brussels circus school. The Flemish universities and the Open university have collaborated to set up a Flemish open university with British inputs and materials. Long-term joint projects at university level are also encouraged in fields such as science parks, engineering, medicine and criminology.

In 1989, new Government funding enabled a programme of academic and professional exchanges to be established. For example, groups of British engineers and environmental scientists visited both Flemish and francophone universities. The links between the university of Gent and the university of Newcastle in linguistics and English literature, and the Vrije universiteit Brussel and Huddersfield polytechnic, in human ecology, have been particularly successful. The latter will now receive funding as part of the mixed commission cultural agreement. A double degree awarded jointly by the university of Liège and Cranfield institute of technology has also been established as part of a major link. All links have attracted matching funding from the Belgians.

In March 1990 two senior British academics headed a mission to Belgium, and the Netherlands to initiate further collaborative programmes. This follows a recent pattern in Europe, where programmes have been established with Spain, Portugal, France, Germany and the Republic of Ireland.

Disabled Students

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if the recent changes announced in funding disabled students' extra educational costs will apply to disabled students with central Government awards pursuing postgraduate degrees.

Mr. Jackson: The rates of postgraduate awards made by the Department for 1990-91 will be announced in due course. My right hon. Friend expects to make appropriate provision for the disabled students' and other allowances, on lines broadly similar to that for mandatory undergraduate awards but allowing for any relevant differences in the postgraduate awards arrangements.

Other postgraduate award-making bodies determine the rates for their subjects within the resources available to them.

School Buildings (Repairs)

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the total expenditure for each education authority on repairs to school buildings.

Mrs. Rumbold: The latest available information is for 1987-88 and is given in the table.

Examinations

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about trends in examination results in Greater Manchester since 1975.

Mrs. Rumbold: The table gives the percentage of leavers from the Greater Manchester area and for England obtaining five or more grades at A to C in the GCSE (or its equivalent at O-level and CSE) and one or more A-level passes, since 1974-75.

Notes:

1. The School Leavers Survey, from which the figures in the table are derived, is based on a 10 per cent. sample of pupils at each school. Sampling error may lead to distortion in the trends.
2. The figures do not provide the overall picture. There has been a growing tendency among 16-year-olds in particular to leave school for GCSE/O-level/A-level study in full-time further education.
3. All figures exclude leavers from direct grant schools. Such leavers were included in an answer to a similar question to Mr. John Marshall (Hendon, South) on 21 March 1990 for the earliest three years given.

Reorganisation (Bath)

Ms. Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what decision he has made on the application of Beechen Cliff school, Bath, for grant-maintained status; and what response he is making to Avon county council's application for the reorganisation of schools in Bath following the recent court judgment.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend has reconsidered these proposals, as required by the High Court judgment given on 23 February, which set aside his earlier decisions on them. On 30 March he announced his decisions to approve the proposals for grant-maintained status published by the governors of Beechen Cliff school and to reject those for the reorganisation of secondary education in Bath published by Avon local education authority and the governors of St. Mark's Church of England aided school.

Student Grants

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will announce the rates of supplementary allowances payable within the mandatory student award in 1990-91.

Mr. MacGregor: Subject to Parliament's approval of the necessary regulations, supplementary allowances payable within the mandatory student award by local education authorities in England and Wales will be increased in the academic year 1990-91. I announced substantial improvements in the disabled students' allowance on 19 March at columns 417-18. Other allowances will be raised broadly in line with the main grant increases which I announced on 19 December 1989 at columns 220-222. I am placing details in the Library.

Dyslexia

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will introduce legislation to include in the local education authority training grants scheme dyslexia as a national priority area.

Mr. Alan Howarth: Legislation would not be needed to designate the training of teachers of dyslexic children as a national priority area under the local education authority training grants scheme (LEATGS).

The possibility of including a wider range of training within the national priority areas was raised in the recent report of the efficiency scrutiny of education support grants and LEATGS. My right hon. Friend is reflecting carefully upon this recommendation.

Research

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the value of research undertaken for commercial concerns by universities and polytechnics in the last financial year.

Mr. Jackson: Provisional figures indicate that, in the academic year 1988-89, universities in Great Britain received £92 million from industry in the form of research grants and contracts. Comparable information for polytechnics is not currently available.

Ancillaries

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish for each local authority area the number of ancillaries employed in (a) 1970-71, (b) 1979-80 and (c) 1988-89 in (i) the primary and (ii) the secondary sector, and the ratio of ancillaries to teachers and pupils in each case.

Mrs. Rumbold: I regret that the information requested is not held centrally.

History Teaching

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what steps he intends to take to introduce study of the Nazi holocaust into state schools as a core part of the national curriculum;

(2) when he intends to publish the final report of the working group on history in the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The final report of the history working group was published yesterday. Because history is an important and a controversial subject we are consulting a wide variety of interested bodies on its recommendations. In the light of this consultation, and his own further examination of the group's recommendations, my right hon. Friend will in due course publish his proposals on attainment targets and programmes of study for history for pupils aged five to 16 in schools in England. They will then be sent to the National Curriculum Council for the statutory consultation required by the Education Reform Act. I shall not try to anticipate the nature of my right hon. Friend's proposals.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the honourable Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information is not readily available in the form requested. Members of the European Parliament who raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest are advised to refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, ministerial replies to MEPs are normally copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had copied his original letter to the hon. Member.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Company Accounts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will take steps to require the supervisory bodies seeking recognition under the Companies Act 1989 to inform their members and the public of the voting of (a) their councils and (b) their major committees.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 2 April 1990, Official Report, column 399.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to investigate and identify the companies which operate off-balance-sheet financing schemes in their financial statements.

Mr. Redwood: No. The Companies Act 1989 has extended the definition of a subsidiary undertaking, which will bring on to the balance sheet a number of schemes which would previously have been off-balance sheet. The issue of off-balance sheet financing is also being addressed by the profession.

Works of Art

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will outline the conditions under which a work of art, subject to an export licence, may be acquired by private individual.

Mr. Ridley: The acquisition of works of art is not a matter for me; I am concerned solely with export licensing. Works of art which might be subject to an export licence (whether or not an application for an export licence has been made) may be acquired by a private individual through a private sale at any time, if the owner so agrees.

On 2 March I announced that, in considering an application for a licence to export a work of art which meets the Waverley criteria, I proposed to take into account the existence of private offers, as well as offers by public institutions, to purchase the item, and said that I would be ready to consider any representations by persons affected by this refinement of policy.

I have received a number of representations in this connection which I am considering with my right hon. Friend the Minister for Arts and Libraries.

Financial Services Act

Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he proposes to address the concerns expressed about the uncertainty of how the statutory regulations made under the Financial Services Act 1986, and the rules made by the self-regulating organisations and professional bodies recognised under that Act, interact with the common law duties of those carrying on investment business.

Mr. Redwood: I recognise the concerns which have been expressed on this matter and the complexity of the issues involved. I have therefore made a reference to each of the Law Commission and the Scottish Law Commission in the following terms:

> "Certain professional and business activities are subject to public law regulation by statutory or self-regulatory control. The Law Commission/Scottish Law Commission is to consider the principles which should govern the effect of such controls on the fiduciary and analogous duties of those carrying on such activities, and to make recommendations. The inquiry will consider examples from differing areas of activity but will be with particular reference to financial services".

The general issue of the inter-relationship of fiduciary duties arising under the common law on the one hand, and statutory and self-regulatory rules on the other, arises in relation to a variety of activities. Fiduciary duties relating to matters such as disclosure of information to clients, liability to account, for example, for commissions, and conflicts of interest, can apply in areas such as estate agency and insurance brokerage as well as in the financial services area.

I have therefore asked the two Law Commissions not to restrict themselves to examining the financial services area, but to consider the issue, and make whatever recommendations they feel appropriate, in the wider context.

European Single Market

Mr. Wood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the latest position on the implementation by member states into national legislation of single market measures.

Mr. Redwood: I am very pleased to announce that the Commission's fifth progress report on the single market shows that the UK as recorded by the EC is now in the lead in the Community for the implementation into national legislation of single market measures. Member states' figures for non-implementation are as follows:

	Number
United Kingdom	9
Denmark	10
Germany	12
Ireland	18
France	19
Netherlands	24
Luxembourg	27
Spain	30
Greece	35
Belgium	34
Portugal	44
Italy	50

It is also satisfactory to note a considerable improvement in implementation across the Community. The number of measures implemented in all member states has risen from seven in September 1989 to 21 by the end of February 1990.

Fireworks

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will consider amending the law to raise the age at which an individual can purchase fireworks from 16 years to 18 years.

Mr. Forth: No. A person of 16 is considered old enough to work full time and at 17 to drive a car. It would not therefore be practical to raise the minimum age for purchasing fireworks from 16 to 18.

Visas (United States)

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions he has had with members of the travel industry about the practice of charging holidaymakers for visas to the United States of America in cases where visas are not required.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 April 1990]: I have had no discussions with the industry on this issue.

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to prohibit the practice of charging holidaymakers for visas to the United States of America in cases where visas are not required.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 3 April 1990]: There are no plans to introduce legislation in this area and I have received no representations to indicate that this is a problem which needs to be addressed. There are certain circumstances where the United States visa waiver scheme does not apply to holidaymakers travelling to the USA, and in some cases travellers may desire a visa for reasons of convenience. These holidaymakers would be able to obtain a visa free of charge from the United States embassy or, if they prefer, to pay any adminstrative charge which their travel agent may levy where they provide this service.

Environmental Technology Network

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the contribution made by his Department to the European Communities' network of environmental technology transfer programme.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The network of environmental technology transfer (NETT) was established in 1988 and aims to facilitate the exchange of information on a range of techniques, equipment and markets in the areas of clean and low waste technology. NETT is jointly funded by the European Commission and by its membership and services, with the Commission support reducing over the next few years as membership is expected to build up. The president of NETT is Mr. A. J. Fairclough, formerly of the Department of the Environment and the European Commission.

My Department's environmental agency, Warren Spring Laboratory, is a founder member of NETT and its Dr. Schofield is a member of the international board of management. My Department is therefore playing an active role in the further development of NETT.

At present, there are 170 European members, including 27 United Kingdom organisations. Membership is expected to grow as more services come on line. The NETT secretariat has dealt with 30 inquiries from United Kingdom organisations.

Unlisted Securities Market

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the steps his Department has taken to protect investors in the unlisted securities market since June 1987.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Throughout the period since June 1987, the issue of shares other than those to be included on the official list of the stock exchange has been regulated under part III of the Companies Act 1985. Shares may be offered only by public limited companies, and there must be a prospectus which complies with the requirements set out in schedule 3 of the Act.

The stock exchange, of which the unlisted securities market is part, has been a recognised investment exchange (RIE) within the terms of the Financial Services Act 1986 since the main provisions of that Act came into force in April 1988. Prior to this, the stock exchange was a recognised stock exchange under the terms of the Prevention of Fraud (Investments) Act 1958. Responsibility for RIEs has been transferred to the Securities and Investments Board, including ensuring their compliance with schedule 4 to the 1986 Act, which sets out the safeguards for investors which RIEs must provide.

Since April 1988, those carrying on investment business in the United Kingdom, including advising and dealing or arranging deals in securities for them, have had to be authorised or exempt under the terms of the Financial Services Act.

Faulty Goods

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many letters concerning the problems consumers have experienced with faulty goods he has (a) received directly, or (b) had forwarded to him since 11 March.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 28 March 1990]: Since 11 March I have directly received approximately 300 letters about consumer problems with faulty goods and approximately a further 140 letters have been forwarded to me.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Yeast

Sir Richard Body: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reply he has sent to representations from the director of Consumer Watch about the need to provide consumers with information about products made with genetically engineered yeast.

Mr. Maclean: I will send my hon. Friend, in his capacity as chairman of Consumer Watch, a copy of the reply which the Minister will shortly be sending to the director of Consumer Watch on this matter.

Dairy Farming

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the amount payable each year to United Kingdom dairy farmers in co-responsibility levy.

Mr. Curry: United Kingdom dairy farmers paid an estimated £35·1 million in co-responsibility levy in the financial year 1989-90. Co-responsibility levy receipts are used for a number of purposes, including the promotion of milk products and the funding of milk sector subsidies. It is estimated that levy receipts contributed some £42 million towards such measures in the United Kingdom in 1989-90, but this figure is expected to fall in 1990-91 as a result of the cuts in the rate of levy agreed by the Council of Ministers in 1989 and hence the reduction in available levy receipts.

Bristol Channel (Dumping)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many permits have been issued for the piping or dumping of waste materials into the Bristol channel; how many of these are for industrial, chemical or nuclear waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: There are 14 current licences for the dumping of waste materials from vessels into the Bristol channel including the Severn estuary. Two of these involve sewage sludge and the rest dredged spoil.

Authorisations issued by my Department jointly with the Department of the Environment permitting the pipeline discharge of liquid radioactive wastes currently exist for nuclear power stations at Berkeley and Oldbury, which discharge into the Severn estuary, and at Hinkley Point, which discharges into the Bristol channel.

Other discharges of radioactive wastes are a matter for the Secretary of State for the Environment and the Secretary of State for Wales. Pipeline discharges of non-radioactive waste are a matter for the National Rivers Authority.

National Farmers Union

Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the president of the National Farmers Union; and what subjects were discussed.

Mr. Curry: The Minister is meeting the president of the National Farmers Union and others today to discuss how United Kingdom industry can best respond to the recent developments in eastern Europe.

Mink

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink farmers have been prosecuted for allowing mink to escape into the wild since 1979 under (a) the Destructive Imported Animals Act 1932 and (b) the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Mr. Maclean: No prosecutions have been taken by the Ministry under the Destructive Imported Animals Act 1932 since 1983, the first year for which records exist.

Enforcement of the provisions of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 is the responsibility of the police. Details are not held centrally, but I am not aware of any recent prosecutions.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink farms in the United Kingdom have closed in 1988-89; and what measures his Department is taking to dicourage the breeding of mink.

Mr. Maclean: The number of licensed mink farms in the United Kingdom has varied in recent years, as follows:

	Number
31 March 1988	54
31 March 1989	61
20 February 1990	50

The Government do not encourage or discourage mink farms, but seek to ensure that they keep mink securely and humanely.

Arctic Fox Farms

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has on the number of arctic fox farms in the United Kingdom and where they are situated.

Mr. Maclean: In 1987, the last year for which statistics are available, arctic foxes were farmed at three establishments, two in England and one in Scotland.

Exports

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which are the volumes and values of the top five agricultural products exported from England and Wales in the last financial year.

Mr. Curry: The following table, based on provisional data, shows the five main agricultural products, by value, exported from the United Kingdom during the calendar year 1989. Data for financial years are not readily available and information for England and Wales cannot be separately identified.

	Value (£'000)	Volume (000s tonnes)
Alcoholic beverages	1,767,980	745
Meat (other than from bovine animals) and edible meat offal for human consumption; fresh, chilled or frozen	358,025	227
Cereal preparations and preparations of flour or starch of fruits or vegetables	343,027	514
Wheat (including spelt) and meslin, unmilled	326,247	3,278
Meat of bovine animals; fresh, chilled or frozen	303,698	138

Environment Conference

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if his Department has received an invitation to be represented at the environmental biotechnology conference in Braunsweig on 23 to 27 April, organised by the GFB and the European Environmental Research Foundation.

Mr. Maclean: No such invitation can be traced.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, since 18 June 1989, how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Curry: We have received a number of inquiries during the period. Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Offal

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether those offals specified in the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989 are permitted for use in (a) animal feedstuffs for pigs and poultry and (b) pet food; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Yes. There is no scientific justification for prohibiting the use of any ruminant-based protein in food for pigs, poultry or domestic pets.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the updated total figures for confirmed cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in England and Wales since records were first kept.

Mr. Gummer: Since November 1986, when BSE was first identified, until 23 March 1990, the latest date for which figures are available, 10,409 cases have been confirmed in England and 764 cases in Wales.

Research

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the criteria under which he funds research projects under the open contracting and strategic fund 1990-91; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The open contracting and strategic fund 1990-91 was used, as in previous years, to meet urgent needs for research and development in line with MAFF's policy requirements. In doing this, we have sought also to widen the range of contractors beyond MAFF's own in-house laboratories and those of the research councils. Proposals made far exceed the sums of money available and decisions are made in favour of those proposals which best meet MAFF's needs, give good balance to wider programmes, have the best scientific and technical quality and represent value for money.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the projects he is funding on bovine spongiform encephalopathy under the open contracting and strategic fund 1990-91, giving the name of the relevant body and amount of money to be paid for each project.

Mr. Gummer: A £6·1 million programme of research on BSE being funded by my Department was announced on 9 January in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns), Official Report, column 572.

In addition, under the open contracting and strategic fund 1990-91, one project on BSE was approved which will be funded subject to contract:

Title	Duration	Total cost £000
Population genetics of BSE: evidence for the inheritance of susceptibility to BSE	3 years	155

It would be inappropriate to provide more detailed contractual information at this stage.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about his reasons for refusing grant aid under the open contracting and strategic fund 1990-91 for a project for the development of a routine diagnostic test for bovine spongiform encephalopathy as an alternative to histopathology.

Mr. Gummer: Research to find a diagnostic test in the live animal was considered a high priority by the Tyrrell committee and funds have already been made available for this work. A proposal was made under the open contracting and strategy fund for a post-mortem test. A technique for post-mortem confirmation of bovine spongiform encephalopathy already exists and, while the project was examined carefully, when compared with other project applications under the fund, it was not considered to be of sufficient merit to warrant funding on this occasion.

Potatoes

Mr. Moss: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has determined the market support prices for potatoes to apply in Great Britain for the 1990-91 crop year beginning 1 July.

Mr. Gummer: Agriculture Ministers have consulted the farmers' unions about the market support arrangements to apply for the 1990-91 crop year. Ministers have decided that the guaranteed price should remain £53 per tonne. They have authorised the board to decide whether it wishes to support the market by entering into pre-season contracts with producers or by intervening directly, provided that total purchases do not exceed 500,000 tonnes. The target area for potato plantings by registered producers in Great Britain was fixed last July at 154,500 hectares.

ENERGY

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Wakeham: Information on the number of communications from Members of the European Parliament is not identifiable except at disproportionate cost. However, it is the practice, where an MEP raises a matter in correspondence which is exclusively of local interest, to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, the reply to such a communication would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Flue Gas Desulphurisation

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he is reviewing his policy on the fitting of flue gas desulphurisation to 12GW of coal-burning electricity generating capacity;

(2) if he will make it his policy to deal with coal-burning power station emission problems by means of combustion process controls as distinct from importing low-sulphur content coal;

(3) what effect he envisages on the make-up of British Coal, after the current three-year contract with the principal generators, if flue gas desulphurisation proceeds only at the 4GW Drax project.

Mr. Wakeham [pursuant to his reply, 1 March 1990, c. 274]: Subject to scrutiny of their detailed plans, I expect National Power and PowerGen to meet the SO_2 emissions reductions required by the EC large combustion plants directive in 1998 by each undertaking 4GW of FGD retrofits and by adopting supplementary measures such as the burning of low-sulphur fuels.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police (Vacancies)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many current vacancies there are at chief officer rank in each constabulary in England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: There is only one force, Derbyshire, where the post of chief constable remains unfilled until the police authority makes an appointment.

Prisoners (Malaysian Diet)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements are made for providing a Malaysian diet to remand prisoners who may request such a diet; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Remand prisoners receive the same meals as convicted inmates. Although a Malaysian diet is not provided, dietary variations are supplied on grounds of religion, and any inmate may request a vegetarian or vegan diet. Rice is issued in lieu of potatoes if it is a basic part of the diet in the inmate's country, and establishments use a wide variety of spices in preparing meals.

Pentonville Prison (Unconvicted Prisoners)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what educational facilities and opportunities for association there are for unconvicted prisoners in Pentonville prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: There are education classes for two hours each morning and afternoon from Monday to Friday for those who wish to attend. In addition to recreational association for two hours once a week, each prisoner may associate with others in the course of routine activities, which include one hour's exercise in the open air each day (weather permitting), social visits for at least 15 minutes each weekday, physical education sessions lasting one and a half hours twice a week, visits to the prison canteen twice a week and attendance at religious services on Sundays. The regime will be considerably improved when these prisoners move to a completely refurbished wing in about six weeks' time.

Life Imprisonment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the average term of imprisonment served by offenders sentenced to life imprisonment and the minimum periods served by those offenders sentenced to life imprisonment and released from custody during each of the years 1984, 1985, 1986, 1987 and 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Information on the average time served under sentence was published in table 8.5 of the prison statistics England and Wales 1988 (Cm 825), a copy of which is in the Library.

Details of the shortest time served are given in the table. All these prisoners were released on licence following a favourable recommendation by the Parole Board and after consultation with the judiciary as required by section 61 of the Criminal Justice Act 1967.

Information for 1989 is not yet complete.

Shortest period spent under sentence in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales by life sentence prisoners[1] first released on licence in each of the years 1984 to 1988.

Year of release	Years under sentence[2]
1984	4·4
1985	4·2
1986	4·2
1987	2·2
1988	5·0

[1] Including detention for life or during Her Majesty's pleasure under s.53 Children and Young Persons Act 1933 and custody for life.

[2] Excluding any time spent on remand in custody, in non-prison service establishments or following any subsequent recall.

Fraud Squad

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will publish for each police force in England and Wales the percentage of officers assigned to fraud squad duties for each of the last five years;

(2) if he will publish for each police force in England and Wales for each of the last five years (a) the number of officers assigned to fraud squad duties, (b) the number of prosecutions brought and (c) the number of convictions secured.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The figures for the last five years for which records are available are set out in the table. Offences of fraud and forgery are recorded together; the figures for prosecutions and convictions in 1989 are not yet available. Statistics on the strength of fraud squads before 1987 are not readily available; the figures for 1985 come from those published in the Roskill report.

Race Relations Act

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many prosecutions have been made by the police since 1980 under section 70 of the Race Relations Act 1976 in respect of written material likely to incite racial hatred;

(2) how many requests have been made to the police since 1980 under section 70 of the Race Relations Act 1976 in respect of written material likely to incite racial hatred but where the police have taken no notice concerning the request.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Prosecutions in respect of written material likely to incite racial hatred are brought by or with the consent of the Attorney-General. Since 1980 there have been 60 such prosecutions. These have been under section 5A of the Public Order Act 1936 introduced by section 70 of the Race Relations Act 1976, section 19 of the Public Order Act 1986, which replaced section 5A of the Public Order Act 1936 with regard to the publication or distribution of written material, or section 1 of the Criminal Law Act 1977, which relates to conspiracy to commit offences.

Information on the number of complaints that have been made to the police since 1980 about material likely to incite racial hatred or the ensuing prosecutions is not centrally available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Asylum

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of the Turkish Kurdish asylum seekers who sought entry in May and June 1989 (a) are still to be interviewed and (b) have been interviewed but no decision has yet been made;

(2) whether he will make a statement on the length of time it is taking for initial decisions to be reached in the case of the Turkish Kurdish asylum seekers who came to the United Kingdom in May and June 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Of the 3,700 Turkish nationals who claimed asylum on arrival in April, May and June 1989, some 1,900 claimed asylum in their own right and their dependants will have their cases decided accordingly. A special unit has been established which is conducting 40 interviews each week. Some 1,500 applicants have now been interviewed and initial decisions taken in the majority of cases. On 30 March 1990, in 134 cases interviews had been conducted but no decision reached.

We expect to complete most of the remaining interviews and to reach initial decisions on their cases by the end of May. The timetable for interviews has been agreed with solicitors representing the applicants.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the honourable Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Since 18 June 1989, I have received 44 communications from Members of the European Parliament concerning local or United Kingdom matters. Where members of the European Parliament raise matters which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As to other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Waddington: I visited Wales on 19 February 1990 when I addressed a conference on alcohol and disorder in Newport. I also met organisers and members of the Gwent victims support group on that day.

Serious Disorder, London

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis giving details of the intelligence information available to the Metropolitan police prior to the protest march on Saturday 31 March in London against the poll tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: No. The Commissioner will consider any relevant information as part of his review of the events on 31 March.

Voluntary Sector Funding

Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to publish the report of the efficiency scrutiny of Government funding of the voluntary sector; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The report has been published today. The Government value highly the great contribution made by voluntary bodies to individuals, the communities in which they live and work, and their environment. Effective voluntary organisations channel the energies of individuals to help themselves and others. They meet people's needs imaginatively. They encourage individual and community responsibility.

The Government already support the voluntary sector on a very large scale. In 1988-89 Government grants exceeded £2 billion. This money must be used for good purposes; and it must be used efficiently. The report of the efficiency scrutiny of Government funding of the voluntary sector provides a basis for improving arrangements to secure this.

The Government will continue to provide funds for efficiently managed voluntary organisations which provide worthwhile services, yield practical benefits and meet other valuable objectives. Support for the voluntary organisations involves a partnership between the public sector, the corporate sector and individual donors. We have made tax concessions to encourage this. Voluntary bodies should be encouraged to raise more money from private and corporate donations: it would, clearly, be damaging to the whole nature of voluntary effort if voluntary bodies were to become over-dependent on public funding.

Government funding for voluntary bodies will be governed by a number of principles:

They will support organisations which can achieve a direct practical effect: for example, assisting disabled people; improving the environment; providing skills for the unemployed.

Projects and bodies receiving Government money must uphold accepted ethical standards: for example to support family life.

Government financial support for voluntary bodies should help to achieve the overall policies of Departments: they must carefully determine how this should be done.

The opportunity which voluntary bodies give ordinary people to make an active contribution to the life of the community is one of their important strengths. One of the factors to be taken into account in Goverment support to voluntary bodies should therefore be the extent to which they use or encourage volunteers.

Any campaigning in which voluntary bodies engage must be ancillary to their objectives as required by charity law. Government grant conditions will, therefore, take this fully into account.

Government funding will normally be for specific services or for projects limited to a particular period. It will be subject to review as policies evolve with changing circumstances; though where a body has a continuing role in achieving particular policy goals or provides services for other voluntary organisations Goverment funding for the body's administrative core costs may in certain circumstances be appropriate.

Departments funding voluntary bodies will monitor the results obtained from their funding and have regard to the efficiency with which the body is administered and the costs of its administration.

In the light of these principles Departments will take action to review their funding programmes. They will prepare action plans which will be considered in July by the ministerial group on the voluntary sector chaired by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State.

Mr. John Stalker

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has completed his consideration of the document handed to his private secretary on 25 January by Mr. John Stalker; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I have now completed my study of this document, which is a typed copy of manuscript notes from the diary of Sir John Hermon, then Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, relating to the period 16 May 1986 to 2 June 1986. I have also further examined the statement which Mr. Stalker issued to the press at the same time.

Mr. Stalker drew particular attention to two entries in Sir John Hermon's diary. The first, under the heading "18 May 1986—Sunday", records a telephone call to Sir John from Sir Philip Myers, Her Majesty's inspector of constabulary. At the end the following words appear: "Mentioned a CC seeing BS RA TK and that DH was au fait with developments". Sir John Hermon has confirmed that the persons referred to by their initials were Sir Barry Shaw, then Director of Public Prosecutions for Northern Ireland, Sir Robert Andrew, then Permanent Under-Secretary at the Northern Ireland Office, my right hon. Friends the Secretary of State for Defence, then Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, then Secretary of State for the Home Department. Sir John has also confirmed that "a CC" meant a chief constable and that he did not, at that time, know the identity of that chief constable. He was, however, in no doubt that Sir Philip was talking about future contacts between a chief constable and the persons identified by their initials.

Sir Philip Myers has confirmed that the chief constable, to whom he referred but did not name in the conversation recorded by Sir John Hermon, was in fact Mr. Colin Sampson, then Chief Constable of the West Yorkshire police who was subsequently to replace Mr. Stalker as leader of the inquiry in Northern Ireland. Mr. Sampson has confirmed that he knew nothing about the possibility that Mr. Stalker might be the subject of an investigation before he attended a meeting at Scarborough on 19 May chaired by the then chief inspector of constabulary, Sir Lawrence Byford. The other persons present at that meeting were Sir Philip Myers, Mr. James Anderton, Chief Constable of the Greater Manchester Police, Mr. Ralph Lees, Assistant Chief Constable of Greater Manchester police, and a staff officer. That was the meeting at which Mr. Anderton decided to refer certain information relating to Mr. Stalker to his police authority.

Against this background, it is a matter for regret that, in his published statement of 25 January, Mr. Stalker misquoted Sir John Hermon's diary entry so as to make it refer to Sir Philip Myers telling him that "a Chief Constable has seen BS RA and TK and that DH was au fait with developments", with a clear implication that the entry referred to events that had already taken place. In fact, Mr. Sampson had at that time seen none of the persons to whom Sir John was referring.

As regards the words "DH was au fait with developments", it would have been perfectly natural for Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary to have informed the Home Secretary that problems were arising in relation to Mr. Stalker's position, but there is now no other record to show whether he did so before 19 May. My right hon. Friend's recollection is that he was first informed after 19 May.

The second diary entry to which Mr. Stalker has drawn special attention appears under the heading "May 30. 1986—Friday". It contains the following words "Expressed concern regarding structure of enquiry. Clearly collusion between PM/RA/CS and DPP. I must hold the line". By the time this entry was made, Mr. Stalker had already been placed on extended leave. Sir John Hermon has confirmed that this was a reference to the arrangements for the appointment of a replacement for Mr. Stalker and to arrangements for the continuance of the inquiry, about which he felt, at that time, that he was not being adequately consulted. He has also said publicly that nothing sinister should be read into the "collusion" in this context and that he regrets both its use and the subsequent publication of what were intended to be purely personal notes. I am entirely satisfied that, contrary to the assertion made by Mr. Stalker in his statement of 25 January, Sir John Hermon's diary entry for 30 May 1986 had nothing whatever to do with Mr. Stalker's removal from the inquiry in Northern Ireland.

The facts leading to the removal of Mr. Stalker from the Royal Ulster Constabulary investigation are straightforward. During the course of a criminal investigation in Greater Manchester unconnected with the inquiry in Northern Ireland, information came to light which cast doubt on Mr. Stalker's conduct. The information was referred to the Greater Manchester police authority, which decided that there should be an investigation into the conduct of Mr. Stalker and placed him on leave of absence. They were the disciplinary authority for Mr. Stalker, and the decision was entirely a matter for them. An officer who is under investigation himself cannot continue an investigation into the actions of officers in another force, since doubts about his probity must cast doubt on any work which he does. Mr. Stalker therefore had to be replaced as leader of the investigation in Northern Ireland.

Computer Fraud

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the amount of money stolen by computer fraud in 1989; and what measures are being taken to combat this type of crime.

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Information on computer fraud is not collected centrally, and an estimate cannot therefore be made with any degree of accuracy. However, it is clear from anecdotal evidence that computer fraud and the broader problem of computer misuse are sufficiently widespread to be of concern.

My hon. Friend the Member for Romsey and Waterside (Mr. Colvin) is sponsoring a private Member's Bill to strengthen the criminal law to deal with these issues. The Bill is currently before Parliament, and my Department is giving Mr. Colvin all the support it properly can. We have also launched a three-year awareness programme to emphasise the importance of good computer security.

Criminal Justice

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all the organisations and individuals that have made submissions to him since the publication and on the subject of "Crime, Justice and Protecting the Public", the Government's proposal for legislation.

Mr. John Patten [holding answer 30 March 1990]: We invited comments by 30 April and we have already had an encouraging response. As soon as possible after that date, I shall let the hon. and learned Gentleman know which organisations have commented.

WALES

Sewage Outfalls

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many short sea outfalls known to his Department discharge untreated sewage into the sea around the Welsh coast.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on 8 November 1989, Vol. 159, column 649.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information his Department holds on the future plans by Welsh Water plc for constructing long sea outfalls around the Welsh coast; and if he will give the Ordnance Survey grid references for each such site.

Mr. Grist: The future plans of Welsh Water plc are a matter for that company.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will indicate the other participants in the research into sea waters contaminated by sewage, referred to in his reply of 31 October 1988, Official Report, column 550; and what progress has been made in the research.

Mr. Grist: The working group advising on the conducting of the research include officials from the Department of the Environment, Department of Health, Scottish Development Department, Welsh Office and HMIP and representatives from the public health laboratory service, Water Services Association, Water Research Centre, Communicable Diseases Surveillance Centre, the Robens Institute, the university of Wales, Altwell Ltd. and the National Rivers Authority. The first report is due to be presented soon.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to attend any meetings of the European Council of Ministers.

Mr. Peter Walker: It has not been the normal practice of Welsh Office Ministers to attend meetings of the European Council of Ministers. I have, of course, met members of the European Commission to discuss issues of importance to Wales, and I am in close touch with developments.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to require Welsh Water plc to erect signs on those bathing beaches that have failed to comply with the 1976 EEC bathing waters directive.

Mr. Grist: No.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that all bathing waters in Wales comply with the 1976 EEC bathing waters directive by the summer of 1992.

Mr. Grist: The £96·8 million investment programme which has been agreed with Dwr Cymru should ensure that all bathing waters in Wales listed under the directive comply with its bacteriological standards by 1995. A list of the individual schemes has been placed in the Library.

Water Prices

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the percentage increase above the retail prices index that the price of water will rise in the year 1991-92 within the area served by Welsh Water plc.

Mr. Grist: Dwr Cymru will be allowed to increase the average of its principal charges by the percentage change in the retail price index plus an adjustment factor of 6·5 per cent. in 1991-92.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is taking to inform general practitioners of the eligibility for community charge exemption of people suffering from Alzheimer's disease and senile dementia.

Mr. Grist: The acting chief medical officer wrote to all doctors in Wales on 10 November 1989 to give them information and guidance about the certification procedure for exemptions from the personal community charge on grounds of severe mental impairment. The ACMO's letter, a copy of which I am placing in the Library, included guidance on the criteria according to which severe mental impairment is to be judged.

Viruses

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what financial contribution his Department has made to the study into the survival rates of viruses in sea water.

Mr. Grist: The Department contributed £27,757 towards a study, funded jointly with the Welsh water authority, by Dr. J. M. Tyler concerning viruses in sea and fresh water.

Motor Neurone Disease

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if (a) L-Threonine and (b) branch chain amino acids are available for the treatment of motor neurone disease in the National Health Service; and how many people in Wales suffer from motor neurone disease.

Mr. Grist: Under National Health Service regulations medical practitioners have freedom to prescribe whatever drugs are considered to be clinically necessary for the treatment of their patients except those items which are included under the selected list scheme. Foods and food supplements are not normally prescribable and branch chain amino acids, which include L-Threonine, are more properly classified as foods. Doctors can, however, prescribe food supplements where these are, in their clinical judgment, necessary for the treatment of patients, but they may be required to justify their prescribing to the district medical committee.

Exact information on how many people suffer from motor neurone disease is not held centrally.

British Steel

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit British Steel, Shotton.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to meet the chairman of British Steel.

Mr. Peter Walker: I met him on 19 March.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to visit toxic waste tips in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Members of Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution visit licensed waste disposal sites in the course of their duties as necessary.

Aberystwyth-Machynlleth Road

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to improve the trunk road from Aberystwyth to Machynlleth during the next five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: The A487 Furnace Bridge-Eglwys Fach improvement scheme is programmed to start after April 1994, as indicated in table 6 of "Roads in Wales—Progress and Plans for the 1990s".

Local Government Finance

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to how many extra staff have been employed by local authorities in Dyfed and Powys for the administration of the poll tax system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: This information is not held centrally.

Aberystwyth (Bypass)

Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to build a bypass in Aberystwyth, Cardiganshire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Roberts: No. One hundred per cent. principal road grant assistance has been approved for improvements to the A4120, a local authority road, which helps to remove through traffic from Aberystwyth. A study of the road network in the Aberystwyth area is also being undertaken in conjunction with Dyfed county council.

Queensferry High School

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit Queensferry high school consequent upon Clwyd county council's decision to close Queensferry high school.

Mr. Roberts: I have no plans to do so.

Flooding, North Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what extra subvention he will pay to the borough councils of north Wales whose territory was affected by the March 1990 sea inundation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer to him on 14 March—Volume 169, columns 243-44—and am keeping the situation under review.

Workers Educational Association

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he has completed his review of the funding of the Workers Educational Association in Wales.

Mr. Roberts: The Workers Educational Association has played an important role in the provision of adult liberal education in Wales for many years. There continues to be a need for this type of provision and I have concluded that in the context of the educational scene in Wales, Welsh Office support for Workers Educational Association activity in Wales should continue. Discussions will be held with the Workers Educational Association however on establishing a new funding regime which reflects more directly the level of course provision and student participation in Wales.

Parent Teachers Associations

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many times he has met the parent teacher associations of Wales.

Mr. Roberts [holding answer 3 April 1990]: I addressed the annual general meeting of the parent teacher associations of Wales in November 1987.

EMPLOYMENT

Tourism

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which professional bodies within the hotel and catering industry he consults when matters relating to tourism are under consideration.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend consults those organisations which are appropriate for the issue under consideration.

Young People (Earnings)

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the most recent figures derived from the 1989 New Earnings Survey, showing the average weekly gross earnings not affected by absence, full-time, for 16-year-olds and for 17-year-olds.

Mr. Nicholls: The information requested is provided in the following table:

Average gross weekly earnings April 1989

[1]Age	All employees
16	£85·9
17	£98·9

[1] As at 1 January 1989.

Note: Full-time employees, earnings not affected by absence.

Training Courses

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what system of quality control he envisages for training courses run by private training organisations or by employers under his announced system of training credits.

Mr. Nicholls: The operation of training credit schemes will be the responsibility of training and enterprise councils (TECs) which are invited to submit bids for approval to run pilot schemes against the criteria set out in "Training Credits for Young People: A Prospectus". In all cases training will have to be to approved standards and skill levels.

In particular, the schemes will have to ensure training that leads at a minimum to qualifications at or equivalent to the second level of the framework established by the National Council for Vocational Qualifications. Employers and others who provide training under the credit scheme will have to meet the same quality criteria which apply more generally under youth training. The schemes will be aimed at demanding targets for participation by young people, levels of skills attainment and jobs with training.

There will be vigorous, regular monitoring and evaluation of the schemes including visits by the training standards and advisory service, and follow-up of all young people when they leave the credit schemes.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secetary of State for Employment whether any members of staff of the Health and Safety Executive have examined the accident books from the Channel tunnel sites; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Regulation 7 of the Reporting of Injuries Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 places duties on employers and others to keep records of every event which is required to be reported under the regulations to the appropriate enforcing authority. Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive have examined samples of the record kept by the Channel tunnel contractors and are satisfied that the contractors have complied with the requirements of the regulations.

Training Vouchers

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations he has received regarding his training vouchers scheme.

Mr. Nicholls: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a considerable number of representations from a range of interested organisations, all of which have expressed support for the scheme of training credits for young people.

Unemployed People (Advice)

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he has any plans to improve the help and advice given to unemployed people by the employment service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I have today agreed with the employment service a number of changes which extend and improve the present system of offering counselling and advice to unemployed people. These changes will be of particular benefit to those who have been unemployed for over six months.

The changes are aimed at those unemployed people who are prepared to get back to work but have not been able to do so and also at making sure that the recent legislative changes which require those in receipt of benefit to be actively seeking work are properly enforced.

The main points where improvements to the present system will be made are:

a back to work plan agreed with the adviser which gives individual guidance for each unemployed person on how best to find work. This will be reviewed and revised at regular intervals. Accompanying it will be a new booklet emphasising that the need to look for work is a fundamental responsibility of everyone who expects to receive unemployment benefits and giving general guidance on how best to go about it;

a new advisory interview after 13 weeks of unemployment with a check on activity in looking for a job and subsequent help for those who have been unable to get work even though their skills are in demand in the local labour market;

a unified advisory service which will abolish the increasingly artificial distinction between restart counsellors and claimant advisers and enhance the support that the employment service can give to unemployed people. In particular, the employment service will aim to ensure that each unemployed person after the fresh claims stage is seen by the same adviser during any period of unemployment; a more systematic follow-up of those who do not take up places on employment training, in job clubs or on restart courses even though they have agreed to do so. Advisers will be given a caseload of unemployed people whom they will re-interview if necessary so that the reasons behind individual decisions can be checked and further advice and action considered; extra intensive counselling and advice for those who have been unemployed for two years.

Taken together, these measures will improve the effectiveness of the help that the employment service is able to give to unemployed people in getting them away from dependency on benefit and into work or other opportunities that will improve their chances of getting a job.

Skill Centres

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the skill centres to be sold and the purchasers in each case; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The following list includes details placed in the Vote Office on 13 February concerning the successful bids by Astra Training Services Ltd and Merseyside Education Training Enterprise Ltd, together with information provided in answers to my right hon. Friend the Member for Hertfordshire, North (Mr. Stewart) (Official Report, 28 February 1990, column 249), and my hon. Friends the Members for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Franks) (Official Report, 7 March 1990, column 672) and for Hexham (Mr. Amos) (Official Report, 13 March 1990, column 216) concerning the successful bids by Mr. J. James, a consortium headed by Mr. Christopher Lakin, and Training Business Ltd. It lists skill centres, and other units within the Skills Training Agency, which are to be sold and the successful bidder in each case. There will be no more sales of training businesses.

Skills Training Agency

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what response the Minister of State has had about his offer to meet representatives of the trade unions about position papers prepared by bidders for the Skills Training Agency, together with assessments by the Government Actuary's Department of the successful bidders' pension proposals.

Mr. Eggar [Pursuant to his reply, 20 March, Official Report, c. 573]: I met representatives of the STA trade unions on 16 March.

Education Building Projects

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list all the major capital building projects carried out by the Department of Education for Northern Ireland in each year since 1980; and if he will list those capital projects currently scheduled to start over the next five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: Major capital building projects are not carried out by the Department of Education. However, I am sending to the hon. Gentleman and copying to the Library details of major capital building projects carried out by various bodies which were approved for grant aid by the Department of Education in the financial years 1980-81 to 1989-90. Information on capital projects currently scheduled to start in the 1990-91 financial year is also included; projects starting in the next four years are not known at this stage.

Culture

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of expenditure incurred to date related to the cultural traditions programme in Northern Ireland.

Dr. Mawhinney: Since the cultural traditions programme was introduced the Department of Education and the central community relations unit have incurred the following expenditure:

Department of Education	£000
Arts Council
Various drama, music, dance and story-telling projects and local arts festivals	140
Ulster Museum

Cars

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the purpose of the annual inspection of cars aged five years and over; and what are the statutory responsibilities of car owners.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The annual visual inspection of vehicles by officers of the Department of the Environment is to ensure that on the date of inspection the requirements of the Construction and Use Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1976 are complied with.

This does not absolve the owner/user from his obligation, under article 29 of the Road Traffic (Northern Ireland) Order 1981, to ensure that the vehicle complies at all times in all respects with the Construction and Use Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1976.

The issue of a vehicle test certificate should not be relied upon as indicating the condition of particular test items of the vehicle other than at the moment of issue.

HEALTH

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update information given in the answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham on 20 March 1987, Official Report, column 669.

Mr. Freeman: The tables list mental illness hospitals with over 200 beds which we are aware were approved for closure in 1988, hospitals which were closed between 1987 and 1989 inclusive and those mental illness hospitals which health authorities plan to close by about 1995. No mental illness hospitals with over 200 beds were approved for closure in 1989.

HIV

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people there are in the northen region who are HIV positive because of contaminated blood transfusions.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: At the end of 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, the number of people in Northern region who had been reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre as being HIV positive as a result of contaminated blood transfusions was greater than zero but less than 10. In line with the procedure followed in reports under the AIDS (Control) Act, to safeguard confidentiality, the actual figures in this range are not published.

Drugs

Mr. Michael Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis) of 26 March, Official Report, column 46, whose forecast increase in the cost of drugs will be used in deciding the factor to set indicative drug budgets for general practitioners.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department will give annual guidance on the allowance to be made for the forecast increase in the cost of drugs when setting indicative drug budgets for the following year.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Responsibility for the health services in Wales lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales. I have therefore made no official visits to Wales as Secretary of State for Health.

Family Planning

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what financial support is being given by his Department to the Family Planning Association and Brook Advisory Centre.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Section 64 grants to both organisations are being renewed for the three-years ending 31 March 1993. The Family Planning Association will receive £165,000 in 1990-91, £130,000 in 1991-92 and £100,000 in 1992-93 from the Department of Health towards their headquarters administrative expenditure and regional activities. Financial support will also be provided by the health departments in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. The equivalent grant for the last three-year period was £130,000 per annum.

For the period 1990-1993 the grant to Brook will be maintained at the existing level of £45,000 per annum. This funding goes towards its headquarters administrative costs, including the education and information activities designed to encourage responsible attitudes to personal relationships among young people under 25 and the co-ordination of the local Brook centres working directly with young people. In addition to the core grant a further award of £20,000 per annum for each of three years is being made to fund a new development officer post.

The conditions attaching to these organisations' grants, in relation to expenditure, activities and liaison with Government Departments, will continue to apply.

Occupational Therapy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether the manpower planning advisory group on the future supply of occupational therapists has reported; if he will make it his policy to place its report in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The manpower planning advisory group expects to report on occupational therapy skill mix and supply issues shortly. When the report is ready, I shall arrange for a copy of it to be placed in the Library.

Pesticide Exposure

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the ability of doctors within the National Health Service to diagnose pesticide exposure.

Mr. Freeman: All doctors receive training during their undergraduate and postgraduate years in the diagnosis of acute poisoning, for instance by pesticides. In addition all general practitioners and hospital accident and emergency departments were issued with a copy of the book, "Pesticide Poisoning". This gives guidance on the diagnosis and treatment if acute poisoning from pesticides is suspected. If a doctor requires further advice on poisoning he can contact any of the five national poisons information centres, which offer a 24-hour service.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence is available to his Department of any connection between pesticides and Parkinson's disease.

Mr. Freeman: We have no conclusive evidence of any connection between pesticides and Parkinson's disease. Some recent preliminary research has shown that in individuals with an inherited tendency to metabolise in a restricted way certain classes of biochemical compounds, including some pesticides, there could be a link with degenerative nervous diseases like Parkinson's disease. The results are inconclusive and work continues.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent research has been carried out in the United Kingdom on the health effects of pesticide exposure.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health does not hold comprehensive information centrally about independent research carried out in the United Kingdom on the health effects of pesticide exposure. Nevertheless, medical staff in this Department keep abreast of developments published in relevant scientific journals.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information his Department has of a connection between pesticides and cot deaths.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any evidence suggesting a connection between cot deaths and pesticides. A diagnosis of cot death, or more specifically sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS), is made when, after careful inquiry and through pathological examination, no specific cause of death can be found. In such circumstances it is not, of course, possible to be certain that some unidentified toxic agent has not contributed to a premature death. However, the epidemiological characteristics of SIDS, as a whole, are not consistent with a direct connection with pesticides.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what routine blood tests are available to determine levels of pesticide within an individual's blood.

Mr. Freeman: There is no evidence that blood tests for pesticide levels would be of benefit to symptomless individuals. Where patients present with symptoms which could be due to poisoning, for instance by pesticide, clinicians have access to local and supra-regional pathology laboratories. Laboratory staff carry out blood tests necessary to aid diagnosis and treatment.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Freeman: We have had 30 such letters. Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice should be to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

NHS Buildings

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the proportion of National Health Service buildings constructed (a) before 1890, (b) before 1918, *(c)*between 1919 and 1939, (d) between 1940 and 1964 and (e) after 1965.

Mr. Freeman: Up-to-date information on the age profile of the estate is not held centrally.

Agency Staff

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the amount spent on (a) agency nurses and (b) agency clerical and administrative staff for 1987-88 for each district health authority, special health authority and regional health authority and England as a whole.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information derived from annual accounts submitted to the Department for 1987-88 is shown in a table which has been placed in the Library.

I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 29 March at columns 318-20.

NHS Consultants

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the date and details of the last occasion on which the breach of contract by a National Health Service consultant was reported to him.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Allegations of breach of contract by an NHS consultant are a matter for the employing authority, and are not necessarily reported to the Department. Any such information affecting particular individuals is treated in confidence.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to ensure that hospital consultants honour their National Health Service contracts.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is primarily a matter for employing authorities. "Working for Patients" and its associated working paper 7 announced the Government's proposal to introduce fuller job descriptions for all hospital consultants to improve their accountability. Discussions with the profession are not yet completed. We intend to issue guidance to health authorities advising them to define more clearly the scope of consultants' duties, which will help to ensure that all consultants fulfil their NHS commitments.

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any districts have taken action to deal with consultants who may have breached their National Health Service contract in the last year.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not collected centrally. Questions about consultants' fulfilment of their NHS contracts are a matter for resolution by employing authorities.

Privatisation

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total sum paid out in fees to outside organisations in the furtherance of privatisation by his Department in 1979-80 and in each subsequent year; and what is his estimate for 1990-91.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 12 March 1990]: No expenditure prior to 1986-87 has been identified. Expenditure in 1986-87 and subsequent years has been incurred for work by professional advisors on the sale of the General Practice Finance Corporation. The expenditure for each year is as follows:

1986-87	23,000
1987-88	37,800
1988-89	174,621
1989-90	414,000

The figure for 1989-90 is estimated.

All expenditure up to and including 1988-89 has been from a joint Health and Social Security budget.

There are no plans for any expenditure in 1990-91.

SCOTLAND

Firearm Licences

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many firearm licences have been revoked in Scotland in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Sections 30 and 52 of the Firearms Act 1968 as amended by section 12 of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 provide powers to revoke firearm and shotgun certificates. The number of revocations in Scotland, since 1980, the earliest year for which figures are readily available, are as follows:

Year	Firearm	Shotgun
1980	27	59
1981	20	52
1982	23	66
1983	16	54
1984	25	67
1985	39	99
1986	25	69
1987	31	101
1988	39	142
1989	36	124

Local Government Finance

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Scottish pensioners have written to him since the Budget supporting the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of representations from pensioners about different aspects of the community charge since the Budget statement.

Violent Crime

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give details of the numbers of violent crimes where firearms have been involved in each year since 1979.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the annual bulletins published by the Scottish Home and Health Department under the title "Recorded Crimes and Offences Involving Firearms, Scotland", which give a comprehensive analysis of offences involving firearms including information on categories of firearms used, type of offence committed, and so on. The latest bulletin, which gives the figures for 1988, was published as SHHD statistical bulletin No. 4/1989. A copy is in the Library.

Departmental Employees

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of people employed by his Department, including full-time and part-time employees and consultants.

Mr. Rifkind: The March 1990 figures for staff employed in the Scottish Office, Scottish prison service and the four minor Departments for which I am responsible (Scottish Record Office, General Register Office (Scotland), Department of the Registers of Scotland and the Scottish Courts Administration) are as follows:

Department	Full-Time	Part-Time	Total
Scottish Office	6,173	228	6,401
Scottish Prison Service	3,855	34	3,889
Scottish Record Office	108	11	119
General Register Office	289	28	317
Department of Registers	987	20	1,007
Scottish Courts Administration	899	61	960
Total	12,311	382	12,693

In addition, the Scottish Office has current contracts with 144 individual consultants or with consultancy firms. The Scottish prison service similarly has 29 such arrangements.

Hepatitis B

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has regarding newly reported cases of persons infected by the hepatitis B virus in each health board area in Scotland in each of the last five years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The number of reported cases of persons infected by the hepatitis B virus in each of the last five years is set out in the table:

Health Board	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989
Argyll and Clyde	29	27	9	2	8
Ayrshire and Arran	18	12	4	7	4
Borders	1	1	0	1	0
Dumfries and Galloway	1	1	0	0	0
Fife	2	1	3	3	5
Forth Valley	24	12	3	4	5
Grampian	69	32	34	24	14
Greater Glasgow	371	231	151	174	180
Highland	9	7	3	2	3
Lanarkshire	26	24	8	5	6
Lothian	101	72	53	35	35
Orkney	0	0	0	0	1
Shetland	0	1	0	1	1
Tayside	53	33	41	55	24
Western Isles	3	0	0	0	0
Other[1]	2	15	13	4	12
Total	709	469	322	317	298

[1] Cases which cannot be attributed to a specific Health Board.

These figures show a welcome decline in the incidence of the disease.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has regarding the level of take-up of the hepatitis vaccine in each health board area in Scotland.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This information is not routinely recorded by health boards.

Schools

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the capital expenditure on local authority schools in each Scottish regional and island council in each of the past 10 years in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Rifkind: The information is given in the following table, which has been compiled from local authority financial returns. The reduction in expenditure in real terms during the period reflects a substantial and progressive decline in pupil numbers which in turn reduced the requirement for new school building.

Capital Expenditure by Local Authorities on Schools

1979-80

Region/Islands Council Area	At outturn prices	At 1988-89 prices

The figures include expenditure on nursery, primary, secondary and special schools.

Out-turn figures have been converted to 1988-89 prices using the GDP deflator.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he has taken, and proposes to take, to ensure that schools meet an acceptable level of first aid provision by (a) meeting the Government's own guidelines and (b) matching the health and safety requirements required of factories and offices; and what time limit he has set for the attainment of such standards.

Mr. Rifkind: Education authorities are responsible for the operational management of schools and are responsible for the safety of pupils attending schools under their management. Health and safety legislation applies to schools as it does to other workplaces. Health and Safety Commission guidance on first aid in educational establishments recommends that the total number of people on site, not just the number of employees, be considered in assessing first aid needs.

Regulations, which also provide for playground supervision in Scottish schools, came into force on 1 April this year putting a statutory duty on education authorities to take reasonable care for the safety of all pupils attending schools under their management. In addition, my Department is currently preparing guidance on first aid provision in schools and colleges which will be issued to education authorities.

Trunk Roads

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about progress on trunk road schemes during 1989-90 and about the progress expected in 1990-91.

Mr. Rifkind: Details of the major scheme starts made and expected to be made are as follows:

Schemes with an estimated cost of over £1 million started since 1 April 1989

M80 Stepps Bypass
A82 Luss Bypass
A7 Dalkeith Bypass
A68 Newton St. Boswells Bypass
A76 Cumnock and Auchinleck Bypass
A87 Dornie Bypass
A701 Ae Bridge
A94 Stracathro Junction

These schemes had a total value of £66 million.

Schemes with an estimated cost of over £1 million expected to start by 31 March 1991

M74 Millbank-Nether Abington	A74 Upgrading schemes
M74 Kirkpatrick Fleming-Gretna	A74 Upgrading schemes
M74 Elvanfoot-Paddy's Rickle Bridge	A74 Upgrading schemes
M74 Maryville-W. of Fullarton Road (Advance Works)
A1 Tower-Dunglass
A96 Nairn Railway Bridge Replacement
A9 Greenloaning-Blackford
A929 Tarbrax-Forfar
A75 Carrutherstown-Hetland
A77 Bennane Hill

These schemes have a total value of £130 million, reflecting the 28 per cent. increase in trunk road funds for this year and the still further increase for the following year. I will be making a more detailed announcement on A74 upgrading schemes later this month. As to completions of major schemes, in 1989-90 eight major schemes were completed and in 1990-91 another 10 schemes are expected to be completed.

Motorway Service Areas

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the Government's policy and practice for providing new motorway service areas in respect of development of the motorway network in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Development Department is currently progressing a massive motorway building programme in Scotland and schemes valued at over £650 million are now coming on stream. An integral part of the development of the motorway network will be ensuring the provision of adequate services in strategic locations, such as network focal points. The general policy will be to secure new service areas spaced roughly 20 to 30 miles apart on existing motorways where there is a gap in provision and on new motorways.

The general policy as to the siting, planning, design and operation of motorway service areas (MSAs) is to ensure:

(a) the development of an adequate network of service facilities;

(b) genuine competition for service provision through competitive tendering for provision of services;

(c) road safety, by restricting and controlling access to the motorways, and by preventing inappropriate activities at service areas (such as the sale of alcohol);

(d) the maintenance of the necessary range of services for 24 hours a day, seven days a week, including facilities for the disabled and provision for heavy goods vehicles.

The Department's policy will therefore be to ensure that the consumer is provided with an adequate range of choice and good value for money, while upholding the highest standards of road safety. This depends among other things on promoting fair competition among firms seeking to provide services. Normally competitive tenders are sought from the private sector for the development and a long lease of the site, in return for an appropriate rent which reflects the market value of the site as developed. In implementing its policy the Department will, of course, remain flexible to the specific needs and circumstances of particular routes, areas and local communities.

To achieve the control over the planning, development and future use of MSAs it is intended that the Secretary of State should, except in very exceptional circumstances, own the sites which are identified as suitable for the provision of MSAs and that the Department should obtain the appropriate planning clearance. If an identified site is not already in the Secretary of State's possession it will be acquired either voluntarily or, if necessary, by using compulsory purchase powers. The site would then be open to competition and thereafter leased to a firm which would provide the services with the necessary control over the site being exercised through appropriate conditions in the lease. Other things being equal, leases for adjacent sites would not be awarded to the same firm. The lease control would not entail intervening in the detailed management of sites, which is best left to the firm providing the services, but would ensure that basic requirements—for example, round-the-clock provision of certain facilities—continue to be met and that basic restrictions, for example, on the sale of alcohol, continue to be observed.

As part of the route studies for the M74 and M80 motorways consultants will be advising on suitable sites for service areas. Once these have been identified and they are in the Secretary of State's ownership they will then be the subject of an application for planning clearance before making the necessary arrangements for leasing the site.

Where proposals are brought forward for service areas which are designed to meet the needs of motorway users but which would not actually be sited on the motorway itself—that is, off a road or roundabout giving access to it—the relevant planning applications will fall to be considered by the local planning authority. In such cases planning authorities will no doubt take into consideration not only the road safety and traffic implications of the proposals but existing and proposed service areas on the motorway itself.

I hope that I shall be able to make a further statement about our preferred locations for service areas in the near future.

Electricity

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether he proposes to exercise his powers under section 97 and schedule 12 of the Electricity Act 1989.

Mr. Rifkind: I have today placed in the Library a copy of an agreement under section 97 and schedule 12 of the Electricity Act 1989 entered into with Scottish Nuclear Ltd. to provide assistance towards qualifying expenditure in respect of certain back-end costs of the nuclear cycle. The agreement relieves SNL of some of its inherited liabilities in relation to the generation of electricity by Magnox stations of up to £716 million by 1994. The qualifying expenditure to which the agreement relates will be incurred by the company over a period which is likely to exceed 100 years from the present. It is not therefore expected that payment of grant under the agreement will be made for some years.

Student Allowances

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish full details of student allowances for session 1990-91.

Mr. Lang: I announced the main rates of student grant for the 1990-91 academic year on 19 December 1989 at columns 147-48 and I announced the new provisions for disabled students on 19 March at columns 450-51.

I am publishing today the remaining supplementary grant rates for 1990-91 and full details have been placed in the Library. The increases in these rates are broadly in line with the 5 per cent. increase in the main rates, previously announced.

Consultancies

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total amount spent by his Department in 1989 on management and computer consultancy contracts; excluding hardware and software purchases; if he will list each management or computer consultancy contract awarded by his Department in 1989, giving in each case the name of the consultancy firm and the subject of the assignment; and what is the total amount that his Department has budgeted to spend in the current year.

Mr. Rifkind [holding answer 28 March 1990]: Estimated expenditure on management consultancies and computer consultancies in the 1989-90 and 1990-91 financial years is, in rounded terms, as follows:

£'000	Management	Computer
1989-90	300	675
1990-91	400	725

The contracts awarded by my Department in 1989-90 are as follows:

Management Consultancies and Subject of Assignment

A Fegent—HBM Procurement.
Touche Ross—Health Education Review.
Peat, Marwick McLintock—Lothian Health Board.
Coopers and Lybrand—HBM Executive Agency proposals.
A Fegent—Overview of Scottish Office Purchasing.

Edinburgh University Computing Service—Digital mapping.
Dunsmore Data—Preparation and implementation of financial spreadsheet.
CS Consultants—Programming various data systems. Preparation of roads database.
Taylor Woodrow Management and Engineering Ltd—Specification for and running of Scottish Office Emergency Exercise.
Napier Polytechnic—Computing requirements and staff training.
Price Waterhouse—Management information systems in grant-aided colleges.

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will calculate the amount payable by a man on average earnings living in a house valued at £60,000 under a system of local government finance based on capital values rates with a local income tax element based on Kirklees council's projected spending in 1989-90 and 1990-91; and what the figures would have been for a woman on average earnings in similar circumstances.

Mr. Chope: The amount payable would depend on the precise detail of how such a system would operate and on the taxable income of the individuals.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secetary of State for the Environment what is the Government's estimate of the number of households who pay the full rate who would gain under the poll tax; and what is their estimate of the average gain in such cases.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 29 March 1990, Official Report, Vol. 170, column 247.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table in the Official Report showing the estimated numbers in each sample category of people paying more poll tax than rates, together with the Government's estimate of their contribution under the present system and the amount which the Government considered they ought to pay.

Mr. Chope: The Government have not prescribed an amount that people ought to pay.

An analysis of the distributional impact of the introduction of the community charge was placed in the Library on 15 February.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing in each case the assumed underlying long-run community charge per adult as a percentage of average earnings in the northern region and the south-east for full-time adult male manual workers in the year to April 1989, together with an explanation for the difference.

Mr. Chope: The assumed long-run community charge used for 1990-91 revenue support grant purposes, expressed as an amount per week, represents 2·9 per cent. of average full-time earnings at April 1989 for male manual employees on adult rates of pay in the Northern region and 2·2 per cent. of the equivalent figure in the south-east including Greater London.

The assumed personal community charge, which reflects the transitional arrangements for 1990-91, expressed as an amount per week, represents 2·4 per cent. of average full-time earnings at April 1989 for male manual employees on adult rates of pay in the Northern region and 2·3 per cent. of the equivalent figure in the south-east including Greater London.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received from members of the public (a) supporting and (b) opposing the poll tax.

Mr. Chope: I have received and continue to receive many representations on the community charge reflecting a wide range of views.

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment if he will update the figures put in the Library on 6 November 1989 showing, for each local authority area, what level of (i) capital value rates and (ii) local income tax would be required in order to raise the same amount of revenue as with the 1990-91 community charge.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today placed in the Library a table showing the information requested.

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a table showing for each rating or charging authority (a) his estimate of the average rate bill per domestic ratepayer in 1989-90, (b) the information he has on the average personal community charge actually set in each area in 1990-91, (c) the percentage domestic rate increase which would have taken place in 1990-91 if the same amount of revenue had been raised in each area as is being raised in community charges and (d) the rate bill per domestic ratepayer in each area consequent upon that increase in domestic rates.

Mr. David Hunt: I have today placed in the Library a table showing the information requested.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities now known to him which have announced their intention to levy a standard community charge at less than twice the personal community charge.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 3 April 1990]: I have not yet gathered the information requested except on an informal basis from a few authorities on a basis which did not imply that it would be published.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration was given in calculating standard spending assessment and grant to Westminster city council to the daily population figure; and if he will set out the sum thereby arrived at.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Standard spending assessments and revenue support grant entitlements are calculated in the same way for all local authorities. The basis of calculation is set out in the revenue support grant distribution report approved by this House on 18 January. Resident population, adjusted for visitors and for the net inflow of commuters, features in the SSA element for all other services; resident population features in the SSA for fire and civil defence; and resident population adjusted for the net inflow of commuters features in the SSA for highway maintenance. There is thus no single daily population figure used in the calculation for Westminster city council.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will reconsider the standard spending assessment for Brighton and other holiday and conference resorts.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 2 April 1990]: I have made it clear that I am willing to consider any new evidence on standard spending assessments with a view to making changes for 1991-92 if that should prove necessary.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report setting out for each council the impact on its standard spending assessment arising from new duties under the Environmental Protection Bill and the Food Safety Bill [Lords].

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Duties under these bills will not affect local authority spending in 1990-91. New duties will be taken into account in setting standard spending assessments for 1991-92.

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the authorities which benefited in their standard spending assessment and revenue grant allocation from a consideration of the impact of daily population increases.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The basis of calculation of standard spending assessments and revenue support grant entitlements is set out in the revenue support grant distribution report (England). Resident population adjusted for daily visitors and for the net inflow of commuters features in the assessment for all other services. All authorities receive a positive contribution to their SSAs from the allowance for visitors. The authorities listed in the table receive a positive contribution to their SSAs from the allowance for net inflow of commuters. The latter also features in the SSA element for highway maintenance.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce regulations to require YTS trainees to pay only 20 per cent. of the community charge.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 29 March 1990]: No. From May, 18-year-old YTS trainees will receive £35 per week plus top-up payments which can be substantial. Their liability for the community charge will depend upon their net income, but it is likely that most will be eligible for community charge benefit.

Mobility

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications for rehousing under the national mobility scheme there have been in each year since its inception.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The number of nominations made by authorities on behalf of applicants for rehousing in another authority were as follows for each year:

	Number
1981-82	16,401
1982-83	25,322
1983-84	27,776
1984-85	33,877
1985-86	26,796
1986-87	33,407
1987-88	27,224
1988-89	[1]20,369

[1] Interim figure.

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list those local authorities which have rehoused applicants under the national mobility scheme by authority, number accepted and year accepted, and in total;

(2) if he will list those local authorities which have unsuccessfully asked for rehousing of their residents to another local authority under the national mobility scheme by authority, number rejected, year applied and total.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The information is not held centrally.

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of applications for rehousing under the national mobility scheme have been successful.

Mr. Michael Spicer: During the period from 1981, when the scheme started, to the end of 1988-89, 26 per cent. of all those who were nominated by their local authority for rehousing elsewhere were successful in moving to their area of choice; a further 7 per cent. are still on waiting lists.

Bellwin Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on his Department's proposals for making a scheme under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989.

Mr. David Hunt: It will be necessary to make a scheme under this section only following an emergency and a decision by the Government to provide financial help for local authorities. The details of the scheme will reflect the nature of the emergency. My Department has recently written to local authorities in England outlining the changes envisaged in the Bellwin scheme following the reform of local government finance. I have placed a copy in the Library. It is proposed to pay grant at the rate of 85 per cent. of eligible expenditure over a threshold equivalent to £2 per adult.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the uniform business rate for small rural village business concerns to include turnover and profit in its calculation.

Mr. Chope: Rateable values reflect the rent that might reasonably be expected to be paid from year to year for each property, on the assumption that the tenant pays the cost of repairs and insurance. In the 1990 revaluation, the level of value relates to 1 April 1988 but reflects the physical state of the property on 1 April 1990. To the extent that generally profit margins may be smaller in rural areas, these could be expected to be reflected in rents, which would in turn be reflected in rateable values.

House Renovation Grants

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about changes in the system of house renovation grants.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the member for Bolton, North-East (Mr. Thurnham) on 22 February, Official Report, Vol. 167, column 888.

Groundwater Contamination (Oxfordshire)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has received any information from the National Rivers Authority concerning the contamination of groundwater at the Blewbury borehole in south Oxfordshire.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority and Thames Water Utilities have kept the Department informed of recent observations and developments concerning groundwater quality in the Blewbury area of south Oxfordshire. Carbon tetrachloride has been detected in water supplied at about half the concentration prescribed in the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989. There is no cause for concern. Work is in hand to ascertain the source of the solvent and any corrective measures required.

Merchant Seamen

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking following the recent ruling of the Humberside valuation and community charge tribunal concerning the liability of merchant seamen to the community charge; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: The Humberside valuation and community charge tribunal found that the individual circumstances of some merchant seamen whose employment required them to be absent from home for substantial periods meant they should not be registered as liable for the community charge. It is not for my right. hon. Friend to comment on the decisions of an independent tribunal.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the honourable Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Trippier: This Department has received approximately 100 communications from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989.

Where the correspondence raises questions of exclusively local interest, the practice is to recommend the MEP to refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Drinking Water, Northumbria

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the location and staffing by grade and size of the drinking water inspectorate for the Northumbrian water authority area.

Mr. Trippier: The drinking water inspectorate is located in central London and recruitment is in progress. There are currently 12 staff in post: a chief inspector; deputy chief inspector; a further four professional staff; and six administrative and support staff. At present, staff are not allocated to any specific region or area.

Caravan Sites

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how long he intends to allow Kirklees and Calderdale local authorities to have to make suitable caravan site provision before he decides to issue directions to those authorities to make such provision; what is his assessment of how many sites each local authority should provide; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: My Department is in discussion with both authorities. The statutory requirement on metropolitan districts is to provide for 15 caravans. We will continue to monitor the situation closely and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will give a direction to either or both authorities if he considers it necessary to do so.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to delay the granting of designation of caravan sites in Bradford until he is satisfied that adjacent authorities have made suitable site provision.

Mr. Chope: No. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has already decided to designate Bradford on the grounds that it is not expedient for that authority to make adequate provision for the gipsies residing in or resorting to the area. We are continuing to monitor closely action being taken in respect of the provision of sites by neighbouring authorities.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he took account of in considering an application from Bradford council to designate caravan sites in Bradford about (a) the cost and location of existing and proposed private caravan sites and (b) improvements Bradford council intends to make to council-owned caravan sites in Bradford.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State took account of all relevant factors before deciding to designate Bradford, including those relating both to private site provision, and to the improvements which the council proposes to local authority sites.

Housing Association Tenants

Mr. Malins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department's research report on new housing association tenants is to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I welcome the report's findings. These demonstrate that housing associations are targeting their lettings at lower-income groups in housing need. They vindicate our policy of making housing associations the main providers of new subsidised housing for rent.

The research, published today, was carried out for the Department of the Environment by Research Surveys of Great Britain after a census of new lettings in 1988 by the National Federation of Housing Associations. Interviews were sought with all households in the census where there was someone in employment or receiving an occupational pension, in order to collect detailed information about household characteristics and incomes.

The findings confirm that the incomes of new housing association tenants, even those in work, are low. The average gross income of households with an income from employment was £153 per week and average net weekly household earnings were £115.

Occupational pensions averaged £29.10 per week with the state pension and other benefits bringing average total income for these households to £91·70 per week.

Nearly nine out of 10 of the households with someone in work had savings of less than £1,500. Households receiving an occupational pension had higher savings but only one third of these had savings of more than £3,000.

Among households with an earned income, over half were in manual jobs and a third were in unskilled manual work. About half the respondents in the survey had been on a council waiting list. Most people had applied direct to the housing association for accommodation, but about a fifth had been nominated by their local council.

Action for Cities

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he can now give (a) the final cost of the action for cities anniversary events on 28 February and (b) the costs of the publication "People in Cities".

Mr. David Hunt: (a) The final cost of the launch in Bradford and the television link-up on 28 February averaged under £15,000 for each of the seven centres involved, and locally incurred costs amounted in addition to an average of £5,000 for each centre.

(b) 50,000 "People in Cities" booklets and wallets—£74,542.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government expect to respond to the report by the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology on the greenhouse effect.

Mr. Chris Patten: We have today laid before the House the Government's response to this report. The Committee produced a detailed and thorough report and we broadly welcome its conclusions. The report stressed the need for continued research into the science of climate change, we have already responded to this need by announcing significant increases in our funding for climate-related research in the coming year. The report also emphasised the importance of seeking a global solution to this global problem and we will continue to play an active and constructive role in the work of the Inter-governmental Panel on Climate Change and in promoting an international framework convention on climate change.

Valuation Disputes

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has completed his consideration of the response to the consultation paper on valuation disputes under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967.

Mr. Chope: We and the Welsh Office have now completed a full analysis of the response to the consultation paper. The consultation was undertaken in the light of suggestions that the existing statutory procedure—under which valuation disputes can be referred to the local leasehold valuation tribunal with a subsequent right of appeal to the Lands Tribunal—was in practice working to the disadvantage of leaseholders, in that some freeholders were using the threat of an appeal, and the consequent risk of substantial costs, to deter leaseholders from having recourse to the procedure. Views were sought as to whether such allegations could be substantiated and, if so, whether there was a case for withdrawing or curtailing the right of appeal.

The consultation yielded no firm evidence that the alleged effect is occurring in practice. We have concluded, therefore, that there is at present no case for making changes to the statutory procedure. We will, however, keep matters under review and will not hesitate to take action if evidence comes to light that the procedure is failing to maintain an equitable balance between the interests of freeholders and leaseholders.

Homelessness

Mr. Ward: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will review the Housing Act 1985 as far as it affects homeless people, in view of the recent comments made by Lord Justice Watkins in the High Court about the lack of clarity in the Act.

Mr. Michael Spicer [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The Government completed a major review of the homelessness legislation only last November. It concluded that the Act provided an adequate safety net for those in genuine need, homeless through no fault of their own. It recognised, however, that there was a need for local authorities to adopt more consistent procedures and criteria. A revised code of guidance is being prepared to help them to achieve this and we will look carefully at Lord Justice Watkin's comments in preparing the revised code.

Dangerous Substances

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the implementation in the United Kingdom of European Commission directives 76/769/EEC, 79/663/EEC, 82/806/EEC, 82/828/EEC, 83/264/EEC, 83/478/EEC, 85/467/EEC and 85/610/EEC, on the marketing and use of dangerous substances.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The Control of Pollution (Supply and Use of Injurious Substances) Regulations 1980 (SI 1980 No. 638) restricted the use of polychlorinated biphenyls and terphenyls in the manner specified in directive 76/769, as amended by directive 82/828.

The Dangerous Substances and Preparations (Safety) Regulations 1980 (SI 1980 No. 136) implemented directive 76/769 as respects vinyl chloride monomer (chloroethylene) in aerosols, and also implemented directive 79/663 in respect of ornamental objects and Tris in certain textile products.

The Benzene and Toys (Safety) (Regulations) 1987 (SI 1987 No. 2116) implemented directive 82/806.

The Novelties (Safety) (Amendment) Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 128) implemented directive 83/264.

The Asbestos Product (Safety) Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 2042) and the Asbestos (Prohibitions) Regulations 1985 (SI 1985 No. 910) implemented directive 83/478.

The Control of Pollution (Supply and Use of Injurious Substances) Regulations 1986 (SI 1986 No. 902) implemented directive 85/467.

The Asbestos Products (Safety) (Amendment) Regulations 1987 (SI 1987 No. 1979) and the Asbestos (Prohibitions) (Amendment) Regulations 1988 (SI 1988 No. 711) implemented directive 85/610.

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the authorities which he designated on 3 April for community charge limitation and the maximum amounts which he is proposing.

Mr Chris Patten: The list is as follows:

	Budget £ million	Proposed cap	Reduction £ million	Reduction £ per adult
Avon	533.7	507.1	26.6	37
Barnsley	142.0	132.0	10.0	59

DEFENCE

Eastern Europe

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his estimate of the fall in defence expenditure in eastern Europe over the last year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr Allen) on 2 February, Official Report, column 406.

Armed Forces (Welsh Speakers)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many fluent Welsh speakers are currently serving in each of Her Majesty's armed forces.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Rescue Helicopters

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many land-based Royal Navy helicopters are available on a 24-hour, 365 day a year basis for rescue operations around the British coast.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Two Royal Navy air stations are on call 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, for search and rescue (SAR) duties. At each of these there are two helicopters available for SAR. More helicopters can be made available at longer notice.

Oil Tankers

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he has any plans to add to the current number of Royal Fleet Auxiliary oil tankers serving the British Navy.

Mr. Neubert: There are currently two of the new class of auxiliary oiler replenishment vessels (AORs) on order for the Royal Fleet Auxiliary. Further orders are planned but no decisions have yet been made on their size or timing.

Natural Disasters

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of those activities in which Her Majesty's armed forces have assisted civilian populations during periods of natural disasters over the past 20 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The armed forces have supported civilian authorities during periods of natural disaster both at home and overseas on numerous occasions over the past 20 years. An exhaustive list of those activities could be provided only at disproportionate cost, but the following list compiled from the readily available records, gives an indication of the frequency with which the services' help is provided.

Date	Country
1970	Bangladesh (East Pakistan)	Floods
1970	Tunisia	Floods

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish for each of the past 10 years the number of civilians rescued at sea by Royal Navy helicopters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information for the years before 1983 is not held in the form requested. Since 1983 Royal Navy helicopters have rescued the following number of civilians at sea:

Year	Number Rescued
1983	133
1984	88
1985	102
1986	74
1987	85
1988	80
1989	161

Complaints

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish in the Official Report for each of the last 10 years (a) the number of complaints made against his Department to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration, (b) the number of complaints upheld and (c) the action he took on (b).

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of complaints (a) made and (b) upheld for the last 10 years is as follows:

	(a) complaints made	(b) complaints upheld
1989-90	[1]—	[1]—
1988-89	22	Nil
1987-88	11	Nil
1986-87	16	Nil
1985-86	17	1
1984-85	21	Nil
1983-84	20	Nil
1982-83	23	1
1981-82	28	1
1980-81	27	Nil

[1] Figures not yet available.

When the PCA upholds a complaint it is departmental practice to provide an appropriate remedy.

Trident

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the first submarine capable of carrying Trident missiles to commence her sea trials.

Mr. Neubert: Vanguard will undertake a series of sea trials, the precise dates of which are classified. However, I can say that the first of these will commence about two years before the UK Trident deterrent going into service in the mid-1990s.

Military Personnel

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the practice of his Department on releasing the names of military personnel who are witnesses to an event which is the subject of a criminal prosecution.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Ministry of Defence seeks to be as helpful as possible in answering requests from the police, prosecuting authorities and legal representatives of defendants in criminal proceedings for the names of service personnel who would be in a position to give evidence as witnesses. The Department needs in each case to be satisfied as to the purpose and validity of the request before providing such information. Personal security considerations may also need to be taken into account.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence why the names of witnesses who are alleged to be service personnel have been witheld in the case of a criminal prosecution of three people for an incident which took place involving a convoy of military vehicles near the Clyde submarine base on 15 August 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to the recent request from one of those charged as a result of this incident to be given the name of the driver of one of the military vehicles involved. The Department declined to provide this information, as it is not the practice to release details of individual members of military convoy crews in response to requests of this sort.

Correspondence

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he intends to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Easington dated 5 February concerning living conditions of service men's families in Germany.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The hon. Member should by now have received a reply from my noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces.

RAF Brawdy

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the amounts of money spent on construction and equipment for joint United Kingdom-United States of America projects at Brawdy, Wales, in each of the past five years; and which votes and sections of the defence accounts have borne these expenditures.

Mr. Alan Clarke: The United Kingdom has spent no money on construction and equipment for joint United Kingdom-United States projects at RAF Brawdy in the past five years.

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what has been the operating cost of the United Kingdom national joint ocean surveillance information centre in each of the last five years; and what proportion of these costs is borne by the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the United States Navy's oceanographic research facility at RAF Brawdy. Running costs of the facility are borne by the United States, although United Kingdom provides five Royal Navy and three Royal Air Force personnel to assist in operating the facility.

Vacant Properties

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total number of vacant houses classified for the use of service personnel.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 30 November 1989, the latest date for which complete figures are available, the total number of vacant properties in the United Kingdom, both houses and flats, classified as service married quarters was 12,423. Many of these properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation, some were already allotted to service families who were due to move in shortly and others were in the process of disposal.

Royal Arsenal West

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department presented its proposals for the development of the Royal Arsenal West site to the London borough of Greenwich; and what response it has received.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our development proposals for the Royal Arsenal West site were presented to the London borough of Greenwich on 19 December 1989. The council is generally supportive of our ideas.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the honourable Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Some 15 letters covering a variety of topics have been received from members of the European Parliament in the period in question.

Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEPs had themselves copied their letter in this way.

Cambridge House, Woolwich

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when the flats at Cambridge house, Artillery place, Woolwich, were first offered for sale; and when he now expects the sale to be completed.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The flats at Cambridge house, Artillery place, Woolwich were first offered for sale on 8 February 1990. The sale was completed on 30 March 1990.

Main Battle Tanks

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United Kingdom main battle tanks are held in storage.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is not our practice to disclose detailed information on equipment held in storage. For information on total holdings of main battle tanks I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 15 March, Official Report, column 328.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has made no official visits to Wales while Secretary of State for Defence. My right hon. Friend the Member for Ayr (Mr. Younger) paid an official visit to several service establishments in Wales in July 1988. I visited RAF Brawdy on 17 July 1989.

Eastern Europe (Soviet Troops)

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the effect on threat assessments of the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The complete withdrawal of Soviet troops from Czechoslovakia and Hungary is currently due to be completed by mid-1991, and we shall monitor this process with interest. When completed, these withdrawals will obviously have a significant effect on Soviet military capability in the central region.

German Unification

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the implications of German unification for the strategy of forward defence.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We expect forward defence to remain a central feature of NATO's strategy for deterrence. However, German unification may have implications for how it is implemented, which will need to be considered in the light of the defence and security arrangements that emerge from the two plus four negotiations. We welcome the opportunity for a fresh look at this aspect of our defence posture, to ensure that it is well fitted for the new security setting.

Afghanistan

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of the influence that the team of Royal Engineers currently teaching Afghan refugees in Pakistan will have on the conflict in Afghanistan.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Royal Engineer teams have been taking part in a UN programme designed to train Afghan refugees currently in Pakistan in techniques of mine clearance and mine awareness. This programme has been set up purely for the humanitarian purpose of reducing the danger to refugees when they return to their homes.

Nuclear Test Ban Treaty

Mr O'Neill: To ask the Secretay of State for Defence what assessment he has made of procedures for monitoring and verifying a complete nuclear test ban treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. and learned Friend the Member for Putney (Mr. Mellor) on 27 June 1988, Official Report, Vol. 136, column 61, and to the working paper on seismic monitoring tabled in the conference on disarmament in 1985 (CD 610), a copy of which is held in the Library. Scientists at the MOD's research establishment at Blacknest near Aldermaston continue to undertake seismological research which might support a verification regime for further constraints on nuclear testing.

Atomic Weapons Establishments

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what documents he has sent to the firms that have expressed an interest in bidding for the initial management contract at the atomic weapons establishment.

Mr. Neubert: Potential contractors have been sent copies of the statement made in the House by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 5 December, and of the consultative document to which that statement referred. They will shortly receive the invitation to tender.

Mr. Martin O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what the shortfalls of staff were at each of the four atomic weapons establishments at the end of each year between 1980 and 1987.

Mr. Neubert: AWE shortfalls at the end of 1987 will equate to those given for 1 January 1988 in the answer which I provided to the hon. Member on 17 January 1990 at column 300. Details of staff shortfalls before the amalgamation of AWRE and the nuclear royal ordnance factories on 1 September 1987 are not readily available.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make a decision about the detailed relationship between the existing safety division and the proposed compliance office at the atomic weapons establishment.

Mr. Neubert: The detailed relationship between the compliance office and the existing safety division at AWE will be finalised before the commencement of the initial management contract, planned for later this year.

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will make a decision about what financial criteria will be used to monitor the performance of the management contractors to be appointed at the atomic weapons establishment.

Mr. Neubert: The criteria against which the management contractor's performance is to be assesed will be included in the invitation to tender, which is now being finalised for issue shortly.

Soviet Navy

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current assessment of levels of Soviet naval activity.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Levels of Soviet naval activity out of area have been falling since 1985. There has been an increase, however, in training activity close to all the main naval bases in the Soviet Union. It should be noted that although the number of Soviet units deployed out of area has reduced, a presence has been maintained in all traditional areas of Soviet interest.

Soviet Army

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current assessment of Soviet levels of production of military equipment for the Soviet army.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We believe that in 1989 Soviet production of tanks fell markedly from the levels of recent years to around half the previous total. Production of light armoured fighting vehicles and artillery also declined but far less dramatically. However, such cuts were from high historic levels and current production volumes remain high, with the Soviet Union out-producing the whole of NATO in all categories of land arms equipment.

Naval Disarmament

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies he has undertaken regarding the feasibility of negotiations on (a) naval confidence-building measures and (b) naval disarmament treaties.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The greatest threat to stability in Europe comes from land-based forces, and United Kingdom and NATO efforts have therefore concentrated on those. The importance of sea lines of communication to NATO remains very great, and no proposals on maritime confidence-building measures or naval arms control have been formulated by the United Kingdom.

United Nations Military Operations

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he expects the extent of military operations carried out under the auspices of the United Nations to increase over the next 10 years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The extent of the future contribution of British service men to such operations will depend on the number and nature of any requests for assistance we receive from the United Nations, and how we are able to respond to them.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. O'Neill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment has been made of technical methods of improving the non-proliferation measures available to the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply:

The assessment of technical methods to ensure the capability of the timely detection of diversion of significant quantities of nuclear material from peaceful nuclear activities is a continuing activity for the IAEA and its member states. The United Kingdom, along with a number of other member states carries out a safeguards research and development programme in support of the IAEA. Our technical programme, carried out by AEA Technology on behalf of my Department, involves the provision of technical reports to the IAEA on many areas of interest identified by them. The IAEA has expressed satisfaction with the programme.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Nursing Homes

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what evidence is available to him on the extent to which claimants in private and voluntary residential and nursing homes throughout the country are able to meet the fees in full from available income support;

(2) what is the source of his independent research on costs and charges in private and voluntary nursing and residential care homes which he takes into account when setting income support limits; and if he will place copies of such evidence in the Library.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Many interested individuals and organisations make representations and submit evidence on costs and charges in homes. The authors are free to publish this if they wish. The Department has commissioned a number of studies, the best known of which was by Ernst and Whinney, published in 1986. Statistical information from the Department's own local offices is also used and this is published where practicable in aggregated form in response to questions from hon. Members.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of persons living in residential and nursing homes and currently receiving income support.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At August 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, it is estimated that there were around 117,000 people in independent residential care homes and around 56,000 in nursing homes receiving income support.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of the residents of nursing homes and residential care homes in receipt of income support (a) receive the full cost charged by their home and (b) receive income support payments below the charge levied by their home.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 6 March 1990]: The most reliable estimates are available only in respect of all claimants in homes. The proportion of claimants whose fees were at or below the income support limits for the year ended August 1989, the latest period for which figures are available, was just over half. The average number of claimants during that period was 166,000, rounded to the nearest 1,000.

State Retirement Pension

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security at what ages state retirement pensions are made available to (a) men and (b) women in (i) Germany and (ii) France; and what is the estimated increase in public expenditure if these age criteria were applied in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: There is no single state pension scheme in either the Federal Republic of Germany or France.

The principal requirement for the award of a pension in the main state schemes in both the Federal Republic and France is that the claimant should have completed a certain number of years of contributions. Provided that this condition is met the minimum age at which the full pension is payable is 63 for the Federal Republic and 60 for France. Women in Germany can claim a pension at 60 if they have worked for at least 15 years, but as pensions in Germany are related to earnings level and length of working life, a woman in this position would be likely to receive only a small pension. There are no separate retirement ages in France for men and women.

The cost of a common retirement age for both men and women at 63 in the United Kingdom at 1985-86 benefit rates is estimated at £800 million and at £3,000 million for age 60.

Chief Adjudication Officer (Report)

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he will publish the fifth annual report of the chief adjudication officer.

Mr. Newton: The report is being published today. It reflects considerable variation in standards of adjudication. While the report is critical of the Department of Social Security local office standards it recognises that initiatives such as the creation of social security centres should lead to improvement through greater specialisation. I am pleased that the report highlights the high standard achieved by Newcastle central office and a marked improvement in most benefits administered by North Fylde central office. While adjudication in the Department of Employment remains unsatisfactory, it is recognised that the monitoring initiatives introduced since the previous report have not yet had a chance to take effect, and these, together with changes this year in staffing and training, are noted as offering hope for future improvements. We shall respond formally to the chief adjudication officer's specific recommendations in due course.

Occupational Pensions

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average increase in real terms since 1979 in the amount received by people in respect of occupational pensions.

Mr. Newton: For all pensioners, the average amount of occupational pension received, in 1987 prices, was £13·20 in 1979 and £23·30 in 1987—an increase of 77 per cent.

For those pensioners actually receiving an occupational pension (52 per cent. of all pensioners in 1987) the average amount of such pension, in 1987 prices, was £32·10 in 1979 and £44·80 in 1987—an increase of 40 per cent.

I regret that in a supplementary answer to my hon. Friend on Monday 2 April at column 883, I inadvertently related the percentage increase for the average pensioner to the 1987 amount for the average occupational pensioner. I am glad to have this opportunity to clarify the position.

Income Support

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the reply to the hon. Member for Oxford, East of 19 February, Official Report, columns 548–49, if he will consider the case for a special exemption from the process of signing on in respect of recently bereaved income support claimants signing on for the first time.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Title to benefit is decided on the facts of each individual case. We have given careful consideration to the case for exempting recently bereaved people from signing on in order to receive income support. We have no plans to make such an exemption.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security since 18 June 1989, how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have received 47 letters from MEPs since June 1989. Although MEPs have no locus in respect of exclusively domestic United Kingdom matters, our practice is to reply in full to the MEP, to avoid delay for the constituent concerned. We do not copy correspondence to third parties unless the recipient has specifically requested that we do so.

Unemployment-related Benefit

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all the grounds for disallowance of unemployment-related benefits and the number of claims disallowed for each such reason in 1989.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information in relation to national insurance unemployment benefit is in the tables. Similar information for other unemployment-related benefits is not available.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average number of claimants to unemployment-related benefits for each year since 1979; and what was the cost of such benefits in each year.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is in the following table:

Disability

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if his Department has yet agreed on criteria which will prescribe the circumstances in which deaf-blind people will be treated as being unable to walk or virtually unable to walk to enable them to become entitled to mobility allowance this April.

Mr. Scott: The Mobility Allowance Amendment Regulations 1990, which prescribe the circumstances in which deaf-blind people will be able to qualify for the allowance, were laid before the House on 20 March. Officials have met representatives of the Mobility Allowance Campaign to discuss the regulations.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if invalid care allowance will be payable to carers of the recipients of all three rates of the new disability allowance.

Mr. Scott: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 12 February at col 83.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if recipients of mobility or attendance allowance can be put on either of the two lowest rates of disability allowance, should their benefits be reviewed after April 1992.

Mr. Scott: The qualifying criteria for the two upper levels of the care component of the disability allowance and the upper level of the mobility component will be on lines similar to those currently employed for attendance allowance and mobility allowance. The intention is that people now receiving attendance allowance and mobility allowance will continue to receive help at the same rates as under current arrangements if their condition is unchanged. In addition, in common with other disabled people, current attendance allowance recipients will also be eligible to claim the new lower rate of the mobility component of the disability and current mobility allowance recipients will be eligible to claim the new lower rate of the care component.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether mobility allowance will be payable to claimants who are terminally ill with a life expectancy of less than 12 months if they satisfy the other criteria for receiving mobility allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: Yes. Possible life expectancy is not taken into account in deciding how long a person is likely to continue to meet the medical eligibility criteria for the allowance.

Hillsborough Disaster Fund

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has on how many claimants have had benefits stopped or reduced as a result of receiving payments from the Hillsborough disaster fund.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: On the information currently available, the trustees for the Hillsborough disaster appeal fund have made payments to 647 people and five claimants have had their benefits affected.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which industrial diseases his Department recognises as rendering sufferers incapable of following their regular occupation.

Mr. Scott: Whether a claimant is capable of following his regular occupation is decided on the evidence in each individual case.

Family Benefits

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people claimed both family credit and housing benefit in 1989-90; and how many he estimates will do so in 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will amend the family credit regulations to treat mortgage interest relief on a basis similar to the treatment of rents in the housing benefit regulations.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to do so. Family credit makes no provision related to the actual cost of any outgoings in the individual case. To do so, whether for mortgage interest or any other form of outgoings, would fundamentally change the nature of the scheme.

Housing Benefit (Students)

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make an estimate of the cost to public funds of maintaining eligibility for housing benefit for students.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The most recent housing benefit statistical returns available are from May 1988 and indicate that 78,000 students were in receipt of benefit at that time. On the assumption that the numbers claiming remain at that level and taking the proposed top-up loan into account as income, the net cost of maintaining students' eligibility for housing benefit is estimated to be £35 million in a full year. Nevertheless, with the introduction of top-up loans and access funds the Government expect to be spending over £100 million more on student support even after the withdrawal of entitlement to income support, unemployment benefit and housing benefit for the majority of full-time students.

Income Statistics

Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables showing percentage changes in real income between 1981 and 1985 before and after housing costs by (a) the midpoint of each decile group for the whole of the income distribution, (b) decile group means for the whole of the income distribution and (c) cumulative decile group means for the bottom half of the income distribution and the percentage increase for the total population, in each case using assumptions contained in households below average income; and if he will make a statement on which methodology is statistically more reliable.

Mr. Newton: The information is set out in the tables.

Before housing costs	8·7	6·9	6·2	5·9	5·8	6·9
After housing costs	2·6	2·6	2·5	2·6	3·0	5·4

Figures at (a) and (b) are rounded to the nearest whole number.

The information at (c) corrects figures, particularly after housing costs, contained in the current edition of "Households Below Average Income", following the discovery of errors in the treatment of housing costs in the assessment of family income in 1981 which came to light as a result of detailed work carried out by researchers from the Institute of Fiscal Studies with the co-operation of DSS officials. Corrected full details of the 1981 analysis will be included in the next edition of "Households Below Average Incomes".

As explained in paragraph 7 of the Technical Annex to the current edition of "Households Below Average Income" the figures contained in these tables are subject to sampling error. These sampling errors, and other peculiarities in the Family Income Survey data, increase the risk of distortion at the extremes of the income distribution where the number of sample cases available is quite limited. The Government, on the advice of statisticians, have therefore concluded that measuring changes in real income by reference to decile midpoints (the median of each decile group) provides a statistically more reliable picture of living standards and propose to adopt this approach in future. However, to ensure continuity the next edition of "Households Below Average Income" will also contain figures from 1981 based on decile group means.

Pensioners (Incomes)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) pursuant to his statement on 27 November 1989, Official Report, column 525, on what basis he calculated that average incomes of pensioners had risen by about 23 per cent. since 1979; if he will set out the percentage increase in incomes of pensioners over this period from (i) the basic state pension, (ii) SERPS, (iii) occupational pension schemes (iv) dividends and interest and (v) other sources of income; if he will set out this information by deciles; and if he will indicate what weighting he gives to each of these sources of income in calculating the overall increase in pensioner incomes;

(2) if he will indicate the level of total incomes of each decade of pensioners, at constant prices, in 1979 and 1989, and the percentage increase in each case or whatever data most closely approximate to this;

(3) pursuant to his answer of 12 January, Official Report, column 782, what was the cumulative increase above inflation on the basic national insurance pension in the periods (a) 1974 to November 1979 and (b) November 1979 to April 1990;

(4) what has been the percentage increase in the total incomes in real terms of each income decile of pensioners since 1979; and, in the case of each decile, what has been the real increase over the same period in income from (i) SERPS, (ii) occupational pension schemes, (iii) interest and dividends and (iv) other sources of income;

(5) what was the net income at 1986 prices of those pensioner tax units who obtained all their income from state benefits in each year since 1979; whether he will show separately the amount of income from (a) national insurance pension, (b) the amount in (a) represented by the state earnings-related pension, (c) supplementary benefit or income support, (d) housing benefit, (e) disability benefits and (f) other; and whether he will show data separately for single and married tax units.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answers 8 January, 22 January, 26 February 1990]: The figure of a 23 per cent. increase in pensioners' average total net incomes to which the hon. Member's question refers relates to the increase from 1979 to 1986, and has therefore now been superseded by the analysis drawn from the 1987 family expenditure survey which has recently become available, showing an increase of over 31 per cent. in such incomes between 1979 and 1987. The table is therefore based on this more up-to-date information, and gives figures for both 1974-79 and for 1979-87.

Notes to tables 2, 3, and 4:

1. All cash figures are £ per week at 1987 prices.
2. All figures refer to pensioner tax units.
3. Retirement pension and related benefits includes basic retirement pension, additional pension, income support and housing benefit.
4. See note 5.
5. In common with all other surveys, the Family Expenditure Survey draws information from a random sample of the population. This means that the FES will occasionally include some individuals whose weekly income are considerably higher or lower than those of the remainder of their group. The unrepresentative income of such individuals, when averaged, may give wide swings in year-to-year comparisons. In general, when viewed over the longer term, the data provides a more reliable overall indication of the movement in average weekly incomes. We are considering whether the use of decile medians for tables involving deciles would enhance their statistical reliability.

Comparisons of changes in the basic national insurance pension over the periods requested, and between those periods, are complicated by a number of changes in uprating requirements and dates, including both those mentioned in my reply to the hon. Member on 20 December 1989 at column 299-302 and the earlier change, in 1976, from uprating based on known movements in indices of prices-earnings to uprating based on forecasts. This change had the practical effect that the change in prices or earnings over the period March 1975 to November 1975 was never taken into account for any uprating.

The table therefore gives the figures requested on the same basis as in my reply of 20 December 1989, giving comparisons both for November 1978 and for November 1979 (when long-term benefit rates were increased by 2 per cent. more than inflation to make up for an under-forecast in 1978), and for changes in the average real value of benefits in the relevant uprating periods as a whole. Figures for April 1990, and therefore for the uprating year April 1989-90, are not yet available.

Training Schemes

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the effect on the income support of participants in training courses run by local authorities or funded by the European social fund who receive financial help or help in kind towards their travel to training and meal costs; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what is the position of income support claimants who are participating in training courses funded by the European social fund or local authorities who receive equivalent payments as enjoyed by participants in employment training; what is the effect on their benefit entitlement if they receive (a) a training premium of £10 a week, (b) a cash payment equal to the person's earnings disregard in each week, (c) a cash payout equal to the person's earnings disregard for work done outside the training each week, (d) a training bonus of up to £200 at the end of training, (e) a charitable payment or training bonus at the end of their training or (f) their travelling expenses; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 1 March 1990]: For income support purposes, the treatment of payments made to trainees who are not participating in arrangements for training made under section 2 of the Employment and Training Act 1973 will depend on whether they are made on a contractual basis. Payments made on a contractual basis in respect of a weekly training premium, a weekly cash payment which is not a payment of earnings, and regular payments for meals and travel expenses will be taken fully into account as income. However, where these payments are made on a voluntary basis, the first £5 a week of the total amount is currently disregarded. From 9 April, this disregard will be increased to £10 a week, and voluntary payments which are intended and used for travel costs will be completely ignored. In addition, a payment of earnings from employment which is equal to the person's earnings disregard is ignored. Any charitable payment or training bonus (of whatever amount) paid on completion of a training course is treated as capital in the normal way and will not affect income support unless the payment brings the claimant's total capital to more than £3,000. Regular payments in kind are ignored.

Income Support

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide the income support (supplementary benefit) earnings equivalents, and the assumptions underlying the calculations, for 1989, or the latest available year, 1987 and 1979 for (a) a two adult household, single earner, with two children aged between 11 and 15 years, (b) a single person aged over 25 years and (c) a single parent with one child aged between 11 and 15 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 8 March 1990]: Figures for 1987 and 1989 are given in the table. Figures for 1979 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Levels of gross earnings at which net income after housing costs in work becomes equal to that when unemployed and in receipt of Supplementary Benefit/Income Support

Family Type	Supplementary Benefit April 1987 £ (gross)	Income Support October 1989 £ (gross)
Couple, 2 children aged 11, 15	35·06	27·50
Single person	32·10	34·90
Single parent 1 child aged 14	9·35	6·40

1. April 1987 figures exclude fares to work.
2. All other assumptions are the same as the Tax Benefit Model Tables (TBM) for April 1987 and October 1989. Copies available in the Library.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what savings in social security payments would have accrued in each of the last two years if unemployment benefit were paid for (a) two years and (b) three years;

(2) what would have been the annual cost of extending payment of unemployment benefit to (a) two years and (b) three years in each of the last two years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Estimated costs and savings are set out in the table.

	1988-89 £ million	1989-90 £ million
Extending UB duration to 2 years:
UB cost	340	260
IS/HB saving	210	170
Extending UB duration to 3 years:
UB cost	540	400
IS/HB saving	330	260

Social Fund

Mr. McLeish: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the number of income support applicants, by lone parents, disabled, pensioners and unemployed, who were receiving social fund budget and crisis loans for each month in 1989 for the Leven, Dunfermline, Cowdenbeath and Kirkcaldy social security offices.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The information given in the table represents the number of awards made each month. An individual applicant can make more than one application in each accounting period.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Namibia

11. Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on Namibian independence.

41. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with the independent Namibia.

50. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with the independent Namibia.

82. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on relations with Namibia.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with independent Namibia.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs represented the Government at the Namibian independence celebrations on 21 March, and met President Nujoma and other Ministers. We strongly supported Namibia's entry into the Commonwealth. My right hon. Friend opened the new British high commission in Windhoek on 21 March and announced £10 million in bilateral aid over the next three years. We are also helping Namibia with military and police training, at President Nujoma's request.

21. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent talks he has had with the Government of Namibia about the status of Walvis bay.

Mr. Hurd: Walvis bay was one of a number of subjects discussed during my meeting with President Nujoma in Windhoek on 21 March.

22. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what requests he has received from Namibia for assistance in negotiations for the future of Walvis bay.

Mr. Waldegrave: The future of Walvis bay is a matter for discussion between the new Namibian Government and the Government of South Africa. We have not been asked to intervene in these negotiations.

85. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent talks the Minister has had with the Namibian Government on their economic situation.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had wide-ranging talks with President Nujoma during his recent visit to Windhoek for the Namibian independence celebrations. They discussed economic issues, mainly in the context of Namibia's priority for aid.

South Africa

18. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the role of the Commonwealth in ending apartheid in South Africa.

Mr. Waldegrave: We believe that the international community, including the Commonwealth, should make a positive and practical response to the important changes taking place in South Africa.

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent communications he has had with the Government of South Africa; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met President de Klerk, Mr. Pik Botha and other South African Ministers in Cape Town on 19 March. They had useful talks which reinforced our views that the South African Government are committed to fundamental reform. He urged them to lift the state of emergency as soon as possible. He also met several opposition leaders in South Africa and saw some of the 250 aid projects which Britain is supporting to help prepare black South Africans for the future after apartheid. He made it clear to everyone he met that our aim is to see apartheid abolished and to help the development of a peaceful, prosperous and democratic South Africa.

German Unification

19. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the West German Foreign Minister regarding reunification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the West German Foreign Minister during the Anglo-German summit on 30 March, where they had useful discussions on a wide range of issues of mutual interest, including the external aspects of German reunification. They meet frequently and shall certainly do so again at, for example, NATO and EC meetings.

35. Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of the two plus four conference on the unification of Germany.

Mr. Waldegrave: Preparatory talks at official level were held in Bonn on 14 March in accordance with the mandate given by the Foreign Ministers of the Federal Republic of Germany, German Democratic Republic, France, United Kingdom, USSR and United States in Ottawa on 13 February. Officials discussed procedural questions and the agenda of future meetings. The next meeting will take place after the formation of a new German Democratic Republic Government.

45. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's response to steps towards German reunification following the East German election results on 18 March.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have welcomed the GDR elections on 18 March as a great day for Europe and East Germany. We hope the two plus four talks can get down to substantive business as soon as the new democratically elected GDR Government are formed.

67. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to meet the Foreign Minister of East Germany to discuss German unification; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: After the appointment of a new Foreign Minister for East Germany, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to discussions of matters of mutual interest. He would, in any case, expect to meet him/her at the first meeting at ministerial level of the two plus four talks on the external aspects of German unification, for which, as yet, no date has been set.

Ivory

20. Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the current state of the stockpiled ivory in Hong Kong.

Mr. Waldegrave: The latest available figure for the current stock of elephant ivory held in Hong Kong (to the nearest tonne) is 472 tonnes, 356 tonnes of which are available for trading.

EC Policies

23. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further proposals he intends to place before his European Community partners for the development of Community policies.

Mr. Maude: We have taken the lead in the Community on a wide range of issues, among them giving effect to the detailed measures called for in stage 1 of the Delors report on economic and monetary union; the development of policy towards eastern Europe, strengthening the partnership between the US and the Community and urging rapid progress towards completing the single market.

We shall press our EC partners to continue to give top priority to completion of the 1992 programme, and to maintaining an outward-looking and liberal Community, in line with the commitments which we have secured in successive recent European Councils.

Hong Kong

24. Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: I shall be visiting Hong Kong from 7 to 11 April.

Drugs Trade

25. Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assistance he intends to give to south Asian countries in their attempt to curb the international drugs trade.

Mr. Sainsbury: South Asia, as the principal source of heroin reaching the United Kingdom, is a priority area for our drugs-related assistance. We are currently funding large-scale, drugs-related projects, in both Pakistan and India, managed by the United Nations fund for drug abuse control.

German Democratic Republic

26. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what message has been sent by his Department to the victors in last month's general election in the German Democratic Republic.

Mr. Waldegrave: We would expect to send a message to the new Foreign Minister of the GDR once a Government have been formed. We have welcomed the elections as a great day for Germany and for Europe.

37. Mr. Watts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the elections in the German Democratic Republic.

Mr. Waldegrave: The elections in East Germany on 18 March were, as confirmed by foreign observers, free, fair and well organised. We have welcomed the elections as a great day for Europe and for Germany.

Brazil

27. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Brazil about their development of ballistic missiles.

Mr. Waldegrave: None.

United Nations (Human Rights)

28. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the last meeting of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

33. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the last meeting of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

Mr. Sainsbury: The Commission on Human Rights is the major United Nations forum for discussion of human rights issues. At its last session from 29 January to 9 March it discussed a very large number of human rights problems and, in particular, adopted resolutions critical of the human rights situations in a number of countries. The wide range of views represented at the commission meant, however, that on a number of issues it did not go as far as we would have wished.

53. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking following the last meeting of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights in Geneva.

Mr. Sainsbury: As a member of the commission the United Kingdom delegation played an active part in its work. We shall continue our efforts to promote respect for human rights and to urge compliance by all states with their international obligations.

Romania

29. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will take all possible steps to encourage free and fair elections in Romania.

Mr. Waldegrave: We wish to encourage free and fair elections in Romania. To promote this we invited a group of members of the Romanian political parties to visit the United Kingdom in March to study our political and electoral systems. We hope to fund the visit to Romania of a group of up to 12 local government officers to observe the election campaign and poll on 20 May. We also welcome the decision of the IPU to send observers, and are encouraging the Romanians to invite observers from the Council of Europe. We have also contributed 118 tonnes of paper to a wide range of political parties for their use in the election campaign.

China

30. Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any current plans to visit Peking.

Mr. Maude: No.

Central America

31. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet members of the Government of the United States to discuss human rights in central America.

63. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet the members of the Government of the United States to discuss human rights in central America.

78. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to meet members of the Government of the United States to discuss human rights in central America.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have regular discussions with the United States Administration on a wide variety of subjects, including central America.

Eastern Europe (Electronics)

32. Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library the consolidated reports of observers sent to recent east European elections.

Mr. Waldegrave: I will gladly arrange for any such reports to be placed in the Library.

Baltic States

34. Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with officials and Ministers of the Soviet Union and Lithuanian Governments about the future of the Baltic states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have recently taken a number of opportunities to make our concerns known to the Soviet Union. We have emphasised that it is vital that progress should be made through dialogue between the Soviet authorities and the Lithuanians, and that a settlement should be reached which is acceptable to both sides and which enables the Lithuanian people to decide their own future. We have stressed the need for restraint on all sides.

51. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received about the right to self-determination of Estonia and the other Baltic states.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have received a number of representations about Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania from individuals and interest groups in the United Kingdom and elsewhere. Our views are clearly on record.

71. Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received any recent requests from the Baltic states in support of self-determination; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: Our criteria for recognition of a state were set out in an answer which I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 19 March. Our support for the right of the Baltic peoples to decide their own future is clearly on record.

Nicaragua

36. Mr. Norris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of whether the handover of power to the new democratically elected Government of Nicaragua is proceeding satisfactorily.

Mr. Sainsbury: Preparations for the transfer of power appear to be going well. The agreement of 27 March between transition teams clarifies some important points, notably on civilian control of the army. The agreement of 23 March between Contra leaders and representatives of the new Government on demobilisation of the Contras also gives grounds for optimism. We are, however, disturbed by reports that the Sandinistas are distributing weapons to loyal followers, stripping Government assets, depleting reserves, and voting for themselves privileges and immunities.

Middle East

38. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Britain's contribution to finding a diplomatic and peaceful solution to the Palestinian-Israeli conflict.

58. Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the peace process in the middle east.

66. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to further peace in the middle east.

70. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of peace negotiations in the middle east.

76. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress of peace negotiations in the middle east.

80. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress towards a peace settlement in the middle east.

84. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to help advance the peace process in the middle east.

Mr. Waldegrave: We aim to encourage a dialogue between Israel and representative Palestinians as the first step towards a comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israel dispute. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed the peace process with King Hussein last month and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had a useful meeting with Mr. Bassam Abu Sharif on 1 March. We look forward to the formation of a new Israeli Government able to carry the process forward. We continue, in the meantime, to work for the improvement of conditions in the occupied territories.

Sri Lanka

39. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have made to the Government of Sri Lanka about human rights.

Mr. Sainsbury: The British high commissioner in Colombo most recently raised the subject with President Premadasa on 28 February. The Sri Lankan Government are in no doubt of our concern.

Cuba

40. Mr. Janman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to meet President Castro of Cuba.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no such plans.

Cyprus

42. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Cyprus following the breakdown of the United Nations talks.

Mr. Maude: We have worked actively to promote the adoption of UN Security Council resolution 649 on Cyprus. In line with it, we will continue to support UN efforts to bring about a comprehensive, just and lasting settlement to the Cyprus dispute.

NATO

43. Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications of the result of the East German elections for the NATO alliance.

Mr. Waldegrave: NATO has long supported the cause for freedom in the German Democratic Republic and throughout eastern Europe. We welcome the democratic election in the GDR. The establishment of a genuine democracy there will contribute to stability and security in Europe. We stress the crucial importance of continued German membership of NATO.

Cameroons

44. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the application for the Cameroons to join the Commonwealth.

Mr. Waldegrave: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave in response to a similar question from the hon. Member on Wednesday 13 December 1989.

Hungary

46. Mr. Boswell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the elections in Hungary.

62. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the elections in Hungary.

Mr. Waldegrave: We welcome Hungary's free and democratic elections on 25 March. They are an important milestone in the development of a pluralist democracy. We look forward to the formation of a new Government after the second round of elections on 8 April and to continued good relations.

93. Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to be able to meet a representative of the new Hungarian Government.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs looks forward to early contacts with the new Hungarian Government once formed, but has no firm plans as yet.

European Parliament

47. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any plans to promote representation within the European Parliament based on a proportional ratio of population to seats.

Mr. Maude: The allocation of seats in the European Parliament has been the subject of negotiations within the framework of successive treaties since that of 1951 establishing the European Coal and Steel Community, under which the original Common Assembly was set up. Relative population has become the principal factor in determining the allocation of seats.

Vietnam

48. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what talks the Minister has recently had with NGOs about the situation in Vietnam.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Monklands, West (Mr. Clarke) on 12 March. ODA is in close touch with the NGOs. They have recently submitted proposals for projects in the areas from which most of the boat people have come. These are receiving careful consideration.

Taiwan

49. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next plans to visit Taiwan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans to do so; in 1950 we ceased to recognise the nationalist authorities as the Government of China; since that date it has been our policy to have no formal dealings with the authorities in Taiwan.

Vietnamese Boat People

52. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on the situation of Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

75. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on the situation of Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

77. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a further statement on the situation of Vietnamese boat people in Hong Kong.

Mr. Maude: For the first time since May 1987, there is now a sustained net outflow of Vietnamese boat people from Hong Kong. But it is too soon to know whether there will be another large influx into Hong Kong this year.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on living conditions in the closed camps for Vietnamese boat people.

Mr. Maude: The standard of living conditions in Hong Kong's 10 detention centres depends to a large extent on the degree of overcrowding. At present there are 44,000 Vietnamese boat people living in these detention centres, which have a combined design capacity of 43,000 places. A further 5,000 places will become available during May to accommodate the new influx which it is feared will arrive in the coming months.

The UNHCR provides a full range of services to all detention centres through programmes operated by voluntary agencies. These services include education for children and adults, medical and family planning services, social work and welfare services.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to improve conditions in the closed camps for Vietnamese boat people.

Mr. Maude: Following the influx of 34,000 Vietnamese boat people in 1989, the Hong Kong Government have constructed new accommodation providing a total of 23,000 places. This has eased the overcrowding and has led to a significant improvement in conditions. In 1989-90 the total cost of providing asylum in Hong Kong was about £90 million. Of this, Her Majesty's Government provided £21 million to cover part of the cost of the building programme.

Jacques Delors

57. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Jacques Delors, and what matters he hopes to discuss.

73. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the President of the European Commission; and what matters he hopes to discuss.

74. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet the President of the European Commission; and what matters he hopes to discuss.

92. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Jacques Delors; and what matters he hopes to discuss.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs next expects to meet the President of the Commission at a meeting of Foreign Ministers on 21 April, at which the special informal meeting of EC Heads of State or Government on 28 April will be discussed.

Council of Ministers

54. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the General Affairs Council of Ministers meeting of 2 to 3 April.

61. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the General Affairs Council of Ministers meeting of 2 to 3 April.

86. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the General Affairs Council of Ministers meeting of 2 to 3 April.

Mr. Maude: The Council which my right hon. Friend and I attended considered preparations for the inter-governmental conference due to open before the end of the year, and Herr Genscher reported on recent developments in Germany. The Commission reported on talks in Tokyo on EC/Japan trade; and on progress in EC/EFTA discussions; and on the signature of a trade, commercial and economic agreement with Czechoslovakia. We proposed that all quantitative restrictions on imports from Czechoslovakia should be removed from 1 July.

The council discussed work on immigration problems, and member states' policies on visas for eastern Europe. My right hon. Friend argued for further measures of Community support to the black population of South Africa, and a trade and co-operation agreement with Argentina was signed.

Ministers of the Twelve agreed, at my right hon. Friend's suggestion, to issue a further statement on Lithuania, urging restraint and dialogue as the way to achieve an outcome acceptable to all.

Irish Republic

55. Mr. Gow: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Foreign Minister of the Irish Republic about the claim of articles 2 and 3 of the Republic's constitution and of the Irish Supreme Court to jurisdiction over part of Her Majesty's dominions.

Mr. Hurd: We are in regular touch with the Irish Government. A judgment of the Irish Supreme Court cannot affect Northern Ireland's position within the United Kingdom in international law. Irrespective of articles 2 and 3 of the Irish constitution, both Governments are agreed that any change in the status of Northern Ireland would come about only with the consent of a majority of the people of Northern Ireland.

Chancellor Kohl

56. Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Chancellor Kohl, and what issues he hopes to discuss.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friends the Prime Minister and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met Chancellor Kohl at the Anglo-German summit on 30 March. At that meeting the two sides had a useful and wide-ranging discussion on matters of mutual interest, including the external aspects of German unification.

We remain in close contact with the Federal German Government. Our next meeting with Chancellor Kohl is likely to be at the EC summit in Dublin on 28 April.

Mr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters were discussed during his recent meeting with Chancellor Kohl on 29 and 30 March.

Mr. Maude: A range of issues were discussed during Chancellor Kohl's visit on 29 and 30 March, including German unification, NATO matters, Lithuania, South Africa and the European Community.

Anti-Semitism

59. Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement regarding anti-semitism in eastern Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: We of course deplore anti-semitism in all its forms and will do all we can to counter it. Our embassies are monitoring the situation in eastern Europe carefully. Although some incidents have been reported, we think that there has been no general increase in anti-semitism in the area, although the free atmosphere has allowed it to be expressed more openly. We will be glad to have the hon. and learned Member's own assessment after his forthcoming visit to the area.

Nelson Mandela

60. Mr. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to meet Nelson Mandela, and what matters he hopes to discuss.

91. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to have discussions with Nelson Mandela; and what issues will be raised.

Mr. Waldegrave: When they met briefly in Namibia on 21 March, Mr. Mandela told my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs that he hoped to have a further meeting before long. My right hon. Friend looks forward to discussing with him the recent positive developments in South Africa, and the best way to maintain a process of peaceful change.

Bulgaria

64. Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will meet the Foreign Minister of Bulgaria to discuss ways in which the United Kingdom can assist in the establishment of democracy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no firm plans to meet the Bulgarian Foreign Minister again. They met in Ottawa in February and had a useful discussion. I met Mr. Dimitrov in Sofia also in February and at the recent Council of Europe Ministers meeting in Lisbon. A group of Bulgarian politicians recently visited London under the auspices of the Great Britain-East Europe Centre and the IPU to study our democracy in action. We greatly welcome progress towards democracy in Bulgaria and hope the election to be held on 10 June will be completely free and fair.

EC Organisations (Siting)

65. Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the prospects for Britain's bid for the siting of the European Environment Agency and the European bank for reconstruction and development.

Mr. Maude: We continue to pursue vigorously our bids to have the European Environment Agency and the European bank for reconstruction and development located in the United Kingdom. Both our candidates, Cambridge and London respectively, have an excellent case and are strong contenders.

Cambodia

68. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent diplomatic efforts Her Majesty's Government have made to find a solution to the situation in Cambodia.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Mr. Lester) on 26 March by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs.

Anglo-German Summit

69. Mr. Gregory: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the outcome of the Anglo-German summit on 30 March.

83. Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on the outcome of the Anglo-German summit on 30 March.

Mr. Maude: At the Anglo-German summit in London on 30 March, my right hon. Friends the Prime Minister, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Defence, the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry and the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had useful discussions with their German opposite numbers on a wide range of issues of mutual interest. The successful occasion underlined our close relations with the Federal Republic of Germany, one of our most important allies and partners.

Lithuania

72. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent consideration the British Government have given to their relations with Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

87. Mr. Andrew Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent consideration the British Government have given to their relations with Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

90. Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent consideration the British Government have given to their relations with Lithuania and the Soviet Union.

Mr. Waldegrave: We support the right of the Baltic peoples to decide their own future, and have welcomed the considerable progress made in the past two years.

In view of recent developments in Lithuania, we think it vital that restraint should be shown on all sides and that progress should be made through dialogue between the Soviet authorities and the Lithuanians. We attach particular importance to the repeated statements by the Soviet leadership that there is no question of use of force. We have made clear our concerns to the Soviet authorities.

Herr Genscher

79. Mr. Adley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to meet Herr Genscher; and what he proposes to discuss.

Mr. Maude: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the West German Foreign Minister during the Anglo-German summit on 30 March, where they had useful discussions on a wide range of issues of mutual interest, including the external aspects of German reunification. They meet frequently and shall certainly do so again soon at, for example, NATO and EC meetings.

UN Peacekeeping Forces

81. Mr Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what budget Her Majesty's Government set for this year's contribution to United Nations peacekeeping forces' activities.

Mr. Sainsbury: The 1990-91 supply estimates published in March 1990 seek provision of £34·680 million for the United Kingdom's contribution to specific United Nations peacekeeping operations. In addition, a small number of United Nations peacekeeping operations are financed directly from the United Nation's regular budget.

Kuwait

88. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met representatives of the Kuwait Government; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Waldegrave: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs met the Kuwaiti Foreign Minister at the EC/GCC ministerial meeting in Muscat on 17 March where Foreign Ministers of both groupings discussed issues of common interest. His last bilateral meeting with a Kuwaiti Minister was in November 1989 with the Minister of the Interior.

Council of Europe

89. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his policy as to whether the wider role which the Council of Europe has recently developed should lead to an acceptance that it be involved in formal and continuing consideration of at least some aspects of the conference on security and co-operation in Europe.

Mr. Waldegrave: Both the Council of Europe and the CSCE have crucial roles in furthering democratic values in Europe. These roles should complement and not duplicate one another. The Council of Europe's special ministerial meeting in Lisbon on 23-24 March agreed that the Council of Europe should be represented in a member state's delegation at the forthcoming CSCE conference on the human dimension in Copenhagen.

Foreign Policy

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many volumes of the series on British foreign policy 1945-55, "Documents on British Policy Overseas," have been produced; how many copies have been distributed to (a) United Kingdom embassies or diplomatic missions abroad and (b) United Kingdom universities and research institutes; how many departmental staff or consultants to his Department are employed on preparation and production of the series; and what has been the cost to date in current prices of the series.

Mr. Sainsbury: The series "Documents on British Policy Overseas," announced in the House of Commons by Sir Alec Douglas-Home on 2 July 1973, is a collection of the most important documents in the archives of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office relating to British policy overseas, and is regarded as an indispensable source for British foreign policy in the period from 1945 to 1955. The following eight volumes have been published so far:

Series I (1945-50)

Volume I The Conference at Potsdam, July-August 1945 (HMSO, 1984) £85.

Volume II Conferences and Conversations 1945: London, Washington and Moscow (HMSO, 1985) £75.

Volume III Britain and America: Negotiation of the United States Loan, August-December 1945 (HMSO, 1987) £35.

Volume IV Britain and America: Atomic Energy, Bases and Food, December 1945-July 1946 (HMSO, 1987) £35.

Volume V Germany and Western Europe, 11 August-31 December 1945 (HMSO, 1990) £55.

Series II (1950-55)

Volume I The Schuman Plan, the Council of Europe and Western European Integration 1950-1952 (HMSO, 1986) £70.

Volume II The London Conferences, 1950 (HMSO, 1987) £35.

Volume III German Rearmament, 1950 (HMSO, 1989) £39.

British embassies and diplomatic missions abroad do not receive copies of DBPO, but information material is sent to overseas posts and copies of the volumes are available on loan from the FCO library. In cases where a volume is of particular current relevance to an embassy a copy may be supplied for retention.

United Kingdom universities and research institutes purchase their copies of DBPO.

DBPO is produced by a small team of independent historians working in the historical branch of the library and records department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. The editorial staff, who also provide historical advice within the FCO, comprise two editors, two assistant editors and three research assistants. No consultants are employed.

The costs of the printing and publication of DBPO are borne by Her Majesty's Stationery Office, and are recovered by it as revenue from sales.

Whitehead Detention Centre

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking concerning the recent case of the suffocation of a child at birth due to lack of medical facilities at the Whitehead detention centre clinic; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: The Hong Kong authorities have recently completed a thorough investigation of this case.

The medical evidence indicates that the child died at least 24 hours before the onset of labour and probably considerably earlier. The child did not suffocate at birth.

The allegations of inadequate medical facilities are unfounded. Whitehead has a well-equipped clinic but it is the usual practice to transfer women in labour to a nearby hospital as happened in this case.

Ministers' Meeting, Lisbon

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent meeting of the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe in Lisbon.

Mr. Maude: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Hampstead and Highgate (Sir G. Finsberg) on 26 March.

Indonesia

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on changes in the human rights situation in East Timor since January.

Mr. Sainsbury: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, on 29 March to the hon. Member for Halifax (Mrs. Mahon).

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received on the policy of the Indonesian Government towards people demonstrating in favour of independence from Indonesia.

Mr. Sainsbury: We have received written representations from two human rights organisations and several Members of Parliament.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989, that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Maude: Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way. We have received no such communications since 18 June 1989.

A separate arrangement applies in respect of consular cases, under which our normal practice is to copy correspondence with MEPs to the appropriate hon. Member in view of the direct personal involvement in such cases of hon. Members' constituents.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

First Aid

Mr. Strang: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many staff in the House of Commons have first aid or medical training; how many of these staff are available in the case of accidents; and where these staff are located.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Fifty members of staff of the House, 127 police officers, 108 security officers and 12 members of the fire section are trained in first aid including resuscitation techniques. Quotas of staff from all Departments of the House have been agreed bearing in mind the need to provide cover in the outbuildings as well as having first aiders available by day and night. Their location is shown in the green page supplement in the front of the Palace of Westminster telephone directory.

Mr. Strang: To ask the Lord President of the Council what first aid provision is provided by the House; what form this takes; where such provision is located; and what first aid information is made available to the staff who work in the House and its outbuildings.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: Details of first aid provision and procedures to be followed in an emergency are contained in the leaflet "Medical Facilities and First Aid in the Palace of Westminster and in the Parliamentary Outbuildings" issued jointly by the Serjeant at Arms and Black Rod. I am arranging for a copy to be sent to the hon. Gentleman. Notices indicating the location of first aiders and first aid boxes are displayed in the Palace of Westminster and outbuildings, and details of first aid and medical facilities are given in appendix D of the staff handbook which is issued to all members of staff.

Toilets

Mr. Strang: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many toilets are provided (a) in the House and (b) in each of its outbuildings, (i) for women and (ii) for men; and if he will estimate separately the number of women and the number of men who work in these buildings with easy access to these toilet facilities.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The information requested is as follows:

Location	Number of Lavatories Male	Female	Mixed	Disabled
Palace of Westminster (Commons Area)	55	34	7	1
Norman Shaw North	11	9	—	1
Norman Shaw South	9	8	3	—
St. Stephens House	8	8	5	—
1 Canon Row	8	7	—	1
3 Deans Yard	5	7	—	—
6-7 Old Palace Yard	2	2	1	—
2 The Abbey Garden	3	4	—	—

I regret that an estimate of the numbers of women and men with access to these facilities could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Accidents

Mr. Strang: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will state the number of reported accidents in (a) the Palace of Westminster and (b) its outbuildings for each year over the last 10 years for (i) hon. Members, (ii) hon. Members' staff, (iii) staff employed by the House in administration, (iv) staff employed by the House in catering, (v) staff employed by the House for other services, (vi) outside contractors and (vii) members of the general public; how many people work at the House and its outbuildings in each category; and what is the number of visitors from the general public each year.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The information requested is as follows:

Written Answers (Cost)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Lord President of the Council what is the current average cost of providing a written parliamentary answer.

Sir Geoffrey Howe: The average cost is currently £54.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Commission Budget

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total net contribution to the European Commission budget made in the latest available year by (a) the United Kingdom, (b) the Federal Republic of Germany, (c) France and (d) Italy.

Mr. Major: I refer the right hon. Member to the answer my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary gave the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) on 22 March 1990 at columns 687-88.

Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency

Mr. John Carlisle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans the Government have for the future of the Treasury's Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency.

Mr. Ryder: Following a review last year of CCTA's role, activities and organisation, the Government have decided that there continues to be a need, centrally within the Government, to provide and co-ordinate IT services and advice for Departments, both individually and collectively, and to help formulate Government policies on IT. CCTA will continue to discharge these functions as part of the Treasury.

CCTA will be looking to make more use of the private sector in the development and maintenance of its own services and will focus its efforts on activities which the private sector cannot or is unwilling to undertake or where CCTA can add significantly greater value for money. CCTA will also increase its monitoring of the effectiveness and quality of products and services provided by the private sector to the Government.

The latest decisions call in addition for a package of management reforms at CCTA encompassing:

(i) improved services to customers,
(ii) new management accounting systems, output and performance indicators,
(iii) more systematic charging for direct services to Departments, and
(iv) improved corporate and strategic planning.

A new advisory board will be established under Treasury chairmanship to advise the Treasury's senior management on the scale and broad composition of CCTA's forward work programme.

Copies of the management summary of the review and of the detailed decisions on it are being placed in the Library.

National Savings

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total value of the holdings of each issue of national savings certificates for the last five years which have remained unencashed for more than a year after their maturity date.

Mr. Ryder: The estimated total value of the holdings of each issue of national savings certificates which have remained unencashed for more than a year after their maturity date was as follows at 31 December in each of the last four years. Figures for 1985 are not available.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Major: I have not visited Wales since taking up my present post. I intend, however, to visit Wales in July of this year.

German Monetary Union

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the implications for the British economy of German monetary union.

Mr. Ryder: The main implications of German monetary union for the British economy will be through its impact on world trade flows, an assessment of which was contained in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1990-91."

Income Tax

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the individuals who, in the fiscal year 1989-90, were subject to the composite rate tax, would, if the Budget proposals for its abolition had been in force, have paid (a) income tax at the basic rate and (b) no income tax.

Mr. Major: About 75 per cent. of individuals with composite rate income would have been liable to pay at least some tax at basic rate, and about 25 per cent. would not have been liable to pay any. Wives with composite rate income have been included as taxpayers or non-taxpayers according to the liability of their husbands.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much income tax rates would need to be increased to fully meet an increase in Government expenditure in 1990-91 of 17½ per cent.; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: Assuming that it were all financed by income tax, a 17½ per cent. increase in general Government expenditure would require a rise in the basic rate of 13p.

Merchant Shipping

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what investment incentives he intends to introduce to stop United Kingdom shipping companies flagging abroad; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what measures he intends to introduce to enable United Kingdom shipping companies to maintain their merchant fleets and crews.

Mr. Lilley: We have already introduced a number of measures to help United Kingdom shipping companies in recent years. These have included the relaxation of the rules governing a seafarer's eligibility for the 100 per cent. foreign earnings deduction, and the extension of the business expansion scheme to ship chartering companies.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will extend for United Kingdom shipping companies, the maximum charter period permitted for BES ship schemes to five years.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will improve the terms for United Kingdom shipping companies, for roll-over relief for corporation tax on profits from ship sales.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. When a ship is sold, the present system ensures that tax relief is recovered where the depreciation allowed exceeds that actually incurred over the period of ownership.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will reinstate for United Kingdom shipping companies for a period of five years, free depreciation, 100 per cent. ship allowance, against investment in new and second-hand ships.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. The present capital allowances regime is already more generous for ships than commercial depreciation.

Married Man's Allowance

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total cost to the revenue of the married man's allowance in the 1989-90 financial year.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", chapter 21, appendix F.

Charities

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning his proposals relating to covenants to benefit charities.

Mr. Lilley: The whole Budget package for charities has been warmly welcomed. In response to requests, the Inland Revenue has issued some 1,350 copies of the guidance, first published on Budget day, to help charities and individuals making charitable covenants to get them right for tax.

British Telecom

Mr. Hind: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to sell off to the public the Government's shareholding in British Telecom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend continues to keep the timing of a sale under review in the light of market conditions and the other priorities for the privatisation programme.

THE ARTS

"The Three Graces"

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts what consideration he has given to the bid for "The Three Graces" from the Scottish national gallery.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 4 April 1990]: I am aware of the interest shown by the National Galleries of Scotland and also that the gallery is prepared to commit £1 million from its purchase grant towards the purchase of "The Three Graces". I am also aware of the considerable expense and effort which the Victoria and Albert museum has put into its public appeal. It is for these institutions to decide in which way it would be appropriate for them to conduct their fund-raising efforts.

TRANSPORT

Motor Vehicle Licences

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish for each post office district in England and Wales (a) the number of post offices currently issuing motor vehicle licences and (b) any planned increases in the number of post offices issuing motor vehicle licences.

Mr. Portillo: The number of post offices issuing vehicle excise licences in each post office district in England and Wales is currently as follows:

Post office district	Number of offices
Newcastle	138
Lancashire and Cumbria	129
Leeds	144
Liverpool	80
Manchester	128
Sheffield	137
North Midlands	127
Birmingham and Coventry	80
South and West Midlands	113
Bristol	132
Wessex	138
Devon and Cornwall	183
East Midlands	120
Norwich	141
Oxford	113
Colchester	117
Aldershot	132
Hastings	117
Brighton	93
London North	79
London Central	43
London Western	90
London Eastern	69
London South West	91
London South East	95
North and Mid Wales and Marches	166
South Wales	162
Grand total	3,157

Any increase in the number of the licensing post offices increases the charges made by Post Office Counters to the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency. The possibility of a further extension is, however, currently being examined with the Post Office. Any changes in the licensing network that result will be given full publicity.

Daylight Saving

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects on the totals of road casualties if the clocks were advanced by one hour throughout the year.

Mr. Portillo: I refer the hon. Member to paragraph 35 of the Government's Green Paper, Cmd. 722, where estimates of 813 killed and seriously injured and 2,060 total casualties saved are given. Copies of the Green Paper are in the Library of the House.

Road Improvements, North Devon

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the progress in road improvements and bridge building of the Barnstaple downstream bridge and the Aller Cross to Blackmore Gate road.

Mr. Portillo: The Barnstaple downstream bridge scheme and improvements to the Aller Cross to Blackmore Gate road are the responsibility of the local highway authority, Devon county council.

Roads (London)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many objections, petitions and letters of support were received for each of the London assessment studies between 15 December 1989 and 28 February.

Mr. Portillo: An analysis of the responses will be published shortly.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consultation methods will apply before he lays regulations concerning the introduction of red routes in London.

Mr. Portillo: There will be further detailed consultations on the proposals in "Traffic in London". Over the coming months there will be specific local consultations with the authorities and representatives of the residents and traders concerned in the proposed red routes pilot scheme.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what consultations he proposes before making detailed proposals concerning the widening of the A1 at Archway island and Highbury corner;

(2) what meetings he plans to have with the local authority, local businesses and local community groups concerning the improvements to the A1 at Archway and Highbury corner.

Mr. Portillo: It is too soon to announce the timetable and arrangements for taking forward the road proposals arising from the assessment studies.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what powers the London Traffic Commissioner will have; and when he expects to make an appointment.

Mr. Atkins: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Newham, South (Mr. Spearing) on 4 April.

Railways (Electrification)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will provide a table giving the percentage of total route miles of railway passenger services electrified in the United Kingdom and in each of the other EEC states.

Mr. Portillo: At present, 27 per cent. of British Rail's total route miles are electrified. Equivalent percentage figures for other EEC countries are as follows:

	Percentage
Belgium	60·0
Denmark	7·5
France	34·0
Germany	42·0
Greece	0·0
Ireland	2·0
Italy	57·0
Luxembourg	60·0
Netherlands	65·0
Portugal	13·0
Spain	49·0

Figures for total route miles of passenger services only which are electrified are not available.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what consideration he is giving to giving loan sanction to West Yorkshire passenger transport authority, over several years, to finance the electrification of routes between Bradford and Leeds and along the Aire valley; and whether the scheme satisfies his financial criteria for such investment.

Mr. Portillo: The West Yorkshire passenger transport executive has put a case to the Department, and discussions are taking place. More details are needed before any decision can be taken.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals from British Rail he is considering to ensure a continuous programme of electrification on British Rail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: British Rail's 1989 corporate plan includes electrification of the following lines: Portsmouth-Southampton; Cambridge-King's Lynn; Heathrow Express to Paddington; Manchester international airport link; Birmingham cross-city line; Hooton-Chester to Ellesmere Port; and the east coast main line. It is for British Rail to come forward with any further proposals for electrification which would satisfy its normal investment criteria.

Rail Pollution

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the amount of atmospheric pollutants produced by (a) electric traction for railways and (b) diesel traction; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Figures on atmospheric pollution directly attributable to United Kingdom railways are available in the 1989 digest of environmental protection and water statistics, a copy of which is in the Library.

Traffic (Leeds-Bradford)

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has for the reduction of traffic congestion between Leeds and Bradford and along the Aire valley which can be brought fully into operation within three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Work on the A650 Drighlington bypass to the south-west of Leeds is due to start on 23 April 1990. The 4km long single carriageway road is expected to be complete in early 1992 and will relieve traffic congestion on the A650 trunk road through Drighlington and Adwalton particularly at the A58 Whitehall road junction.

The Department has four further schemes in the national road programme to improve the trunk road between Bradford and Skipton in the Aire valley. These are the A629 Skipton-Kildwick improvement, the A650 Hard Ings road, Keighley, the A650 Airedale route section 3—Crossflatts to Cottingley Bar—and the Shipley eastern bypass.

Haulage Licences

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance is given by his Department to highway authorities for granting operators' licences to private hauliers in respect of examinations of the suitability of access routes to the applicant's proposed depot.

Mr. Portillo: Consideration of applications for goods vehicle operator licences is the responsibility of local independent licensing authorities. Local highway authorities have a right of objection to such applications. It is for the highway authority concerned to consider what action, if any, should be taken, using its traffic regulations powers, in respect of traffic generated by a goods vehicle operating centre.

Road Accidents

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of persons who have died in road accidents for every year since 1979 and for the first three months of 1990.

Mr. Portillo: The information is as follows:

Number of persons killed in road accidents in Great Britain 1979 to 1989

	Numbers
1979	6,352
1980	6,010
1981	5,846
1982	5,934

	Numbers
1983	5,445
1984	5,599
1985	5,165
1986	5,382
1987	5,125
1988	5,052
1989	[1]5,230

[1] Provisional.

Figures for the first three months of 1990 are not yet available.

River Tyne (Road Bridge)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to build a new road bridge across the River Tyne between the Newcastle upon Tyne, East parliamentary constituency and Gateshead.

Mr. Portillo: No, but I am aware that a cross-Tyne study is being undertaken by the local authorities in Tyne and Wear to consider traffic capacity across the River Tyne.

Newcastle Quayside Development

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what impact the Tyneside urban development corporation's proposed east Newcastle quayside development project will have on east-west and north-south traffic flows in Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Portillo: The traffic implications of the proposed quayside development are a matter for discussion between the city council and the corporation. There are no trunk roads involved.

Safety at Sea

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the "Study into Hours of Work: Fatigue and Safety at Sea" produced by the Medical Research Council in December 1989 and subsequently submitted to his Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: Professor Ivan Brown's report on his study into hours of work, fatigue and safety at sea was forwarded to representative organisations on 2 February for comment. All comments received will be taken into account before any decision is made on what further action, if any, is appropriate.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in the new legislation to provide for the second Severn crossing, he will ensure that the toll concession for the disabled remains as on the existing bridge.

Mr. Portillo: I intend to propose in any new legislation that disabled people should continue to be exempt from tolls.

Blind People

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will introduce within the United Kingdom a provision to enable registered blind persons to take with them a non-paying companion on rail journeys; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: Local authorities in Great Britain outside London already have discretion to offer travel concessions on local public transport, including free travel, to the companion of a blind person who requires his assistance in order to travel.

A5 (Nuclear Waste)

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the transport of nuclear waste products along the A5.

Mr. Portillo: The Department does not collect information of this kind.

Shipping

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the balance of payments in shipping in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The overall balance of the sea transport account is as follows:

	£ million
1979	+38
1980	+14
1981	−190
1982	−437
1983	−778
1984	−594
1985	−456
1986	−471
1987	−594
1988	−593

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Appeals

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General whether there are any plans to increase the number of staff at the Court of Appeal criminal division.

The Attorney-General: Yes; there are plans to make a small increase in staff in order to take account of the projected increase in work.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what is the average length of time that an appeal (a) against conviction and (b) against sentence currently waits to be heard by the Court of Appeal criminal division;

(2) what is the average length of time that an expedited appeal (a) against conviction and (b) against sentence waits to be heard by the Court of Appeal criminal division.

The Attorney-General: A total of 32·3 per cent. of appeals against conviction are ready for hearing within six months of receipt of notice of appeal in the criminal appeal office and 84·3 per cent. are ready within 12 months. Thirty per cent. of appeals against sentence are ready for hearing within three months of receipt of notice of appeal and 65·2 per cent. are ready within six months. The time taken for an appeal to be heard is governed in part by the amount of preparatory work involved, and in trying to list cases with the minimum of delay the Registrar of Criminal Appeals must ensure that counsel and solicitors acting for each appellant have adequate time to prepare their cases. Where delays in listing appeals do occur they tend to be caused by the court's obligation to balance the conflicting needs of applicants who all wish their appeals heard as soon as possible.

Directions to expedite hearings are made by the court in individual cases. Those with leave to appeal against conviction or short sentences are, wherever possible, given earlier consideration than those appealing against long sentences. Information relating to expedited appeals is not recorded separately.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how many appeals (a) against conviction and (b) against sentence are waiting to be heard by the Court of Appeal criminal division;

(2) how many expedited appeals (a) against conviction and (b) against sentence are waiting to be heard by the Court of Appeal criminal division.

The Attorney-General: At 31 March 1990 there were 339 appeals against conviction and 724 applications for leave to appeal against conviction waiting to be heard by the Court of Appeal criminal division. There were also 471 appeals against sentence and 969 applications for leave to appeal against sentence. Information relating to expedited appeals is not recorded separately.

Social Security Commissioners

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Attorney-General how many appeals have been made to the social security commissioners in each standard planning region in each of the last 10 years; how long on average it has taken to deal with these appeals each year; and what has been the shortest and longest time any appellant has had to wait for a decision in each year.

The Attorney-General: This information is not available in the form and for the period requested. However, the number of appeals made in each of the calendar years from 1985 to 1989 to the commissioners in the regions of England, Wales and Scotland are given in the first part of the table. The length of time taken to deal with these appeals to final disposal is available only in respect of those disposed of in the years 1988 and 1989 and the figures are given in the second part of the table.

Social security commissioners

Year	Number of appeals England	Wales	Scotland	Total	Number of days to disposal Average	Shortest	Longest
1985	1,982	104	590	2,676	—	—	—

Land Registry

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Attorney-General what progress is being made towards establishing Her Majesty's Land Registry as an executive agency in accordance with the recommendations of the report of the Prime Minister's efficiency unit, "Improving Management in Government: The Next Steps."

The Attorney-General: The Land Registry is to be established as an executive agency on 2 July 1990.

The Government consider the Land Registry is well suited to the executive agency form of organisation and that the resultant management flexibilities together with the possibility in the longer term of the registry operating a trading fund will provide significant overall improvement in the service provided to the registry's customers.

Consistent with the basic approach of the Government's "next steps" initiative, the Lord Chancellor has decided that the Chief Land Registrar (who will be the agency chief executive) should no longer be required by statute to be a barrister or solicitor of 10 years' standing. He wishes to be able to appoint the best possible person for this important post and considers it essential that he or she should be selected primarily on the basis of his or her management abilities. The Government therefore propose to introduce amendments to the Courts and Legal Services Bill at Committee stage for this purpose. Arrangements will be made, by regulation, to ensure that the legal functions currently performed personally by the Chief Land Registrar are reserved to an appropriately qualified senior lawyer in the Land Registry.

Australia Constitution Act 1900

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Attorney-General when the Government will respond to representations from the Australian Government to release one of the original copies of the Australia Constitution Act 1900 on a permanent basis.

The Attorney-General: The Government have received representations from the Australian Government requesting that the original copy of the Australia Constitution Act 1900, at present on loan to Australia and on display in Parliament house in Canberra, should remain in Australia permanently. The British Government have decided that it would be right to find a way to offer the document to the Commonwealth of Australia as a gift. The copy of the Act is a public record under the terms of the Public Records Act 1958 and cannot at present be disposed of as a gift or on permanent loan. The Government will, therefore, shortly be introducing legislation relating only to this particular case designed to place this document outside the provisions of the Public Records Act and enable it to be released to the Commonwealth of Australia as a gift.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Schools (Land Sales)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many sites within school grounds have been sold off as surplus to requirements for the period 1989-90 and so far in 1990.

Mr. Alan Howarth: This information is not held by the Department.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Jackson: My right hon. Friend's ministerial responsibilities in Wales are limited to provision of some higher education, and science. I am planning to visit the university of Wales within the next few months.

Armed Forces

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set up an inquiry into the possible ways of improving further and higher education by incorporating teaching methods and materials currently used by Her Majesty's armed forces.

Mr. Jackson: At the invitation of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, Her Majesty's inspectors advise on aspects of educational and training provision within the armed forces. Through exchanges of information, a route already exists for the best of good practice in either sector to be reflected in the other.

Teachers (Training)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish for each local authority area the number of teachers in each of the last three years who have undertaken INSET and other courses of professional development (a) during school hours and (b) after school, at weekends and during school holidays.

Mr. Alan Howarth [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The information obtained under the LEA training grants scheme on the volume of training taking place for which release is or is not required, expressed as training days, is set out in the table:

Teachers' Pay and Conditions

Mr. Gerald Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has now considered the views expressed by the local authority employers, teacher unions and others on his proposals following the third report of the Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions.

Mr. MacGregor: After careful consideration of the representations I have received I have decided to accept the recommendations contained in the third report of the Interim Advisory Committee on School Teachers' Pay and Conditions, but to stage their introduction over the period up to 1 January 1991 and to make some minor modifications.

I believe that the changes to be introduced will markedly increase the attractiveness of teaching as a profession and improve career prospects for good teachers. The introduction of range pay for heads and deputies, and of incremental enhancements and local scales for classroom teachers, will greatly improve the scope for flexible local decision taking to meet local circumstances. The new discretionary £750 pay supplement for teachers in the inner London weighting area will help tackle the special problems in London.

Drafts of the School Teachers' Pay and Conditions Document 1990, an order which will give effect to this document, and a circular to local education authorities and others are being sent to the relevant local authority associations, teacher unions and bodies representing the interests of the governors of voluntary schools and grant-maintained schools, inviting their comments by Thursday 26 April 1990.

The draft document incorporates the changes recommended by the IAC, subject to staging and to some modifications. These include the assimilation of deputy head teachers in existing school groups 6 and 9 one point higher on the new pay spine, and the addition of one extra spine point on the top of the normal range for deputy head teachers in new school groups 1, 2 and 3 and for head teachers in new school groups 1 and 2.

Youth Service

Mr. Burt: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements he proposes to make at national level to assist the youth service in responding effectively to the challenges of the 1990s.

Mr. MacGregor: From 1 April 1991, I have decided to build on the experience and expertise of the national level youth service bodies I currently fund, particularly the unit comprising the National Youth Bureau and the Council for the Education and Training of Youth and Community Workers, by channelling that funding through one single, high-profile and comprehensive national youth agency (NYA). This will have clear responsibility to work with both the voluntary and the local authority sectors of the youth service to improve the quality, range and effectiveness of their responses to the priority objectives we are establishing with them.

To ensure a co-ordinated approach, I shall fund this body to undertake a range of education-related functions, including the development of curricular content and methods, especially in advice and counselling; the development, endorsement, accreditation and, where necessary, the provision of youth worker training; the collection, dissemination and publication of information; support for managers of youth service organisations and operations, particularly in the voluntary sector, including management training; response to international interests and programmes; and direct support for Government initiatives in these areas. It will be open to other Departments and agencies to support similar work through the agency in their particular areas of responsibility.

In recognition of the valuable contribution of the voluntary sector, and to realise an effective partnership between it and the local authority sector, I propose to implement the recommendations of the efficiency scrutiny of Government funding of the voluntary sector, published yesterday, by requiring the director personally to ensure that the agency, its work and staff are responsive to the needs of the voluntary sector and of volunteers, and to report to me annually on this. I propose also to permit the body to fund voluntary youth organisations to undertake curriculum and training development projects as an integral part of its functions in these areas. I shall expect it, in all the work I fund, to promote the active participation of young people, and to seek to secure private sponsorship and otherwise increase its income from non-Government sources.

These arrangements are designed to meet the needs of the clients of the bodies I currently fund. Should, however, the National Council for the Voluntary Youth Service and the National Association of Young People's Counselling and Advisory Services and the British Youth Council consider the needs of their members would not be fully met, I would be prepared to explore the possibility of them competing for limited funding as national voluntary youth organisations, for eligible programmes of work outside the scope of the national youth agency. Once this has been determined, my officials will consult the territorial education Departments as to which of the national youth agency's functions could usefully be undertaken in respect of their areas and otherwise to secure co-operation and co-ordination with any comparable bodies they fund. Detailed arrangements for managing the national youth agency will be settled in consultation with the interests concerned.

Neil McCluskey

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he will reply to a letter from the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth dated 9 February marked urgent and referring to Neil McCluskey esq. of Imperial college.

Mr. Jackson: The Department has received a very large number of letters about student loans at the same time as the Education (Student Loans) Bill has been before Parliament. I am sorry that replies to some hon. Members have been delayed. A concerted effort is in hand to ensure that replies are despatched to all hon. Members urgently.

British Council (Brussels)

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what benefits have accrued since February 1989 from establishment by the British Council Brussels office of the higher education programme within its European Commission liaison unit.

Mr. Sainsbury: I have been asked to reply.

I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Indonesia

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will seek to have the human rights situation in East Timor included on the agenda of the June meeting of the inter-governmental group on Indonesia.

Mrs. Chalker: It would not be appropriate for this subject to feature on the formal agenda of the June meeting.

Education for All

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what goals were agreed at the "Education for All" conference in Thailand this month;

how Her Majesty's Government will ensure that these goals are reached; and what plans Her Majesty's Government have to increase the aid given specifically to primary education and adult literacy.

Mrs. Chalker: The ultimate goal affirmed by the world declaration on education for all is to meet the basic learning needs of all children, youth and adults.

Progress towards this goal will rest mainly with individual developing country Governments establishing intermediate goals to suit local circumstances, and, in respect of the aid programme, the priorities they have. We are not able to order the way in which other Governments allocate resources to a variety of sectors, but I believe that the consequences of the conference will enable us more easily to encourage and expand support for primary education and adult literacy programmes, the latter with an emphasis on learning for women.

Tropical Rain Forests

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how much British aid has been directed to the tropical forestry action plan to date; and how much is planned for the next three years;

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of all the representations he has received about the advisability of continuing support for the tropical forestry action plan;

(3) what assessment has been made of the extent of deforestation resulting from the tropical forestry action plan; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what input his Department has had into the tropical forestry action plan; and what account he has taken of recommendations about its effectiveness;

(5) what specific measures are being adopted within the tropical forestry action plan to ensure the reversal of deforestation and the protection of biological diversity.

Mrs. Chalker: The tropical forestry action plan (TFAP) is not a fund or organisation to which donors contribute funds. It is a mechanism under which recipient countries review their forestry sectors, and donors can co-ordinate assistance and have a dialogue with each country about policy issues. The product is a national tropical forestry action plan for each country taking part in the process.

The TFAP requires strengthening. I called for its revision when I addressed the UN Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO) general conference last November. I said that policies relating to forests need examining and those that encourage deforestation need changing. Policies should encourage reaforestation and agroforestry, and better agricultural practices which help take the pressures off forests. They should take account of the knowledge and interests of the peoples of the forests. Shortly after the conference the FAO set up an independent review to examine the TFAP and make recommendations for reform. The review team visited London last month and met my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs as well as representatives of the timber trade and NGOs. It is due to report in the summer. I have placed a copy of ODA's written submission to the review in the Library of the House.

The ODA has supported or is supporting the preparation of national forestry action plans in 11 countries at a cost of £0·4 million; and we currently plan to assist with the preparation of a further nine plans. We are currently funding eight projects related to national forestry action plans at a cost of £13 million. We are considering 22 further projects, the cost of which will depend on their precise design. All ODA assistance through the TFAP is subject to our normal rigorous appraisal and careful management.

ODA forestry advisers participate in the twice-yearly meetings of an informal group of technical advisers responsible for TFAP from donor agencies, and liaise with the TFAP co-ordinating unit within the FAO.

The FAO has been quoted in the New Scientist as saying that it is nonsense to say that the TFAP has promoted deforestation. The independent review should provide an assessment of the TFAP to date.

Specific measures to reverse deforestation and protect biological diversity are included in national tropical forestry action plans. Conserving forest ecosystems is one of the five priority areas highlighted when the TFAP was launched in 1985.

It is not normal practice to place departmental correspondence in the Library of the House.

Romania

Mr. Summerson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he has any further plans to help improve health care in Romania.

Mrs. Chalker: In addition to the help we have already provided, directly and through the European Community, we now propose to contribute £500,000 to the World Health Organisation's programme of assistance for the Romanian health service.

Overseas Aid

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the Government have any plans for additional overseas aid.

Mrs. Chalker: Yes. At the Zambia consultative group on 9 to 11 April we intend to pledge a new grant of £30 million. It is to be spent on essential imports required to implement the economic reform programme for 1990 that Zambia has agreed with the International Monetary Fund. We are also offering to reschedule some £12·85 million of repayments, including accumulated arrears, due to Britain in 1990-91 on past aid loans to Zambia. These new measures are additional to our technical co-operation programme, worth some £14 million last year. In addition, the external financing limit for the Commonwealth Development Corporation will be increased by £25 million from £28 million to £53 million. The increase will enable the corporation to continue assisting the economies of developing countries, in particular in the private sector. These increases in aid will be met in part by a charge to the reserve of £30 million; the remainder will come from the existing overseas aid programme.

PRIME MINISTER

European Social Charter

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the action plan of the Commission to implement the provisions of the social charter largely by majority voting procedures.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to raise the matter at the next Council. The voting arrangements for each proposal in the action programme will depend on the legal base put forward by the Commission and this will become clear only when it publishes its detailed proposals.

Engagements

Mr. Stern: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 24 April.

The Prime Minister: I hope to have meetings with ministerial colleagues and others and carry out my duties in the House, after which I shall depart for Istanbul to be present at the 75th anniversary of the Gallipoli landings the following day.

Floods, North Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Prime Minister if she will establish an appeal fund for the victims of the north Wales sea floods.

The Prime Minister: Appeal funds have already been established in the three areas worst affected by the floods and the Government have made contributions to each of them.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if she will receive a deputation of council leaders and residents of the north Wales coasts concerning the north Wales sea floods of March;

(2) if she will visit the Clwyd county council headquarters to meet the chief executive of Clwyd city council to receive a report on the impact of the north Wales sea floods upon the residents of those areas affected;

(3) if she will visit north Wales to meet the victims of the sea floods of March.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales has already visited the area to see the damage and meet the victims of the floods. He and his officials of his Department have held meetings with the local authorities most involved.

European Single Market

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Prime Minister what information she has as to the number of directives concerning the creation of a single market within the European Community in 1992 which have been enacted in the national legislation of each member state and subsequently implemented; and what percentage of the total directives this represents in each case.

The Prime Minister: The latest information on the implementation of single market measures in national legislation comes from the Commission's fifth progress report on the White Paper on the internal market. I am delighted to report that this shows the United Kingdom in first place on its implementation record, with only nine measures remaining unimplemented. This highlights the United Kingdom's record as a reliable partner in the Community. The table gives the overall position member state by member state.

Lithuania

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Prime Minister what recent communication she has received from Professor Landsbergis, the President of Lithuania; what has been her response; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have received a letter from Professor Landsbergis drawing attention to a number of documents and declarations relating to the status of Lithuania. Our views on the incorporation into the Soviet Union of the Baltic states, and on the status of Lithuania, are clearly on record.

South Africa

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will seek to persuade the South African Government to allow the free flow of funds from outside South Africa to the United Democratic Front.

The Prime Minister [pursuant to her reply, 13 March 1990, c. 156]: Further information has come to my attention concerning impediments to the flow of funds to the United Democratic Front. The main South African laws dealing with foreign funding—the Fund Raising Act 1978 and the Disclosure of Foreign Funding Act 1989—do not impede the flow of funds to the UDF. However, the UDF is still listed under the Affected Organisations Act 1974 which prevents it from receiving funds from foreign sources. The other restrictions on the UDF were lifted on 2 February and we would like to see the restrictions under the Affected Organisations Act lifted also.

HEALTH

Kidney Donors

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the willingness of people to become kidney donors; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We receive frequent representations on organ donation from a wide range of individuals and organisations. On 16 November 1989 I chaired a seminar on ways of improving the voluntary donation of organs.

The transcript is now available and I have placed copies in the Library; my letter which accompanies the transcript sets out the action that is in hand.

Discussions at the seminar illustrated both the complexity of the subject and the diversity of views on the best way forward. The initiatives we have already taken should, however, continue to produce results for a considerable time, and we do not propose to make any major changes in policy at present.

Two initiatives of particular importance are the first national audit of potential donors in intensive care units, and the organ donation publicity programme. Both were discussed in some detail at the seminar. The audit and other recent studies have raised a number of medical issues which could significantly affect the potential for organ donation. Professional bodies are addressing these issues. We have expanded the Department's publicity budget, from approximately £50,000 four years ago to about £200,000 per annum today. The transcript gives details of the ways in which the money has been spent, and our plans for 1990-91.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in the Official Report the hospitals for the mentally ill and handicapped which he told the Committee on the National Health Service and Community Care Bill on 27 February, column 129, would become empty over the next five years, the number of patients in each at the latest available date, the district health authority in which each is situated; and whether it is in or near an urban area.

Mr. Freeman: The tables show mental handicap and mental illness hospitals planned to close over the next five years, the latest patient numbers and the district health authority in which each hospital is situated. The other information requested is not held centrally.

North Western RHA

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each district of the North Western regional health authority the number of (a) in-patients, (b) qualified nursing staff and (c) consultants for the latest available year; and if he will give figures for the five previous years.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information regarding the number of in-patients and qualified nursing staff for each district of the North Western regional health authority is given in the tables. Details relating to the total number of consultants in the North Western region and in the three teaching hospitals are given in the table.

Information about the number of consultant contracts in non-teaching health authorities is not held centrally.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish for each health authority in the north-west (a) the net income from private patients and clinics and (b) the amounts written off as bad debts in each year since 1979.

Mr. Freeman: Following are figures recorded in the 1985-86 to 1988-89 annual accounts of the district health authorities comprising the Mersey and North Western health regions. The income shown arises from charges to private patients under sections 65 and 66 of the National Health Service Act 1977 and is recorded under each heading net of sums written off in each financial year (which may include amounts due from earlier years). Separate write-off figures for income due under sections 65 and 66 were not collected centrally before 1985-86.

Adjournment Debates

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many Adjournment debates and Consolidated Fund debates have been answered by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Health since his appointment in December 1988; and what was the mean time at which the Adjournment debates finished.

Mr. Freeman: I have answered a total of 52 Adjournment debates and Consolidated Fund debates since my appointment in December 1988 until today. I regret that the information about the mean time of finishing can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Alzheimer's Disease

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people in the district of Easington suffer from Alzheimer's disease and senile dementia.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are suffering from Alzheimer's disease (a) nationally and (b) in North Staffordshire district health authority.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not collected centrally.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what support is currently available to local groups offering support to the carers of those with Alzheimer's disease; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Such local voluntary groups are eligible for grants from health authorities or local authority social services departments. They will continue to benefit from the project work centrally funded under the Government's "Helping the Community to Care" programme. At national level, the Department currently gives a grant of £130,000 per year to the Alzheimer's Disease Society as a contribution towards the running costs of its headquarters' services.

Drugs

Mr. Sayeed: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the reasons why there has been no inquiry into discounts received by dispensing doctors on their drug purchases since 1983; and why there are no plans to hold such an inquiry.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Doctors are reimbursed only their actual expenses. The effect of a discount scale for dispensing doctors (unlike the one for pharmacists) is to regulate reimbursement between dispensing and non-dispensing doctors. A further inquiry will be required in due course to establish whether there should be any change to the discount scale.

Toxic Shock Syndrome

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from toxic shock syndrome have been reported in 1990.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not yet available.

Abortions

Mr. Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received regarding actions of the West Norfolk and Wisbech health authority in respect of terminating pregnancies on social grounds; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Department has received correspondence from four hon. Members on this subject. I understand that the health authority has not received any formal representations. Under the Abortion Act 1967 a pregnancy may be terminated only if two registered medical practitioners are of the opinion, formed in good faith, that an abortion is justified in terms of the Act. It is for health authorities to decide the level of their provision for abortion services in the light of local needs and priorities and competing claims on resources.

Public Services (Free Health Care)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the cost to the Exchequer of providing free prescriptions and free dental treatment to policemen, firemen and members of the armed services and their families.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Employment in these services confers no automatic exemption from NHS charges. Such personnel and their families pay prescription or dental charges if they use NHS facilities, unless they qualify for exemption under the NHS regulations by virtue of their age or other personal circumstances. The terms and costs of repayment schemes operated by the services themselves are matters for my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence.

Hospital Services

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those hospitals in England which provide supra-regional (i) chorioncarcinoma services, (ii) craniofacial services, (iii) endoprosthetic services for primary bone tumours, (iv) heart transplantation, (v) liver transplantation, (vi) non-transplant liver services, (vii) neonatal and infant cardiac surgery, (viii) psychiatric services for deaf people, (ix) retinablastoma services and (x) stereotactic radiosurgery.

Mr. Freeman: Units designated to provide the supra-regional services specified are located at the following hospitals:

Supra-regional service	Hospital(s)
1. Chorioncarcinoma services	Jessop Hospital for Women, and Weston Park Hospital, Sheffield, Charing Cross Hospital, London
2. Craniofacial services	Radcliffe Infirmary, Oxford, Queen Elizabeth Hospital and Children's Hospital, Birmingham, The Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, London
3. Endoprosthetic services for primary bone tumours	Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital, London, Royal Orthopaedic Hospital, Birmingham
4. Heart Transplantation	Freeman Hospital, Newcastle General Hospital, Sheffield, Papworth Hospital, Cambridge and The Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, London, Harefield Hospital, St. George's Hospital, London, Wythenshawe Hospital, Manchester
5. Liver Transplantation	Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge, King's College Hospital, London, Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham, and St James's University Hospital, Leeds
6. Non-transplant liver services	King's College Hospital, London, Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham, and Children's Hospital, Birmingham
7. Neonatal and infant cardiac services	Freeman Hospital, Newcastle, Killingbeck Hospital, Leeds, Guy's Hospital, London, Southampton General Hospital, Bristol Royal Hospital for Sick Children, Children's Hospital, Birmingham, Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital, Harefield Hospital and National Heart and Chest Hospitals, Brompton, The Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, London
8. Psychiatric services for deaf people	Springfield Hospital, London, Whittingham Hospital, Preston
9. Retinablastoma services	St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London
10. Stereotactic Radiosurgery	Royal Hallamshire Hospital, Sheffield

For some services, clinical activity also takes place in units which are not designated.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those medical conditions which cannot be treated by hospitals within England but can be treated by hospitals within Wales.

Mr. Freeman: We are not aware of any medical conditions for which treatment services exist in Wales which are not similarly provided in England.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) which hospital in England has the longest waiting list for arthritic hip joint surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for arthritic hip joint surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each;

(2) which hospital in England has the longest waiting period for hernia operations; which has the lowest waiting period for hernia operations; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each;

(3) which hospital in England has the longest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We do not collect centrally information on waiting lists and times for individual hospitals or specific medical conditions.

AIDS

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will respond to the resolution of the European Parliament calling on member Governments not to sponsor visitors to the sixth international conference on AIDS in June 1990 in San Francisco;

(2) whether his Department intends to sponsor any visitors to the sixth international conference on AIDS in San Francisco.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: No decision has yet been taken on a response to the resolution of the European Parliament or on sponsorship of visitors to the sixth international conference in San Francisco.

Community Homes (Secure Places)

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many secure places there are in community homes and youth treatment centres; how many young people they currently contain; and how many of these young people are (a) on remand and (b) under sentence.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The number of places available in approved local authority secure units in England on 31 March 1990 was 288. There were 58 secure places in youth treatment centres on that date.

Such accommodation is available for children in care generally, some of whom will be juvenile offenders or alleged offenders. Young people who have been convicted of grave crimes, and sentenced to be detained under section 53 of the Children and Young Persons Act 1933, may also be placed in such accommodation.

Details of placements in local authority secure units are collected centrally only on an annual basis, although these do not provide full information in the form requested. The latest information available of the legal status of children in approved secure units is given in "Children Accommodated in Secure Units During the Year Ending 31 March 1988, England". Copies are available in the Library. On 31 March 1988, 228 children were accommodated in local authority secure units and 56 in security in youth treatment centres.

South Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has yet received any recommendations from the management team led by John Yates which is examining waiting lists in South Manchester; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The 1990-91 series of studies has only recently begun. We have not yet received any recommendations relating to South Manchester. The team will make recommendations to the Department once it has completed its assessment of the district's waiting lists.

Cervical Cancer

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current extent of the cervical screening programme for women between the age of 25 years and 35 years in England and Wales; and what is the current incidence of cervical cancer among this age group.

Mr. Freeman: For information on the cervical cancer screening programme I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz) on 3 April at columns 518-19. The number of newly registered cases of malignant neo-plasm of the cervix uteri in women aged 25 to 34 years inclusive in 1984 (England and Wales) was 622; the rate per 100,000 (female) population was 18·3.

General Practitioners

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes there have been between 1979 and the latest available year in (a) general practitioners' remuneration and (b) the number of practice staff employed by general practitioners.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: From 1 April 1990 the intended average net remuneration for general practitioners will be £33,280. On 1 January 1991 this figure will rise to £34,680. Payments for reaching preventive care targets for childhood immunisation and cervical screening will be made outside this average figure. These payments will amount to as much as £1,800 for childhood immunisation (children aged under two), and £2,280 for cervical screening, per annum. The corresponding level of remuneration in 1979 was £12,830. All these figures exclude practice expenses which are reimbursed to GPs.

The total number of practice staff qualifying for direct reimbursement under the ancillary staff scheme increased by 70 per cent. from 33,721 (20,121 whole-time equivalents) in 1979 to 57,410 (33,863 whole-time equivalents) in 1988.

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list in the Official Report those areas in which general practitioners will be in receipt of the proposed deprivation allowance.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Ross, Cromarty and Skye (Mr. Kennedy) on 15 March 1990, at columns 364-65.

Student Nurses

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what changes there have been between 1979 and the latest available year in (a) the basic remuneration and (b) the average overtime payments for (i) first-year student nurses and (ii) third-year student nurses; and what is the bursary for project 2000 student nurses.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Between April 1979 and April 1990 the basic pay of first-year and third-year student nurses increased by 143 per cent. (6·8 per cent. in real terms) and 159 per cent. (14 per cent. in real terms) respectively. Information on allowances such as overtime and special duty payments to student nurses is available only from 1984-85 and indicates that their earnings from these sources add about 11 per cent. to basic pay. For 1990-91, nurses have received a pay rise of 10·6 per cent. with a further 2 per cent. from January 1991. In addition inner London weighting has risen by 28 per cent. This means that average earnings now range from £6,320 (£6,440 from January 1991) for a first-year student nurse outside London to £9,025 (£9,168 from January 1991) for a third-year student nurse in inner London. Project 2000 bursaries for students aged under 26 at the start of their course are £4,700 in London and £4,000 elsewhere. For those aged 26 and over the equivalent figures are £5,200 and £4,500.

Blind People (Certification)

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he intends to revise the arrangements for certifying a person as blind or partially sighted; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The content and format of form BD8, which is used by consultant ophthalmologists to certify a person as blind or partially sighted, has been substantially revised following the recommendations of the working group on inter-agency collaboration on visual handicap. The new form, which was introduced on 1 April 1990, has been distributed to health authorities together with instructions for its use. The new form is designed to secure significant improvements in the way that data are collected about the causes of blindness and partial sight and more efficient arrangements for passing on relevant information to the visually handicapped person's GP and local social services department. These improvements will assist local authorities in the effective planning and delivery of services for visually handicapped people.

Mental Health (Code of Practice)

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the membership of the working group established in 1989 to draft the Mental Health Act 1983 code of practice; and if he will give details of any request he has made to the Mental Health Act Commission to monitor the code.

Mr. Freeman: The working group was composed of the following members:

Chairman:

Mr. A. J. Collier, CB—formerly deputy secretary, Department of Health and Social Security;

Members:

Professor E. Murphy—consultant psycho-geriatrician and general manager, Lewisham and north Southwark health authority;

Mrs. J. Miles—general manager, priority care services unit, Aylesbury Vale health authority;

Mr. M. Brown—director of nursing (mental health) West Lambeth health authority;

Mr. N. Welch—principal officer, (psychiatric hospitals) Oxfordshire social services department.

Secretary:

Mr. W. Bingley—legal director of MIND, on secondment to the Department of Health while acting as secretary;

Assistant secretary:

Mrs. M. Houston—Department of Health.

I have asked the Mental Health Act Commission to monitor the implementation of the code of practice, and from time to time to advise Ministers on any changes that Ministers should consider making to the code. In addition, I have asked the commission to consider the criticisms of the code made by Lord Mottistone in the debate in the other place on 29 January 1990 at columns 68 to 86 and to advise Ministers upon them by the end of this calendar year. I know that the commission will be pleased to receive any representations on these specific criticisms or on the code generally.

Welfare Milk

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to ensure that the modified welfare milk scheme is now operating fairly especially on milk retailers who provide doorstep deliveries, and that persons in receipt of milk tokens are not being deprived of such a service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Following the change in the reimbursement system for the supply of liquid welfare milk, officials from the Department and the Department of Social Security have been advising all sectors of the dairy trade on the best means of operating the modified scheme fairly. I understand that many processors and suppliers have agreed and are currently operating cost-sharing arrangements.

Very few beneficiaries have reported that their normal supplier has refused to accept tokens. In those cases where this has occurred the beneficiary can usually find an alternative without difficulty and local social security offices are able to offer advice.

Salmonella

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has made an assessment of the implications for salmonella contamination levels of the inclusion of microparticulated egg milk protein as a replacement for raw egg in mayonnaise; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I assume that the microparticulated egg milk protein referred to is the product Simplesse recently approved for use in frozen desserts by the USA Food and Drug Administration.

In the United Kingdom, food regulations require commercially prepared salad cream and mayonnaise to contain at least 1·3 per cent. egg yolk solids derived from pasteurised egg product. The microparticulated egg milk protein does not contain any egg yolk and could not be used to replace eggs in salad cream or mayonnaise. Therefore, there are no implications for salmonella contamination levels.

"Home Life"

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to review his Department's publication, "Home Life"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have no plans at present to review "Home Life". It will, however, be reinforced and supplemented as a code of practice by a series of published guidance documents on standards to be looked for in residential care, as part of the community care implementation programme.

Residential Homes

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the sufficiency of local registration authorities' resources to monitor and inspect registered care homes and nursing homes and unregistered care homes and nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The Registered Homes Act 1984 gives local authorities responsibility for registering and inspecting private and voluntary residential care homes catering for four or more residents and district health authorities responsibility for the registration and inspection of all independent hospitals and nursing homes.

The scale of fees for registering and inspecting homes in the independent sector are fixed in regulations made under that Act and take into account the costs incurred by authorities nationally. In accordance with the proposals in the White Paper "Caring for People", social services authorities will be expected to inspect their own homes and the cost will be taken into account in the 1990 local authority settlement.

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the sufficiency of the number of National Health Service nursing homes and social services part III homes to allow people a choice of private and public sector when considering residential or nursing care.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The White Paper "Caring for People" reaffirmed the Government's commitment to securing a wider range of options for people who need continual nursing or residential care. This includes NHS nurse-managed units, local authority homes, or nursing or residential care provided by the independent sector. It is for the statutory agencies involved to make an appropriate assessment of care needs which takes into account the views of the individual and his or her carer.

The National Health Service and Community Care Bill includes provisions for local authorities to draw up and publish their plans for community care. We will expect such plans to aim at an appropriate balance between public and private residential care and nursing home provision, in the light of local circumstances.

Child Abuse

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to ensure that persons convicted of child abuse are deregistered from the nursing register maintained by the United Kingdom council for nursing; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is for the English National Board and the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting to investigate allegations of misconduct by nurses, midwives and health visitors in England, and to determine whether the person concerned should be removed from the professional register. If the hon. Member requires further information, he may wish to contact the chairman of the council.

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, (b) the number of employees for each firm on the contract, (c) the total value of each contract and (d) the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Freeman: At present Thorn Security Ltd. and Centuryan Security Ltd. hold contracts to guard some of our headquarters buildings. The number of guards employed, the value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85, is information which I am not at liberty to reveal because it relates to the security of our buildings and is a matter of commercial and contractual confidentiality.

Olestra

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the nutritional implications of olestra.

Mr. Freeman: Olestras are sucrose polyesters classified as food additives by the Food Advisory Committee (FAC). The Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy (COMA), in response to a FAC request for advice, has convened a panel to consider the nutritional implications of the consumption of olestra. The panel is currently awaiting further data from the manufacturers.

Food Hygiene

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the total number and percentage of successful prosecutions for breaches of the food hygiene regulations in the hotel and catering industry in each year since 1980.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not held centrally. The following illustrative figures are taken from the annual reports of the Institution of Environmental Health Officers (IEHO). They are based on responses by local authorities to an annual questionnaire from the institution. Response rates vary and figures cannot therefore be compared year on year; they relate to all food premises.

Prosecutions and convictions under the Food Hygiene (General) Regulations 1970

	Prosecutions	Convictions	Per cent.
1980	1,739	1,631	94
1981	1,139	1,036	91
1982	920	821	89
1983-84	1,128	1,023	91
1984-85	775	712	92
1985-86	790	679	86
1986-87	907	679	75
1987-88	960	901	94

Mr. Robert Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations he has received against the provisions contained in clause 12 of the Food Safety Bill as they relate to the powers of environmental health officers to issue emergency prohibition order notices.

Mr. Freeman: Forty-two, apart from representations made in both Houses of Parliament during the current passage of the Food Safety Bill.

Doctors (Staffordshire)

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will obtain and publish a list of doctors about whom complaints have been made to the Staffordshire family practitioner committee for their refusal to sign postal vote forms for patients to enable them to vote in elections.

Mr. Freeman: Apart from the hon. Member's letter received on 4 April by the Staffordshire family practitioner committee, the FPC has not received any complaints about doctors refusing to sign postal vote forms for patients to enable them to vote in elections.

NHS Costs

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost per (a) in-patient case, (b) out-patient case and (c) day case attendance in each year since 1979 in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 1 March 1990]: The information requested for the financial years 1979-80 to 1986-87 is shown in the table together with the available information for 1987-88.

As a result of the implementation of the recommendations of the steering group on national health services information (the Korner committee), the costing information submitted by authorities from 1987-88 is not comparable to that for previous years. The returns for 1987-88 (the latest from which information is currently available)—focus on district-based treatment costs by specialty-specialty groups within all hospitals as opposed to the less satisfactory earlier basis which sought to produce overall average costs per patient by types of hospital determined only by the main bed usage.

Source: The annual costing returns (financial returns for 1987-88) of the district health authorities in England and their predecessor area health authorities.

Notes:

1. The figures have been expressed at 1989-90 prices by the use of the Gross Domestic Product deflator.
2. The figures for in-patients/patients using a bed exclude the expenditure and activity data related to patients whose length of stay frequently exceeds the normal short duration (e.g. geriatrics, mental illness, mental handicap, etc.) by hospital type or by specialty for 1987-88.
3. The 1987-88 cost per consultant episode (equivalent to a case) excludes general services overheads but groups in-patients and day cases (those who occupy a bed for at least a period of time but do not stay overnight) under recommended Korner definitions "patients using a bed".
4. The figures for out-patients relate to new cases/referrals some of which necessitate more than one attendance at out-patient clinics.

NHS Catering Costs

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of catering per patient per day in each regional health authority in each year since 1979 expressed in cash and constant prices.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 1 March 1990]: The information requested for the financial years 1979-80 to 1987-88 is shown in the table. The figures include the costs of provisions, labour and energy.

Nuclear Dust Storm, Towyn

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what health warnings and emergency procedures are being carried out at Towyn in respect of the nuclear dust storm warning that was issued on 27 March for that area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: I have been asked to reply.

A mini instrument environmental radiation meter type 6-80 was used to measure external radiation in Towyn and samples of sediment were analysed using a nuclear data high resolution germanium gamma spectrometer. The NRPB's assessment of the impact of the radioactivity in the sediment on the public took into consideration the inhalation of windblown dust and concluded that the resulting doses were only a small fraction of natural background radiation.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Private Security Firms

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of all the private security firms currently employed by his Department, the number of employees for each firm on the contract, the total value of each contract and the total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85.

Mr. Cope: The Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments currently employ a total of 10 security firms on guarding contracts. It would not be in the interests of security to release the names of the firms—details of each contract are subject to commercial confidence. The current total value of contracts, which are usually for a two-year period, is £3,128,785. The firms concerned at present employ about 210 security guards. The total value of all contracts for each financial year since 1984-85 is as follows:

Financial year	Total value of contracts £
1984-85	1,202,889
1985-86	1,093,350
1986-87	1,086,330
1987-88	981,906
1988-89	1,007,958
[1]1989-90	1,142,227

[1] Estimate.

These figures are not directly comparable to those given in earlier answers since they do not include the value of contracts for non-departmental public bodies.

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will now answer the question from the hon. Member for Walsall, South, No. 155, for answer on 13 February on the private security industry.

Mr. Cope: I am replying to the hon. Member today.

Mr. Gerard Slane

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received from the family of Mr. Gerard Slane or their representatives.

Mr. Cope: I have received no representations from the family of Gerard Slane or their representatives.

Fair Employment Commission

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the chairman and the chief executive of the Fair Employment Commission are perceived to be (a) Protestants, (b) Roman Catholic or (c) other.

Mr. Needham: Under section 19 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989, with certain exceptions, the commission may not provide information which discloses, or from which there can be deduced, the religious belief of any identifiable individual without his or her written consent. No such consent has been given by the chairman or chief executive of the Fair Employment Commission.

Advertising Expenditure

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total publicity and advertising expenditure, including for privatisation, of his Department and public bodies for which his Department has responsibility in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Cope: The expenditure by the Northern Ireland Departments, the Northern Ireland Office and their sponsored bodies, where this information is readily available, was:

Financial years 1979-80 £	1989-90 £
[1]1,967,657	[2]10,595,500

[1] Details of expenditure by the Department of Agriculture and the Northern Ireland Office are not available.

[2] Estimate.

Western Health and Social Services Board

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, further to his written answer to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 9 March, Official Report, column 878, how many of the 48 per cent. of staff whose religion had to be ascertained by a search of their personnel files were (a) Roman Catholics, (b) Protestants and (c) of no religious persuasion.

Mr. Needham: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave on 28 March at columns 212-13.

Executive Houses

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the executive dwellings at Holly Park road, Killinchy, County Down, were built; and what the finance which had been allocated for the improvement scheme to these dwellings in the year 1990-91 has been spent on.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The information it would provide is that the dwellings were built in 1957 and that an improvement scheme is programmed to begin towards the end of the 1991-92 financial year covering kitchens, bathrooms, windows, rewiring, heating, flues, doors and insulation. Finance has not been allocated for 1990-91.

Further Education Lecturers

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the likely effect on the numbers of full-time lecturers employed by colleges of further education of the new funding arrangements for the youth training programme.

Dr. Mawhinney: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to a question by the hon. Member for Antrim, East (Mr. Beggs) on 2 April 1990 at column 449.

Road Accidents, Castlereagh

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many road accidents there have been on the road between Shaw's Bridge and the Miltown junction with the dual carriageway in the borough of Castlereagh for the calendar year 1989.

Mr. Cope: There were 16 road accidents reported to the police in which injuries have been sustained on this stretch of road during the 1989 calendar year. No record is kept of road accidents in which there have been no injuries.

Anglo-Irish Secretariat

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans there are to transfer the Anglo-Irish secretariat from Maryfield to within the grounds of the Stormont estate.

Mr. Cope: There are no plans to transfer the secretariat from its present location.

Residential Care Service

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many children from the Republic of Ireland are presently transferred to the residential care service in Northern Ireland; and who pays for the care of such children.

Mr. Needham: There are at present no children from the Republic of Ireland transferred to the residential care service in Northern Ireland.

Police Rent Allowances

Mr. Stevens: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement concerning the outcome of representations he has received on his decision to set aside certain elements of the police negotiating board's recommendations on rent allowance.

Mr. Brooke: Amending regulations were laid before both Houses of Parliament on 7 March. I have received representations about the effect of these on Royal Ulster Constabulary officers whose maximum limit of rent allowance was last reviewed in 1988, on the grounds that they are at a disadvantage when compared to officers in forces which had a review date in 1989. As a result of these representations I have therefore decided that Royal Ulster Constabulary officers should have their existing allowance increased as from 1 April by the movement in the retail prices index since the force maximum limit was last reviewed. Further amending regulations to give effect to my decision will be made as soon as possible.

This is in addition to the arrangements already provided for in the amending regulations whereby no officer in receipt of rent allowance on 31 March will receive less after that date than he was getting then.

Statistical Divisions

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the latest figures for the number of staff presently employed, and the full complement of staff, including vacant posts, by grade, in the statistical divisions in his Department; if he will differentiate between staff in statistical posts and staff in administrative posts; and if he will give the staffing complements by grade, and differentiated between statistical and administrative posts, proposed for 1990-91.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 12 March 1990]: The information in respect of the Northern Ireland Departments and the Northern Ireland Office is as follows:

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will make it his policy that those soldiers in the Ulster Defence Regiment who were arrested in connection with the Stevens inquiry but who were not charged with a scheduled offence, are properly compensated for losses incurred as a result of having to move home for security reasons.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 March 1990]: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Gentleman.

AIDS

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of full-blown AIDS are presently being treated in Northern Ireland; and how many hospitals are involved in such treatment.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Six cases of full-blown AIDS are presently being treated in the Royal Victoria hospital in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many deaths in which AIDS was the main or a contributory cause have occurred in Northern Ireland during each year since 1984.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 2 April 1990]: The information requested is as follows:

1984	0
1985	1
1986	0
1987	0
1988	2
1989	7
[1]1990	2

[1] To date.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many HIV positive cases which have yet to develop into full-blown AIDS have been detected in Northern Ireland; and what are the trends and projections for the years up to the year 2000.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Forty-four HIV positive cases detected in Northern Ireland have not yet developed into full-blown AIDS.

The incidence of HIV infection and the number of AIDS cases in Northern Ireland are too small to provide a statistical basis on which to make meaningful projections of the likely rate of spread of AIDS.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Northern Ireland is to be included in the Government's programme of anonymous HIV serosurveys which began on 15 January.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Depending on the results obtained from the pilot studies now taking place in Great Britain, the DHSS will consider whether to introduce such a programe in Northern Ireland.

Robberies

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Irish Republic's authorities have sought to extradite anyone from Northern Ireland to the Irish Republic in connection with the Gormanston train robbery.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 2 April 1990]: It is not the practice either to confirm or deny the existence of an extradition request.

Labour Statistics, Coleraine

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present level of (a) male and (b) female unemployment in the Coleraine area; and what were the levels (i) five years, (ii) 10 years and (iii) 15 years ago.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Unemployment in the Coleraine jobmarket area for the period 1975 to 1990 is as follows:

	Male	Female
February 1975	957	342
February 1980	1,452	654
February 1985	2,853	1,018
February 1990	2,580	876

The unemployment statistics given in the table for the Coleraine jobmarket area are not comparable over time mainly due to changes in the rules or procedures for claiming benefits. Seasonally adjusted figures, that is figures compiled on a consistent basis over time, are produced only for Northern Ireland as a whole.

Retail Trade

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons he estimates to have been employed in retailing in (a) Coleraine town, (b) Limavady town, (c) Magherafelt town, (d) Londonderry city and (e) Belfast city in each of the last 10 years; how many of those persons were (i) employees and (ii) owners or partners and (1) how many were part-time and (2) full-time employed.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 April 1990]: Figures on the number of jobs in retail distribution for the areas requested are readily available only from the census of employment. The information available from this source over the past decade is as follows:

Employees in employment—retail distribution

Town	Full-time	Part-time	Total
1981
Belfast	9,442	4,260	13,702
1984
Belfast	8,111	4,535	12,646
Coleraine	425	243	668
Limavady	135	68	203
Londonderry	1,380	683	2,063
Magherafelt	180	62	242
1987
Belfast	8,018	5,383	13,401
Coleraine	626	376	1,002
Limavady	204	218	422
Londonderry	1,378	947	2,325
Magherafelt	153	99	252

Notes:

1. The Coleraine, Limavady, Londonderry and Magherafelt towns have been approximated by electoral wards. The data for Belfast relates to the district council area.
2. The information requested is available for 1981 only for Belfast.
3. Part-time is defined as those working up to and including 30 hours per week.
4. The census of employment does not collect data on owners and partners and this is not readily available from other sources.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

EC Liaison Unit, Brussels

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the first year of operation of the European Commission liaison unit in Brussels.

Mr. Sainsbury: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Know-how Fund

Ms. Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the members of the advisory board of the know-how fund and the organisations they represent.

Mr. Waldegrave: The members of the advisory board of the know-how fund and the organisations they represent are as follows:

Mr. George Robertson, Member of Parliament.
Sir Russell Johnston, Member of Parliament.
Mr. Nigel Forman, Member of Parliament.
Mr. Gavin Laird, CBE, Amalgamated Engineering Union.
Dr. Zbigniew Pelczynski, Oxford University.
Mr. Ralph Land, Rank Xerox.
Dr. Edwina Moreton, The Economist.
Dr. Norman S. Wooding, CBE, East European Trade Council.
Hella Pick, The Guardian.
Professor Richard Crampton, University of Kent.
Mr. John Murphy, Theodore Goddard.
Mr. Jolyon D. Larkman, Barclays Bank plc.
Dr. John Howell, Ernst & Young.
Mr. Angus Cargill, The Conservative Council on Eastern Europe.
Sir Frank Lampl, Bovis Construction Ltd.
Dr. Dennis Deletant, School of Slavonic and East European Studies, University of London.

Hong Kong

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will institute an independent judicial inquiry into cases in which Mr. Warwick Reid was involved during his employment in the Department of the Attorney-General of Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: In view of the continuing inquiries being conducted by the independent commission against corruption, it is not my intention to institute an independent judicial inquiry.

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimates he has as to the number of Hong Kong citizens who have emigrated to (a) Canada, (b) Australia, (c) the United States of America and (d) the United Kingdom in each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Maude: Estimates of emigration are available only on an aggregated basis. According to Hong Kong Government estimates, emigration from Hong Kong in each of the last 10 years was:

	Number
1980	22,400
1981	18,300
1982	20,300
1983	19,800
1984	22,400
1985	22,300
1986	19,000
1987	30,000
1988	45,800
1989	42,000

Over 90 per cent. of these went to Canada, Australia and the United States.

During the past 10 years the number of BDTCs and BN(O)s from Hong Kong accepted for settlement in the United Kingdom was:

	Number
1980	1,710
1981	1,450
1982	1,070
1983	1,050
1984	1,040
1985	950
1986	880
1987	920
1988	1,150
1989	1,360

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give details of the sale by the Hong Kong authorities of confiscated animal tusks, skins or antlers and other products during 1989; and what other methods of disposal were employed.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: No sale of confiscated animal tusks, skins, or antlers was conducted during 1989. Methods of disposal included releasing live specimens to the wild where appropriate, sending specimens to zoos, educational and scientific institutions or other CITES authorities, and incineration of perishable items.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when was the last auction in Hong Kong of endangered species products seized by the authorities; what items were auctioned; and how much was realised.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The last sale of seized products of CITES appendix II species was conducted in February 1988. The items offered for sale included ivory, reptile skins, deer antlers, American ginseng, fur skins of otter and wildcat skins. Some HK $2 million was realised.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many prosecutions were initiated by the Hong Kong authorities in the second six months of 1989 arising from illegal imports, exports and possession of endangered species.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: In the second half of 1989 the Hong Kong authorities initiated a total of 92 prosecutions arising from illegal imports, exports and possession of endangered species.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many restaurant inspections were carried out by the Hong Kong authorities in the second six months of 1989 to ensure no rare and endangered species of animals and plants were offered for sale as food; and if any seizures were made.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Eighty-two restaurant inspections were carried out by the Hong Kong authorities in the second half of 1989 to ensure that no endangered species were illegally offered for sale: three seizures were made involving one monitor lizard, one monkey (pet), one sea turtle carapace and 0·79 kg of crocodile meat.

Ivory

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many investigations have been carried out by the special task force on ivory trade of the Customs and Excise Department in Hong Kong since it was set up; and how many seizures of ivory it has made.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Sixty-two investigations have been carried out by the special task force of the Customs and Excise Department in Hong Kong since its establishment. These investigations have resulted in 20 seizures of ivory.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much ivory has been exported from Hong Kong since 26 February; and to which countries it was exported.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The Hong Kong authorities have been notified of some 35 kg of ivory exports since 26 February 1990: 6 kg bound for Taiwan and 29 kg for Mexico.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much of the total ivory stockpile known to be in Hong Kong cannot be identified according to country of origin.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: One hundred and sixteen tonnes are not supported by CITES documents and their countries of origin cannot be ascertained.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if any of the ivory in Hong Kong now known not to have CITES documentation has been confiscated by the Hong Kong authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: No.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's Government will urgently reconsider their decision to allow a six-month reservation on behalf of Hong Kong ivory stocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: No. We shall withdraw the reservation on 18 July. From that date Hong Kong will comply with the ban on international trade in ivory.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the elephant ivory currently held in Hong Kong under CITES regulations has been physically weighed by the authorities.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Yes.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Hong Kong management authority has now supplied the relevant statistical material relating to elephant ivory to the Hong Kong branch of the World Wide Fund for Nature.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Yes.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply of 22 March, Official Report, column 718, if he will give details of the export destination of the 50 tonnes of ivory exported from Hong Kong since the original declaration was made and, in each case, whether it was raw or worked ivory.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 8 March, Volume 168, column 789.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West of 22 March, Official Report, column 718, how many traders made voluntary declarations of ivory stocks held which led to a figure of 670 tonnes of ivory stock in Hong Kong being given on 20 July 1989; and how many made declarations under the statutory requirements.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The estimated figure of 670 tonnes was based on voluntary declarations by some 630 traders. Following the introduction of possession licensing some 880 applications for possession of commercial ivory were received. Many of the applicants for possession licences are ivory carvers and small retail shops holding small quantities of ivory.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 22 March to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West, Official Report, column 718, what was the nature of the inspections carried out by the Hong Kong authorities on the 116 tonnes of elephant ivory not possessing CITES documentation.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The quantity of ivory held was checked physically against the amounts declared by those applying for possession licences.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 22 March to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West, Official Report, columns 717-18, by what means the Hong Kong authorities were able to establish the legal acquisition of the 116 tonnes of ivory which did not have CITES documentation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: I cannot add to the reply I gave the hon. Member on 22 March, Vol. 169, columns 717-18.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs under what circumstances ivory entered Hong Kong without CITES documentation.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Some ivory entered Hong Kong before CITES came into effect. Some worked ivory was imported without CITES documents before the introduction in 1988 of import controls on worked ivory.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the mechanics of registration of Hong Kong ivory stocks.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: All holdings over 5 kg require a possession licence. This itemises tusks and large cut pieces which are individually marked to assist identification. The total stock of the individual licence holder is registered with the Hong Kong Agriculture and Fisheries Department. After registration, licensed traders holding ivory in excess of the licensed quantity, or any person holding commercial quantities of ivory without a licence, can be investigated and prosecuted, as necessary.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what difficulties have been experienced by the Hong Kong authorities with the software of the computer programme being used to register existing ivory stockpiles.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The original software provided no facility for individual categories of ivory stocks. Improvements have been made recently.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the commercial stocks of ivory in Hong Kong have now been entered into the computer system; and what this is in tonnes.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: Four hundred and seventy-two tonnes of commercial stocks have been entered into the computer system. This represents all the commercial stocks registered with the Hong Kong authorities.

WALES

Drug Trials

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if student nurses and nurses in Wales take part in drug trials; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Clinical trials on drugs are carried out under strict protocols which are supervised locally in Welsh health authorities by clinical trial units and ethical medical research committees. No central records are maintained on the involvement of student nurses and nurses.

Schools (Ancillary Workers)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each local authority area the number of ancillaries employed in (a) 1970-71, (b) 1979-80 and (c) 1988-89 in (i) the primary and (ii) the secondary sector, and the ratio of ancillaries to teachers and pupils in each case.

Mr. Roberts: The information as at September each year is given in the following tables. Data in respect of 1970-71 are not available.

	1979-80			1988-89
	Number of ancillaries[1]	Ratio of ancillaries to teachers[3]	Ratio of ancillaries to pupils	Number of ancillaries[1]	Ratio of ancillaries to teachers[3]	Ratio of ancillaries to pupils

NHS Performance-related Bonuses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many health managers in each of the health authorities in Wales receive performance-related bonuses;

(2) if he will make a statement on performance-related bonuses in the National Health Service in Wales;

(3) what sums of money were paid in each health authority area in performance-related bonuses in 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the replies I gave the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 15 February 1990 and 15 March 1990.

The numbers of general and senior managers in each of the health authorities currently authorised to receive a performance-related pay element in their salary are as follows:

Senior staff authorised to receive PRP[1]

Health authority	Number
Clwyd	10
Gwynedd	7

Flooding, North Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will back new financial measures to assist in the provision of seven days a week creche facilities for families affected by the north Wales sea floods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: The provision of such facilities would be a matter for the relevant local authorities to consider.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will call a conference of social services officials, health officials, housing officials, voluntary workers and local authority financial officers to review and extend the help and guidance given to sea flood victims of the north Wales coast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: My right hon. Friend and I have every reason to believe that the statutory and voluntary agencies have worked effectively together in coping with the effects of the flooding. None of the various bodies concerned has asked for such a conference to be convened.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a further payment of £150,000 to the north Wales sea flood appeal to assist residents with compensation claims; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will visit Rhyl to meet the March flood victims; and what measures he will take to assist those in the Rhyl area who suffered material damage and loss.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have visited the areas of north Wales which suffered the worst flooding, as has my hon. Friend the Minister of State. The Government have already taken exceptional measures in making contributions to the appeal fund for disaster victims and in increasing the rate of grant payable under the Bellwin scheme from 75 per cent. to 85 per cent. of eligible expenditure. I have also provided special assistance to farmers affected by sea water inundation.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the health of victims affected by the north Wales coast sea floods.

Mr. Grist: I understand from Clwyd health authority that there is at present no evidence of outbreaks of disease in the areas affected by the recent severe flooding.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet Clwyd county council and borough councils for the north Wales coast to consider further practical and financial measures to help flood victims.

Mr. Peter Walker: I met the local authorities involved during my visit to north Wales on 6 March. Since then my officials have been in close contact with officials of the councils involved, and I have received no request for a further meeting. I have already announced that the Bellwin scheme of special financial assistance will apply to all eligible expenditure incurred by local authorities in dealing with the emergency. Exceptionally, grant will be paid at a rate of 85 per cent. In addition, I have announced a donation of £150,000 to the three appeal funds.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will meet farmers' leaders to dicuss the impact of the March sea inundation upon farming practice and finances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have visited the area and been kept fully informed of the impact of sea water flooding of agricultural land. The farmers concerned have been advised of the special assistance I have made available to meet the cost of the remedial treatment to flooded land and of the assistance available under existing grant schemes to help meet other costs.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further action he will take to assist (i) elderly people affected by the recent sea inundation of the north Wales coast (ii) young children and (iii) parents of children of school age.

Mr. Peter Walker: Consideration is being given to a report from a member of my social services inspectorate who recently visited the affected areas to experience the social problems at first hand.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his latest estimate of the cost of flood damage on the north Wales coast after sea inundation in March.

Mr. Peter Walker: It is still too early to make any firm estimates of the cost of flood damage in north Wales.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action his Department is taking to clear the mud contaminated by plutonium from the Sellafield nuclear reprocessing plant deposited in the Towyn area after the February storms.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. and learned Member for Montgomery (Mr. Carlile) on 2 April, Volume 170, column 442.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what radiation monitoring equipment is being sent to Towyn in respect of the mud contaminated by plutonium from the Sellafield nuclear processing plant after the February storms and also in respect of the nuclear dust storm warning issued on 27 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: A mini instrument environmental radiation meter type 6-80 was used to measure external radiation in Towyn and samples of sediment were analysed using a nuclear data high resolution germanium gamma spectrometer. The NRPB's assessment of the impact of the radioactivity in the sediment on the public took into consideration the inhalation of windblown dust and concluded that the resulting doses were only a small fraction of natural background radiation.

A40, Carmarthen

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales for what reason on Sunday 1 April, on the eastbound dual carriageway of the A40 one mile to the west of Carmarthen, speed limits of 50 mph on one stretch, 30 mph on another, together with road signs to the effect that the outside lane was closed, were in force.

Mr. Roberts: Work was completed on the major reconstruction of the A40 west of Carmarthen on 30 March. The cones, which were part of substantial traffic management measures, were removed on 31 March and the warning signs during the afternoon of 1 April. This period was not unreasonable for the amount of work involved.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those centres in Wales which specialise in dental treatment for the mentally handicapped.

Mr. Grist: The policy of the Welsh Office, as set out in the all-Wales strategy for the development of services for mentally handicapped people, is that persons with a mental handicap should have access to public services, including generic health services, in the same manner as other people in the community. Any special needs of people with a mental handicap are generally provided for by the community dental service, as detailed in Welsh Office circular WHC(89)28 "The Future Development of Community Dental Services", or in the hospital service. The appropriate level and source of service for long-term hospital residents is a matter for local determination. Information is not held centrally on centres specialising in dental treatment for mentally handicapped people.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision is made in Welsh hospitals for the post-operative care of mentally handicapped patients.

Mr. Grist: The policy of the Welsh Office, as set out in the all-Wales strategy for the development of services for mentally handicapped people, is that persons with a mental handicap should have access to public services, including generic health services, in the same manner as other people in the community. It is for district health authorities to determine ways of meeting any special needs for post-operative care, including the provision of nurses qualified in the field of mental handicap. Information is not held centrally on the provision made in individual hospitals.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) which hospital in Wales has the longest waiting list for arthritic hip joint surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for arthritic hip joint surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each;

(2) which hospital in Wales has the longest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each.

Mr. Grist: Information about numbers of patients on waiting lists for individual operations is not collected centrally.

Hospital waiting list statistics, analysed by specialty, are published in the Welsh hospital waiting list bulletin 1990: No. 1, a copy of which is in the Library.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the rate poundage that will be used in Wales as the basis for calculating the uniform business rate.

Mr. Peter Walker: The uniform business rate poundage for Wales is 36·8p. The method of calculating it did not depend upon a particular level of rate poundage. It has been set in line with the Government's commitment to raise broadly the same amount in real terms from private businesses and the nationalised industries in the first year of the new system as in the last year of the old.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Denzil Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is his estimate of the sums payable to the Welsh Office for the yea[illegible]90-91 in respect of non-domestic rates by each of the borough or district councils in the county of Dyfed;

(2) what is his estimate of the sums that will be paid by the Welsh Office for the year 1990-91 in respect of non-domestic rates to the county of Dyfed and to each of the boroughs or district councils in Dyfed respectively.

Mr. Grist: The information requested is shown in the following table:

Local authority	Contribution into the pool[1] £	Entitlement from the pool[2] £
Carmarthen	4,761,327	1,399,793
Ceredigion	4,470,789	1,578,656

Dyfed	—	45,635,651
TOTAL	35,406,345	54,211,348

[1] Represents provisional estimates of 1990-91 contributions into the Welsh non-domestic rating pool as declared by authorities on form NNDR1.

[2] Represents each authority's share of the 1990-91 distributable amount of non-domestic rates.

Community Councils

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he will consider at a suitable legislative opportunity reintroducing the provision for an annual public meeting for residents of a community council area to question the community council as a body on its work in the preceding year similar to that opportunity which was available from 1948 until the enactment of the Local Government Act 1972.

Mr. Grist: I have no plans for legislation on this matter. The Local Government Act 1972 (section 27 and schedule 12, part V) enables a chairman of a community council, any two councillors representing the community on the council or any six local government electors for the community to convene, at any time, a community meeting to discuss community affairs.

Workers Educational Authority

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning the organisation and funding of the WEA in Wales.

Mr. Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 4 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Pembroke (Mr. Bennett).

ENVIRONMENT

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish a table showing the budgeted average expenditure per head for the year 1990-91 for (a) Berkshire, (b) Oxfordshire, (c) Westminster and (d) Wandsworth; and what information he has on the reasons for the variations.

Mr. Chope: The information is as follows:

Budgeted 1990-91—Net revenue expenditure per head of relevant population

	£/head
Berkshire	732
Oxfordshire	714
Westminster	1,286
Wandsworth	1,176

Expenditure differences reflect the decisions of the local authorities concerned, taking account of their functions and the needs of their areas.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the amounts of each component in the standard spending assessments of each council in the north-west, together with the respective totals.

Mr. Chope: The amounts are listed in the table:

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will amend the community charge regulations so that in applying the standard community charge a distinction is made between properties that are in use as second homes and unoccupied properties which the owners are endeavouring to sell because they have moved somewhere else.

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any plans to increase the three-month period before which a standard community charge is liable for a domestic property which is for sale; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friends to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities to my hon. Friend the Member for Gillingham (Mr. Couchman) on 21 March 1990 at columns 658-59.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make it his policy to assist the Data Protection Registrar's representative investigating the disclosure of personal data from community charge registers from London borough of Wandsworth sources to the hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Chope); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The Department has always given, and will continue to give, full assistance to the Office of the Data Protection Registrar.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in the Official Report a list of charging authorities together with the other adjustment being made by each to its community charge precept.

Mr. Chope: I intend to lay a summary of the information returned by individual authorities in the Library of the House after the recess.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment who will be required to pay the costs involved in obtaining a liability order from the court pursuant to the operation of the Community Charges (Deductions from Income Support) (No. 2) Regulations 1990 No. 545.

Mr. Chope: The costs associated with obtaining a liability order would form part of the amount for which the order is made against the charge payer.

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he is making for consultation about adjustments to the SSAs for individual authorities for the financial year 1991-92.

Mr. Chope: My officials have just started discussions with officials of the local authority associations. This will provide the associations with the opportunity to put forward any new evidence on SSAs.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in descending order the percentage increases in budgeted spending by county councils for 1990-91 over spending for 1989-90 and indicate the political control of each council.

Mr David Hunt: I am arranging for a summary of the information returned by individual authorities to be placed in the Library of the House after the recess.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will provide a breakdown of the amount of central Government grant provided to local authorities per head of population in (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland for each year since 1979;

(2) what factors lead to the difference between the percentage of local authority income represented by central Government grants in (a) England and (b) Wales;

(3) what was the precentage figure of local authority finance provided in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, respectively, from (a) central Government grant, (b) domestic rates and (c) business rates in each year since 1979; and what are the projected figures for 1990-91.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 27 March 1990]: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidance to local authorities on the implementation of community charge regulations in respect of medical and other postgraduate students from overseas following specialist short courses of study of up to 12 months' duration in Britain.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 3 April 1990]: Everyone following a full-time course of education will be eligible for the student relief regardless of his nationality. In other cases, postgraduate or medical students will be subject to an authority's personal community charge if they are deemed to be solely or mainly resident within that authority's area by the relevant community charges registration officer. Guidance on these points is contained in practice note No. 9, "Sole or Main Residence", and practice note No. 23, "Students and the Community Charge", which have been sent to all charging authorities.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of grant distributed by central Government to (a) the Essex and (b) East Sussex county councils; and what were the comparable payments in each of the previous five years.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The information is as follows:

Revenue grants[1]

	Essex £ million	East Sussex £ million
1984-85	190·340	79·810
1985-86	167·120	75·318
1986-87	162·469	73·243
1987-88	167·537	75·451
1988-89	152·197	81·866
1989-90	130·358	75·790

Docklands

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much money has been allocated to the London Docklands development corporation's social development fund; how much has been spent so far; and what projects have been financed.

Mr. Moynihan: The LDDC does not have a "social development fund". However, total expenditure, arising from the memorandum of agreement between the LDDC and the London borough of Newham is £25,349,000; details are listed in the table. Total docklands-wide expenditure by the corporation to date on social and community projects is £83,821,000 including housing, education, training and community support. It would not be practicable to list all of these projects.

Project	Expenditure (£ 000s)
Queensland and Westland points—Environmental works and meeting rooms	548
Royal Victoria Gardens—Paddling pool, play equipment, safety surface	155
Beckton Alps—remedial and safety works	67
Beckton district park—Various works	83
East Beckton district centre—Phase 1 infrastructure works	870
Mid Beckton school—Parking and pedestrian access	91
East side Cyprus by-pass landscaping	119
West side Cyprus by-pass landscaping	88
Refurbishment of Thames House for Newham community college	315
Winsor Park social housing	19,863
Dock directors access centre	850
North Beckton housing refurbishment	2,300
Total	25,349

Mobility

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the sums of money put into the national mobility scheme by (a) his Department and (b) local authorities in each year since its inception.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The level of funding provided by the Department of the Environment each year was:

1980-81	6,258
1981-82	77,309
1982-83	76,382
1983-84	67,130
1984-85	70,625
1985-86	74,983
1986-87	152,596
1987-88	170,082
1988-89	178,451

Local authorities have not made any direct financial contribution towards the national mobility office's cost of running the national mobility scheme.

Boundary Commission

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what timetable he envisages for implementing the recommendations of the Local Government Boundary Commission.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. Friend must allow a period of at least six weeks to elapse after he has received a report from the Local Government Boundary Commission for England. Usually a longer period is allowed in which the public can make representations about the report. When he decides to implement recommendations put to him by the commission it is his usual practice to put them into effect, with or without modification, from 1 April of the year following his decision. In a few cases a longer period has been allowed because of the magnitude of the changes, or because the decision has been announced only shortly before 1 April.

In the current programme statutory reviews of London and the metropolitan counties, the commission is required to complete its reviews by 31 March 1992. The commission has not yet made any recommendations on these reviews to my right hon. Friend, but I understand that it expects to begin to do so in the latter half of this year.

Skiing

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what Government money has been paid to (a) the English Ski Council and (b) any other body promoting skiing in England; and if he will make it his policy that no Government funding goes to any organisation to support attempts to build a ski slope in Reddish vale.

Mr. Moynihan: The Sports Council allocated grants of £69,696 to the English Ski Council and £320,000 to the British Ski Federation in its financial year 1989-90. The figure for the Sports Council's regional expenditure for skiing in 1989-90 is not yet available. Neither the Government nor the Sports Council have received an application for funding towards a ski slope in Reddish vale.

Bathing Waters

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure that the coastal waters off the Durham coast will meet European Economic Community bathing standards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Details were published on 20 October 1989 at column 261 of a £1·1 billion (1987 prices: £1·4 billion at November 1989 prices) investment programme to bring the remaining identified bathing waters up to European standards. An additional £1·5 billion investment programme to treat all sewage before discharge to coastal waters was announced by my right hon. Friend on 5 March at column 452. We intend that these programmes should be integrated and completed as soon as practicable.

Discharge Consents, Stanlow

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consents the Shell site at Stanlow currently possesses for discharges into (a) the Mersey and (b) the Gowy; when they were last reviewed; and when they are next planned to be reviewed.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I understand from the National Rivers Authority (NRA) that consented discharges of trade, sewage and surface water effluent from the Shell site at Stanlow are to either the Manchester ship canal, or the River Gowy and its tributaries. Details of these consents are held on the public register maintained by the NRA and available for inspection at the North West regional office, New Town house, Buttermarket street, Warrington.

The consents for these discharges have been reviewed on an individual basis, as appropriate, the most recent reviews being in July 1988.

The NRA is currently engaged in discussions with Shell with a view to improving the site drainage arrangements at Stanlow, and as a consequence is further reviewing all the discharge consents for the site.

Dungeness

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on plans laid for the protection of Dungeness head in Kent.

Mr. Trippier: Dungeness is a site of special scientific interest notified by the Nature Conservancy Council under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981. It has also been identified as meeting the criteria necessary for designation as a special protection area under the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds (79/409/EEC) and as a wetland of international importance under the Ramsar convention (Cmnd. 6465) and, therefore, the advice to planning authorities contained in Department of the Environment circular 27/87 applies.

County Councils

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the population and the number of staff employed by Hampshire county council and that of the neighbouring county councils of Wiltshire, Berkshire, Surrey, West Sussex and also the same information in respect of Buckinghamshire, Bedfordshire and Hertfordshire.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is listed in the table:

Authority	Total staff (December 1989)	Population (Thousands)
Bedfordshire	20,388	531
Berkshire	22,749	747
Buckinghamshire	22,069	627
Hampshire	51,054	1,543
Hertfordshire	37,427	986
Surrey	26,852	1,000
West Sussex	22,304	703
Wiltshire	20,986	557

Note: The staffing figures are for general services only; they do not include law and order services. The police function in some of the non-metropolitan counties is carried out by a joint police authority.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central of Wednesday 22 March, if he will list those activities designated by the Leeds development corporation as liaison with the local community.

Mr. Moynihan: Leeds development corporation is actively consulting and liaising with the local community about its activities. It is consulting the local community about the planning frameworks that it is preparing for the Leeds development area. It is consulting the local community about highway and development proposals.

The corporation publishes and circulates a biannual newspaper called Update to keep the local community informed of its progress and activities. It holds and attends public meetings and stands ready to discuss local ideas and concerns.

Water Privatisation

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many investors bought shares in the water industry when it was privatised.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave on 24 January 1990 to my hon. Friend the Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) at column 747.

Sewage Disposal

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the effectiveness of present sea outfalls off the Durham coast; and what recommendations the pollution inspectorate has made on primary, secondary and tertiary treatment of sewage.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The National Rivers Authority is responsible for consenting and monitoring the effectiveness of discharges to coastal waters. Sea outfalls at Crimden are known to affect adversely the identified bathing water there. Northumbrian Water plc has plans to improve these discharges. My right hon. Friend announced on 5 March at column 452 that all discharges to coastal waters will be required to receive at least primary treatment.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many comments and inquiries he has received regarding the future use of long sea outfalls or sewage disposal; and how the European Community's policies and directives affect this practice.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: As recorded in my right hon. Friend's statement on 5 March at column 452, the views of interested parties are summarised in the report by Consultants in Environmental Sciences Ltd., a copy of which is in the Library. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is also aware of evidence from a variety of sources (including the CES report) taken by the Environment Committee inquiring into bathing waters and long sea outfalls. The EC-proposed municipal waste water treatment directive generally requires secondary treatment of sewage prior to discharges where it can be shown that there are no adverse environmental effects. These requirements are in line with my right hon. Friend's statement on sewage treatement policy on 5 March. A copy o the explanatory memorandum on the proposed municipal waste water directive is in the Library.

Greenhouse Effect

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding the greenhouse effect.

Mr. Trippier: A paper on the greenhouse effect, prepared by the European Commission, was discussed at the Environment Council meeting on 22 March when my right hon. Friend made a number of suggestions for positive action by the Community.

Water Industry

Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the total level of investment planned by the water industry over the next 10 years.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The total investment allowed for in setting charges limits for the water industry in England and Wales over the next 10 years was £26·3 billion (1989-90 prices). The Secretary of State's recent announcement that in future all significant discharges of sewage to sea should be treated and that dumping of sewage sludge at sea should be ended will increase the investment programme to around £28 billion.

Colliery Sites (Reclamation)

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made with British Coal about the reclamation of colliery sites.

Mr. Moynihan: My Department and the Department of Energy have held a number of discussions with British Coal about the problems of coalfield dereliction. I am glad to say that, as part of the outcome of those discussions, the British Coal Corporation has accepted responsibility for the restoration of collieries which close in the four years following 31 March 1990.

I regard this as an important step forward in placing environmental responsibilities where they belong. I believe that as a result of this agreement land will be reclaimed to an acceptable standard more quickly than would otherwise be the case. We shall keep the arrangement under review and will be considering how the problems of coalfield dereliction may best be tackled in the longer term.

In large part, these additional liabilities will be eligible for deficiency grant under the Coal Industry Act 1990, so there will be no significant adverse impact on the corporation's finances.

The undertaking does not apply in Scotland and Wales where the derelict land grant systems operate on a different basis.

The full terms of the agreement are as follows:

1. British Coal will continue its current practice of consulting with the relevant local planning authority(ies) about the appropriate planning future for the sites of any colliery which closes.

2. In respect of any deep mine started before 1 July 1948 which closes within four years commencing 1 April 1990, British Coal will agree to an acceptance of responsibility for the restoration of such sites to a soft end use. This acceptance of responsibility will not affect in any way the corporation's present practice of seeking appropriate planning consents for redevelopment of the site as soon as appropriate following any announcement of closure.

3. When the planning consent provides only for restoration to a soft end use, British Coal will demolish all buildings, plant and machinery structures or erections and will restore the colliery surface areas, together with adjoining or associated tip areas used solely for the deposit of mineral waste for that colliery, in accordance with a scheme agreed with the mineral planning authority, within a period of 24 months from the date when mining operations have permanently ceased, or such longer period as may be provided for in the agreed scheme.

4. Where the planning consent provides that the whole site or part of the site is appropriate for redevelopment, the land will be valued as if no responsibility for restoration to a soft end use existed, but to discharge its voluntary undertaking, British Coal will contribute to any subsequent derelict land grant-aided scheme the notional cost of restoration of the whole site to a soft end use to a standard acceptable to the mineral planning authority. In a situation where the cost of such restoration is unable to be agreed between British Coal and the mineral planning authority, then such costs will be determined on the basis of an independent valuation.

Caravans (London)

Mr. Cartwright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his most recent estimate of the number of traveller caravans in the Greater London area which are not based on permanent sites provided under the Caravan Sites Act; and what were his similar estimates for each of the past five years.

Mr. Chope: Estimates of the number of caravans in Greater London on unauthorised sites are:

	Number
January 1985	209
January 1986	638
January 1987	550
January 1988	450
January 1989	391
January 1990	318

Palace of Westminster (Lifts)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many lifts there are in the House and its outbuildings, and if there have been any lift reports in the last 10 years.

Mr. Chope: There are 69 lifts in the Palace of Westminster and its outbuildings. There is also one escalator serving the underground car park. Regular internal maintenance reports are logged at monthly and quarterly intervals. Independent safety reports are also produced at six-monthly intervals.

Strip Lighting

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment with what frequency the strip lighting for offices and corridors is cleaned and replaced.

Mr. Chope: Strip lighting in the Palace of Westminster and its outbuildings is cleaned approximately once a year and tubes are replaced as necessary.

Parish and Community Councils

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will consider bringing forward proposals in the next local government Bill to extend the power of the local government Commissoner for Local Administration to investigate allegations of maladministration by parish councils in England and community councils in Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Local Government Act 1974 did not extend the powers of the Commissioners for Local Administration (the local ombudsmen) to parish and community councils because the existence of parish and community meetings enables any local government elector to raise any question or parish or community business directly with the rest of the electorate. This argument still appears valid.

Dogs

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of measures taken to deal with dangerous dogs; what recent representations he has received calling for further measures, including a dog registration scheme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department is monitoring the effect of the Dangerous Dogs Act 1989. Thre has been no problem in identifying owners in recent attacks so there would be no benefit from introducing a dog registration scheme.

Palace of Westminster (Fire Inspection)

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when there was last a full fire inspection of the House and its outbuildings.

Mr. Chope: The last full fire inspection of the Palace, which took approximately six months to undertake, was completed in 1986. The majority of the outbuildings were inspected in the last financial year and the remainder will be in the current financial year.

In addition, all proposed alterations to the fabric of buildings are agreed with the fire officer before the work is carried out.

Crown Suppliers and PSA

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he is making in implementing his proposals for the privatisation of the Crown Suppliers and the Property Services Agency.

Mr. Chope: I have nothing to add to the reply I gave to the hon. Member on 15 March 1990 at column 311.

Nature Conservancy Council

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he intends to implement any of the recommendations made by Lord Carver's committee arising from its recent inquiry into the future of the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mr. Trippier: We are at present considering the Select Committee's report and, as I indicated in Standing Committee, expect to make a positive response to its recommendations as soon as possible.

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the rate poundage that will be used in England as the basis for calculating the uniform business rate.

Mr. Chope: The uniform business rate poundage in England for 1990-91 is 34·8p.

Newcastle Quayside Development Scheme

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much public money he proposes to spend through the Tyneside urban development corporation on the Newcastle quayside development scheme, in Newcastle upon Tyne, East constituency.

Mr. Moynihan: No final decision has yet been reached on the amount of public money to be invested in this scheme.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that (a) Mr. Godfrey Bradman and the Rosehaugh property group and (b) Stanley Millar Builders are able to meet their financial commitments through Newcastle Quayside Developments to the Tyneside urban development corporation's proposed scheme in Newcastle upon Tyne, East for which they are preferred developer.

Mr. Moynihan: No decision has been taken on the scheme for the east quayside area of Newcastle upon Tyne, which is being progressed by the Tyne and Wear development corporation. It is the responsibility of the development corporation to satisfy itself with regard to the financial standing of any companies with which it enters into agreements.

Pesticides

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has concerning the toxicity of pesticides in combination; and what plans he has for further research.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I am aware of the research that has been carried out on this subject by the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, in conjunction with Reading university. A proposal that the Department should fund further work in this area is currently under consideration by my Department.

Newcastle (Inner-City Partnership)

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present population of (a) the city of Newcastle, (b) the part of Newcastle covered by the inner-city partnership action programme's geographical boundaries and (c) the part of Newcastle upon Tyne, East parliamentary constituency that lies within the inner-city partnership action programme's geographical boundaries.

Mr. Moynihan: The Registrar-General's mid-year estimates (1988) give the population of the city of Newcastle upon Tyne as 279,700. Newcastle city council estimates that the current population of its inner area is about 110,000, of which approximately 48,000 is within the Newcastle upon Tyne, East parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the criteria he used in deciding to withdraw inner-city partnership funding from the east Newcastle victim support scheme.

Mr. Moynihan: This project, a former Tyne and Wear county council scheme, has received UP support since 1980-81. In 1986-87 it was submitted by the city of Newcastle for tapered funding on the standard arrangements for time-expired projects agreed by partnership committee. This funding ceased, as agreed, on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which of the approved projects under the inner-city partnership action programme listed in his letter to the hon. Member for Newcastle upon Tyne, East, dated 29 March, are located in Newcastle upon Tyne, East parliamentary constituency.

Mr. Moynihan: The following four projects approved in the 1990-91 Newcastle/Gateshead partnership action programme are located within the Newcastle upon Tyne, East parliamentary constituency: Wharrier Street school "Design For Play" (phase 2); the St. Oswald's environmental improvements project; the East End psychiatric community care scheme; and the East End carers outreach project. A further 10 new approved projects are inner-city-wide initiatives.

Environmental Technology Transfer Programme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the contribution made by his Department to the European Communities network of environmental technology transfer programme; and what benefits have accrued to the United Kingdom from this programme.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 3 April 1990]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him yesterday by my hon. Friend the Minister responsible for industry and enterprise. The Department of the Environment has not participated in the European Commission network of environmental technology transfer (NETT).

Local Government Boundaries

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has under section 61 of the Local Government Act 1972; and if he has ever called a local inquiry under this section of the Act.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Section 61 of the Local Government Act 1972 empowers the Local Government Boundary Commissions for England and for Wales and district councils to hold public local inquiries as part of their reviews of local government areas. The section confers no powers on the Secretary of State. It follows that the Secretary of State has held no inquiries under this section.

Nuclear Dust Storm, Towyn

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement in respect of the nuclear dust storm warning issued on 27 March for the Towyn area.

Mr. Grist: I have been asked to reply.

A mini instrument environmental radiation meter type 6-80 was used to measure external radiation in Towyn and samples of sediment were analysed using a nuclear data high resolution germanium gamma spectrometer. The NRPB's assessment of the impact of the radioactivity in the sediment on the public took into consideration the inhalation of windblown dust and concluded that the resulting doses were only a small fraction of natural background radiation.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Pensions

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would have been the cost to public funds if the state retirement pension had been paid in line with increases in average earnings, rather than prices, in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is contained in the reply given to the hon. Member for Oldham, West (Mr. Meacher) on 20 March at column 595.

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners are dependent upon the state retirement pension alone; and what proportion they bear to the total number of pensioners, in each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The most recent figures available are set out in the table. The family expenditure survey does not identify state retirement pension separately from income support and housing benefits. However, few pensioners rely solely on their state pension as their only income as the vast majority would be entitled to extra help from income-related benefits.

Proportion of pensioner tax units

	per cent.
1979	20·2
1980	19·8
1981	18·6
1982	17·6
1983	16·7
1984	18·0
1985	14·5
1986	15·9
1987	13·5

Notes:

1. Source: Family Expenditure Survey.
2. A pensioner tax unit is the unit on which a tax assessment is made.

One-Parent Families

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many one-parent families have applied for and been awarded Department of Social Security financial help during each of the last five years as a result of marriage break-up; and what is the total cost to the Department of Social Security of maintaining such families.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is available only for supplementary benefit/income support and is set out in the table:

Supplementary Benefit/Income Support paid to lone parents who are divorced or separated: numbers and expenditure

Year	Number of lone parent claimants	Annual equivalent Cash (£ million)	Real terms (1988-89 prices (£ million)
1983	304,000	606	837
1984	319,000	680	895
1986	364,000	833	1,041
1987	381,000	902	1,035
1988	400,000	1,072	1,072

Notes:

1. Source: Annual Statistical Enquiries for the relevant years. There was no Enquiry in 1985.

2. Information is for divorced and separated lone parents, men and women.

3. Annual Equivalent: This is derived from the average amounts in payment to these categories of lone parents at the time of the Enquiries.

Community Charge

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his best estimate of the total amount of central Government support required to cover community charge rebates in Scotland in 1989-90 and 1990-91; and if he will express this as a percentage of total expected income from the community charge in Scotland.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is in the table:

Scotland

	1989-90	1990-91
Central Government Grant for Community Charge rebates/Benefit. (£ million)	214	225
Rebates as a percentage of total expected Community Charge income (per cent.)	21	20

Note: The figures for 1990-91 reflect the increase in the upper capital limit announced in the Budget statement.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, further to the answer given to the hon. Member for Colne Valley of 12 March, Official Report, column 66, concerning the cost of abolishing savings thresholds above which no community charge rebate is payable, what would be the estimated cost to the Exchequer of abolishing the capital limit (a) altogether and (b) for pensioners only, presuming that those people were receiving income amounting to 10 per cent. per annum from their savings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The cost of abolishing both the upper and lower capital thresholds and the tariff income, and assuming instead an income from capital of 10 per cent. per annum, would be (a) £20 million for all claimants and (b) £15 million for pensioners only. A total of 590,000 benefit units would gain by these changes (by becoming entitled or by increasing their benefit). A total of 2,330,000 benefit units would lose (by losing all or part of their benefit).

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people within the district of Easington who will qualify for community charge rebate following the rise in the capital disregard to £16,000.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is not available. Data are not available to provide reliable estimates on such a detailed regional basis.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the people in Scotland estimated by the Government to be eligible for poll tax rebate are now in receipt of a rebate.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: For 1989-90 the latest estimate of the number of community charge rebates in payment in Scotland is 930,000. Rebates to couples are counted as one rebate.

Benefit Claims

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what information he has about the length of time taken to process different types of benefit claims (a) now and (b) prior to implementation of the new social security system.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Since the Government reforms were introduced in 1988, the social security system has become simpler for claimants to understand and easier for staff to operate. As a result there have been very real all-round improvements in the clearance times of claims. The table shows comparable performance in key benefit areas.

Average clearance time for benefit claims

Days

	1987-88	[1]1989-90
Income support	6·3	4·7
Retirement pension	26·7	21·2
Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit	11·3	9·8
Attendance allowance	40·5	[2]42·5
Mobility allowance	40·0	37·0

[1] April to February.

[2] Provisional figure.

Widows' Pensions

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time that is taken to deal with applications for widows' pensions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I regret that this information is not available. However, if the hon. Member had a particular case in mind perhaps he would write to me.

Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the additional administrative cost, for each benefit where applicable, of paying half the appropriate benefit rate for couples to each partner and paying any child addition to the partner taking the major responsibility for the child.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, for community charge benefit, couples are already assessed jointly; entitlement is divided between them, and their community charge bills are individually rebated.

Pensions (Additional Component)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the average additional component payable each year since 1978 on top of the basic retirement pension for persons who retired each year since then on average earnings; and what he estimates the additional component will be each year from now until 1998 if prices rise 5 per cent. per year and average earnings rise 7 per cent. per year;

(2) if he will give his latest estimate of the average additional component from the state earnings-related pension scheme on top of the basic retirement pension payable each year since 1978 for persons who retired each year since then on average earnings; and what he estimates the additional component will be to 1998 on the basis of the Treasury forecasts of rises in prices and earnings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answers 13 February and 26 February 1990]: Information as available is set out in the table. The amounts apply to a person in full-time employment who has been paid average earnings since April 1978, has never contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme and retires on 6 April in each year, assuming price rises of 5 per cent. per year and average earnings increase by 7 per cent. per year effective from April 1991.

Pensioners

Mr. Lester: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures for the latest year available showing the number of (a) single and (b) married retirement pensioners with gross weekly incomes excluding state pension benefits of any category, at the following levels: less than £5, £5 to £10, £10 to £15, £15 to £20, £20 to £30, £30 to £40, £40 to £50, £50 to £60, £60 to £70, £70 to £80, £80 to £90, £90 to £100, £100 to £150, £150 to £200, £200 to £250, £250 to £300, £300 to £350, £350 to £400, £400 to £450, £450 to £500 and over £500.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 22 February 1990]: The latest information, as available, is set out in the table:

Gross income less RP and income support £5 per week	Percentages of
	Single pensioners	Married pensioners
Less than 5	11·3	4·6
5 to 10	8·1	4·4

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the numbers of lower-paid families with and without children, whose marginal tax rates including benefit withdrawal will be (a) 90 to 100 per cent., (b) 80 to 90 per cent., (c) 70 to 80 per cent., (d) 60 to 70 per cent., (e) 50 to 60 per cent. and (f) 40 to 50 per cent., taking into account the tax changes for 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The information requested is set out in the table:

Marginal deduction rates—working heads of tax units
Numbers with marginal deduction rates at or above certain levels
1990-91

	Thousands
100 per cent and over	0
90 per cent. and over	40
80 per cent. and over	220
70 per cent. and over	410
60 per cent. and over	420
50 per cent. and over	420
40 per cent. and over	550

Notes:

1. These estimates are not comparable with the figures in Table 14.19 of the Public Expenditure White Paper because of sampling and grossing factors, the incorporation of Community Charge Benefit, independent taxation, and the effects of earnings growth.
2. Marginal Deduction Rates shown are for heads of benefit units in receipt of Family Credit, rent rebate or Community Charge Benefit when at least one partner works 24 hours or more a week.
3. Estimates are based on 1985, 1986 and 1987 Family Expenditure Surveys uprated to 1990-91 levels.
4. Estimates are rounded to nearest 10,000.
5. Estimates incorporate the Department of the Environment guideline Community Charges announced in January.

Family Incomes

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the level of gross earnings in April 1990 at which (a) a single householder, (b) a married couple, (c) a married couple with two children aged four and six years and (d) a single parent with one child, aged three years, will lose in housing benefit, assuming full take-up of family credit, average rent and rates and other assumptions, as in his reply to the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay), Official Report, 1 December 1987, c. 565-66.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [pursuant to her reply, 2 March 1990, c. 366]: The information requested is given in the table:

Level of gross earnings at which housing benefit ceases

Family type	£ per week
(a) Single householder	81·20
(b) Married couple	108·00
(c) Married couple with two children aged 4 and 6	98·76
(d) Single parent with one child aged 3	57·58

Notes:

1. The examples assume child benefit is in payment for examples (c) and (d) and family credit is in payment for example (d).
2. The rent is assumed to be £19·71 for examples (a) and (b), £23·48 for example (c) and £21·86 for example (d).
3. Community charge is assumed to be £350·00.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Vagrancy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many of those (a) arrested, (b) prosecuted and (c) convicted of (i) begging and (ii) sleeping out in 1987, 1988 and 1989 were aged (1) under 18 years, (2) 18 to 25 years (3) 25 to 55 years and (4) over 55 years;

(2) how many of those prosecutions undertaken under the provisions of the Vagrancy Act 1824 in (a) the Metropolitan police district and (b) England and Wales were dealt with by way of (i) summons and (ii) arrest;

(3) how many people were convicted of (a) sleeping out, (b) begging and (c) being found on enclosed premises in the years 1988 and 1989 in (i) the Metropolitan police district and (ii) England and Wales;

(4) how many people were prosecuted under the provisions of the Vagrancy Act 1824 in the years 1988 and 1989 in (a) the Metropolitan police district and (b) England and Wales;

(5) what figures he has as to the numbers of people prosecuted for (a) begging, (b) sleeping out and (c) being found on enclosed premises who (i) have been discharged from psychiatric care and (ii) have been discharged from local authority care.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not held centrally on the number of arrests under the Vagrancy Act 1824. Neither is it collected on people who have been prosecuted for offences under the Act who have been discharged from either psychiatric or local authority care. Information on the number of prosecutions and convictions under the Vagrancy Act 1824 is given in the tables.

Data for 1989 will not be available until autumn 1990.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost of detaining someone overnight in police cells following their arrest under the Vagrancy Act 1824; and what is the cost of the processing, conveyance and prosecution in a magistrates court of a person so arrested.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Most of the information requested is not available and would be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The average cost of a prosecution in the magistrates court is £21 (1988 prices).

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about the Vagrancy Act 1824; and if he has any plans to abolish it.

Mr John Patten: In the past 12 months we have received seven written representations from hon. Members about the Vagrancy Act 1824, and written and oral representations from the National Association of Probation Officers, the End Vagrancy Act Campaign and the Children's Society. We have noted several observations on the subject in proceedings in both Houses. My Department has also received a few letters from members of the public.

We have no present plans to repeal the Act, which covers a wide range of offences including indecent exposure.

Pentonville Prison

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current number of convicted and unconvicted prisoners intended to be held in Pentonville prison; what is the current number of prisoners held in Pentonville prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The certified normal accommodation (CNA) of HMP Pentonville is 641[1]. A programme of major refurbishment currently in hand there will increase its CNA by more than 200 places over the next two years. The population of the prison on 30 March was 941 (including 194 unconvicted).

[1] On 11 February 1990.

Lorrain Osman

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what nationality is Lorrain Osman; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Mr. Lorrain Osman is a Malaysian citizen. He is also qualified for the right of abode in the United Kingdom under section 2(1)(c) of the Immigration Act 1971 by virtue of his birth in Penang and five years' residence in this country, and he became a British citizen on 1 January 1983 when the British Nationality Act 1981 came into force.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has examined documents in the matter of a request by the Government of Hong Kong for the extradition of Mr. Lorrain Osman which were prepared and sworn by Mr. Warwick Reid of the Hong Kong Government, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: No documents prepared and sworn by Mr. Warwick Reid have been submitted by the Hong Kong Government in the matter of Mr. Osman's extradition.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on who laid the complaint against Mr. Lorrain Osman in Hong Kong for which his return to Hong Kong is requested by the Hong Kong authorities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The complaint against Mr. Osman was laid in Hong Kong by Mr. Anthony Edmund Robey, a senior officer in the Independent Commission Against Corruption.

Immigration

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many passports are currently held at (a) Lunar house, Croydon, (b) Liverpool nationality office and (c) Queen Anne's Gate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Liverpool Nationality Department

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the reasons for the industrial action taken by officers of the Liverpool nationality department on Friday 23 March and Monday 26 March.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: On 31 January, in reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler) at column 205, my right hon. and learned Friend announced that the nationality work of the immigration and nationality department would be concentrated in the existing Liverpool nationality office. On 2 March, following initial discussions with the trade union side of the immigration and nationality department Whitley council, a letter was sent to the trade union side setting out the Department's detailed proposals for the transfer of work from Lunar house, Croydon to the Liverpool nationality office and for the consequential staffing arrangements. A response to that letter is awaited.

In the week beginning 19 March, some problems arose over the transfer of work and some members of staff of the Liverpool office did not attend for duty during the afternoon of 23 March or on 26 March. A meeting was held between management and the trade union side on 26 March, following which a joint statement on the future handling of the relocation was agreed. The staff who had been taking industrial action returned to work the following day.

Extradition

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what provisions the courts examine any requests for bail in extradition cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: The Bail Act does not apply to extradition cases, and there is therefore no presumption in favour of bail, as with cases for trial in this country. Under section 9 of the Extradition Act 1989, however, the court of committal may grant bail if it considers that it would be appropriate to do so.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on the return of a person to any requesting country under the Extradition Act 1989 if the person requested might be prejudiced at any trial by reason of his race, nationality or political opinions.

Mr. John Patten: Section 6(1)(d) of the Extradition Act 1989 provides that a person shall not be extradited if it appears that he might, if returned, be prejudiced at his trial or punished, detained, or restricted in his personal liberty by reason of his race, religion, nationality or political opinions.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy on whether any period of remand suffered in the United Kingdom by an offender held for the purposes of extradition should be counted against any sentence that offender may incur in the requesting country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: This is a matter for the requesting state. The general practice in most countries with which we have extradition arrangements is for time spent on remand in the requested state to be taken into account when calculating sentence, and to facilitate this we provide information about such periods from our records.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, in the case of prisoners held on remand for the purposes of extradition, the requesting country pays the costs so incurred should it oppose bail; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: It is a general principle of extradition arrangements between countries that the requested state meets the costs of a fugitive's detention.

Durham Prison (Staffing)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the complement of officers and staff working within HMP Durham and (b) the prison population within HMP Durham for each year since 1979.

Mr. Mellor: The target staff in post for officers (including principal and senior officers) in HMP Durham is 387 for 1990-91 and the complement for other staff is 138·5. The number of officers in post dating back to just before the introduction of "fresh start" is:

	Number
1 April 1986	326
1 April 1987	330
1 April 1988	368
1 April 1989	377

Other historical data are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Moreover, comparisons with staffing levels pre-"fresh start" are inevitably misleading because of differences in calculation methods, in particular the heavy reliance on officer overtime.

The population at HMP Durham since 1 April 1979 was as follows:

	Number
1 April 1979	1,095
1 April 1980	1,123
1 April 1981	1,072
1 April 1982	1,013
1 April 1983	1,004
1 April 1984	934
1 April 1985	1,211
1 April 1986	942
1 April 1987	1,161
1 April 1988	1,232
1 April 1989	1,058
1 April 1990	992

Asylum

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give, by nationality, the number of asylum seekers who have applied for asylum in the United Kingdom (a) at the ports of entry and (b) after entry during 1989 and 1990; and if he will state for each of the above categories and by nationality (i) the number refused, (ii) the number granted refugee status and (iii) the number granted exceptional leave to remain.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Provisional information on the numbers of applications for refugee status in the United Kingdom, and of grants and other decisions, in 1989, is shown in the table. Final information for 1989 will be published in the Home Office statistical bulletin, "Refugee Statistics United Kingdom 1989", in the summer. Information for 1990 to date is not yet available. Provisional figures for refugee applications and decisions, by nationality, are provided quarterly to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees, and copies are in the Library.

Fire Service (Lancashire)

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he expects to receive any proposals from Lancashire county fire brigade on fire cover in Lancashire; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I understand that the chief fire officer of Lancashire fire brigade has recently completed a review of fire risk categorisation and standards of fire cover; and that he has presented his report and findings to the public protection committee of Lancashire county council.

The fire authority has decided to consult widely within the county. This exercise, which will include district and town councils, local Members of Parliament and the fire service trade unions, is not expected to be completed until the end of August at the earliest.

A fire authority which proposes to reduce the operational establishment of its brigade is required to seek the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend to the reductions under the terms of section 19 of the Fire Service Act 1947. My right hon. and learned Friend is committed to maintaining nationally recommended minimum standards of fire cover and to the maintenance of an effective fire service.

Mr. Lee: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current strength of the retained fire service in Pendle; and what is its annual cost and the cost per call-out.

Mr. John Patten: The combined retained strength of the four fire stations in Pendle is 55 firefighters operating six retained fire appliances.

I understand from Lancashire county fire brigade that it does not hold information on the specific cost of the retained service in Pendle and it is not, therefore, possible to produce the costings requested.

Hong Kong

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from police officers born in the United Kingdom who are serving in the Hong Kong police and who have married Hong Kong citizens, concerning the right of abode for their spouse in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government have received a number of representations on behalf of police officers in Hong Kong about the immigration and nationality status of their spouses. Under the British Citizenship (Designated Service) Order 1982 the normal residential requirements in the British Nationality Act 1981 may be waived if an application for naturalisation as a British citizen is made by the spouse of a member of the Royal Hong Kong police force who is a British citizen and was recruited in the United Kingdom. In addition the spouses of British citizens living abroad have the assurance that subject to the provisions in the immigration rules they may at any time come to live in the United Kingdom with their husbands and wives. We are considering whether any further arrangements are necessary under immigration provisions to protect the position of British citizen spouses in the special circumstances of Hong Kong and we will make an announcement in due course.

Forensic Scientists

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many forensic scientists of (a) up to three, (b) three to six, (c) six to nine, (d) nine to 12 and (e) 12 to 15 years' experience, respectively, left the employment of the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory in 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is listed in the table:

	Number
Up to three years' experience	6
Three to six years' experience	1
Six to nine years' experience	5
Nine to 12 years' experience	4
Twelve to 15 years' experience	1

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many forensic scientists were employed at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory as specialists in fires on 1 January of each year from 1986 to 1990; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of forensic scientists employed at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory as specialists in fire investigation on the dates in question was as follows:

	Number
1 January 1986	4
1 January 1987	3
1 January 1988	2
1 January 1989	4
1 January 1990	4

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals to introduce a supplement to the salaries of scientists employed at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: We are discussing with the receiver a case for pay improvements for scientists at the Metropolitan police forensic science laboratory.

Deportation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the numbers of people removed from the United Kingdom pursuant to a decision to deport them for each year since 1979 for the following nationalities: (a) Indian, (b) Nigerian, (c) Australian and (d) all Commonwealth Caribbean countries.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is given in the table:

Number of persons removed from the United Kingdom under the deportation process for certain nationalities, 1979 to 1989

	Nationality
Year	India	Nigeria	Australia	Commonwealth Caribbean countries
1979	45	97	11	14

Birmingham Six

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 633, what are the terms of reference of the Devon and Cornwall police inquiry into the new evidence submitted on behalf of the Birmingham Six; when he expects the inquiry to report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: My right hon. and learned Friend has sent to the chief constable of the West Midlands police a copy of representations from the solicitor acting on behalf of the Birmingham Six, and has asked him for a report on matters arising out of those representations. The chief constable has asked the Devon and Cornwall constabulary to undertake inquiries on his behalf. It is too early to form a view on the length of time those inquiries are likely to take.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take concerning the missing evidence of the West Midlands police force on matters concerning the Birmingham Six.

Mr. John Patten: It has not been established that any relevant evidence concerning the Birmingham Six case is missing. Representations about this possibility are among the issues which have been raised by the solicitor acting for the convicted men. These have been passed by my right hon. and learned Friend to the chief constable of the West Midlands police and will be investigated by the Devon and Cornwall police.

London Demonstration

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Irish tricolours were flown by demonstrators in central London on Saturday 31 March; what is the estimated extent of participation by Irish immigrants in the demonstration; and if he will make a statement about Irish Republican involvement in the demonstration.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that it is not known how many Irish tricolours were flown during the anti-community charge demonstration on Saturday in central London nor is it known how many people of Irish origin took part. There was no Irish Republican involvement in the organisation of the demonstration.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will establish an independent judicial inquiry into public disorder in London on 31 March; if he will ensure the terms of reference allow investigation into whether any groups or organisations were responsible for instigating violence; whether policing arrangements were appropriate and whether the march route and rally venue were suitable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: As my right hon. and learned Friend announced to the House on Monday 2 April at columns 893-94, the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis is undertaking a review of the events of Saturday 31 March to see what lessons can be learned from what occurred. This will take into account all the arrangements which were made for policing the demonstration. A full criminal investigation is being conducted with a view to identifying offenders from photographs and film and prosecuting them.

Debt Default

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were in prison for debt default (a) nationally and (b) in Strangeways prison, Manchester, in the last week for which figures are available.

Mr. Mellor: According to the records held centrally, on 28 February 1990 435 fine defaulters were held in prison service establishments in England and Wales of whom 32 were in Manchester. Similar information for prisoners committed for non-payment of debts is not readily available. However, 55 non-criminal prisoners other than Immigration Act detainees were in prison service establishments on 28 February, none of whom was in Manchester. About half of these prisoners would have been debtors. Detailed information about the population of prisoners committed for non-payment of debts is published annually in "Prison Statistics England and Wales" (table 6.1 of the latest issue, for 1988 Cm. 825), copies of which are in the Library.

Members' Inquiries

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 350, he will make a statement on the delays in the case of IM (Prison No. W90297) (HO reference PDP M27656/8/1).

Mr. Mellor: I am writing to the hon. Member today. I apologise for the delay in replying to this letter.

Residential Homes

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years for offences against people in (a) registered care homes and nursing homes and (b) unregistered care homes and nursing homes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not collected centrally.

HMP Manchester

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates from Her Majesty's prison Manchester have been transferred since 1 April to Her Majesty's prison Wakefield.

Mr. Mellor: Since 1 April, 22 inmates have been transferred from HMP Manchester to HMP Wakefield. By yesterday lunchtime two had been discharged, having reached the end of their sentences.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many officers from Her Majesty's prison Wakefield have since 1 April been temporarily transferred to duties at Her Majesty's prison Manchester.

Mr. Mellor: The numbers of prison officers from HMP Wakefield on detached duty at HMP Manchester on each day since 1 April is as follows:

	Number
1 April	48
2 April	34
3 April	28
4 April	26

Prison Officers

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to introduce additional standby teams of prison officers which can be drafted into particular prison establishments at times of particular staff shortages or disturbance.

Mr. Mellor: Contingency plans are already in place to enable additional manpower to be made available to establishments at short notice, if the need arises. This manpower is initially drawn from neighbouring establishments, but, where necessary, the catchment area can be and is extended nationally.

Interception of Communications Tribunal

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has been appointed to succeed the late Lord Fraser of Tullybelton as president of the interception of communications tribunal; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The hon. Mr. Justice Macpherson of Cluny has been appointed as president of the tribunal established under the Interception of Communications Act 1985.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Disciplinary Procedures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will list the firms criticised by his Department's inspectors or the joint disciplinary scheme.

Mr. Redwood: I assume the hon. Member is referring to accountancy firms. I listed the firms criticised in reports of inspectors published since June 1979 in the replies I gave to the hon. Member on 19 December 1989 at column 139 and 21 February 1990 at column 782. Copies of the reports of the joint disciplinary scheme are in the Library.

Company Accounts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will take steps to ascertain the merchant banks which promote off-balance sheet financing schemes.

Mr. Redwood: No. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 3 April.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will amend the Companies Acts to require the directors of a company to respond to the circumstances mentioned in the statements filed by auditors in accordance with section 390 of the Companies Act 1985.

Mr. Redwood: With effect from 1 April, section 390 has been replaced by section 394, which was inserted into the Companies Act 1985 by section 123 of the Companies Act 1989.

I have no plans for further legislation in this area. It is for the shareholders to decide what explanations from the directors may be called for in the light of statements made by a former auditor of their company.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will amend section 385 of the Companies Act 1985 to require directors or auditors to give an indication of the details of the audit tender to shareholders.

Mr. Redwood: No. The appointment of auditors by the general meeting gives shareholders the opportunity to seek details of the terms of the proposed appointment.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will seek to amend the Companies Acts in order to specify auditors' responsibilities in detail similar to those of directors of companies.

Mr. Redwood: Under the Companies Act 1985 it is the responsibility of the directors to prepare accounts and of auditors to report whether those accounts have been properly prepared in accordance with the Act and give a true and fair view. Parliament has only recently considered and amended, in the Companies Act 1989, the relevant detailed provisions of the 1985 Act and I see no need to reopen the matter.

Germany (Trade)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the effect of a united Germany on the medium-term prospects for the United Kingdom balance of trade with West and East Germany.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 exports to the FRG were £11 billion and imports £20 billion; exports to the GDR amounted to £106 million and imports £169 million. The medium and longer-term effects on the balance of trade of a united Germany remain uncertain. In the shorter term, exports to the present FRG could increase as a result of British companies supplying customers in the GDR through or in co-operation with companies in the FRG. In the medium and longer term, unification should free the GDR from the constraints imposed by shortages of convertible currency and the potential for increased exports could be considerable; but so too will be competition for the business. As to imports from a united Germany, it remains to be seen how successfully GDR producers are able to compete following a move from a command to a market economy. My Department is keeping prospects under review.

Wales (Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Ridley: I visited Companies House and ECGD in Cardiff on 23 February this year. I also visited the Patent Office in Newport on 1 March this year.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will launch an independent inquiry into the influence of major accountancy firms on the accountancy bodies and their major policy-making committees.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Departmental Reports

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make it his practice that his Department reports shown to trade associations will be made available to Parliament.

Mr. Redwood: No.

Astra Holdings

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received concerning the company Astra Holdings; if he will institute an inquiry into the company's affairs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I cannot comment on the affairs of individual companies. I am prepared to consider any information the hon. Member may provide which might warrant an inquiry.

Flooding, Wales

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will visit Clwyd county and borough councils to discuss residents' problems concerning insurance claims after the inundation by the sea in the March floods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: No. Neither the Department nor the Association of British Insurers has received any representations about problems on insurance claims but if the hon. Gentleman writes to me about residents' concerns, I would be glad to look into them.

Shareholders' Rights

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has any plans to alter the rights of shareholders in any privatised industries or companies.

Mr. Redwood: I have no plans to do so. The Government reject the idea of "public interest companies" where Government take voting control without buying all of the equity or where the rights of shareholders to profits and dividends are deliberately curtailed.

Tampons (Health Warnings)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about the need to write health warnings on the outside of tampon packaging.

Mr. Forth: I have received representations from the Department of Health, the Women's Environmental Network, and the hon. Members for Barking (Ms. Richardson) and for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short). The industry has agreed to improve the safety labelling on the outside of packets of tampons and on the leaflet enclosed, and the Department of Health is content that these improved warnings are an adequate safeguard.

Garston Amhurst

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, pursuant to his answer of 15 February, Official Report, column 389, if his Department has discovered further contacts with Garston Amhurst Associates.

Mr. Redwood: Since I told the House on 15 February, at columns 390-91, of a contact between my Department and Garston Amhurst Associates in 1984, a further letter has been found on a general file when looking for unrelated documents. This was dated 13 October 1987 and sent to my Department by GAA's solicitors. It enclosed a letter from GAA to a third party, which stated categorically that GAA did not need a PF(I) licence because it did not deal in securities. It also recorded a telephone conversation with an official in the DTI of which we have no independent record. I am sorry that this came to light only after the previous question was answered.

Faulty Goods

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps the Government are proposing to take in response to the Law Commission's conclusion in paragraph 5.18 of the report on "Sale and Supply of Goods", Cm. 137, concerning the right to a refund for faulty goods shortly after purchase.

Mr. Forth [holding answer 28 March 1990]: The Law Commission's recommendations are summarised in part 8 of its report. The Government have announced the intention to implement its recommendations for legislation (subject to minor clarifying amendments). However, paragraph 5.18 of its report reached no conclusion and made no recommendations.

Ethnic Enterprises

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect the harmonisation proposals under the Single European Act, due to be implemented by 1 January 1993 or thereafter, will have on black and minority ethnic enterprises in (a) hairdressing, (b) food imports and exports, (c) other import/export trades, (d) restaurants, (e) arts and crafts, (f) clothing manufacture and retailing, (g) books and periodicals, (h) videos and films and (i) music, entertainment and sports; what other major effects the proposals will have on black and minority ethnic people in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The effects of the single European market will be felt long before 1 January 1993. Indeed, many single market measures are already in force. It is not possible to tell what the effects of the single market will be on the detailed sectors mentioned: the outcome will depend on the dynamic reaction of individual businesses. However, the single market offers enormous opportunities to all British businesses. The Cecchini report, carried out for the European Commission, suggests optimistically that there will be a 4·5 per cent. boost to EC GDP. These opportunities are open to ethnic minorities enterprises as they are to all others. In addition, under the Home Office's ethnic minority business initiative, business advice centres are open in north, south and west London, Birmingham and Bristol, to offer advice to ethnic minority enterprises.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, since 18 June 1989, how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice, where such matters are involved, to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Where Members of the European Parliament raise matters in correspondence which are exclusively of local interest, the practice is to reply suggesting that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. As with other correspondence, replies to such communications would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had himself copied his letter in this way.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the practice of his Department on answering questions about the balance of trade with the EC.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 2 April 1990]: Following the reorganisation in 1989 of the Government statistical service as a result of the recommendations of the review of economic statistics, the responsibility for publishing the main economic aggregates now falls to the Central Statistical Office, and questions about such aggregates are answered by Treasury Ministers. Questions concerning disaggregated trade statistics are answered by DTI Ministers. They would include a question on the balance of trade in manufactured goods with the EC. A copy of the guidelines for the allocation of questions seeking economic statistics is available in the Library of the House.

Japanese-owned Car Firms

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what advice the Council of Ministers has had from the EC Commission about transitional restrictions on the export of cars from United Kingdom Japanese-owned firms to the continent; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 2 April 1990]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer my right hon. Friend gave him on 22 January 1990 at columns 504-5.

Pension Funds

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many complaints his Department has received in the last five years concerning pension funds in general and pension fund re-investment in pensioners' holding companies from (a) individuals and (b) others;

(2) how many representations his Department has received in the last five years concerning pension fund re-investment; how many of the representations were critical of the present re-investment system; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will estimate how many pension schemes include (a) director trustees and (b) employee trustees;

(4) if he will estimate the total value of pension fund surpluses re-invested in the pensioners' holding company; and if he will supply the figures where the pension fund invests in (a) equity issues of the sponsoring company, (b) convertible securities issued by the sponsoring company, (c) preference stocks issued by the sponsoring company, (d) restricted classes of stock, (e) any form of loan stock issued by the company other than convertible and (f) any property occupied by the sponsoring company;

(5) if he will list in order the companies he has received most complaints about concerning (a) general practice and (b) pension fund re-investment over the last three years;

(6) what is the total number of companies that have disclosed pension fund re-investment under regulation 7 and schedule 3, paragraph 6, of the Occupational Pension Schemes (Disclosure of Information) Regulations, SI 1986, No. 1046, since November 1987; and if he will make a statement;

(7) which aspect of pension fund administration he has received most critical representations about; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: I have been asked to reply.

Information is not held by the Department on all matters raised by my hon. Friend. Representations have been received on a range of issues related to occupational pension matters in recent years, but details of numbers are not kept.

The Occupational Pensions Board, in its report "Protecting Pensions", recommended that restrictions should be introduced on the extent of self-investment by pension schemes in their related employer. This recommendation was accepted and appropriate powers have been taken in the Social Security Bill.

There have been some representations about these proposals from employers, outlining the possible effects for their businesses and pension schemes if the scheme is required to dispose of assets held in the company too quickly. As a result we intend to mount a survey which will provide up-to-date information on the extent of self-investment and which will guide us in framing the necessary regulations.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Moorland

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about measures to prevent the over-grazing of moorland.

Mr. Maclean: There are no easy solutions to the problem of environmental over-grazing of moorland while maintaining the viability of upland farming so essential to the less-favoured areas (LFAs). The current national restrictions on payments of hill livestock compensatory allowances (HLCAs) of six ewes per hectare in the severely disadvantaged part of the LFA and nine ewes per hectare in the disadvantaged area serve to discourage over-grazing while the new EC limit confining HLCA payments to 1·4 livestock units per hectare will further limit the extent of the problem from January 1991. We are now considering whether the new EC legal provisions permitting member states to take account of environmental considerations in this scheme can be made more specific. Grants available to farmers through the farm and conservation grant scheme facilitate the regeneration of heather and payments under management agreements in the North Peak environmentally sensitive area are directed at the specific problems of moorland management.

Arthioposthia Triangulata

Mr. Alton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has as to the spread of arthioposthia triangulata on the British mainland and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Planarian can grow up to 15 cm long and weigh 2 g. It is found under stones and dead wood on the soil surface where it rests between feeds on its earthworm prey. The Planarian attaches itself to a worm and moves up the body until its mouth comes into contact with worm tissue. It releases digestive juices which dissolve the worm. The Planarian can then suck up this earthworm "soup". A whole worm can be completely eaten in 30 minutes.

In Northern Ireland the Planarian has apparently wiped out a normal earthworm population in a field which the Department of Agriculture in Northern Ireland had been monitoring. This is abnormal. The Planarian would appear to co-exist happily with earthworms in southern Scotland.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will allow representatives from animal welfare groups to inspect the control methods used by his Department on cattle being used for research into bovine spongiform encephalopathy at the experimental husbandry farms at Boxworth, Drayton, Gleadthorpe, High Mowthorpe and Redesdale.

Mr. Maclean: We welcome the interests of any responsible animal welfare groups and would be willing to make arrangements for them to visit the farms referred to; but like any professionally organised research and development undertaking they cannot accommodate unscheduled visitors.

Although the cattle at the EHFs mentioned are part of a research programme into bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE), none is affected by the disease. In the event of any of these cattle showing signs of infection with BSE they will be dealt with under the procedures laid down in the BSE order, but in the interim all are subject to the normal codes of practice for animal welfare and to ADAS's normal high standards of animal husbandry.

Drift Net Fishing

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on drift net fishing.

Mr. Curry: No.

EC Rivers and Oceans Programme

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress made with the European Communities European rivers and oceans system programme; and what benefits have accrued to the United Kingdom from this programme.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

The European river ocean system programme (EROS 2000) is an interdisciplinary research project on biogeochemical processes in the European coastal environment. Most effort has focused to date on the Gulf de Lions area of the Mediterranean. I understand that progress has been good, and the results are beneficial to United Kingdom and European science. The Commission's water pollution research report 13 describes the first EROS 2000 workshop held in March 1989. The report of a second workshop in February 1990 is in press. These reports can be obtained direct from Directorate General XII in Brussels.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the detailed agenda of the European Community Agriculture Council on 25 and 26 April and on United Kingdom ministerial attendance at that Council.

Mr. Curry: The principal item on the agenda of the Agriculture Council on 25 and 26 April will be the Commission's 1990 farm price proposals. There are also likely to be discussions on the non-food use of agricultural products, the small-scale cotton producers' aid and an exchange of views on the GATT multilateral trade negotiations.

The Minister and I shall attend the meeting.

Sewage Sludge (Plastic)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has made an assessment of the quantities of plastic contained in sewage sludge dumped in the sea and what effect the presence of plastic has on (a) the marine environment and (b) the fishing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Ministry's monitoring of sewage sludge disposal grounds has identified a significant quantity of litter only at the Tyne disposal ground. This litter contains a small percentage of plastic material. Litter presents an aesthetic problem in the marine environment. It is an unpleasant inconvenience for fishermen whose gear becomes contaminated. The Ministry has required the holder of the disposal licence to instal effective new screening to prevent litter from contaminating the sludge. Screening is now in place at one of the two treatment works concerned, and will shortly be completed at the remaining works.

Simplesse

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what labelling requirements will apply in respect of products containing Simplesse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Products containing Simplesse would be subject to the Food Labelling Regulations 1984. The regulations require a precise product description to ensure that the purchaser is fully informed about the true nature of the food, and can distinguish between similar foods. The presence of Simplesse would also need to be indicated in the list of ingredients.

In addition, under section 6 of the Food Act 1984, the labelling should not be false or misleading.

Olestra

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food and the novel food panel of the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy, to report on the product Olestra; whether the nutritional implications of the product are being considered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: Before giving its advice to Ministers, the Food Advisory Committee has sought advice on the safety and nutritional implications of Olestra from the two expert committees referred to by the hon. Member. More information has been sought from the company concerned and the committees' advice is not likely to be available in the near future. Food additive regulations would have to be amended before Olestra could be used in food in the United Kingdom.

Fishing Industry

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is yet able to announce the outcome of his recent consultations with the fishing industry about changes in the licence transfer rules to permit the aggregation of fishing vessel capacity.

Mr. Curry: Yes. Fisheries Ministers have carefully considered the industry's reactions to the consultation document which was issued last November. In the light of the views we received, we have decided to introduce capacity aggregation arrangements, but, in response to a number of useful comments and suggestions, we are making some important changes from the proposals which were outlined in our consultation document.

We have decided that we should introduce arrangements which allow fishermen to transfer the licences from more than one vessel to a larger vessel. A fisherman will also be allowed to aggregate more than one licence on to an existing licensed vessel. This would enable him, for example, to lengthen or re-engine his vessel. These aggregation arrangements will be subject to the rule that the capacity of the newly licensed vessel must not be more than 90 per cent. of the aggregate capacity of the previously licensed vessels as measured by a formula which takes account of both vessel size and engine power. As envisaged in our consultation document, it will be possible to aggregate only licences of similar type.

We are also changing the rules for the transfer of licences from one vessel to another. We are continuing the current provision which permits such transfers as long as neither the tonnage nor the horsepower of the newly licensed vessel exceeds that of the previous licensed vessels. However, to provide some improved flexibility, fishermen will be allowed to transfer licences from one vessel to another larger or more powerful vessel provided the capacity of the new licensed vessel is no more than 90 per cent. of the capacity of the previously licensed vessel as measured by the formula. The present restrictions on transfers between length bands will be removed.

In the light of a number of representations, we have also decided to extend licensing to commercial fishing for all species by United Kingdom vessels over 10 m in all waters round the United Kingdom, although the exemption from licensing for mackerel fishing by hand-held line will continue to apply. Thie extension will not apply to salmon and sea trout which are already covered by licensing arrangements run by the National Rivers Authority. Vessels fishing other than for profit will also be excluded from the need to be licensed. A statutory instrument will be laid before the House as soon as possible after the Easter recess. Subject to parliamentary approval, the new licensing order will take effect in early May. The new arrangements for capacity aggregation and licence transfers will take effect from the same date.

With the introduction of these new arrangements, it is necessary to clarify policy for dealing with licence transfers among freezers and pursers with pelagic licences. In future, if the pelagic licence of one or more freezers or pursers is transferred to another freezer or purser intending to fish against a producer organisation's pelagic allocation, the receiving vessel's producer organisation will receive allocations reflecting the track record or records of the licence or licences transferred. Similarly, if the pelagic licence of one or more pursers or freezers is transferred to a purser or freezer fishing or wishing to fish with an individual vessel pelagic allocation, the allocations to the receiving vessel will reflect the track record or records of the licence or licences transferred. Vessels with individual vessel allocations will in future be able to arrange for up to 70 per cent. of their allocations to be fished by other vessels in the same ownership or producer organisation which also have individual vessel allocations.

The new capacity aggregation and licence transfer rules will provide some useful extra flexibility for fishermen wishing to restructure their businesses. We will be keeping under close review the operation of these arrangements and particularly the impact of the new capacity formula and the new provision for capacity aggregation.

We are also preparing another consultation paper about further liberalisation in our licensing and management arrangements which would allow fishermen to acquire increased fishing possibilities without necessarily increasing their fishing capacity. We have called these arrangements entitlement aggregation. We intend to circulate this paper for the industry's comments by the middle of May and will hope to receive the industry's views by the end of June. In the light of the industry's reactions we will consider how to take forward the issues raised, and this could include pilot schemes.

ENERGY

Offshore Oil Platforms

Mr. Doran: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) in respect of the Auk production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(2) in respect of the Central Cormorant production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(3) in respect of the Hutton production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation;

(4) in respect of the Montrose production platform, how many times this has been inspected by the appropriate certifying authority in the last five years; what were the dates of inspection; what are the dates of inspection by his Department's inspectors in the same period; what was the result of these inspections; what regulations and guidance notes were in force at the time of construction of the installation; whether any exemption was applied for or granted to these provisions; whether the facilities on the installation comply with all current regulations and guidance notes; what is the number of injuries, including fatalities, occurring on the installation since it was positioned; how many breaches of regulations or Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974 provisions have been reported to him; how many he has passed to the appropriate prosecution authority for action; and what is his latest estimate of the life of the installation.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on Monday 2 April 1990 at columns 406-11 about the offshore safety regime.

The most recent inspection of the Auk platform took place in May 1989, of Cormorant A in October 1989, of North Cormorant in February 1990, of Hutton in July 1989, of North West Hutton in November 1989, and of Montrose in January 1990. Central Cormorant is an underwater manifold centre linked to Cormorant A. The dates on which these platforms were installed are as follows:

Platform	Installation Date
Auk	July 1974
Cormorant A	May 1978
North Cormorant	April 1981
Hutton	September 1984
North West Hutton	September 1981
Montrose	August 1975

Source:
Development of the Oil and Gas Resources of the United Kingdom, Department of Energy 1989.

There has been one fatality on these platforms during the past five years; this occurred on Cormorant A in April 1989. My Department investigates all fatal accidents.

Over the same period, there has been one conviction for breach of United Kingdom safety legislation on these platforms following investigations by my inspectors. This involved Santa Fe UK Ltd. on which a penalty of £250 was imposed on 6 July 1988 following an incident on the Montrose platform.

Non-fossil Fuel Obligation

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many non-fossil fuel obligation projects he expects to accept; and what will be the criteria used in assessing the project for acceptance in the obligation.

Mr. Baldry: In setting the level of the non-fossil fuel obligation to be placed on the public electricity suppliers in respect of renewables-sourced electricity generating capacity, my right hon. Friend will have regard to the amount of capacity that could be secured through projects that are ready to sign contracts with the PESs. However, the arrangements that the public electricity suppliers make in order to meet their respective obligations are a matter for the suppliers themselves.

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy how many projects and for what capacity his Department expects to apply for inclusion in the non-fossil fuel obligation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The public electricity suppliers have received applications from over 300 renewables-sourced electricity generating projects, representing between 1 and 2 GW of capacity, for contracting within the non-fossil fuel obligation. These are now being processed by the PESs, and my right hon. Friend proposes to make an order in the early summer to reflect the amount of capacity that would be secured though those projects that are ready to sign contracts.

Dr. Michael Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is the intended duration of contracts for purchased wind power under the renewable energy tranche of the non-fossil fuel quota; and whether such contracts will be renewable under similar terms at the expiry of that period.

Mr. Baldry: The first order setting the level of the non-fossil fuel obligation in respect of renewables-sourced electricity generating capacity will cover the period from 1990 until 1998. The arrangements that the public electricity suppliers make in order to meet their respective obligations are a matter for the suppliers themselves. In deciding what terms to offer to renewables-sourced generators after 1998 the suppliers will wish to take account of the extent of any non-fossil fuel obligation beyond 1998. The Government expect to take decisions on this in 1994.

Low-sulphur Coal

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Easington (Mr. Cummings) of 26 March, Official Report, column 85, on low-sulphur coal imports, what methodology he has employed to calculate that the United Kingdom will comply in full with the European Community large combustion plants directive.

Mr. Baldry: The means by which the Government intend to ensure that the United Kingdom complies with the EC large combustion plants directive were set out in a consultation paper published by the Department of the Environment last August. A copy of this paper is in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Power Stations

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what recent assessment he has made of the effectiveness of evacuation plans from the neighbouring locale in the event of a serious incident at either (a) Heysham or (b) Hartlepool nuclear power station; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The effectiveness of evacuation plans for the neighbouring population of nuclear power stations is regularly tested in exercises. Exercise participants, which include the police, local authorities and the emergency services, help assess these exercises with a view to identifying possible improvements.

Electricity Licences

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what licences have been granted under section 6 of the Electricity Act 1989 authorising the generation, transmission or supply of electricity.

Mr. Wakeham: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have now issued licences to all those requiring licences from commencement of the new regime: principally, but not solely, the successor companies of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales and Scotland. Copies of those licences will be placed in the Libraries of each House. They are substantially the same as the model licences published on 12 February and 22 March.

These and future licences will also be available for inspection and copying at the offices of the Office of Electricity Regulation.

EMPLOYMENT

National Minimum Wage

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answer of 2 February, Official Report, column 375, to the hon. Member for Stretford, on what date work on estimating the effect of a national minimum wage first began; and when it was completed.

Mr. Howard: In recent years my Department has considered the effect of minimum wages on a number of occasions. Work estimating the effect of a national minimum wage in the context of the social charter started in early October 1989. After consultation between officials, both within and outside my Department, the work was completed towards the end of January 1990, and a note explaining the method used was placed in the Library on 2 February.

Steel Foundries

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of skill shortages in the 1990s among those working in the steel foundry and casting industry; and what action he is taking to provide skills such as pattern making.

Mr. Nicholls: The statutory engineering industry training board currently has responsibility for assessing future skill needs in the steel foundry and casting industry. There are indications that skill shortages are developing in this sector. The Government look to the employers in the industry to work together to solve such skill shortages.

Wages Councils

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to increase the staffing of the wages councils.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Council of Ministers

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he last met his counterparts in the Council of Ministers; and what was discussed.

Mr. Howard: I last met my European Community counterparts at an informal meeting of EC Labour and Social Affairs Ministers in Dublin on 1 and 2 March. Our discussions covered action to assist the long-term unemployed, and training assistance for eastern Europe.

At the meeting I secured a commitment from the EC Commission to make regular reports to the Council of Ministers on member states' records in implementing European legislation.

Youth Training Scheme

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if unemployed young people over 18 years who (a) refuse to participate in a youth training scheme or (b) leave a youth training scheme early without good cause, will be subject to the benefit sanctions which apply to approved training schemes.

Mr. Eggar: The youth training scheme (YTS) is the only training scheme approved by the Secretary of State for Employment for the purposes of social security legislation. Under that legislation a young person over the age of 18 who is offered a place on the YTS and without good cause refuses or fails to apply for or accept that place, or voluntarily leaves YTS, can be subject to the unemployment benefit sanctions.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will give the estimated expenditure on YTS for 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. Nicholls: Planned expenditure on youth training, as set out in "The Government's Expenditure Plans 1990-91 to 1992-93", Cm 1006, is £1,010 million in 1989-90, £907 million in 1990-91 and £808 million in 1991-92.

Training and enterprise councils and local enterprise companies in Scotland whose bids to run training credit pilots are accepted will have additional funds available for their training credit pilots. These will involve a transfer of the appropriate proportion of relevant elements from the revenue support grant, and additional sums of £12 million in 1991-92 and £25 million in subsequent years will be made available.

Disciplinary and Grievance Procedures

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what requirements will be placed on youth training and employment training providers by TECs and LECs in respect of disciplinary and grievance procedures for non-employed trainees, what will be the role of the regional office of the Training Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: When TECs and LECs take over the delivery of training programmes they will be required to determine and establish the grievance and disciplinary procedures applying to non-employed trainees. It will be the role of the Training Agency to establish effective contractual arrangements with TECs and LECs, including the establishment of grievance and disciplinary procedures.

Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what guidance he will issue on how youth training and employment training non-employed trainees will have any disciplinary and grievance procedures explained to them during their period of induction and on the role of trade unions or other representatives in taking up individual cases; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: Under existing guidance, providers of youth training and employment training are required to have a written code of practice setting out the disciplinary and grievance procedures for trainees. These procedures, together with any relevant agreements with trade unions, should be explained to trainees during the induction process.

After exhaustion of normal local procedures, trainees may refer their grievances to officials of the Training Agency and also, in the case of YT trainees, to the careers service.

Work Permits

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications for work permits remained unsettled with his Department at the latest available date.

Mr. Eggar: The number of applications for work permits under consideration at 30 March 1990 was 3,945.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many work permits were issued to foreign nationals in each of the past two years; in what main areas of work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The total number of work permits granted in 1988 and 1989 for overseas nationals to work in Great Britain were 25,973 and 29,730 respectively. The main areas of work for which permits were granted were:

Occupational group	1988	1989
Performers	11,705	12,107
Companies secretaries, accountants	2,999	4,877
Directors and general managers	2,319	2,059
Personnel and management specialists[1]	1,770	1,279
Engineering researchers, designers and consultants[1]	1,086	1,695
Natural science researchers and consultants	981	1,155
Teachers and instructors[1]	806	840
Cooks and waiters[1]	779	1,104
Health diagnosing and treating occupations[1]	685	973
Sportspersons[2]	647	—
Marketing and public relations specialists[2]	—	629

[1] Ranking changed in 1989.

[2] Appeared in top ten for one year only.

Of these, 3,790 and 4,228 work permits were granted in 1988 and 1989 under the training and work experience scheme.

Training

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the total sum to be expended by his Department on the finance of training in the current year; and by what percentage this has changed in real terms over the past five years.

Mr. Nicholls: Records are kept on the basis of the standard financial year for Government expenditure, which runs from 1 April to 31 March.

The total estimated expenditure on training, by the Training Agency, in 1990-91, is £2,693,000.

There is a reduction in the estimated provision for 1990-91 against forecast outturn for 1989-90, both in cash terms and constant 1990-91 prices. This is due to reduced expenditure on youth training, reflecting demographic changes, and savings accruing from the transfer of the operating costs of the Skills Training Agency to the private sector.

The total spent by the Training Agency, and its predecessors, the Training Commission and the Manpower Services Commission, for the years 1985-86 to 1988-89, and the forecast outturn for 1989-90, at constant 1990-91 prices, and the percentage year-on-year changes are as follows:

Year	£	Per cent.
1985-86	1,648,500
1986-87	1,830,700	+11·1
1987-88	1,945,400	+6·3
1988-89	2,328,800	+19·7
1989-90	2,840,400	+22·0
1990-91	2,693,000	−5·2

Prices were calculated by use of the GDP deflator index.

The figures are inclusive of the following programmes:

Youth Training Scheme
Employment Training
Technical and Vocational Education Initiative
Non Advanced Further Education
Business Growth Training
Skills Training Agency
Adult Training
Scientific and Technical Equipment in Schools and all related administration costs net of receipts.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the latest level of unemployment for (a) England and (b) Cornwall.

Mr. Nicholls: In February 1990 the unadjusted number of unemployed claimants was 1,272,230 in England and 14,678 in Cornwall and Isles of Scilly.

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes he intends to make to the compilation and publication of labour market statistics and other information following the introduction of training and enterprise councils.

Mr. Nicholls: None.

Industrial Action

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the total number of working days lost due to industrial action in (a) January and February 1979, (b) 1988 and (c) 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The total number of working days lost as a result of industrial action in January and February 1979 was 5·4 million. There were 3·7 million days lost in the whole of 1988 and it is provisionally estimated that 4·1 million days were lost in 1989.

Health and Safety

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) if he will estimate the additional resources which will be needed by local authorities to enforce the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1989;

(2) whether he will allocate additional funds to local authorities in whose areas major pop concerts are held, to enable them to implement the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: It is for local authorities to determine the resources they need to enforce the Health and Safety at Work etc. Act 1974. The local authority associations agreed to local authorities undertaking additional responsibilities, including health and safety in entertainment, under the Health and Safety (Enforcing Authority) Regulations 1989, without extra resources, but acknowledged that local authorities would need to have effective priority planning systems to ensure that they address the higher-risk activities.

Easington Colliery (Flooding)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will call for a report from Her Majesty's chief inspector of mines on the flooding of the low main seam at Easington colliery.

Mr. Nicholls: No. The Health and Safety Executive has inspected the flood site and will continue to monitor the situation.

Disabled People

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the average annual net cost to the Treasury of (a) a disabled person supported in the sheltered placement scheme and (b) a disabled person supported in a sheltered workshop or Remploy factory.

Mr. Eggar: The most recent estimates made by my Department, which relate to 1986-87, are:

Sheltered placement scheme	260
Sheltered workshops	2,620
Remploy	2,630

The basis for these estimates, which depend upon a number of assumptions, is described in the Department of Employment research paper No. 69.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for each training and enterprise council established, how many board members have (a) small business experience, (b) hotel and catering experience and (c) tourism, leisure and related industry experience, excluding (b); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) will include lists of their board members in their corporate plans. Private sector board members should broadly reflect the mix of commerce and industry in their area and should include executives with first-hand experience of running small businesses as well as major employers. In addition, TECs will need to demonstrate that they command support in the business community across the whole area which they cover.

Skill Centres

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many offers for the skill centres included a request that the Government should provide money to take over the skill centres; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Skills Training Agency (STA) was offered for sale by private tender. Details of individual offers received are commercially confidential. It was for individual bidders to decide whether to make allowances in their offers in respect of particular expenditures which they envisaged if their bids were successful.

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the offers received for the skill centres, give the reason for rejection, where applicable in each case; and state who made the evaluation of the offers.

Mr. Eggar: The Skills Training Agency (STA) was offered for sale by private tender. Details of individual offers received are commercially confidential. The Government's sale advisers, Deloitte Corporate Finance, assessed all offers against the Government's six objectives for the sale (a copy of which was placed in the Vote Office on 13 February 1990). Deloittes, in conjunction with my Department's other advisers, evaluated all the offers and made recommendations to my Department.

Correspondence (MEPs)

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many communications he has received from Members of the European Parliament since 18 June 1989 that concern local or United Kingdom matters; and if he will make it his practice where such matters are involved to provide the hon. Member for the local constituency with a copy of the correspondence and the reply for information.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 4 April 1990]: I have received a total of 40 communications since 18 June 1989, 29 of which dealt with local matters and the remaining 11 with national matters.

When a Member of the European Parliament writes about a matter which is of purely local interest, my reply would suggest that the MEP should refer the matter to the hon. Member for the constituency concerned. Such replies would normally be copied to the hon. Member concerned only if the MEP had copied his own letter in this way.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the maximum payment of community charge, including community water charge, payable by a single pensioner and a pensioner couple on a basic retirement income in Scotland in 1989-90 and 1990-91 for each local authority; and if he will express each sum payable as a percentage of the total community charge in that area.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply.

Single pensioners and pensioner couples in receipt of only basic state retirement pension (currently £43·60 a week plus £26·20 a week for a dependent partner) with no other source of income and savings of £3,000 or less are entitled to the maximum community charge rebate of 80 per cent. of the community charge for the area. This excludes community water charges, which are not rebated.

The information requested is in the tables.

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many pensioners have been refused community charge rebate in Scotland because of the level of their savings.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I have been asked to reply. The information requested is not available.

Travellers

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many proposals from each of the district and islands councils to provide sites for travelling people he has received to date; how many he has accepted from each district and islands council and how many he has rejected, and on what grounds he rejected them, from each district and islands council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Twenty-three official traveller sites have been provided to date and building work on a further three permanent sites is expected to be completed shortly. In addition 16 locations identified by local authorities are currently at various stages of consideration. Three sites have been refused planning permission following public local inquiries, in the district councils of Dundee, Stirling and Perth and Kinross. More detailed information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will consider legislation to compel local authorities to meet their pitch targets for official sites for travelling people in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if it remains official policy that permanent sites should facilitate the movement of travelling families; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government are continuing their long-established policy of encouraging the provision of a network of properly equipped sites for travelling people throughout Scotland. The policy is backed by the availability of 100 per cent. capital grant towards the development costs of the sites. A full network of official sites should help to make it easier for travelling families to move legally from area to area.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what formula was used to determine how many official sites should be provided for travelling people in Scotland, as recommended by his advisory committee, SDD circular No. 5/1989, appendix C.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The advisory committee held extensive consultations with individual local authorities to assess traveller site requirements throughout Scotland and its recommendations form the basis of the pitch targets set.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on instances where travellers have been encouraged by local authorities to provide their own site, as recommended in the third report of his advisory committee on travelling people.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: No information is held centrally on the extent to which local authorities have encouraged provision of travellers' sites by travellers.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest estimate for the number of travelling people in Scotland; who provides this estimate; how it is updated; and what information about travelling families will be sought within the 1991 census.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest estimate, based on information from local authorities, suggests that there are about 3,000 travellers in Scotland, in 750 families. Information on number is reviewed by the Secretary of State's advisory committee on Scotland's travelling people in the course of its regular contacts with local authorities. Travelling families will be expected to provide the same information as anyone else in the 1991 census. No special information about travelling people will be sought.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the latest target set, and by which date this target should be met, for (a) the total recommended number of official sites for travelling people in Scotland and (b) the recommended number of official sites for travelling people for each of the district and islands councils.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The pitch target set for each district council is listed in the table. No specific date has been set for the achievement of these targets, but local authorities are encouraged to meet them as soon as possible.

There is no identified demand for travellers' sites in the areas of the islands councils.

Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which of the district and islands councils have met their recommended pitch target for their provision of official sites for travelling people in their area to the latest available date.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: At 31 March 1990 the local authorities which have met their recommended pitch target are listed in the table:

A9 Alness-Tain

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the current anticipated start date for improvement of the A9 Alness-Tain; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are two remaining sections to be upgraded on the A9 between Alness and Tain. The sections are between Broomhill and Logie Easter and between Logie Easter and Garrick bridge. The necessary preparatory work and statutory procedures are planned to be completed by September 1991 and September 1993 respectively. Actual start dates for schemes are decided annually for the year ahead, in the light of the relative priority of the competing schemes and of the available financial resources.

Maternity Services, Moray

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he has yet received the option appraisal document relating to maternity, obstetric and gynaecological services in Moray; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what official consultations he has held in the past three months with (a) Grampian health board and (b) Moray health council in connection with the development of maternity services in Moray;

(3) what time scale he envisages for (a) improvement of existing maternity services in Moray and (b) the establishment of enhanced maternity services in Moray;

(4) when he anticipates making a public pronouncement on the future development of maternity services in Moray.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Grampian health board's option appraisal submission has been received and, in view of the scale of investment required for the preferred option, it is being given detailed and careful consideration.

I have not met either the Grampian health board or Moray local health council within the last three months.

Grampian health board has already improved maternity services in west Grampian and I understand that agreement has also been reached on the transfer of obstetric, gynaecological and paediatric services for patients west of the Spey to Highland health board.

Moray

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to visit Moray constituency.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Neither my right hon. and learned Friend nor I have any plans at present for a ministerial visit to Moray constituency. However, as chairman of the Conservatives in Scotland I will be addressing a public meeting in Moray constituency on 10 April 1990.

Scottish Office (Staffing)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the full complement of staff employed by the Scottish Office in each of its Departments, and what are the projections for number of employees in each of the next three years.

Mr. Rifkind: There is no fixed complement for the Scottish Office, but at 1 March 1990 the number of staff employed in the Scottish Office (including the Scottish prison service) was 10,212. Details are as follows:

Department	Number of staff
Department of Agriculture and Fisheries for Scotland	1,474·5
Scottish Development Department	1,289·5
Scottish Education Department	552·0
Scottish Home and Health Department	876·5
Industry Department for Scotland	384·5
Central Services	1,700·0
Scottish Prison Service	3,935·0
Total	10,212·0

Estimates of the number of staff who could be employed within the relevant running cost provision are contained in tables 15.11.3 and 15.7.12 of the commentary on the Scottish public expenditure programmes to 1993, a copy of which is in the Library.

Registers of Scotland

Mr. Allan Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his plans to establish the Department of the Registers of Scotland as a "next steps" agency.

Mr. Rifkind: I informed the House on 11 January that the Department of the Registers of Scotland was to be established as the first "next steps" agency from within my sphere of responsibility on 1 April. I shall preside at a launch ceremony on 6 April.

Over the next three years I have set the agency a target of reducing the turnround times on its two principal categories of work as follows:

> for recording writs on the Sasines Register, a reduction from 30 to 17 weeks;
> for registration of dealings on the Land Register, a reduction from 35 to 19 weeks.

The agency's long-term aim will be to achieve turnround times of eight weeks for both registers.

During the coming year, the Keeper will be presenting a phased programme for the extension of the Land Register to the remaining two thirds of Scotland.

In addition, I have set the agency a target of achieving a reduction in unit costs of at least 5 per cent. in real terms for each of its main categories of work in each of the three years from 1990-91 to 1992-93.

I am establishing an advisory board to give me a view on the range and quality of the agency's services and on its priorities. The membership will represent the main users of the agency's services.

The Keeper of the Registers of Scotland as the agency's chief executive, will be directly accountable to me for the agency's achievements.

I have placed a copy of the agency's framework document and the accompanying press release in the Libraries of both Houses. This latter document contains details of the target turnround times I have set for the main activities of the agency over its first three years.

Health Service Staff

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the total staff pay bills for speech therapy, physiotherapy, occupational therapy, clinical psychology and pharmacy, for 1986-87, 1987-88, 1988-89, and 1989-90; and if he will provide the latest figures on staff pay bills for speech therapy in each area health authority.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 27 March 1990]: Information on total staff pay bills is not available centrally before 1988-89 nor at health board level. The figures for 1988-89 and estimated figures for 1989-90 based on returns for the first three quarters are shown in the table.

Total annual gross pay by staff group: Scotland

£ million

Staff group	1988-89	1989-90[1]
Speech therapy	2·9	3·8
Physiotherapy	13·8	15·7
Occupational therapy	5·9	7·1
Clinical psychology	3·0	3·5
Pharmacy	6·9	8·0

[1] Estimate.

Anthony Cavendish

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total cost to the Crown of the proceedings in relation to Anthony Cavendish.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 3 April 1990]: My right hon. and learned Friend does not yet know the total cost to the Crown of the legal action The Lord Advocate v The Scotsman Publications and Others relating to the book "Inside Intelligence". These costs still require to be finally determined.

Skiing Developments

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many representations he has received in relation to that portion of the Highland regional council structure plan relating to skiing development at Lurcher's gulley and in the northern corries of the Cairngorms; how many of these representations were opposed to such development; how many were in favour; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Proposals for the extension of skiing into Lurcher's gully in the Cairngorms feature in Highland regional council's structure plan review which was formally submitted to my right hon. and learned Friend for his approval on 19 January. The period during which objections could be made ended on 2 March, by which time 7,120 letters objecting to the proposals had been received. A further 135 letters had been received expressing support for the proposals. My right hon. and learned Friend is considering the council's proposals and the representations received and will announce his decision in due course.

DEFENCE

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether there have been any recent British nuclear weapons tests or United States tests carried out on behalf of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The last United Kingdom nuclear test was, as my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement informed the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) on 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 820, conducted at the Nevada test site on 8 December 1989.

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he has any further information regarding recent joint United Kingdom/United States nuclear warhead tests in the United States.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes. Pursuant to the answer of my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Dr. Thomas) of 14 December 1989, Official Report, column 820, I can now say that on 16 December, some eight days after the test, a minor seepage of radioactive gas began in the vicinity of the test site. The seepage, which lasted for about three weeks, involved barely detectable levels of radioactivity and posed no health or environmental hazard on or off the site. Very low-level radioactive seepage following such tests is not unusual.

Low Flying

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Don Valley on 7 March, Official Report, column 709, what height restrictions and operational radius are in effect for low-flying military jet aircraft at the aerodrome at Netherthorpe.

Mr. Neubert: As a licensed aerodrome, Netherthorpe is allocated, under the provisions of the Air Navigation Order, an aerodrome traffic zone of 2 nautical miles radius to a height of 2,000 ft during its daily hours of operation. Although military aircraft are not generally bound by the Air Navigation Order, it is my Department's practice to reflect such provisions in military flying regulations, and this is the case in respect of Netherthorpe.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what changes are planned for the structure of the military low-flying system in west Yorkshire as a result of the changes to the boundaries of the Leeds-Bradford special rules airspace with effect from 3 May; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what changes are planned for the structure of the military low-flying system in the vicinity of Blackpool following the abolition of the Blackpool special rules zone with effect from 3 May; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert: Changes in regulations governing civilian air traffic in the United Kingdom are, where appropriate, reflected in the regulations governing the United Kingdom military low-flying system, and the implications, if any, of the changes to which the hon. Member refers will be considered in due course as part of the continual monitoring of the operation of the military low-flying system.

Bombs (Accidental Release)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, by date and location for the last four years to date, the occasions when a bomb has been accidently released by a Royal Air Force aircrew; and if he will show in his answer (a) the type of aircraft involved and (b) whether it was (i) a live or (ii) a dummy bomb.

Mr. Neubert: There has been one occasion since March 1986 when RAF aircrew accidentally released a weapon outside military range danger areas. This was on 2 March 1988; the aircraft was a Tornado GR1; the weapon was a practice bomb containing only a small "spotting" charge; and it was not found.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list, by date and location, for the last four years to date, the occasions when a bomb has been accidently released by the aircrew of a NATO air force over the United Kingdom; and if he will show in his answer (a) the air force involved, (b) the type of aircraft and (c) whether the bomb was (i) live or (ii) a dummy one.

Mr. Neubert: We have no record of any bombs being accidentally released over the United Kingdom by the aircrew of other NATO air forces.

Air Traffic Controllers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how many military air traffic controllers are working alongside civil air traffic controllers to date; at what locations; if he will list them by unit; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will list by year for the last five years, and by location, the number of military air traffic controllers who have worked alongside civil air traffic controllers.

Mr. Neubert: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Sea Harrier (Accident)

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the date, location and circumstances of the crash of a Sea Harrier aircraft aboard the aircraft carrier Ark Royal during February; what injuries were sustained by the pilot; what was the tail number of the aircraft; and what lessons have been learnt from the series of Sea Harrier accidents in the past year.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to my reply on 9 February 1990, at column 816. There was no such crash. All accidents which occurred during 1989 remain under official investigation.

Cruise Missiles

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what agreements have been reached at ministerial level regarding the deployment of sea-launched cruise missiles by NATO.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: NATO Ministers have agreed that, as part of the post-INF restructuring of nuclear forces, SACEUR should consider the availability of the whole spectrum of nuclear weapons, including SLCMs.

Defence Review

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his Department is currently conducting a full defence review of United Kingdom requirements and deployments.

Mr. Neubert: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence on 3 April to the hon. Member for Wansbeck (Mr. Thompson).

Soviet Nuclear Tests

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment his Department has made of the security implications for the United Kingdom of the decision by the Government of the Soviet Union to transfer testing of nuclear weapons from Semipalatinsk, Kazakhstan, to an island test site within the Arctic circle.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is none.

Soviet Aircraft (Interceptions)

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if a Soviet aircraft has even been intercepted by a Royal Air Force aircraft operating from Stornoway;

(2) how many interceptions of Soviet military aircraft were made by Royal Air Force aircraft in the United Kingdom air defence region per week, on average, during 1989.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Detailed information about interceptions of Soviet aircraft by the Royal Air Force is classified.

Stornoway Airport

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many simulated attacks on Stornoway airport are scheduled during Exercise Elder Forest 90.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress in the phase II construction work at Stornoway airport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Construction of new fuel installations at Stornoway started in 1989, and work on a new fuel jetty and pipeline began in January this year; both are due for completion in early 1991. Planning is well advanced for work on nine aircraft shelters and associated support facilities, which is expected to start at the end of this year and be completed in late 1992; some additional work on upgrading elements of the airfield infrastructure will be carried out in the same period.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the numbers and types of aircraft to be deployed at Stornoway airport for Exercise Elder Forest 90, the units to which these aircraft belong and the dates of their arrival at and departure from Stornoway;

(2) what are the earliest and latest times of the day when flying activity is scheduled for jet aircraft deployed at Stornoway airport for Exercise Elder Forest 90; and whether any activity outside those times will be permitted.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to deploy military aircraft to Stornoway airport during Exercise Elder Forest 90, which is scheduled from 23 to 27 April. However, a number of Tornado F3 aircraft will use the airport as a turnround base during the exercise. It is not possible to specify in advance the numbers of aircraft, the units involved, or the arrival and departure times; these will depend upon how the exercise develops. There are, however, no plans to use the airport outside the hours of 8 am to 10 pm.

Link-Miles Ltd.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts his Department has with Singer Link-Miles.

Mr. Alan Clark: The Ministry of Defence has at present 106 current headquarters contracts with Link-Miles Ltd; a further 34 have been completed and closed during the financial year 1989-90. The total value of these contracts is £175 million, of which £30 million remains to be paid. The company supplies flight, maritime and vehicle simulators, and training systems.

Hydrographic Office, Taunton

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about agency status for the Hydrographic Office at Taunton.

Mr. Tom King: On 6 April, I will be launching the Hydrographic Office as the Ministry of Defence's first defence support agency. The agency comprises the Hydrographic Office at Taunton and the associated chart depots at Portsmouth, Devonport and Rosyth naval bases. The Hydrographer of the Navy, Rear-Admiral J. A. L. Myres, has been appointed the agency's chief executive.

As I said in the House on 18 October 1989, columns 154-55, defence support agencies will be run on "next steps" lines but will remain within the defence chain of command. Such agencies complement my Department's new management strategy, under which I am to secure better value for the defence budget through closer alignment of financial accountability with line management responsibilities, and by a system of performance reviews. The establishment of the Hydrographic Office as a defence support agency is a significant landmark in this process.

The aim of the Hydrographic Office has always been, and will continue to be, to supply hydrographic, oceanographic and other such information to the Royal Navy, while also offering unclassified charts and publications to the merchant marine and other non-naval users. The professional standards which have been the hallmark of success for the Hydrographic Office for nearly two centuries will continue to be upheld. The greater freedom and flexibility now granted to the chief executive will provide him with new opportunities to build on this firm base.

Accordingly, the chief executive has been set the following key targets:

To improve the quality of service by reducing, within the year 1990-91, the time taken to promulgate all immediate dangers by radio navigation warnings from 24 to 20 hours; increasing the number of new charts and new editions by at least 5 per cent. per annum; reducing by 70 charts per annum the imperial unit charts through modernisation.

To increase the revenue from commercial sales by 10 per cent. over 5 years.

To increase productivity by an average of at least 1 per cent. per annum.

To reduce gross operating costs by £100,000 in 1990-91.

By these and other improvements in performance, to achieve an overall increase in efficiency by an average of 3·5 per cent. per annum over the years 1991-92 to 1994-95.

To develop, within 1990-91, an improved system of output measurement so that progress against this overall target can be accurately assessed.

To develop, within 1990-91, improved management information and management accounting systems.

Procurement Executive Airfields

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he will make a statement about the future of the procurement executive airfields.

Mr. Neubert: In due course.

Royal Naval Armaments Museum

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide an inventory of items in the royal naval armaments museum, Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the ownership of items in the royal naval armaments museum, Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The majority of items held in the naval ordnance collection are owned by the Ministry of Defence, but the collection does contain some exhibits which have been loaned by museums or private individuals.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the future of the royal naval armaments musuem, Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A number of options for the future of the naval ordnance museum, Gosport, are under consideration in the wider context of our disposal of the ex-royal naval armament depot at Priddy's Hard.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what talks he held with locally elected representatives prior to the issue of a letter by Ms. Jan Wildy, head of central disposal unit at the Ministry of Defence stating that further discussions with the borough of Gosport over the future of the royal naval armaments museum at Gosport are to be abandoned.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Talks on the disposal of the ex-royal naval armament depot, Priddy's Hard, Gosport, including the future of the naval ordnance museum, were held with locally elected representatives by my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) on 16 December 1987 in Portsmouth, and on 25 May 1988 in London; and by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement on 5 July 1989 in London.

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the cost of the royal naval armaments museum, Gosport in each of the last five years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Annual maintenance costs of the naval ordnance collection were:

	£K
1985-86	52·41
1986-87	53·95
1987-88	55·98
1988-89	54·83
[1]1989-90	55·95

[1] Estimated.

European Fighter Aircraft

Mr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what problems have arisen in the reaching of an agreement on the nose radar development contract for the European fighter aircraft; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he expects an agreement to be reached with his counterparts on the choice of consortium for the European fighter aircraft nose radar development contract; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: At this stage I have nothing to add to what my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I have said on 6 March, column 712, and 23 January, columns 869-72, respectively.

Duchess of Kent Military Hospital

Mr Hague: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make an announcement about the future of the Duchess of Kent military hospital at Catterick.

Mr Archie Hamilton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Perry Barr (Mr. Rooker) on 5 March 1990, Official Report, column 537.

Hunts (Licensing)

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what are the conditions of the licence held by the Borders/West Percy hunt that allows them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Otterburn;

(2) what are the conditions of the licence held by the Cambridgeshire hunt that allows them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Brampton wood;

(3) what are the conditions of the licence held by the Tynedale hunt that allows them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Ouston;

(4) what are the conditions of the licences held by the Bedale and West of York hunt that allow them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Ripon Parks and Catterick;

(5) what are the conditions of the licences held by the Wensleydale harriers that allow them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Stainton and Bellerby;

(6) what are the conditions of the licences held by the Zetland hunt that allow them to hunt on Ministry of Defence land at Feldom and Catterick;

(7) what is the cost of issuing licences to hunts to use Ministry of Defence land; and what contribution individual hunts make to this cost.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to the hon. Member.

Challenger 2 Tank

Mr. Gerald Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether Vickers Defence Systems has been notified that it has successfully completed the second of three contractual milestones for the development and demarcation of the Challenger 2 tank.

Mr. Alan Clark: No. The milestone 2 report was received from Vickers Defence Systems on 9 March and is now being assessed by my Department.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 18 April 1990

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Solicitors

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Attorney-General what advice has been given by the Lord Chancellor to judges about criticising solicitors from the bench without giving the solicitor an opportunity to be heard.

The Attorney-General: It would not be appropriate for the Lord Chancellor to issue advice to judges on a matter of this kind. However, in May 1989, the presiding judges of England and Wales issued a notice to all judges emphasising that, while the decision as to whether or not to criticise a solicitor in open court must be one for the discretion of the individual judge, there is and always has been an obligation on the judge both to give the solicitor an opportunity to be heard and to refrain from making criticism in open court until after the facts have been established.

Burglary

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Attorney-General what guidance is given to magistrates as to whether magistrates courts or Crown courts are the appropriate courts for dealing with domestic burglary.

The Attorney-General: Subject to the relevant legal provisions, the decision whether an either-way offence should be tried summarily or committed to the Crown Court is one for the discretion of the court. However, the Lord Chief Justice has set up a working party under the chairmanship of Lord Justice Farquharson to consider what guidelines might properly be given to magistrates on the committal of either-way cases, including domestic burglary, to the Crown court.

Social Security Appeals

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General what is the average time which elapses between a letter seeking leave to appeal to the Social Security Commissioners and notification of the decision of the Social Security Commissioners.

The Attorney-General: The average in 1989 was 404 days.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Attorney-General what proposals he has received to shorten delays in the appeal process through the Social Security Commissioners.

The Attorney-General: I have received none.

EMPLOYMENT

National Federation of Self Employed and Small Businesses

125. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next expects to meet the National Federation of Self Employed and Small Businesses.

126. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next expects to meet the National Federation of Self Employed and Small Businesses.

127. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when he next expects to meet the National Federation of Self Employed and Small Businesses.

Mr. Eggar: I am always prepared to see representatives of small business organisations who wish to meet with me.

Training (Staffordshire)

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the current special training needs funding made in respect of each trainee in Staffordshire; if he will identify extra training resources required by those with special training needs; and what are the proposed figures for the forthcoming year in respect of each trainee in Staffordshire for special training needs.

Mr. Eggar: The information could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Training Agency programmes allow training to be tailored to meet individual requirements, and funding depends on the nature and severity of each trainee's need. The figures for the forthcoming year are for agreement between individual training providers and the Training Agency's area office and, in future, the training and enterprise councils.

Disabled People

Mr. Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many severely disabled people have received help under the business on own account scheme in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Eggar: The information requested about the number of severely disabled people helped under the business on own account scheme for each of the last five years is given in the table:

	Number of approvals
1985-86	5
1986-87	1
1987-88	6
1988-89	8
1989-90	7

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps his Department has taken to ensure that 3 per cent. of its work force is registered disabled people.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The Employment Department group has developed a number of initiatives to attract, retain and develop more staff with disabilities, both registered and unregistered. Specific measures include guaranteed interviews for registered disabled people with the minimum educational qualifications; surveys of the needs of staff with disabilities and appropriate remedial action; new guidance for management; the improvement of outreach to organisations of and for people with disabilities; the development of arrangements for staff with severe mobility difficulties to work at home; the routine consideration of access to buildings, training and developmental opportunities and the provision in operational plans for special aids and equipment.

Careers Service

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he intends to broaden the scope of the careers service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: I have at present no plans to do so.

Earnings

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing average weekly earnings for men and women by (a) industry and (b) industrial sector for the years 1980-89.

Mr. Nicholls: The information is published in tables 79 to 82 of part C of the annual new earnings survey reports for full-time male and female adult employees, and in table 177 of part F for part-time female adult employees. Equivalent figures for part-time males are not available. Copies of the reports are in the Library.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will publish a table showing the numbers of men, the numbers of women, and the percentage of the population whose average weekly earnings are (a) £5, (b) £10, (c) £15, (d) £20, (e) £25, (f) £30, (g) £35, (h) £40, (i) £45, (j) £50, (k) £55, (l) £60, and (m) £65, or more below the average weekly, by industry sector for each of the years 1980 to 1989.

Mr. Nicholls: The readily available information is published in tables 66 to 69 of part C of the annual new earnings survey reports for full-time male and female adult employees. Equivalent analyses for the weekly earnings of part-time employees are not available; the distribution of the hourly earnings of part-time adult women is published in table 172 of part F. Copies of the reports are in the Library.

YTS

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will set out the latest available figures for (a) fatal and (b) serious injuries among YTS trainees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholls: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms. Short) Official Report, 26 March 1990, column 58.

THE ARTS

Glory of the Garden Programme

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister for the Arts what further progress he has made with the Glory of the Garden programme.

Mr. Luce: I have recently announced major changes in the structure of arts funding in the English regions. These will build on the changes begun in the Arts Council's Glory of the Garden initiative and will include a further substantial shift in grant-giving responsibilities from the Arts Council to the regions.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

China

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities regarding the raid on the home and subsequent detention of Pastor Xiangao of Canton;

(2) what representations he has made to the Chinese authorities regarding the persecution of the Church there; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maude: Our inquiries indicate that Pastor Lin Xiangao has by now been released. We and our EC partners have again recently expressed our concern to the Chinese Government about freedom of religion and the treatment of the Church in China, and specifically about the arrest of certain Catholic priests last year.

Casablanca

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the seizure of cargo from the vessel Casablanca at Puerto Cortes, in so far as British interests are involved; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: We understand that on 22 March at Puerto Cortes, Honduras, part of the cargo of bananas of the Netherlands-registered vessel Casablanca was removed in pursuance of an order by a Honduran court in favour of a US-owned banana exporter against a Honduran grower, and that the bananas removed had been bought for a British company for export from Honduras. Another vessel experienced similar difficulties on 30 March. Her Majesty's ambassador has expressed to the Honduran authorities our concern over the disruption of trade and our hope that any legal problems can quickly be resolved, to enable trade to resume without hindrance.

Hong Kong

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what procedures are followed when a pregnant woman in the detention camps in Hong Kong goes into labour.

Mr. Maude: All the centres have well-equipped clinics but they do not have facilities for child delivery. When a woman goes into labour an ambulance is called by the clinic staff and she is immediately transferred to a maternity home or hospital. The ambulance response times are very short.

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many posts the Chinese Government have said they would not allow Hong Kong residents with British passports to occupy.

Mr. Maude: The Basic Law provides that certain principal posts in the Hong Kong special administrative region should be restricted to Chinese nationals who are permanent residents of the special administrative region and who do not hold right of abode in any foreign country. Based upon the current establishment of the Civil Service, this would affect some 20 to 30 posts. In addition, the Basic Law places the same restrictions on members of the Executive Council and the President of the Legislative Council: it also limits the number of seats in the legislature which may be occupied by persons who are not Chinese nationals or who have the right of abode in foreign countries to 20 per cent.

Terrorism

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what definition of terrorism his Department has developed for policy purposes.

Mr. Waldegrave: We use as a general guide the definition assigned to "terrorism" in section 20 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989.

Lebanon (Hostages)

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps have been taken in the last two months by the Government to try and free the British hostages held in the Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have continued the efforts described in the answer give by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 30 January to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, Leith (Mr. Brown). The hon. Gentleman may be sure that our work to secure the release of the British hostages will continue unabated.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange a meeting with Mr. Perez de Cuellar, secretary-general of the United Nations, to press for new international measures to secure the release of British hostages held in the Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are committed to ensuring that the plight of the hostages remains high on the international agenda. We are in regular touch with Mr. Perez de Cuellar and his staff on this and other issues.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he plans an early meeting with the successor to the present Archbishop of Canterbury to discuss British hostages in the Lebanon.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are in close touch with the Archbishop of Canterbury and his staff about the British hostages in Lebanon. This will remain the case for as long as necessary.

Iraq (Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will instruct his Department to convey to the official representatives of the Arab League in London the views of Her Majesty's Government on the statement by the Arab League secretariat on 30 March supporting Iraq and criticising Her Majesty's Government regarding his statement in the House on 29 March on alleged attempts by Iraq to smuggle components for nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have explained in detail to the Arab League Secretary-General in Tunis our position on the prevention of the illegal export of capacitors from Britain.

Israel (Soviet Jews)

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy regarding the emigration of Soviet Jews to Israel, assuming the settlement of such emigrants within the borders of Israel prior to June 1967; and whether this policy has been made clear to the Arab League and to the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

Mr. Waldegrave: We warmly welcome the freedom of Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel proper and elsewhere. The Arab League and the PLO are well aware that this is our view.

Palestine (Terrorist Threats)

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department will seek the co-operation of the Palestine Liberation Organisation to investigate in order to establish whether any credence should be placed upon the threats of terrorist violence against Britain and other countries reported to have been made by the Islamic Army Front for the Liberation of Palestine on 31 March.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The PLO does not include a group of this name.

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department will seek the co-operation of the Palestine Liberation Organisation in order to establish whether any credence should be placed upon the threats of terrorist violence against Britain and other countries reported to have been made by a group close to the Palestine Hamas Organisation calling itself the Organisation of Revolutionary Action—Arab Resistance Front on 31 March.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The PLO does not include a group of this name.

Jerusalem

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether, following the statement of Mr. Yasser Arafat on 31 March, he will instruct Her Majesty's Ambassador in Tunis to ask the Palestine Liberation Organisation to specify what portions of Jerusalem should become Palestinian sovereign territory, and what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on that matter.

Mr. Waldegrave: We are opposed to all unilateral moves to prejudice the final status of Jerusalem, which remains in our view to be determined by negotiation as part of a comprehensive peace settlement.

Nepal

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representation he has made to the Nepalese authorities regarding the imprisonment of the Rev. Charles Mendies.

Mr. Sainsbury: Her Majesty's ambassador in Kathmandu raised the case specifically on 8 December 1989. We have regularly conveyed British concern about the treatment of Christians in Nepal to the Nepalese Government. My noble Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office discussed these issues during his visit to Kathmandu in late February.

Olympic Games

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support British embassies abroad are now giving to the Manchester British Olympic bid; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Sainsbury: British missions abroad have been taking every opportunity to commend Manchester's bid to International Olympic Committee members. They have encouraged and helped IOC members to visit Manchester and have afforded every assistance to Manchester's Olympic bid committee members visiting their territories.

European Council

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the criteria used in selecting the United Kingdom representative on the committee of permanent representatives to the European Council; and if he will list those who have represented the United Kingdom on COREPER since 1 January 1973.

Mr. Sainsbury: The United Kingdom's permanent representatives to the European Communities since accession in 1973 have been:

Sir Michael Palliser, 1971-75
Sir Donald Maitland, 1975-79
Sir Michael Butler, 1979-85
Sir David Hannay, 1985 to date.

All have been senior members of Her Majesty's diplomatic service with extensive experience of European Community affairs.

Argentina

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of his recent meetings with the Argentine Foreign Minister.

Mr. Sainsbury: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs had a friendly and businesslike meeting with Dr. Cavallo on 9 April. They discussed a range of bilateral issues including investment, co-operation against drug-related crime and fisheries conservation. They also signed a visa abolition agreement, which is due to enter into force on 8 June.

There was no discussion of Falklands sovereignty.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Haberdashers' Aske's City Technology College

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will give details of the amount and date of any payments so far made by his Department to the Haberdashers' Company in respect of the costs of planning for the establishment of a Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college; and what further expenses in this respect he has agreed to meet.

Mr. MacGregor: Payments of £37,732 were made to the Haberdashers' Company in February 1990, and payments of £16,982 have been authorised this month to date. I have so far agreed to pay the costs of a project director, educational consultants and legal fees in relation to the forthcoming establishment of a CTC company.

Ms. Ruddock To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he intends to accept the proposal by the Haberdashers' Company, in a letter dated 30 November 1989, that notwithstanding any future discontinuance of the proposed Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college, no obligation to repay capital grants should be imposed on the Haberdashers' CTC Company so long as the leased property in question continues to be used for educational purposes; and how this proposal accords with 'the provisions of section 105(5) of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Mr. MacGregor: The terms of the funding agreement made between myself and the Haberdashers' Aske's City Technology College Company in relation to the establishment of the Haberdashers' Aske's city technology college will be in conformity with section 105(5) of the Education Reform Act 1988.

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether the Haberdashers' CTC Company has yet been formed for the purposes of establishing a city technology college on the sites of the present Haberdashers' Aske's schools in Deptford.

Mr. MacGregor: The Haberdashers' CTC Company has not yet been formed. I expect that a company will be formed by the early summer of this year, subject to the completion of the necessary processes.

Traveller Children

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of traveller children attended (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools in the latest year for which figures have been collected: and how many children are in each category.

Mr. MacGregor: This information is not available.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what steps he is proposing to take to ensure that in the year 1990-91 all traveller children attend school.

Mr. MacGregor: It is the duty of parents to ensure that children of compulsory school age receive efficient full-time education suitable to their age, ability and aptitude and any special educational needs they may have, either by regular attendance at school or otherwise. It is for local education authorities to ensure that the parents of any children of compulsory school age in their area are fulfilling this duty.

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total amount of grant sought by education authorities from his Department towards the education of travellers' children for the year 1990-91; what were the criteria for awarding allocations; and what, in each case, was the percentage and the amount awarded against the bid.

Mr. MacGregor: Grant was sought to support expenditure of £13·8 million on the education of traveller children in 1990-91. The draft circular issued in July 1989 indicated that in the case of satisfactory bids exceeding the total grant available, priority would be given, as far as possible, to the maintenance of existing special provision. A total of 57·6 per cent. of the expenditure sought has been approved. The percentage of individual LEA bids allocated and the consequent expenditure levels are as follows:

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the total number of traveller children for whom education authorities made applications for funding from his Department in 1990-91.

Mr. MacGregor: Approximately 13,900 traveller children were identified in the applications for funding. The information received from authorities was, however, incomplete.

British Antarctic Survey

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when the decision was taken to approve the funding to the British Antarctic Survey for the construction of a hard rock airstrip at Rothera base in the Antarctic.

Mr. Jackson: Additional funds for the construction of the crushed rock airstrip at the British Antarctic Survey Rothera station were announced by my right hon. Friend on 8 November 1988 at columns 134-35. The final decision on the project was subject to the completion of a comprehensive environmental evaluation and the incorporation of agreed environmental protection clauses in any contract. The project was finally agreed by the natural environment research council in August 1989.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science whether he will make it his policy to make funds forthcoming to enable the British Antarctic Survey to remove abandoned bases and British rubbish on Deception Island by (a) allocating new funds for this purpose and (b) using part of the £22 million currently designated for the construction of a hard rock airstrip at Rothera base; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Following the public expenditure autumn statement in 1989, a total of £250,000 was made available in each of the financial years 1990-1991 and 1991-1992, with £75,000 in subsequent years to assist the British Antarctic Survey with the improvement of waste disposal and environmental management at its existing bases and to assist with the clean-up of abandoned sites, including the one on Deception Island. Some of the £11·1 million allocated for the Rothera airstrip is also being used in minimising and monitoring the environmental impact of the construction.

Displaced Persons

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science which local authorities have applied under section 210 of the Education Reform Act 1988 for grant to (a) finance existing provision for refugees or displaced persons living in camps or reception centres and (b) finance new provision; how many of (a) and (b) have received grant; and what is the amount of grant allocated to each local authority.

Mr. MacGregor: The following local authorities have applied for grant to (a) finance existing provision for refugees or displaced persons living in camps or reception centres:

Derbyshire, Richmond-upon-Thames, Surrey.

(b) finance new provision

Oxfordshire, Kirklees

Derbyshire, Richmond and Surrey also applied for grant to expand their provision.

All these authorities have received grant. Expenditure to be supported in 1990-91 is as follows:

	£000's
Derbyshire	35·2
Kirklees	26·7
Oxfordshire	15·8
Richmond	54·1
Surrey	39·0

Manchester Education Authority

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on his Department's meeting on 4 April with the deputation from Manchester education authority.

Mr. Alan Howarth: I met a delegation from the authority on 4 April. The delegation drew to my attention a number of concerns, especially the level of Manchester's annual capital guideline for 1990-91. The Department has made careful note of the points raised at the meeting and will bear them in mind in future discussions with the authority.

Voluntary Youth Organisations

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set the level of funding for 1990-91 for voluntary youth organisations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The Department has allocated £2·1 million in grant aid to 67 national voluntary youth organisations for the 1990-91 financial year, for a range of programmes of work related to this Department's priority objectives for the youth service. The organisations concerned have been informed individually of their allocations.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what was the level of expenditure by local authorities on discretionary awards to 16 to 18-year-olds in 1987-88.

Mr. Jackson: For the academic year 1987-88, local authorities in England and Wales reported expenditure of nearly £38 million on lesser-value discretionary awards made under section 2 of the 1962 Education Act (as amended) to students aged 16 to 18.

National Curriculum

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he now expects to announce the remaining subject working parties for the national curriculum; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend gave him on 15 March 1990, Official Report, column 318.

Special Needs

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the provision of funding for in-service training for teachers specialising in special needs subject areas for the years 1985-86 to 1989-90.

Mr. MacGregor: Under the local education authority training grants scheme and the in-service teacher training grants scheme which it replaced, funds have been made available in each of these years for the training of teachers in special needs areas. Under the previous scheme, the funding was intended to cover expenditure of about £1·98 million in 1985-86 and about £2·079 million in 1986-87 on training teachers in special educational needs in ordinary schools. Under the present scheme, the total amounts of expenditure eligible for support in the relevant national priority areas were as follows:

	(£000s)
1987-88
Special needs (schools)	3,500
Special needs (further education)	500
Total	4,000
1988-89
Hearing impairments	1,500
Visual impairments	600
Severe learning difficulties	2,200
Designated teachers in ordinary schools	1,240
Special needs (further education)	600
Total	6,140
1989-90
Hearing impairments	1,700
Visual impairments	900
Severe learning difficulties	2,500
Designated teachers in ordinary schools	1,400
Special needs (further education)	600
Total	7,100

Allergy Research

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science what research projects financed by the Medical Research Council are being carried out into allergies.

Mr. Jackson: The latest information available from the medical research council (MRC) indicates that in 1988-89 total expenditure on projects wholly or partly related to allergies was about £1 million. A full list of such projects funded in 1989-90 will be available from the MRC in July.

Bradford Community College

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will take steps to make extra funds immediately available to Bradford community college to obviate reductions in the numbers of students enrolled at the college and redundancies of teaching staff; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jackson: Bradford's education component of its standard spending assessment (SSA) for 1990-91 is £179·7 million. Decisions about service budgets and the allocation of resources are a matter for the authority.

Schools Budgets

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) if he has any proposals to ensure that schools operating local management of schools receive a very high proportion of the schools' budget; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to devolve the whole of the schools' budget to eligible schools operating under local management of schools; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what measures are in place on the proportion that local education authorities can retain of schools' budgets; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what powers he has to ensure that a high proportion of the schools' budget is administered by the schools themselves.

Mrs. Rumbold: Statutory guidance on local management of schools states that local education authorities are expected to delegate to governors responsibility for the large majority of their expenditure on schools. Most of the resources held back at the discretion of local education authorities are subject to an initial overall ceiling of 10 per cent. of total spending, with a target of reducing this proportion to 7 per cent. within three years. We will review in the light of experience the limit on discretionary retention of resources, including the items of spending subject to this limit.

Education Support Grant, Liverpool

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how much money was available to Liverpool local authorities in education support grants in each of the last three years, and how much of the funding was taken up by Liverpool city council in each of those years.

Mr. MacGregor: The amounts of grant allocated to the local education authorities in the Liverpool area under the education support grants programmes for the last three years were as follows:

	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90
Knowsley	373·7	541·0	1,031·8
Liverpool	679·4	941·5	855·3
St. Helens	321·0	455·6	659·7
Sefton	154·6	456·5	519·8
Wirral	445·5	521·6	630·3

The amount of grant claimed by Liverpool LEA in 1987-88 was £655,300 and in 1988-89 £896,300, representing a take-up of 96 per cent. and 95 per cent. respectively of the LEA's approved allocations in those years. Figures for 1989-90 are not yet available, since a final claim for the last quarter of the financial year has not yet been submitted.

ENERGY

Gas Tariffs

Mr. Rost: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will amend the Gas Act 1986 to reduce the 25,000 therm threshold for tariff control.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Government's views on the 25,000 therm boundary is included in its response to the recommendations of the second report of the Energy Select Committee on industrial gas prices.

Electricity Bills

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) what assessment has been made of the effect of offering rebates on domestic electricity bills to prospective shareholders of the distribution companies on (a) the number of applications for shares, (b) the unit price of electricity for non-shareholder consumers and (c) electricity conservation;

(2) what proposals he has for offering rebates on domestic electricity bills to the prospective or actual shareholders of the electricity distribution companies; and if he will make a statement;

(3) whether any rebate he proposes for shareholders, prospective or actual, of the electricity distribution companies on their bills will apply to business customers (a) under 100,000 kw, (b) under 1 mw, (c) over 1 mw and (d) over 50 mw.

Mr. Baldry: No decisions have yet been taken on any incentives that may be available to shareholders and customers of the electricity distribution companies.

Electricity

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Devon, North (Mr. Speller) of 2 april, Official Report, column 411, he will make it his policy to require the National Grid Company to purchase the renewables-sourced energy on behalf of public electricity suppliers in England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date assessment of the amount of renewables-sourced energy purchased by the public electricity suppliers in England and Wales in (a) 1995, (b) 2000 and (c) 2005.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The amount of renewables-sourcesd electricity purchased by the public electricity suppliers during the lifetime of the non-fossil fuel obligation will be influenced by the level of the obligation, and applications to contract within the first NFFO renewables order are now being processed by the suppliers in consultation with my Department. A series of further tranches will be brought forward during the 1990s; these are currently expected to total some 600 mw. The amount of renewables-sourced electricity puchased outside the obligation is a commercial matter for the suppliers themselves.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date assessment of the impact of the European Commission decision of 28 March approving the Government's non-fossil fuel obligation for the period 1990 to 1998 on the amount of renewables-sourced energy purchased by the public electricity suppliers of England and Wales in the year 2000.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Commission's decision to authorise aid in relation to United Kingdom nuclear electricity will mean that the amount of renewables-sourced electricity generating capacity will be significantly higher throughout the 1990s than if the non-fossil fuel obligation had not existed.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what is his most up-to-date assessment of the level of renewables-sourced energy purchased by the public electricity suppliers of England and Wales in the year 2000 and 2005 coming from (a) methane gas recovery from landfill, (b) refuse incineration, (c) small-scale hydro and (d) wind power.

Mr. Peter Morrison: Renewables technologies have the potential to make a substantial contribution to electricity generating capacity. My Department's most recent assessment of the extent of this contribution is set out in Energy Paper No. 55, copies of which are in the Libraries of both Houses.

Nuclear Installations (Safety Reviews)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to receive the final reports of the current long-term safety reviews on (a) Dungeness A, (b) Hinkley Point A and (c) Trawsfynydd.

Mr. Baldry: I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate is currently undertaking detailed assessment of the long-term safety reviews prepared by the licensee at Dungeness A, Hinkley Point A, and Trawsfynydd. The inspectorate's findings will be published over the next nine to 18 months.

Radioactive Gas Emissions, Sellafield

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment has been made of the extent to which the operation of the Pond 5 fuel-handling plant and the actions of staff at Sellafield have met health and safety requirements on each occasion that there has been an emission of radioactive gas from the pond arising from chemical reactions or works being carried out in each year since 1985.

Mr. Baldry: I understand that during the operation of this plant there has been no incident which has led to significant emissions of radioactive gas.

Energy Technology Reports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the main conclusions of the Energy Technology Support Unit report on environmental and economic implications of small scale CHP; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The report, the third in the energy and environment paper series by the Department's chief scientist's group at ETSU, examines the possible environmental and economic potential of small-scale combined heat and power (CHP) in Britain, and considers the realistic contribution that it might make to the abatement of greenhouse gases, particularly carbon dioxide. The broad conclusions of the report are that, in the longer term, there is a realistic prospect that small-scale CHP could provide electricity equivalent to about 10 per cent. of current demand, and that this would cut United Kingdom carbon dioxide emissions by 4 per cent.

I have arranged for copies of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what were the main conclusions of the Energy Technology Support Unit report on the abatement of gaseous emissions by energy-efficient lighting; and if he will place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The report from the Department's chief scientist's group at ETSU, assessed the scope for using existing technologies to improve the energy efficiency of lighting in the United Kingdom. The broad conclusions are that, using cost effective measures, 8 per cent. of United Kingdom electricity demand could be saved; that the minimum potential for reduction in emissions of carbon dioxide (CO_2) was calculated to be equivalent to 2 per cent. of current United Kingdom CO_2 emissions; and that, including reductions in other gases such as methane, total emissions of greenhouse gases would be reduced by 1·4 per cent.

I have arranged for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Business Investment

109. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross domestic product was accounted for by business investment in 1989.

115. Mr. Mans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross domestic product was accounted for by business investment in 1989.

122. Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of gross domestic product was accounted for by business investment in 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Business investment accounted for 13 per cent. of gross domestic product at current market prices in 1989.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the level of business investment during 1989 and 1988.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Business investment reached £56 billion in 1989, at constant 1985 prices, up from £51·5 billion in 1988. Between 1986 and 1989 business investment grew by over 40 per cent. in volume terms.

European Monetary System

110. Mr. Fearn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from British industry regarding British entry into the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ryder: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations.

Interest Rates

111. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effect of high interest rates on businesses.

Mr. Ryder: Interest rates have been set to put downward pressure on inflation, which is the greatest threat to the future prosperity of business.

Manufacturing Investment

113. Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing investment in (a) 1989 and (b) 1982.

121. Mr. Stevens: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing investment in (a) 1989 and (b) 1982.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Estimates of manufacturing investment for 1989 and 1982 are shown at table I of the GDP press notice (CSO(90)39) released on 16 March. Copies of the notice are available from the House of Commons Library.

Manufacturing Industry (Labour Costs)

114. Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the unit labour costs for United Kingdom manufacturing industry for the last three years.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The figures for unit labour costs for the United Kingdom manufacturing industries are given in the table.

Year	Manufacturing Unit Labour costs 1985=100	Percentage Changes
1986	104·6
1987	105·2	0·6
1988	106·3	1·0
1989	110·5	4·0

EC (Trade Balance)

116. Mr. Allen Adams: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

117. Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

119. Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the balance of trade with the European Economic Community in (a) 1979 and (b) 1989.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The information may be found in the monthly review of the external trade statistics and its 1989 mid-year supplement, available from the Library of the House, or on the Central Statistical Office database which may be accessed through the Library.

Manufacturing Output

118. Mr. Hannam: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing output in (a) 1988 and (b) 1983.

120. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing output in (a) 1988 and (b) 1983.

123. Mr. Amess: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing output in (a) 1988 and (b) 1983.

124. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing output in (a) 1988 and (b) 1983.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Figures on the level of United Kingdom manufacturing output are published in the monthly index of output of the production industries press notice, table 1.

Training

Mr. Amos: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect he expects his Budget to have on training.

Mr. Norman Lamont: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor proposed a tax relief on business donations to the new training and enterprise councils, or TECS, most of which will be coming into operation over the next year. I expect this to encourage businesses to contribute more money to local training and enterprise initiatives.

Football

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from football authorities about his Budget.

Mr. Ryder: The Football Association, the Football League and the Football Trust have expressed appreciation of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's proposal to reduce the rate of pool betting duty for the benefit of football supporters.

Top Rate Tax

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) by how much revenue from top rate tax has risen in (a) percentage terms and (b) real percentage terms since the top rate was reduced to 40 per cent.;

(2) by how much revenue from top rate tax has changed since the top rate was reduced to 40 per cent.

Mr. Lilley: Liability to income tax at rates of 40 per cent. and above is estimated to have increased by £3·1 billion between 1987-88 and 1990-91, an increase of 40 per cent. in nominal terms and 15 per cent. in real terms. The estimate is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and is provisional. It reflects independent taxation and the allowances and thresholds proposed in the 1990 Budget.

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many taxpayers he estimates would pay more in tax were the top rate to be raised from 40 to 50 per cent.;

(2) how much revenue would be raised were the top rate of tax raised from 40 to 50 per cent.

Mr. Lilley: The revenue yield in a full year at 1990-91 levels for income from an increase in the higher rate of income tax from 40 to 50 per cent. is estimated to be £3 billion; 1·7 million taxpayers would pay more tax. The estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. They reflect independent taxation and the levels of allowances and thresholds announced in the 1990 Budget, but they exclude the consequential effects on capital gains tax and any behavioural effects.

Investment Income

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much revenue he estimates would be raised by a 7·5 per cent. investment income surcharge on investment income above (a) £5,000, (b) £2,500 and (c) £1,000 in 1989-90;

(2) how much revenue he estimates would have been raised by a five per cent. investment income surcharge on investment income above (a) £5,000, (b) £2,500 and (c) £1,000 in 1989-90.

Mr. Lilley: Provisional estimates are as follows:

Yield in a full year for 1989-90

£ million

Threshold	Rate of surcharge
£	5 per cent.	7·5 per cent.
1,000	1,000	1,500
2,500	800	1,200
5,000	600	900

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are, therefore, provisional.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would have been the revenue gain of a capital gains tax threshold of £2,500 in the last financial year.

Mr. Lilley: It is tentatively estimated that the full year yield of a reduction in the 1989-90 capital gains tax annual exempt amount to £2,500 would be of the order of £100 million. This estimate allows for some change in taxpayers' behaviour in response to the reduced annual exempt amount, but does not allow for possible short-term effects. No allowance has been made for any change in the treatment of capital gains of companies which are taxed within corporation tax.

Environmental Quality

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the fiscal measures he has taken in his Budget on the quality of the United Kingdom environment.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the fiscal measures he has taken in his Budget on the quality of the United Kingdom environment.

Mr. Lilley: The Budget proposed a widening of the price differential between unleaded and 4-star leaded petrol from 14·2 to 15·6 a gallon (3·1 to 3·4p a litre). This will continue the process, begun in the 1987 Budget, of encouraging car drivers to switch to the use of unleaded petrol. The burden of taxation on motorists was also shifted from vehicle excise duty, which was frozen, to petrol usage; the duty was more than revalorised to compensate. The Budget also proposed that tax relief be made available for expenditure by waste disposal operators on preparing sites for waste disposal and making sites good after disposal operations have ceased. These measures will bring worthwhile environmental benefits.

Duty-Free Allowances

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will review the travellers' allowance which at present applies to goods obtained outside the European Community.

Mr. Ryder: The allowances for goods obtained outside the EC derive from EC legislation. They include both quantitative limits on alcohol and tobacco, and a £32 value allowance for other items. The £32 value allowance has the limited purpose of waiving duty and tax on small purchases of a personal or souvenir nature. The Government have long supported Commission proposals to increase this very low allowance, but some member states have blocked any rise for fear of the increased revenue loss from cross-border shopping or through opposition to the availability of duty-free sales for intra-EC traffic, to which the same level of allowances applies.

The Government remain committed to a substantial increase in this allowance.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the responsibilities of each of the deputy secretaries in his Department and the number and ranks of staff reporting to each.

Mr. Ryder: There are six deputy secretaries in the Treasury. Their responsibilities and the number of staff who report to them are as follows:

Responsibilities	Staff numbers
Overseas Finance
European Community Group
Aid and Export Finance Group
International Finance Group
(Three Grade 3, Six Grade 5, and 63 other staff)	72
Public Finance
Fiscal Policy Group
Financial Institutions and Markets Group
Monetary Group
Public Sector Finance Division
(Three Grade 3, Eight Grade 5, and 105½ other staff)	116½
Industry
Public Enterprises Group
Industry, Agriculture and Employment Group
Home Transport and Education Group
(Two Grade 3, Seven Grade 5, and 86 other staff)	95
Public Services
Social Services and Territorial Group
Local Government Group
Treasury Officer of Accounts and Purchasing
Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency
(Four Grade 3, Twelve Grade 5 and 489½ other staff)	505½

Responsibilities	Staff numbers
Deputy Chief Economic Adviser
Forecast and Analysis Group
Medium Term and Policy Analysis Group
Public Expenditure Economics Group
(Three Grade 3, Seven Grade 5, and 46 other staff)	56
Civil Service Management and Pay (Responsibility of Second Permanent Secretary prior to January 1990)
Management Policy and Running Costs Group
Personnel Policy Group
Pay and Industrial Relations Group
Civil Service Catering Organisation
(Three Grade 3, Nine Grade 5, and 1,102 other staff including 599 Industrials)	1,114

The remainder of the Department reports directly to the permanent secretary, the second permanent secretary (public expenditure) or the chief accountancy adviser. Staff in these areas total 1,169.

Third World Debt

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what aspects of the Brady plan to assist indebted Third world countries he envisages being implemented in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Ryder: The Government support the strengthening of the debt strategy, agreed at the 1989 spring meetings of the IMF—IBRD, to allow limited use of fund and bank resources to support voluntary agreements between debtors and banks on commercial debt relief. The extent to which UK banks participate in these arrangements is a matter for their commercial judgment.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last met the Governor of the Bank of England to discuss Third world debt.

Mr. Ryder: My Right hon. Friend the Chancellor regularly meets the Government of the Bank of England. The discussions cover many subjects.

Energy Prices

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what will be the effect of proposed price increases in the gas and electricity industries on the average household budget.

Mr. Ryder: The announced increases in gas and electricity prices for the coming year will add about 0.4 per cent. to the retail prices index once the tariffs have been fully implemented. The combined weight of gas and electricity in the RPI is 4.3 per cent.

Employee Share Ownership Plans

Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has had about his proposals for ESOPs.

Mr. Lilley: My Right hon. Friend the Chancellor's Budget proposal for a new CGT rollover relief for those selling shares to ESOPs has been generally welcomed.

Mortgage Arrears

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the latest figures for the number of mortgage payers in arrears on their payments of (a) six months and (b) 12 months; and what are the comparable figures for 1987, 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Ryder: The latest figures available are for the second half of 1989. They cover building societies and Abbey National plc. At the end of 1989 there were 58,380 mortgages six to 12 months in arrears and 12,100 were 12 months or more in arrear. The equivalent figures for the end of 1988 were 37,200 and 8,930 respectively and for the end of 1987, 48,220 and 13,000 respectively.

Oil and Gas Revenues

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the reply by the right hon. Member for City of Chester (Mr. Morrison) on 29 March, Official Report, column 281, if he will list the revenues accruing to the Exchequer in respect of crude oil, natural gas liquids and gas for each of the years 1980 to 1989.

Mr. Lilley: Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production cannot be apportioned between crude oil, natural gas liquids and gas. The available figures are as follows:

£ billion

	Government revenues from United Kingdom oil and gas production[2]	Gas Levy
1980-81	3·7	—
1981-82	6·5	0·4
1982-83	7·8	0·5
1983-84	8·8	0·5
1984-85	12·0	0·5
1985-86	11·3	0·5
1986-87	4·8	0·5
1987-88	4·6	0·5
1988-89	3·2	0·4
[1]1989-90	2·3	0·3

[1] (provisional).

[2] Includes Royalty, Supplementary Petroleum Duty, Petroleum Revenue Tax and Corporation Tax (before ACT set-off).

Invisible Trade

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the balance of payments for invisibles.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The invisibles balance was in surplus by £2·3 billion in 1989.

Fire and Police Services

Mr. Hayward: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the impact on income tax levels of transferring the full cost of fire and police services to central Government.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The impact on income tax of any transfer of local authority functions to central Government would depend on the extent to which revenue support grant was reduced. If grant were reduced by the amount of expenditure transferred, there would be no impact on income tax. But if grant were left unchanged, central taxation would have to rise. If local authorities spent in line with total standard spending in England and Wales, and total current expenditure in Scotland, the total cost of the fire service (including civil defence) and the police service in 1990-91 would be around £5,900 million. If this expenditure were transferred to central Government, and specific grants withdrawn but no adjustment made to revenue support grant, this would imply an increase of about 2p in the basic rate of income tax.

Mortgage Interest Relief

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the cost to the Treasury if MIRAS were available at a basic rate of taxation equal to 18 per cent.

Mr. Lilley: If basic rate tax relief on mortgage interest payments were given at 18 per cent. rather than 25 per cent. in 1990-91, the direct cost of mortgage interest relief would fall by about £2·25 billion. This assumes that higher rate relief would continue to be given where appropriate at 15 per cent. above the basic rate relief. No allowance is made for any behavioural change.

Taxation

Mr. Paice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effective tax rate for an individual on (a) 1·5, (b) two, (c) 2·5 and (d) three times average income if no income tax or national insurance contributions were payable in respect of incomes under £3,500, if the current top rate of national insurance contributions were payable on all income above £6,000 and at 2 per cent. on income between £3,501 and £6,000 and if income tax were payable at 18 per cent. for £3,501 to £13,500, at 28 per cent. for £13,501 to £22,000, at 40 per cent. for £22,001 to £32,000 and at 50 per cent. on all income earned above £32,001.

Mr. Lilley: The average percentage rates of tax and NIC would be:

Multiples of average earnings[1]
1·5	2	2·5	3
27·4	32·8	38·0	41·5

[1] Average earnings are those for full time males working a full week at adult rates in all occupations in 1990-91; £303·80 per week; in line with the assumptions in paragraph 3.02 of the 1989 Autumn Statement.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of collection as a proportion of revenue collected in respect of income tax; and if he will set out the figures for each of the past 10 years.

Mr. Lilley: The total cost of the administration and collection of income tax as a proportion of income tax receipts for the last 10 years for which final figures are available is as follows:

Year	Costs as percentage of receipts
1979-80	2·26
1980-81	2·40
1981-82	2·12
1982-83	2·17
1983-84	2·17
1984-85	2·25
1985-86	2·27
1986-87	2·29
1987-88	2·25
1988-89	2·24

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost of collecting (a) income tax and (b) value added tax per pound collected in each year from 1986-87 to the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lilley: The cost of collecting income tax and value added tax per pound collected is estimated to have been:

pence

	Income tax	VAT
1986-87	2·29	1.03
1987-88	2·25	1·02
1988-89	2·24	0·95

Shipping

Sir John Farr: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will offer ship owners tax incentives to make it worthwhile to invest in new and secondhand tonnage.

Mr. Lilley: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so. The present capital allowances regime is already more generous than commercial depreciation for ships.

Zambia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has on the status of Zambia's relations with the International Monetary Fund since 1985, listing periods when Zambia was in default on payments to the fund and periods when Zambia had no economic programme agreed with the fund.

Mr. Ryder: During 1985 and up to June 1986 there was no economic programme agreed with the International Monetary Fund, apart from one arrangement agreed in February 1986 which lasted two months. Zambia has been in arrears to the fund since June 1986. In March 1990 a fund-monitored programme was approved.

Trade Statistics

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Central Statistical Office will now be producing the monthly tables of trade statistics previously issued by the Department of Trade and Industry; if the Central Statistical Office will continue to specify the extent of the United Kingdom's trade deficit or surplus which relates to trade with the European Economic Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: The enlarged Central Statistical Office took over responsibility for visible trade statistics on 31 July 1989. It continues to publish the monthly statistics of trade formerly issued by the Department of Trade and Industry, including table A12 of the monthly review of external trade statistics which specifies the extent of the United Kingdom's deficit or surplus with the European Economic Community. The information can also be found on the Central Statistical Office database, which may be accessed through the Library of the House.

European Community Contributions

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if there have been any significant changes in the calculation and assessment of contributions to and receipts from the European Economic Community since the United Kingdom's net contribution for 1989 was last assessed at £1,966 million; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he anticipates that he will publish the 1990 statement on the Community budget; and if this document will include the latest calculation of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Economic Community in the calendar year 1989.

Mr. Ryder: The statement on the 1990 Community budget will be published within the next few weeks. It will include an outturn figure for the United Kingdom's net contribution to the Community budget in 1989; and will explain the differences between that figure and the forecast published in last year's statement (Cm. 680).

Standard Spending Assessments

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he estimates to be the difference between the level of inflation for 1990-91 allowed for in the Government's standard spending assessments for local authorities and the figure assumed in his Budget forecasts; and what the difference in expenditure would amount to if local authorities increased their expenditure in accordance with it.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 26 March 1990]: Standard spending assessments for local authorities, like the public expenditure plans, are set in cash terms, and do not make any particular allowance for inflation.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of the 1 per cent. forecast increase in the retail price index attributed to the community charge arises from charge levels in excess of the Government's recommended poll tax figure.

Mr. Norman Lamont [holding answer 26 March 1990]: If local authorities had spent in line with standard spending in England and Wales, and with total current expenditure in Scotland, the average community charge in Great Britain would have been around £266. This would have meant an increase of only about 0.1 per cent. in the level of the retail prices index.

Earnings

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will show for 1990-91 those ranges of earnings within which the burden of income tax plus national insurance is less than in 1978-79.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Since income tax rates have been reduced and the main personal allowances increased by substantially more than the rate of inflation, taxpayers will now pay a lower proportion of their income in tax than in 1978-79 unless their incomes have risen even more rapidly than allowances. Average earnings have risen rather more than this.

In 1990-91, for taxpayers of working age whose incomes have increased in line with earnings, average rates of income tax and national insurance contributions are lower than in 1978-79 for everyone except some married men with earnings up to and including three-quarters of the average. On the same basis, real take-home pay is higher than in 1978-79 at all levels of earnings.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will specify the distribution of gains in the Budget for each item where (a) tax or (b) national insurance changes were made other than normal indexation, according to income bands: less than £5,000 per year; £5,000 to £7,500; £7,500 to £10,000; £10,000 to £12,500; £12,500 to £15,000; £15,000 to £20,000; £20,000 to £30,000; £30,000 to £50,000 and above £50,000; and if he will indicate the percentage of total (i) tax and (ii) national insurance changes accruing to each group and the percentage of the total numbers of (1) taxpayers and (2) national insurance that each group comprises.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Information relating to income tax rates and allowances and national insurance contributions is in the table. Losses result solely from the higher rate income tax threshold remaining at £20,700. It is not possible to provide a breakdown by income distribution of gains from the doubling of the blind person's allowance. Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are therefore provisional.

Range of total income of individual (£ per annum)	Loss due to freezing of higher rate threshold (£ million)	Percentage of total tax loss	Total taxpayers (000s)	Percentage of total taxpayers in range	Total NIC payers (000s)	Percentage total NIC payers in range

Tax Relief

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the savings, in a full year at 1990-91 rates, of restricting all allowances and reliefs to the standard rate of tax; and if he will provide a breakdown by category of allowance and relief.

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue would be gained by the Treasury if the higher rate of MIRAS were abolished.

Mr. Lilley [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Estimates of the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1990-91 levels of income from restricting the main income tax allowances and reliefs to the basic rate of income tax are as follows:

	£ million
Personal allowances	1,390
Mortgage interest relief	510
Retirement annuity relief[1]	110

[1] Including relief for retirement annuity payments made by employees.

It would be premature to provide an estimate for employees superannuation and personal pension contributions, since this would depend on take-up. Nor is it possible to provide reliable estimates for the effects of restricting other smaller reliefs to the basic rate.

The direct revenue yield from restricting all reliefs and allowances simultaneously to the basic rate is likely to be in the order of nearly £3 billion, somewhat more than the sum of the yields from restricting the reliefs and allowances separately; this is due to the cumulative effect of bringing more people into higher rate tax. About two thirds of those who would pay more tax as a result of this change are currently liable only at the basic rate.

Estimates are based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and are provisional. No account is taken of possible behavioural changes or the effect on receipts of capital gains tax.

ENVIRONMENT

Uniform Business Rate

108. Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received from British industry about the uniform business rate.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Vaz), on 5 February 1990, Official Report, column 446.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the reasons for the difference in the rate poundage used for calculating the uniform business rate in Wales and in England.

Mr. Chope: The uniform business rate has been set, in the light of the revaluation of all non-domestic properties in England and Wales, at the level necessary to raise broadly the same income from the business community in 1990-91 as was raised in 1989-90. This resulted in a rate poundage of 34·8p in England, where the national average non-domestic rate poundage in 1989-90 was 258·3p and 36·8p in Wales, where the 1989-90 average was 283·4p.

Tree Replacement

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to ensure that the Countryside Commission has adequate funds to enable it to respond in an effective manner to tree replacement programmes in England and Wales.

Mr. Heathcoat Amory: Total grant-in-aid to the Countryside Commission for the forthcoming financial year has been increased to £25·136 million. This sum includes provision of £2·88 million for the work of the commission's special unit—task force trees—set up to assist replacement planting of amenity trees lost in the storms of October 1987 and January this year. The commission's general programme includes further assistance for tree planting, but it is for the commission to determine detailed allocation of its resources.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) whether expenditure on rubbish collection, street cleaning and campaigns against litter will be excluded from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes unless it is deemed excessive;

(2) whether expenditure on sheltering the homeless will be excluded from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes unless such expenditure is deemed excessive;

(3) whether that expenditure for protecting children against abuse will be excluded from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes;

(4) whether the expenditure of public funds for building indoor lavatories in state schools will be excluded from relevant expenditure for rate-capping purposes;

(5) what categories of expenditure he will exclude from relevant expenditure for charge-capping purposes.

Mr. Chope: My right hon. Friend has not excluded any categories of an authority's expenditure for the purposes of his capping decisions which he announced to the House on 3 April.

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, with their rates of community charge, those authorities which do not receive assistance from the safety net provisions and which also do not give to the safety net fund.

Mr. David Hunt: I am arranging for copies of the information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which have announced a community charge which is higher than that determined by the metropolitan borough of Rotherham.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now list the poll tax figure and safety net figure for every local authority.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that my hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government and Inner Cities gave today to my hon. Friend for Harrogate (Mr. Banks).

Mr. Tom Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information will be provided to him by local authorities for the purpose of assessing the impact of the community charge on charge payers, by district, age and income.

Mr. Chope: None.

Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the level of local income tax which would be payable by (a) a man and (b) a woman on average earnings in 1989-90 and 1990-91 based on Kirklees council's planned budgets for those years.

Mr. Chope: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Fylde (Mr. Jack) on 4 April 1990, Official Report, column 665.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the circumstances under community charge regulations in which there can be a personal community charge payer and a standard community charge payer living at the same address.

Mr. Chope: Liability to the standard community charge can arise only on the owner or lessee of a domestic property which is not used as the sole or main residence of another person or persons.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the cost of administration and collection of the poll tax in 1990-91 (a) in Greater Manchester and (b) in Manchester Withington; and what were the respective costs of administration and collection of domestic rates in 1989-90.

Mr. Chope: Information on the administration and collection costs of the community charge in 1990-91 is not yet available. Separate figures are not available for the cost of domestic rate collection, but the latest estimate provided by local authorities of the total cost of rate collection in 1989-90 is £11,332,000 for the Greater Manchester area. Figures for the Withington area of Manchester are not separately available, but the figure for Manchester city council is £2,467,000.

Mr. Brandon-Bravo: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the budgeted spend for 1989-90 for each authority, with the equivalent spend uprated by inflation for 1990-91 and the community charge per adult such a spending programme would result in.

Mr. Chope: I am arranging for copies of the expenditure for 1989-90 for each authority to be placed in the Library of the House. Information about the assumed expenditure for 1990-91 and the resulting community charge per adult was placed in the Library on 11 January 1990.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the cost for each local authority of poll tax capping relating to (a) reviewing expenditure at service provision to meet his requirements and (b) preparing and sending out new poll tax bills.

Mr. Chope: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Wentworth (Mr. Hardy) earlier today.

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities known to him which have announced their intentions to extend beyond three months the period when a community charge is not payable in respect of empty and unfurnished property.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to him on 4 April 1990, Official Report, column 665.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will update the list provided in his answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside, of 12 March, Official Report, column 105, of regulations governing the introduction of the community charge and the uniform business rate which have yet to be (a) laid before the House and (b) debated by the House.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The regulations still to be laid before the House are as follows:

The Community Charge

1. The form of substitute bills to be prescribed following a change in budget or precept.
2. Adjustments to rates recoverable or written off after 1 April 1990 relating to earlier years.

National Non-Domestic Rates

3. Payment of interest on overpaid rates.

The last debate on a negative resolution took place in the House on 26 March 1990, while an affirmative resolution was debated on 29 March 1990. None of the remaining regulations requires affirmative resolution.

Tropical Rain Forests

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will institute a co-ordinated governmental review of adverse effects on tropical rain forests resulting from the tropical forestry action plan; if he will suspend funding for the tropical forestry action plan; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what input his Department has had into the tropical forestry action plan; and what account he has taken of recommendations about its effectiveness.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development on 5 April 1990, Official Report, columns 733-34.

Homelessness

Mr. Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much extra money will be available to Bournemouth borough council under his new proposals to tackle homelessness.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The extra £112 million resources for 1990-91 which I announced recently will go to local authorities in London and the south-east where homelessness pressures, particularly the numbers in bed-and-breakfast accommodation, are greatest. Authorities outside this area, including Bournemouth, generally face less severe pressures of homelessness.

Wales (Official Visits)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the dates on which he has made an official visit to Wales since his appointment to his present post.

Mr. Chris Patten: Since my appointment to my present post I have made no official visit to Wales.

Correspondence

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for South Hams dated 26 March concerning the position regarding the community charge facing Mr. R. J. Bray of Dovedale, Brixham.

Mr. Chope: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will reply to a letter from the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth dated 23 January referring to Mr. George Chadwick of Rugby.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 6 April.

Caravan Sites (Bradford)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department gathered in the process of granting designation to the local authority on (a) the location of private caravan sites in Bradford, (b) by whom they are owned and managed, (c) who has applied to operate and manage additional private sites, (d) rentals being charged by private site owners and (e) rental charges levied by Bradford council at caravan sites owned by the council.

Mr. Chope: We are aware that there are two private gipsy caravan sites in the metropolitan district which can accommodate a total of 12 gipsy caravans and that the city council's policy will be to encourage provision of small-scale private sites. We have no detailed information on the operation of these sites or on rental charges levied by Bradford council at the caravan sites that it owns.

Expenditure (Rotherham)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how he expects his decision on the new expenditure levels within the metropolitan borough of Rotherham will affect the work of this authority to promote the economic regeneration of the derelict or non-derelict areas of the borough;

(2) if he will make it his policy to take steps to ensure that his recent decision to reduce the expenditure of the metropolitan borough of Rotherham will not affect the capacity of that authority or of the South Yorkshire hazardous waste unit to maintain supervision of the public and environmental needs of the area concerned;

(3) what is his estimate of the cuts in expenditure in 1990-91 which will now have to be made by the metropolitan borough of Rotherham in the fields of education, social services, highway maintenance, amenities and recreation, museums and libraries, environmental health and in the accommodation and housing provision for the elderly and disabled.

Mr. Chope: Spending priorities within any lower overall budget will be a matter for the metropolitan borough of Rotherham; as my right hon. Friend made clear to the House on 3 April, we are prepared to consider alternative proposals from Rotherham about the overall level of its budget.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the costs which will have to be met by the metropolitan borough of Rotherham in enabling it to implement his decision that the community charge shall be reduced.

Mr. Chope: As he informed the House on 3 April, my right hon. Friend estimates the costs of community charge capping will be about £200,000 per charging authority and that the total costs will be between £6 million and £7 million.

Hospital Incinerators

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment by what date all hospital incinerators are required to comply with the specifications contained in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution waste management paper No. 25 on clinical waste.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Department of the Environment waste management paper No. 25 is a technical memorandum providing general advice and guidance. Specific control of clinical waste incinerators with a capacity of more than one tonne per hour is exercised by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution. The inspectorate is also currently drawing up specific guidance on standards for smaller incinerators which we propose to schedule for local authority air pollution control under the Environmental Protection Bill. This guidance will be published before any incinerator is scheduled for local authority control, and authorities will be obliged to have regard to it in setting standards in legally binding authorisations for individual hospital incinerators.

Bathing Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the definitions that have been used by his Department to define a bathing beach since the 1976 Bathing Waters Directive of the European Commission was issued; and on what dates the definitions were changed.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The definition of a bathing water is given in article 1(2)(a) of directive 76/160/EEC. Further advice on relevant criteria for assessing whether waters should be identified under the bathing water directive was given by the Commission of the European Communities in October 1985, in an answer given in the European Parliament.

Water Pollution

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a revised version of table 3.5(a) in the 1989 Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics which would show a nothing found category separately from the total number of water pollution incidents.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Separately available figures for reported pollution incidents where nothing was found relate to the years 1986, 1987 and 1988 and are as follows:

	1986	1987	1988
Anglian	—	—	—
Northumbrian	—	53	100
North West	579	705	798
Severn-Trent	—	—	—
Southern	147	126	227

	1986	1987	1988
South West	145	327	374
Thames	367	745	551
Welsh	—	—	522
Wessex	241	243	259
Yorkshire	278	415	441
England and Wales	1,757	2,614	3,272

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish in the Official Report a revised version of table 3.5(b) in the 1989 Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics, separately distinguishing for each category of pollution the nothing found column.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will specify in the Official Report, what footnote 4 should be for the Welsh Water Authority in table 3.2, on page 27 of his Department's Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics No. 12, 1989.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The footnote which was inadvertantly omitted from table 3.2 of the "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics No. 12" referred to sewage treatment works in the Welsh Water area and should have been as follows:

> "The majority of the works with numerical consents which were not tested for compliance are understood to be small works for which the authority are asking for descriptive consents."

Cleaning Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how and by whom cleaning services are provided to Wellbar house, Gallowgate, Newcastle upon Tyne.

Mr. Chope: Cleaning services at Wellbar house are currently contracted to ISS Servisystem Ltd. and the City and Suburban Window Cleaning Company Ltd.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what official research has been undertaken with local authorities' practices and policies with regard to mobile homes; and what conclusions have been drawn.

Mr. Chope: The Department is currently engaged in research on the mobile homes sector including a postal survey of local authorities in England and Wales and physical and social studies of selected sites. We expect to have the full results of the research programme early next year.

Hedgerows

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many miles of hedgerows have been removed and how many miles planted (a) since 1 January 1960 and (b) since 1979.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Various estimates have been made for past periods but none covers precisely the periods to which my hon. Friend refers.

A survey of landscape change in England and Wales carried out for my Department and the Countryside Commission in 1986 by Huntings Survey and Consultants Limited showed annual losses in England and Wales of some 2,600 miles of hedgerow between 1947 and 1969, 2,900 miles between 1969 and 1980, and 4,000 miles between 1980 and 1985. A postal survey of farmers on environmental topics carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in 1985 however showed annual losses of 500 miles between 1980 and 1985. The two surveys used different methodologies and neither can be regarded as definitive.

Since 1973 grants have been available to farmers for planting of new hedgerows and for hedgerow laying. In the two years 1987 and 1988, grant was paid for the equivalent of almost 1,200 miles of new hedge planting.

Work is continuing to improve information both on the rate of removal and on the extent of new planting.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had, and with whom, on the introduction of landscape conservation orders as a means of preserving hedgerows.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: No such discussions have taken place.

Defective Housing, Nottingham

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance his Department is giving to Nottingham city council to rebuild those Tarran Newland design houses designated as defective in the Beechdale area of Nottingham.

Mr. Chope: Nottingham city council's housing investment programme allocation for 1990-91 took full account of the condition of the housing stock in its area. Where private owners of Tarran or Newland properties qualify for assistance by way of reinstatement an exchequer contribution of 90 per cent. is made.

Caravan Sites

Mrs. Maureen Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether gypsies living on official local authority sites are subject to the payment of individual community charges; and whether those sites are classified as non-domestic premises.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 5 April 1990]: A caravan used as a sole or main residence is domestic property and its occupiers are liable to the personal community charge unless they are exempt. In general those parts of a caravan site consisting of non-domestic property are subject to business rates.

HEALTH

South Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital beds have been available within the South Manchester health authority in each of the past 15 years.

Mr. Freeman: Information regarding the number of hospital beds available within the South Manchester health authority is given in the table.

Average number of hospital beds available per day in South Manchester

Year	Beds

Census Material

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions have taken place between officials of his Department or of the census office and the Post Office about use of postal codes in the publishing of census material.

Mr. Freeman: Officials of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys hold regular meetings with the Post Office to discuss the maintenance of OPCS's central postcode directory, which is used by Government Departments and the Health Service to allocate data already held on a post code basis to administrative areas. The use to be made of post codes in statistics to be published from the 1991 census has not yet been discussed in detail at these meetings, although agreement has existed since 1985 that aggregates of post codes could be used to define areas for census statistics.

Consultants (Merit Awards)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many consultants who served on regional consultants and specialist committees receive merit awards on their retirement; and what percentage this is of all consultants serving on such committees.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This information is not available centrally. The Government's White Paper "Working for Patients" proposes a number of reforms to the distinction awards system, including a proposal aimed at preventing awards being given close to retirement age. This is currently under discussion with the profession.

Children (Illegal Employment)

Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest official estimate of the number of children illegally employed in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to publish an official estimate of the number of children engaged in illegal employment in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish official statistics on the number of children illegally employed in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to publish official figures for the number of children illegally employed in Great Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave the hon. Members for Glasgow, Pollok (Mr. Dunnachie) and for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 9 March 1990 at columns 893-94.

Royal Colleges

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next expects to meet the presidents of the royal colleges; and what subjects will be discussed.

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next expects to meet the presidents of the royal colleges; and what subjects will be discussed.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Whilst no firm date has been set for the next meeting with the presidents of the royal colleges, the previous pattern of formal and informal meetings, either with individual presidents or collectively, is expected to continue, for discussing a range of important health issues.

British Medical Association

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next expects to meet the president of the British Medical Association; and what he intends to discuss.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next expects to meet the president of the British Medical Association; and what he intends to discuss.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State has no present plans to meet the president of the British Medical Association.

Fluoride

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his policy towards the use of fluoride as a means of arresting and preventing dental caries; what evaluation he has made of its effectiveness as an agent; and what measures he is adopting to ensure that it is available to population groups most at risk.

Mr. Freeman: The Government's view is that fluoridation of drinking water constitutes a safe and effective means of reducing tooth decay. Evidence of the efficacy of fluoridation in this country is well documented and recent studies confirm the view that further reductions in caries levels in children's teeth, over and above the general decline in caries which has occurred, are achievable through fluoridation of domestic water supplies. These benefits are particularly cost effective in areas where caries levels are otherwise high.

The Government believe it right that decisions on fluoridation should be taken at a local rather than national level. The Water (Fluoridation) Act 1985 imposes a statutory duty on district health authorities to engage in widespread public consultation before any decisions on the implementation of fluoridation schemes are taken. While it is our general view that we should support local initiatives, it is the task of the district health authority to weigh the advantages of fluoridation when deciding to ask water undertakers to fluoridate water supplies in the area. The final discretion whether to agree to fluoridation must, however, rest with water undertakers who need to be satisfied that the health authorities' proposals are technically feasible.

Nurses

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the current levels of nurse staffing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Responsibility for setting levels for nursing staff is a matter for individual health authorities, which determine those levels as part of the regular planning process, in the light of local needs and priorities and the available resources.

Heart Transplants

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many heart transplant operations have been conducted in (a) Harefield hospital and (b) Papworth hospital in each of the last 12 years.

Mr. Freeman: Available information from Harefield and Papworth hospitals, for the 11 years from 1979 to 1989, is shown in the table.

	Harefield		Papworth
	Heart	Heart/lung	Heart	Heart/lung
1979	—	—	3	—
1980	14	—	11	—
1981	13	—	13	—
1982	21	—	16	—
1983	34	1	19	—
1984	78	7	39	3
1985	87	31	44	6
1986	109	42	52	10
1987	140	55	58	15
1988	133	69	58	22
1989	131	53	53	17

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients who have undergone heart transplant operations in the last 12 years have died either as a primary or secondary result of cytomegalavirus.

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Junior Hospital Doctors

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of junior hospital doctors in the Eastern region worked rotas of one in three or worse during the years 1987, 1988, 1989 and estimated for 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The information is not available in the form requested. We do, however, have a report from the East Anglian regional health authority on the results of our June 1988 initiative on junior doctors' hours. Some 40 per cent. of junior doctors in the region were on one in three rotas or worse in 1988. By September 1990, some 24 per cent. of junior doctors are expected to be on onerous one in three rotas or worse. This compares with an expected national total of around 13 per cent. on such rotas by that date.

Allergies

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research projects financed by his Department are being carried out into allergies.

Mr. Freeman: None. I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, East (Mr. Atkinson) on 3 April 1990, at column 519.

Christie Hospital

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the costs of providing treatment at Christie hospital will flow back to Christie hospital from those districts which purchase care from Christie hospital in circumstances in which Christie remains (a) a directly managed hospital or (b) a National Health Service trust.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is intended that contracts between purchasing authorities and hospitals, whether directly managed or under trust status, will cover the full costs of treatment.

Haemophiliacs

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many haemophiliac victims of HIV contaminated factor VIII have died from AIDS; and how many have died since November 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The total number of haemophiliacs with AIDS who have died up to the end of February 1990 is 118. Of that figure 11 have died since November 1989. It is not known how many died as a result of AIDS or from any other cause.

Sir Michael McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many writs from haemophiliac victims of HIV-contaminated factor VIII have been filed against his Department, regional health authorities and the Committee on Safety of Medicines; and how many were received (a) by 31 December 1989 and (b) since 1 January 1990.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Health authorities are separately represented and the Department does not routinely receive information on the number of writs issued against them. I understand that 928 writs have been filed against the Department and Committee on Safety of Medicines, of which around 650 were received by 31 December 1989.

Cosmetics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has made an assessment of the health implications in respect of the clearance given for use as additives in cosmetics of (a) silver nitrate, (b) ammonia and (c) aluminium-based substances; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: No separate assessment has been made. Certain substances used in cosmetics are controlled by the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1989 (SI 1989 No. 2233) which implements European Council directive 76/768/EEC as amended by EEC directive 82/368/EEC and subsequent Commission directives. The regulations detail substances that are either not permitted in cosmetics or are permitted subject to specified restrictions. Colouring agents other than those used solely to colour hair, preservatives and UV filters are not permitted unless listed in the schedules to the regulations. Advice on the safety in use of substances used in cosmetics is provided by the EEC Scientific Committee on Cosmetology.

Silver nitrate, ammonia and aluminium based substances are allowed in cosmetics only up to specified limits and the products must be labelled as containing these substances. They are listed in schedule 2, part I of the regulations as > "substances which cosmetics must not contain except subject to the restrictions laid down."

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he has made an assessment of the implications for human health of the clearance given to additives for use in cosmetics which are banned for use as additives in food products.

Mr. Freeman: Exposure to substances approved for use in cosmetics, that is those substances covered by the EEC cosmetics directives, is not comparable to exposure to approved food additives which are invariably ingested. Both are approved only after careful assessment of the health implications. If the hon. Member has any particular substance in mind perhaps he would let me know the details.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will outline his Department's responsibilities in respect of the safety of cosmetic products.

Mr. Freeman: The Department of Health provides advice to the Department of Trade and Industry on all matters pertaining to the safety assessment of cosmetics. Also a toxocologist from the Department is a member of the EEC's Scientific Committee on Cosmetology, established under the terms of the cosmetics directives to advise on the toxicity of cosmetic ingredients and products.

Centre for Applied Microbiology and Research

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he next plans to meet the director of the centre for applied microbiology and research at Porton Down; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: We have no immediate plans to do so. However, officials both of the Department, and of the public health laboratory service of which the centre forms a part, are in regular contact with the director.

Correspondence

Ms. Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will now answer the letter to him from the hon. Member for Peckham of 26 March about community care services in Hertfordshire and Bedfordshire.

Mr. Freeman: I replied yesterday.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give details about the consultation which will precede the establishment of self-governing trusts; and if he will give (a) when consultations will begin, (b) how long they will last for, (c) who will be involved, (d) how they will be monitored and (e) where the results will be published.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Applications for NHS trust status will not be invited until after parliamentary approval of the necessary legislation. The relevant region will publicise the proposals and make arrangements for consultation. It will be for regions to determine how best to do this. However, in general we would expect consultation to last for a period of three months. We expect regions to seek the views of those with an interest, particularly the health authorities concerned, staff at the unit, general practitioners, community health councils and the local community. Regions will forward applications, responses received during consultation, and any comments they may have on them to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State so that he can consider them with the application. If my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State decides to approve an application he will make an order to establish the trust.

AIDS

Mr. Cousins: to ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the number of HIV-positive persons, (b) the number of AIDS patients and (c) the number of deaths from AIDS in each year and in total to the latest available date both for the United Kingdom and for each National Health Service region since the AIDS epidemic began; and if he will show (i) the numbers of haemophiliacs so affected and (ii) the numbers of non-haemophiliacs so affected as a consequence of infected blood products.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The tables showing the information reported to the communicable disease surveillance centre and the communicable diseases (Scotland) unit have been placed in the Library. Numbers below 10 in tables showing AIDS data are represented by an asterisk in line with the procedure followed in reports under the AIDS (Control) Act, to safeguard confidentiality.

Waiting Lists

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to repeat the waiting list initiative; and if he will make a statement about the previous initiative.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [pursuant to her reply, 30 March 1990, c. 370]: I understand that there was a misprint in the hon. Member's question as it first appeared on the Order Paper which rendered the reply inappropriate. A revised reply is as follows.

The waiting list initiative is being continued in 1990-91. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. King) on 18 January 1990 at columns 403-04. No decisions have yet been taken about whether to continue the initiative into 1991-92 and beyond.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Battle of the Boyne (Tercentenary)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the tercentenary of the battle of the Boyne will be officially recognised in Northern Ireland this year; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The 12 July 1990 will be a bank holiday in Northern Ireland, as in previous years.

Substantial sponsorship has been provided for a major exhibition at the Ulster museum, entitled "Kings in Conflict", which examines the roles of William the Third, James the Second and Louis the Fifteenth in Ireland in the 1690s.

Fair Employment

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether United Kingdom civil servants working in Northern Ireland operate under the same monitoring system and code of practice as that detailed in the written reply to the hon. Member for Londonderry, East of 21 February, Official Report, column 768.

Mr. Cope: All Northern Ireland employers are guided by the code of practice published by the Department of Economic Development on 31 December 1989 and subsequently adopted by the Fair Employment Commission as its first code of practice under the Fair Employment (NI) Act 1989.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether members of harbour boards in Northern Ireland are considered as employees by the Fair Employment Commission in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 20 March 1990]: I am advised that the Commission has not examined the terms upon which members are appointed.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are being taken to rectify and monitor the religious imbalance amongst employees at principal officer grade and above in the Department of the Environment, Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The results of monitoring and the measures being taken to provide equality of opportunity in the Northern Ireland civil service are published in the reports of its equal opportunities unit. Copies of these reports are in the Library. These give details about the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland.

Discussions have already taken place with the Fair Employment Commission and the Equal Opportunities Commission about the published findings and the future work programme of the equal opportunties unit. It has been agreed that the latter will focus on the level of representation of females and of Roman Catholics in the higher grades in the Northern Ireland civil service.

Training

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what he is doing to co-ordinate the efforts of the departments of education and economic development on funding and training, to ensure that young people will receive training to equip them with skills and qualifications sought by employers.

Mr. Needham: The youth training programme is the joint responsibility of the Ministers responsible for the Departments of Education and of Economic Development and there are a number of working groups of senior officials from both Departments which meet on a regular basis to co-ordinate action.

Executive Houses

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the executive houses at (a) Beechfield estate, Donaghadee and (b) Enniskeen estate, Craigavon were built; when the Northern Ireland Housing Executive carried out or proposes to carry out an improvement scheme to houses in both these estates; and why it was decided to give priority to Enniskeen estate.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive. The information that it would provide is that Beechfield estate was completed in 1965 and Enniskeen estate in 1971.

Twenty-eight dwellings in Beechfield estate were fully improved in 1985 and a further 18 had central heating installed. Improvements to the remainder of the estate which have yet to be fully assessed are programmed to begin in the 1992-93 financial year. An external maintenance scheme is currently on site.

Enniskeen estate had central heating installed in 1986 as part of the degasification programme. An external maintenance scheme was completed in 1987 and replacement kitchen units installed in 1989. No further improvements are programmed.

Priorities within each Housing Executive region are determined on the basis of the Housing Executive's assessment of the needs of individual estates.

Flooding (Donaghadee)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he proposes to take to stop the regular flooding at Church lane, Donaghadee, near the old people's home.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: No buildings have been affected.

From initial investigations it appears that the flooding is associated with an old culverted millrace which runs through the area. The millrace is not designated within the terms of the Drainage (Northern Ireland) Order 1973. The Department of Agriculture is undertaking further investigations with a view to determining the nature and source of any drainage disability and the person(s) responsible for the millrace.

Flooding, Omagh

The Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons it was decided not to provide the statistical and technological investigations relating to the October 1989 flooding in Omagh to the development officer of Omagh district council.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Following flooding in October 1987 a consultant's report on the flood defences in Omagh was commissioned by the Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland. The report is private to the Department.

The Department is in the final stages of consideration of the options contained in the report and proposals will be exhibited in line with normal consultation procedures at the offices of Omagh district council. The Department will discuss the proposal with the council at the appropriate time.

Quarrying

The Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount of money paid in grants by the various departments of the Northern Ireland Department of Environment to the quarrying, sand and gravel industries during the period the grant was available; and what was the breakdown of payments in the Mid-Ulster constituency.

Mr. Needham: The Department of the Environment has paid no grants to companies in these sectors. During the past five financial years grants paid to the quarrying, sand and gravel industries in Northern Ireland by the Department of Economic Development were as follows:

1985-86	3,482,376
1986-87	1,125,367

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how the recently established nine posts of director within the Eastern health and social services board were filled; and how these positions differ in their range of management responsibilities and in salary from the posts that they replaced.

Mr. Needham: As the information requested is complex and detailed, my noble Friend Lord Skelmersdale will write to the hon. Gentleman direct.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are being made by the Eastern health and social services board, pursuant to the abolition of the area executive team with effect from 1 April to ensure that the day-to-day management of health and social services are maintained at high level.

Mr. Needham: The board's general manager will have a strategic management group consisting of nine headquarters directors to support and assist him in the management of the services. The recently appointed unit general managers took up their posts from 1 April 1990 and will each be responsible to the general manager for the management and provision of services within one of the nine units of management.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimated additional cost in 1990-91 of the current restructuring of the Eastern health and social services board.

Mr. Needham: It is expected that the net effect of the restructuring will be that the board expects to maintain its administration costs at approximately 5 per cent. as in previous years.

Enterprise Ulster

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many clients have been asked by Enterprise Ulster to supply additional materials during the course of a job so that it could be completed; and, where this has occurred, what checks were made to ensure that proper use was made of the materials originally supplied.

Mr. Needham: There are no figures available of the number of Enterprise Ulster clients who have been asked and agreed to the supply of additional materials during the course of a job.

Strict checks are carried out by supervisory staff on all materials supplied and used.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements there are for Enterprise Ulster having been supplied with materials for a client job not all of which have been used to make a payment in lieu of the return of the material.

Mr. Needham: None. Any surplus materials are either returned to the client or, with his agreement, transferred to another job.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are taken to ensure that the practice of Enterprise Ulster in requiring clients to supply the materials needed for a particular job ensures efficient use of such materials and allows for proper stock control.

Mr. Needham: The use of materials, whether obtained by Enterprise Ulster or supplied by clients, is supervised, controlled and monitored by Enterprise Ulster's supervisors and area superintendents who are trained in efficient materials usage and stock control.

Substitute Teachers

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he received the details from Donaghadee high school of substitutes teaching in the school during the month of February; when the substitute teachers will be paid for their work during the month of February; and in which year such payments will be included for tax purposes.

Dr. Mawhinney: Details of the substitute teachers employed in Donaghadee high school during the month of February 1990 were not received in the Department of Education until 21 March 1990. This was two weeks after the due date for receipt of such information and was too late for the normal pay date on 16 March 1990 or the supplementary payroll issued on 20 March 1990.

Special arrangements have been made to issue payment by Friday 6 April 1990 to the substitute teachers for their work during the month of February 1990.

The payment will be made in the 1990-91 tax year and will be included in that tax year for tax purposes.

Enterprise Centres

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a list of enterprise centres in Belfast, together with the number of units and the percentage number of units occupied in each centre.

Mr. Needham: The information requested is as follows:

Enterprise centre	Number of units	Percentage occupied
Brookfield Business Centre	50	92
Farset Enterprise Park	26	39
Glenwood Enterprises Ltd.	36	86
Townsend Enterprise Park	26	100
Westlink Enterprises	31	28
Workwest Belfast	15	87
Action Resource Centre	12	100
West Belfast Enterprise Board	11	82

Community Programmes, Belfast

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report a list of programmes funded by BAT and Making Belfast Work, the name of the recipient community organisation and the expenditure involved in each case.

Mr. Needham: In view of the large amount of material involved, I will write to the hon. Member and place copies of the information in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the level of expenditure on income support for each social security office in Belfast for the years 1987-88, 1988-89 and from April to December 1989.

Mr. Needham: The available information is as follows:

	Weekly Expenditure
Social Security Office	Supplementary pension/allowance 6 May 1987 £	Income Support 31 May 1988 £
Andersontown	286,905·02	299,539·46
Corporation Street	371,623·59	438,914·83
Falls Road	282,316·97	327,328·97
Holywood Road	233,191·10	284,933·05
Knockbreda	158,308·59	160,504·29
Shaftsbury Square	191,928·10	205,144·63
Shankill	122,455·27	142,669·75

Child Benefit

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish in the Official Report the total amount of child benefit paid out per constituency for each of the Belfast parliamentary constituencies for the years 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Mr. Needham: The information is not available in the form requested.

Public Expenditure Belfast

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he is able to make of the total amount of public expenditure per constituency for the four parliamentary constituencies in Belfast for the years 1982-83 to 1988-89 inclusive.

Mr. Cope: It is not possible for any reliable estimate of public expenditure per constituency in Belfast to be obtained without incurring disproportionate costs.

Residential Homes

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) private and (b) public sector residential and nursing homes there are in Northern Ireland; what is the number of places provided in each sector together with the weekly charges; and how the charges are being met.

Mr. Needham: The information is as follows:

	Homes for persons in need		Nursing Homes
	Statutory	Private	Statutory	Private
Number of Premises	126	97	—	118
Number of Places	3,988	1,285	—	3,353

Notes:

1. At 31 March 1989.
2. At 31 December 1989.

In addition, 40 voluntary homes for persons in need provide 1,271 places and 11 voluntary nursing homes provide 398 places.

Standard weekly charges for statutory homes for persons in need range from £171 to £198 depending on the location of the home and whether it is accommodating elderly, disabled, mentally ill or mentally handicapped people.

Residents who are unable to pay the standard minimum charge may pay a lesser amount, determined by their income. The minimum charge is £37·50 which is equivalent to the basic rate of retirement pension less the personal requirements allowance. A resident whose income is less than the basic rate of retirement pension may be entitled to income support to help with the charges.

Up-to-date information about weekly charges in independent sector homes is not held centrally. Residents whose income is insufficient to meet the charges may be entitled to income support. As of 9 April 1990, the maximum weekly amounts of income support payable for accommodation and care range from £150 to £210 for homes for persons in need, and from £200 to £245 for nursing homes. In addition, a personal allowance of £10·55 is payable.

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether in view of the increase in the number of residential and nursing homes for the elderly, he will arrange for greater involvement of local people in inspections of such homes and for reports of such inspections to be made to district councils and the units of management of the health and social services boards.

Mr. Needham: In "People First", the Northern Ireland policy paper on care in the community in the 1990s, the Department of Health and Social Services has proposed that health and social services boards should set up area inspection units, independent of the day-to-day management of their own homes. They are to inspect and report on standards and quality of care in both statutory and independent sector homes and are to be accountable direct to the area general manager of the board. The units are to include inspectors recruited from outside the board's employment. The Department intends to issue detailed guidance on the establishment of such units and will consult a wide range of interests, including the boards and district councils, during its preparation. Furthermore proposals will issue shortly on the involvement of area health and social services councils in visiting such establishments.

Local Government

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether, following his consideration of responses to the local government consultative paper, he will be proceeding with legislation in the field of local government in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are proceeding with the preparation of a proposal for a draft Order in Council. It should be published for consultation before the end of this year. As indicated in the local government consultative paper, the measures proposed cover three areas of local government work:

(i) the conduct of district council business;
(ii) the administration of the environmental health and building control services; and
(iii) competition in the provision of district council services

We received over 60 responses to the local government consultative paper. All have been considered carefully. A number of changes to our proposals have been made as a result.

The proposals were discussed by the chairmen of all the district councils in Northern Ireland, meeting under the chairmanship of Councillor Empey, the Lord Mayor of Belfast.

Terrorism

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which organisations are believed to have been responsible for the terrorist killings of Sam McClean and Harold Keys in the Irish Republic after 15 November 1985; and if anyone has been made amenable to the courts for these murders.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Despite the best efforts of the Irish authorities I understand that no one has been made amenable to the courts for these callous murders. In the absence of a criminal conviction it is not possible to say who the murderers were, but in both cases the Provisional IRA is reported to have claimed responsibility.

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which organisations are believed to have been responsible for the terrorist killings of Cormac McCabe, John Reid, Stanley Hazelton and Seamus McAvoy in the Irish Republic prior to 15 November 1985; and if anyone has been made amendable to the courts for these murders.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Despite the best efforts of the Irish authorities I understand that no one has been made amenable to the courts for the callous murders of John Reid, Stanley Hazelton and Seamus McAvoy. The investigation into the murder of Cormac McCabe, which is believed to have taken place in Northern Ireland, was conducted by the RUC and has proved similarly inconclusive. In the absence of criminal convictions it is not possible to say who the murderers were, but in the cases of Mr. Reid and Mr. McAvoy the Provisional IRA is reported to have claimed responsibility.

Fishing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland by what means his view on the total allowable catch of each species of fish taken in the areas of sea fished by Northern Ireland sea fishermen is put forward at meetings of the International Council for the Exploration of the Sea.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: The International Council for the Exploration of the Sea deals with scientific stock assessments which form the basis of advice to the EC Commission, which then formulates proposals for total allowable catches (TACs) to the EC Council of Ministers. The setting of TACs takes place outside the ICES forum.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will carry out a cost benefit analysis on options for placing (a) the new scientific staff for the research vessel Lough Foyle and (b) the new scientific staff for the research vessel Lough Foyle plus the freshwater biological units staff in Coleraine with the existing fisheries research laboratory staff in (i) the existing fisheries laboratory building with necessary alterations and (ii) in the existing fisheries laboratory building and the existing drainage division building in Coleraine with any necessary additions for extensions of the latter building.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 23 March 1990]: Practical options for the establishment of a unified aquatic sciences research division on a single site were subject to investment appraisal before a decision was reached to relocate staff from Coleraine-Antrim to Belfast.

The option of a unified division at the fisheries research laboratory at Coleraine was included in the investment appraisal, except that the incorporation of the drainage division office at Coleraine was not considered a viable option in terms of department planning.

Results of the appraisal showed that over a 25-year period, relocation of staff from Coleraine and Antrim to Belfast, and the location of the scientific staff from the research vessel on the same site would have the lowest discounted net cost compared with other options. This decision is now being put into effect. Further cost-benefit analyses are not contemplated.

Detainees

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons (a) have been detained under terrorism provisions in police custody since October 1989 and (b) have been refused access to a solicitor under section 15 of the Emergency Provisions Act 1987.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 3 April 1990]: Three hundred and sixty-one persons were detained under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 between the period 1 October 1989 to 31 December 1989. No person was detained during this period under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1987; and no one was refused access to a solicitor.

Statistics in respect of 1990 are not yet available.

Local Authority Funding

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show for each of the last five years the sums made available to promote each of the major towns in each of the 26 council areas; and what funds he intends to make available for this purpose over the next three years in each case.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The information is as follows:

Year	Belfast £	Londonderry £	Other district towns
1986-87	nil	nil	nil
1987-88	30,000	nil	nil
1988-89	74,000	nil	nil
1989-90	80,000	4,000	nil
1990-91	82,000	4,000	nil
1991-92	84,000	10,000	nil
1992-93	86,000	25,000	nil
1993-94	88,000	10,000	nil

Lough Foyle

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what decrease there has been in the area of farms whose land borders on Lough Foyle between the estuary of the River Roe and Magilligan Point since statistics were first collected; and what is his estimate of the present-day value of the land lost during that period.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The information requested is not available.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he (a) has had any survey carried out or (b) is aware of any other scientific survey of the intertidal zone off the shore of Lough Foyle between the estuary of the River Roe and Magilligan Point to determine whether that zone has experienced changes in the animal life and vegetation in the last 25 years; whether he has any record of changes in the type of beach from mud to sand; and what changes have been noted in the number and species of bird life in the area over these periods.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland has not undertaken, nor is it aware of other bodies having undertaken, any survey to determine changes in the animal life or vegetation of the intertidal zone between the Roe estuary and Magilligan point. The Department did commission a survey of the intertidal fauna of the entire Northern Ireland coastline. This was a baseline survey and did not refer to any previous work.

Bird counts have been undertaken by other bodies, but the Department does not have details of these counts and has no information on fluctuations in numbers of the various species. The Department does not have any record of changes in the type of beach from mud to sand.

European Community Assistance

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the criteria which applicants will have to satisfy when applying for European grant assistance under each of the headings outlined in the Northern Ireland community support framework document.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The primary requirement for applicants is that their proposals should comply with the specific priorities identified by the EC Commission in its Community support framework for Northern Ireland. These call for: improvement of the physical and social environment; reduction in the effects of peripherality; diversification and strengthening of the industrial and tradeable services sectors; development of agriculture and tourism; and training to develop Northern Ireland's human resources. The funds available are, of course, limited, and proposals must also demonstrate value for money.

The detailed project criteria form part of the various operational programmes currently being negotiated with the Commission. As these are agreed, the criteria will be made known to those wishing to put forward proposals. Work is also in hand on application guidelines which will be circulated to local partners, and to others on request.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the current negotiations between his Department and the European Commission in relation to European funding.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Negotiations with the Commission on the Northern Ireland Community support framework were completed in December last year. Since then, negotiations continue on the content of the various earning programmes to be supported from our allocations from the three structural funds. Other, special, programmes may also be funded from outside member state allocations and officials are discussing with the Commission how Northern Ireland can best benefit from them. These measures include, of course, the transfrontier programme on which we and the Government of the Republic of Ireland are jointly negotiating with the Commission.

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total amount of financial assistance received by (a) each Northern Ireland Government Department, (b) each district council in Northern Ireland and (c) other organisations from European Community sources, in each year since 1980.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Northern Ireland's largest single source of funding from the European Community is the guarantee section of the European agricultural guidance and guarantee fund. However, the bulk of such receipts are centrally disbursed, by the intervention board for agricultural produce, and details of payments are not generally maintained on a regional basis. There are numerous other sources of EC grant and although, in most of these cases, figures for the Province as a whole are available they are not analysed on the basis sought. Nevertheless it has been possible to construct a table showing for the last three financial years (aggregated) the amounts of structural fund money received by the various Northern Ireland departments, by the district council sector and by other bodies. The details are as follows:

Financial Years	Northern Ireland Departments					District
	DANI £ million	DED £ million	DOE £ million	DHSS £ million	DENI £ million	Councils £ million	Others £ million	Total £ million
1987-88 to 1989-90	24·1	139·2	18·4	4·6	23·5	11·9	81·2	302·9

(These figures are provisional; their accuracy depends upon 1989-90 receipts being finalised.)

In so far as it would be feasible, the further detail requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cerebral Palsy

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how many children are registered with the Eastern health and social services board who have cerebral palsy in the age groups (a) under five years, (b) five to 16 years, (c) 16 to 24 years and (d) 24 years and over;

(2) how many children are registered with the Southern health and social services board who have cerebral palsy in the age groups (a) under five years, (b) five to 16 years, (c) 16 to 24 years and (d) 24 years and over.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 5 April 1990]: There is no requirement upon the health and social services boards to maintain registers of people suffering from cerebral palsy. Although various professional officers and departments hold relevant information, these records can be collated only at disproportionate cost.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Local Government Finance (Rebates)

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many single parent householders in Scotland are (a) in receipt of maximum 80 per cent. poll tax rebates and (b) eligible for poll tax rebate at less than the maximum rate in 1989-90;

(2) how many single pensioners in Scotland are (a) receiving the maximum 80 per cent. poll tax rebates and (b) eligible for poll tax rebate at less than the maximum rate in 1989-90.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest estimates are in the table.

Community Charge Rebates: Scotland 1989-90

	Number receiving maximum rebate	Number receiving less than maximum rebate
Single parent householders	70,000	10,000
Single people aged 60 or over	150,000	100,000

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimate of the number of people in Scotland likely to take up their entitlement to poll tax rebate in 1989-90; and what sum of money was allocated for this purpose.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Government do not make forecasts of the numbers entitled to benefits. Estimates of those entitled to community charge rebates will be able to be made retrospectively, when data from the relevant family expenditure survey becomes available. However, in the 1989-90 spring supply estimates (HC 231-XV 88-89) it was estimated that the number of charge payers in Scotland receiving community charge rebates was rather more than 1 million. The total local authority expenditure on rebates was estimated to be £201 million, of which £194 million was met through central Government subsidy.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will indicate the number of people in (a) Alyn and Deeside, (b) Clwyd and (c) Wales who will qualify for poll tax rebate following the rise in the capital disregard to £16,000.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The models used by this Department produce estimates of the numbers of people expected to receive community charge benefit, not of numbers who may be eligible.

(a) and (b)—Reliable estimates of number of recipients cannot be provided on the detailed regional basis requested by the hon. Member.

(c)—The latest estimate of the number of individual chargepayers in Wales who will receive community charge benefit is 541,000 in 1990-91.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was spent on domestic rate rebates in Scotland in 1987-88 and 1988-89; how much was spent on poll tax rebates in Scotland in 1989-90; and what is planned expenditure on poll tax rebates in Scotland in 1990-91.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The latest estimate of spending on domestic rate rebates in Scotland is £212 million in 1987-88 and £168 million in 1988-89. The 1989-90 community charge rebate expenditure in Scotland is estimated to be £222 million and the planned expenditure for community charge benefit in 1990-91 is £232 million.

Disability

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants would qualify for the severe disability premium if it were to be awarded to people receiving attendance allowance and who do not have a carer who receives invalid care allowances for looking after them.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information on which to base such an estimate is not available.

Mr. Sims: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make available to the House the report of the Minister with responsibility for the disabled on the groups he met and the projects he visited during his visit in 1989 to the United States of America.

Mr. Scott: The purpose of my visit to the United States of America between 29 July 1989 and 3 August 1989 was to look at ways in which the Federal Government, state governments, welfare organisations and major employers were working to improve the quality of life for people with disabilities through education, health and employment programmes. I regret that a formal report of the visit is not available.

Following meetings in New York, Washington, Baltimore and San Fransisco, my trip culminated in a visit to the California relay system (CRS) in Los Angeles. The CRS provides an unlimited access service which enables people with a hearing impairment to communicate via the telephone network with a hearing person, and is therefore operating on a similar way to the telephone exchange for the deaf operated by the Royal National Institute for the Deaf in London and Glasgow. Both the British and Californian systems provide a valuable service for people with a severe hearing impairment.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response he has received to "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People" from the Royal Association for Disability and Rehabilitation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The association has submitted a detailed written response, and it was represented at a meeting I held on 5 April with the Disability Benefits Consortium to discuss "The Way Ahead." We shall give careful consideration to all the association's comments in carrying forward the detailed work on our proposals.

Child Benefit

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much child benefit has been paid in each of the parliamentary constituencies of Wales for (a) 1983 and (b) 1988-89.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Information relating to child benefit in Great Britain cannot be sub-divided beyond England, Scotland and Wales. The amount of child benefit expenditure for Wales is estimated to have been £204·4 million in 1983-84 and £234·0 million in 1988-89.

Disability Allowances

Mr. Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he proposes to extend the age restriction on qualification for mobility allowance beyond the present limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: We intend to incorporate mobility allowance in the new disability allowance from April 1992. Like mobility allowance, the disability allowance will be awarded only in respect of disability occurring before age 65, but there will be no upper age limit for payment provided the criteria continue to be met. When the disability allowance is introduced, we intend to remove the upper age limit for payment of mobility allowance to people who are already receiving it.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what alterations are envisaged in the introduction of the disability allowance to ensure an efficient assessment procedure and minimise distress to the claimant.

Mr. Scott: We are considering the assessment procedures for the disability allowance. We shall be concerned to devise procedures which are efficient, and accessible and helpful to claimants.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of weeks that lapses between a claim and the date of notification of the decision to the claimant in respect of allowances for (a) mobility, (b) attendance and (c) severe disablement.

Mr. Scott: The latest available information is as follows:

	Weeks
Mobility allowance (March)	7·0
Attendance allowance (March)	7·6
Severe disablement allowance (February)	12·1

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time elapsing between a letter of appeal and refusal of mobility allowance and notification of the decision of the adjudicating medical authority.

Mr. Scott: The average time taken between receipt of an appeal to a medical board against a decision on a mobility allowance claim and notification of the decision is currently 11·6 weeks.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time elapsing between a letter of review after refusal of attendance allowance and notification of the decision of the attendance allowance board.

Mr. Scott: This information is not available.

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average time which elapses between a letter of appeal against a refusal to severe disablement allowance or refusal of mobility allowance after a medical board and the medical appeal tribunal hearing.

Mr. Scott: The latest available figures are for the quarter ending on 30 September 1989. During that period, the average time taken between the date of lodgement of an appeal to a medical appeal tribunal and the hearing was 20.8 weeks for severe disablement allowance claims and 16.2 weeks for mobility allowance claims.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the reply of 2 April, if he will obtain from his Department's local management information on how many of his departmental staff in Bradford, since 1979, have been given permission exceptionally to hold a financial interest in private residential or nursing homes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No members of staff have sought permission.

Pensions

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has for the payment of state pensions by means of automatic cash dispensers.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no such plans.

Community Charge Benefit

Mr. Franks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from community charge payers in Barrow about advice by the Barrow district council concerning community charge benefit following the Budget; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: No representations on any advice given by Barrow district council have so far been received.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the amount of community charge benefit which will accrue to a household, assuming that transitional relief does not apply, where the earnings of the couple are £160 and £50, respectively, the community charge is £420 per person and the said persons are (a) a married couple or (b) two persons not falling within the category of cohabiting or married couples; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Assuming the figures quoted refer to earnings net of tax and national insurance contributions, (a) a married couple with combined net earnings of £210 per week would not qualify for community charge benefit, and (b) of two single people not living together as husband and wife with net earnings of £160 and £50 per week respectively, the former would not qualify for community charge benefit and the other would qualify for £5·20 per week.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to adjust the arrangements for community charge benefit so that married couples who are both employed may be treated in the same way as persons living in the same accommodation who are not married and not regarded as cohabiting couples; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no such plans. The structure of community charge benefit is designed to ensure that the recipients' net income, after paying their community charge, is no lower than if they received income support. The assessment rules therefore follow those for income support in assessing married couples differently from two single people who are not living together as husband and wife.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will set out, by regions and by amounts, as much information as is available to him about the take-up so far of poll tax benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The Department does not make forecasts of the number of people entitled to income-related benefits. Take-up estimates are made as and when they can be derived from historical survey data. Take-up estimates for community charge benefit will not be available before 1992.

Household Incomes

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to publish the latest below average household income tables.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Within the next few weeks.

Seafarers

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will introduce a special social security scheme for those engaged in the seafaring industry.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: We have no plans to change the social security arrangements for those who work in the seafaring industry. Foreign-going mariners and share fishermen are already subject to special rules in respect of benefit entitlement and contribution liability.

National Insurance

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much extra revenue would be raised by his Department if the upper earnings limit on national insurance contributions were abolished on the basis of existing scales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: If the upper earnings limit for employees' national insurance contributions were abolished it is estimated that the extra revenue raised at current rates would be £2·45 billion. This assumes that an upper limit would be retained for contracting-out and that all contributions above that limit would be at the full not contracted-out rate.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much revenue would be raised if national insurance contributions were chargeable at current rates on investment income above a national insurance contribution threshold of £3,500.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: If national insurance contributions were charged at the employees' main percentage rate of 9 per cent. on all investment income over £3,500 per year, including that of pensioners, it is estimated that the revenue raised at current rates would be about £1·53 billion. This estimate is based on a projection of the 1987-88 survey of personal incomes and is therefore provisional.

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to a pensioner with an investment income of (a) £5,000, (b) £10,000 and (c) £1,000 as a result of the imposition of national insurance contributions on all investment income at current rates of national insurance contributions.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Pensioners do not currently pay national insurance contributions, but if such contributions were charged at the employees' main percentage rate of 9 per cent. on all investment income the cost to a pensioner would be as shown in the table.

Investment income (£)	National insurance contribution (£)
5,000	450
10,000	900
1,000	90

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost to a pensioner with an investment income of (a) £3,500, (b) £5,000 and (c) £10,000 as a result of imposing national insurance contribution charges on all investment income above £3,000 and above £3,500.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Pensioners do not currently pay national insurance contributions but if such contributions were charged at the employees' main percentage rate of 9 per cent. on all investment income above £3,000 and above £3,500 the cost to a pensioner would be as shown in the table.

National Insurance contributions

Investment income £	Ceiling of £3,000 £	Ceiling of £3,500 £
3,500	45	nil
5,000	180	135
10,000	630	585

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the total cost, per week, to individuals on (a) 1·5, (b) two, (c) 2·5 and (d) three times average incomes, if the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions were abolished on the basis of the existing scales.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The table shows the extra cost per week to the individuals concerned assuming that an upper limit was retained for contracting out and that all contributions above that limit would be at the full not contracted-out rate.

Average male full time[1] earnings	Extra cost per week £
X 1·5 (£450)	9·00
X 2 (£600)	22·50
X 2·5 (£750)	36·00
X 3 (£900)	49·50

[1] Assumed as £300 in 1990-91 for illustrative purposes.

Radiation Exposure

Mr. Clay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on what assumptions as to the number of people qualifying for radiation exposure payments and the rates of such payments the estimated cost of the proposed new clause 8 to the Social Security Bill given by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State on 28 March, Official Report, columns 636-37, was based.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: For the purposes of the estimate, it was assumed that 1,000 people might be eligible under the terms of the proposed new clause and that payments would be equivalent to the maximum allowable rates of industrial injuries benefits.

Unemployment Cost

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his latest estimate for the total costs to the Exchequer of the average unemployed adult including payment of benefits, lost taxes and other taxes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 4 April 1990]: In 1989-90 the estimated average weekly benefit cost for unemployed people receiving benefit was £61·80. Estimates of tax revenue forgone are not available.

Single Payments

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will state the value of single payments made between (a) April 1988 and March 1989, and (b) between April 1989 and the most recent practicable date, in each case both as a total sum and by DSS regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 3 April 1990]: The regional variations and total amounts of single payment awards made between April 1988 and March 1989 and April 1989 and February 1990 are shown in the table.

Spending Power

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures, similar to those in his Department's tax/benefit model table, showing net weekly spending power for a lone mother with two children aged four and six years under the benefit system as uprated in April 1990 and in each of the following circumstances (a) not working, after one year on benefits, (b) earning £20 a week from part-time working and (c) working full-time and earning (i) £60, (ii) £70, (iii) £80, (iv) £90, (v) £100, (vi) £110 and (vii) £120 per week.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 2 March 1990]: The information is in the tables. It should be noted that the results in the tables remain arbitrary. They cannot reflect, except by chance, the actual circumstances of particular people and cannot claim to be representative of the population at large. The tables use hypothetical rents so they do not reflect the full range of housing costs which people can pay.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Racial Discrimination

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to how many members of police forces have been dismissed or required to resign for racially discriminatory behaviour since the introduction of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Statistics are not collected about the use in disciplinary proceedings of specific items in the police discipline code. It is not therefore possible to say how many officers have been found guilty of racially discriminatory behaviour, or how they were punished. Such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Male Prisoners (Night Attire)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what night attire is provided for male prisoners.

Mr. Mellor: Pyjamas are available for those inmates who wish to wear them.

Disciplinary Adjudications (Prisons)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects a report will be published on the experiment in three prisons whereby legally qualified clerks attended disciplinary adjudications.

Mr. Mellor: A pilot scheme to provide qualified clerks to assist at board of visitors' adjudications is under way in 13 establishments and is being independently monitored. We expect to receive a report of that monitoring by the beginning of 1991 and hope then to publish it.

Penal Establishments

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether research is being undertaken to ascertain the number of people released from long-stay mental hospitals who are in prison department establishments.

Mr. Mellor: The Home Office has commissioned no research specifically on that precise issue but has granted facilities at Leeds prison to assist the Leeds Eastern health authority in one of its projects to ascertain what happens to former long-stay patients.

The extensive checklist used by the research team from the Institute of Psychiatry, university of London, commissioned to produce a psychiatric profile of the sentenced prison population includes the question of in-patient psychiatric history. The institute is scheduled to submit its report at the end of the year.

Overseas Residents

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will estimate, by country, the number of overseas residents who are eligible to register to vote in British general elections.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The table gives an estimate of the number of British citizens living in each country who are likely to have spent fewer than 20 years there. The figures may include people who left the United Kingdom more than 20 years ago, or who were not registered as electors in the United Kingdom when they left as adults, and so do not qualify to register as overseas electors.

Estimates of the number of British citizens who have lived in each country abroad for less than 20 years.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will state how many overseas residents, by country, are currently registered to vote in British elections; and if he will give the equivalent figures for each of the past five years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. The number of attestations of overseas electors' declarations carried out by consular officials in each country is available centrally for 1986, the first year of operation of the overseas franchise introduced by the Representation of the People Act 1985, and is given in the following table; this information is not available for subsequent years. The total number in 1986 was slightly greater than the total number who were registered that year (11,100), since a number of declarations were either not received by the electoral registration officer or were rejected.

Security Industry

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the working group on the self-regulation of the security industry submitted its report; and whether he will place this report in the Library.

Mr. John Patten: The working group submitted its report last July. Its recommendations are being considered within the Home Office.

Racially Motivated Crimes

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions have been brought in each of the past 15 years for each category of racially motivated crimes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: Information is not collected on the number of prosecutions for offences which were racially motivated. The research and planning unit of the Home Office published in 1989 a paper, No. 54, on "Racially motivated incidents reported to the police", a copy of which is in the Library.

Cheltenham Conference (Security)

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the cost of the policing operation to protect the Prime Minister when she addressed the Conservative party in Cheltenham on 31 March 1990.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Chief Constable of Gloucestershire that the estimated additional cost of policing the Conservative party conference in Cheltenham was £120,000 over the three days.

Leicestershire Police Authority

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what additional support he is proposing to offer the Leicestershire police authority to meet its extra policing requirements.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend has approved 53 additional police posts for the Leicestershire constabulary for 1990-91. The police authority has applied for 25 police posts for 1991-92. This will be considered, with the advice of Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary, along with the applications from other police authorities. The aim is to announce decisions on force increases in the autumn.

Vehicle Removal

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Newham, North-East of 30 March, Official Report, column 373, if he will call for a report from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis on the daily average of vehicles recorded as parked unlawfully in Green street and Katherine road in the London borough of Newham and as to whether he has any proposals to increase the number which are removed.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that no specific records are kept of the average number of unlawfully parked vehicles in these roads.

Routine enforcement action is undertaken by traffic wardens and police officers, usually by issue of a fixed penalty notice. However, there will be many instances where illegally parked vehicles will be driven away before an officer is able to issue a notice.

The removal of illegally parked vehicles will continue to be arranged subject to traffic conditions and the availability of resources. There are no plans at present to increase the number of vehicle removals in the specified roads.

Correspondence

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now reply to the letter sent to him by the hon. Member for Gower on 5 March regarding staffing at Swansea prison.

Mr. Mellor: I replied to the hon. Member on 6 April.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now reply to the letter sent to him on 24 February by the hon. Member for Gower regarding his constituent from West Cross, Swansea.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I replied to the hon. Member on 5 April.

Serious Disorder, London

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to make an early decision as to whether events on Saturday 31 March in London constituted a riot for Riot Damages Act purposes.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The receiver for the Metropolitan police district is satisfied that the terms of the Riot (Damages) Act 1886 apply. The Metropolitan police announced on 2 April that any person who believed that they had a claim for damage to a house, shop or building or any property in such premises should make a claim to the receiver, G9 branch, 2 Bessborough street, London SW1V 2JF within 14 days of the disturbance on 31 March, or submit notice of intention to make such a claim.

Parking Offences

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many motor vehicles were towed away for fixed penalty offences in London in 1989;

(2) how many motor vehicles were wheel-clamped in London in 1989;

(3) how many vehicles towed away in London in 1989 were towed away for (a) dangerous parking, (b) obstruction, (c) restricted street offences, (d) parking in designated parking bays and (e) parking in residents' parking bays;

(4) how many vehicles wheel-clamped in London in 1989 were clamped for (a) dangerous parking, (b) obstruction, (c) restricted street offences, (d) parking in designated parking bays and (e) parking in residents' parking bays.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that during 1989 a total of 149,666 vehicles were wheel-clamped and 116,315 vehicles were removed for illegal parking in London.

Information about the number of vehicles wheel-clamped or removed for specific offences could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

As a matter of police policy, fixed penalty notices are issued to all vehicles before wheel-clamping. In the case of vehicles which are removed for parking offences, although the great majority are issued with a fixed penalty notice, there are certain circumstances where the issue of a fixed penalty is not appropriate because of the seriousness of the offence.

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines are used by the Metropolitan police for the priorities for the wheel-clamping and removal of motor vehicles.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Wheel-clamping and vehicle removal operations are used by the Metropolitan police as an aid to the enforcement of parking regulations.

Guidelines are issued to all officers engaged on these duties. In areas where wheel-clamping is authorised, any offending vehicle may be clamped or removed. Police officers are expected to exercise discretion as to whether wheel-clamping or removal is the desirable course of action dependent upon prevailing circumstances. A vehicle would not normally be clamped if it is parked in a position which causes serious obstruction or danger to other road users, or if it is parked in a bus lane, bus stop or cab rank, on the approach to or exit from a pedestrian crossing, adjacent to a fire exit or across an access used by emergency vehicles or leading to private premises.

In order of priority, enforcement action is concentrated on those vehicles which are causing danger, obstruction, parked illegally in restricted areas or parked illegally in permitted parking places.

Personal Injury

Sir Anthony Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the percentage of all crimes represented by crimes of violence and of road accidents involving personal injury in each of the county police areas in England and Wales in each of the last five years.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested on crimes of violence is given in the following table. Information on road accidents is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Minister for Transport.

Violence against the person as a percentage of total recorded crime in non-metropolitan police force areas.

Probation Service

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the discussion paper on the probation service and the independent sector, foreshadowed in chapter 10 of the Green Paper, "Supervision and Punishment in the Community", will be available.

Mr. John Patten: The discussion paper "Partnership in Dealing with Offenders in the Community" was published yesterday; a copy has been placed in the Library. It has been distributed to probation services and other criminal justice agencies, and to a wide range of voluntary and other organisations. Further individual copies may be obtained, free of charge, by writing to:

Room 440
Criminal Justice and Constitutional Department
Home Office
50 Queen Anne's Gate

Tyre Dumps (Fires)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contingency plans exist to deal with a major fire at a major tyre dump in Britain.

Mr. Waddington: It is the duty of each fire authority to make provision for firefighting purposes in its area, and to ensure that its fire brigade has adequate and efficient fire cover arrangements. These would include contingency plans for all significant fire risks such as those inherent in major tyre dumps for which the fire service has available special techniques. Typically, a comprehensive contingency plan would also detail arrangements for liaising with the police and the other emergency services, and for the evacuation of the area should the situation require it.

Rule 43 Prisoners

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will initiate a review of the policy of holding prisoners subject to rule 43 protection in the same buildings as other prisoners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Prisoners segregated under rule 43 for their own protection are housed in separate buildings where it is practicable to do so. At most establishments, however, this is not feasible because of the relatively small numbers of such prisoners and the need to make maximum use of the limited accommodation available.

Police Complaints Authority

Mr. Flannery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what power the Police Complaints Authority has to investigate events occurring before its establishment in April 1984.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 gives the Police Complaints Authority no investigative powers, but vests it with considerable powers to supervise investigations into complaints or, in some circumstances, into incidents which have not been the subject of a complaint. The Act precludes the authority from supervising the investigation of any matter which occurred before its establishment on 29 April 1984.

Police Equipment

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide full details of the names and sponsors of the international police equipment conference.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The international police exhibition and conference (IPEC) is organised by a private company, Major Exhibitions and Conferences Ltd., for which my right hon. and learned Friend has no responsibility.

Fraud Squads

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish in respect of the fraud squad within each police force in England and Wales (i) the number of officers allocated to the fraud squad, (ii) the number of fraud squad officers as a percentage of the total number of police officers in each force, (iii) the planned numbers in the fraud squad for each force up to the year 2000, (iv) the number of prosecutions for fraud for the latest available date, (v) the number of convictions for fraud for the latest available date and (vi) the amount spent on computer hardware and software during the year 1988-89; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The future allocation of officers to specific duties is an operational matter for each chief officer of police. Information on computer expenditure by fraud squads is not available and would be obtained only at disproportionate cost. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to his question on 30 March 1990 at column 631 for the remainder of the information requested.

Radio Stations

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the new franchises which the shadow Radio Authority has advertised for in respect of (a) the numbers of franchises to be issued and (b) the date when the franchises are to take effect;

(2) if he will make a statement on the recent announcement by the Independent Broadcasting Authority that it is inviting letters of intent for new radio franchises.

Mr. Mellor: The shadow Radio Authority has invited letters of intent from prospective licensees to assist in the process of drawing up a plan for the introduction of new independent stations. This exercise will give the authority an indication of the geographical spread of demand for new services, and the nature of that demand. The number of new licences which will be advertised in due course will be determined by factors such as local audience demand, financial viability, frequency availability and the extent to which the range and diversity of listener choice would be enhanced. In the course of the 1990s several hundred new services of various sizes could gradually emerge across the country. Advertising of licences for specific services will start when the Radio Authority is formally established in January 1991, if Parliament approves the provisions of the Broadcasting Bill.

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the proposed licence fee for the radio stations franchised by the shadow Radio Authority.

Mr. Mellor: Under the provisions of the Broadcasting Bill the Radio Authority will be expected to receive its income from licence fee revenue. The authority aims to operate a differential scale of fees for the various services which it will license, but has yet to determine what those fees should be. We propose to amend the Broadcasting Bill in order to require the Radio Authority to publish its tariff of licence fees.

Detective Inspector Paul Matthews

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ask the Chief Constable of the West Midlands for a report as to whether any complaint has been received against former Detective Inspector Paul Matthews regarding his role in the case against Malcolm Herring.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand that such a complaint has been received, and that it is being investigated by the team led by Mr. Donald Shaw, Assistant Chief Constable of West Yorkshire, under the supervision of the Police Complaints Authority.

Prisoners' Earnings

Mr. Rees: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the average weekly earnings of prisoners in England and Wales.

Mr. Mellor: Following a recent increase in inmates' earnings, it is estimated that average weekly pay in 1990-91 for inmates in England and Wales (including those who are unoccupied) will be about £2·80. All convicted inmates, as well as those unconvicted inmates who offer themselves for work, receive a basic weekly payment of £1·75 whether occupied or not. A range of flat-rate, piece-rate and incentive pay schemes provide opportunities to earn up to a maximum of £5·87 per week in certain workshops and kitchens.

Mr. Rees: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is (a) the average and (b) the maximum weekly earnings of a prisoner undertaking group I, group II and group III employment, respectively.

Mr. Mellor: With effect from 9 April 1990, the weekly rates under the flat rate scheme for inmates in England and Wales are as follows:

	Average £	Maximum £
Group I	2·95	3·55
Group II	2·75	3·35
Group III	2·55	3·15

Mr. Rees: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the hourly overtime rate for prisoners' work.

Mr. Mellor: The rate is 8p.

Mr. Rees: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the weekly rate of earnings paid to prisoners for whom no work is available.

Mr. Mellor: With effect from 9 April 1990, £1·75.

Extradition

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (i) those countries within the European Community which will extradite their nationals to the United Kingdom when charged with fraud-related offences committed here and (ii) those countries within the European Community to which the United Kingdom would extradite British nationals resident here to face charges of fraud committed in those countries.

Mr. John Patten: Fraud is included as an extraditable offence in all the bilateral treaties between the United Kingdom and the other members of the European Community, and is also covered by the backing of warrants procedure which operates between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

The United Kingdom, which has very limited extra-territorial jurisdiction, is prepared (subject to the circumstances of the case and our treaty arrangements with the country concerned) to extradite United Kingdom nationals to stand trial in the place where the offence was committed. This contrasts with the position in many civil law countries, which have wide extra-territorial powers to prosecute for offences committed outside their territory, but which are restricted constitutionally from extraditing their own nationals. The United Kingdom's extradition arrangements with the member countries of the European Community reflect this difference of approach.

Under the treaties with Belgium, France, the Federal Republic of Germany, Portugal and Spain, the United Kingdom may extradite nationals to stand trial abroad, but those countries have discretion to refuse the extradition of their nationals here. The Netherlands are in a broadly similar position, although an amendment to their domestic law in 1981 now permits the extradition of a Dutch national here if the Dutch authorities are satisfied that there is sufficient guarantee that the offender would be returned to serve any prison sentence in the Netherlands. The Luxembourg treaty expressly prohibits the extradition of their nationals, while allowing United Kingdom nationals to be extradited there. Three further treaties, with Denmark, Greece and Italy, prohibit the extradition of nationals in either direction, so that the United Kingdom cannot at present extradite United Kingdom nationals to those countries. (This limitation on United Kingdom freedom of action will be removed later this year when the United Kingdom ratifies the European convention on extradition, which will take the place of existing extradition treaties with convention countries.) There are no restrictions on the extradition of nationals in either direction between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Mr. Neil Larkman

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department why the inquest into the death of Neil Larkman at Swansea prison on 4 November has not yet taken place; and why the original date was deferred.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The conduct of an inquest is a matter for the coroner, who has informed me that the inquest into the death of Neil Larkman began on 22 March when the evidence of several witnesses was heard. The hearing was then adjourned at the request of solicitors acting for Mr. Larkman's family because two witnesses failed to appear. The coroner has now issued subpoenas for their attendance at a resumed hearing on 3 May.

Armley Prison

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were in Armley Prison on the night of Monday, 2 April and Tuesday 3 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: On the mornings of Tuesday 3 April and Wednesday 4 April 1,311 and 1,273 prisoners respectively were held at Her Majesty's prison Leeds. Population figures are not collated separately for the evening.

Manchester Prison

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners during the recent disturbances at Her Majesty's prison, Manchester escaped outside prison boundaries; and how many of such prisoners were recaptured.

Mr. Mellor: No prisoners have escaped from Manchester prison during the recent incident.

Bramham Moor Hunt

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set up an inquiry into the circumstances resulting in the deaths of four horses at the Bramham moor hunt's point-to-point meeting at Wetherby racecourse on Saturday 31 March.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 5 April 1990]: No. These are matters for the responsible authorities.

Victim Support, Newcastle

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards victim support schemes in east Newcastle.

Mr John Patten [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The Home Office pays grant in aid (£3·7 million in 1989-90 and £4·5 million subject to parliamentary approval this year) to Victim Support headquarters for the benefit of local victim support schemes. The grant is administered by the funding panel of Victim Support in accordance with agreed criteria which provide for payment of salaries or running costs. I understand that salaries grant is paid for two posts in the east Newcastle scheme. Responsibility for the funding of one of these posts was taken over from the local authority from 1 April 1989.

TRANSPORT

Maritime Safety

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether his Department has prepared a paper for presentation to the International Maritime Organisation requesting urgent consideration of the application of a revised standard of damage stability to all existing roll-on roll-off passenger ships, as recommended by the steering committee of the roll-on roll-off ferry safety research programme; and when in May the maritime safety committee of the International Maritime Organisation will meet.

Mr. McLoughlin: My Department has already submitted a paper to the 58th session of the maritime safety committee of the International Maritime Organisation, which takes place from 21 to 25 May 1990. Our paper sets out the work and recommendations of the ro-ro safety research programme, and proposes that > "the Committee consider the adoption of a standard of residual stability for existing ro-ro ferries higher than that now required by the Convention", and will include the steering committee and overview reports.

Marchioness

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a further grant to the Marchioness disaster fund to cover the cost of legal representation of the relatives of the victims at the forthcoming inquest; and if he will make a statement.

Mr McLoughlin: I announced on 18 October 1989 that the Government had contributed £125,000 to the Riverboat Trust Fund set up by the mayor of Southwark, following the Marchioness disaster. Payments from the trust are matters for the trustees within the terms of the deed of trust, and I see no reason for a further contribution to the fund for the suggested purpose.

Toton Goods Yard

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will meet the chief executive of the British Rail Property Board to discuss the use of British Rail land at Toton for Transport related uses.

Mr. Portillo: No; this is a commercial matter for British Rail.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will obtain a copy of the Halcrow Fox Consulting Engineers report on the viability of access to the Toton goods yard through existing transport routes;

(2) what proposals he has to develop road and rail links between the A52 and the proposed Toton international freight terminal;

(3) what steps he is taking to ensure that an international freight terminal for the east midlands is built at Toton goods yards on land currently owned by British Rail.

Mr. Portillo: The responsibility for planning international rail freight services rests with British Rail. Any road implications of particular proposals will be considered by my Department in due course.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what correspondence he has received from Nottinghamshire county council, Mr. Cedric Ford and the Nottinghamshire chamber of commerce regarding delays in the freeing of derelict land in the ownership of British Rail in the Toton area.

Mr. Portillo: I am not aware of any such correspondence.

Rail Safety

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to the answer of 29 March, Official Report, column 239, if he will place in the Library a copy of the full report on the test carried out by the railways inspectorate into the safety effects of the incapacitation of one-person operation train drivers.

Mr. Portillo: No tests were carried out by the inspectorate; it observed the exercise carried out by London Underground Ltd. The chief inspecting officer of railways was satisfied by the result.

Sub-standard Shipping

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the efficacy of the powers that exist at present to eliminate sub-standard shipping from entering ports in the United Kingdom; and if he has any plans to amend those powers.

Mr. McLoughlin: The United Kingdom, with 13 other European countries, is a signatory to the memorandum of understanding (MOU) on port state control, under which foreign ships using its ports are subject to inspection to check compliance with the requirements of the international maritime conventions. Each signatory country should achieve an annual total of inspections corresponding to 25 per cent. of the estimated number of individual foreign merchant ships which enter its ports during a 12-month period; the United Kingdom has always exceeded 25 per cent. In practice, this should result in an inspection rate of around 85 per cent. of all individual ships using ports in the region.

The Department's marine surveyors possess substantial powers to ensure that deficiencies found on ships are rectified. These powers include the sanction of detention in cases where the deficiency is serious and clearly hazardous to safety, health or the environment: the owner or master may also be prosecuted. I have no immediate plans to seek amendments to the present powers.

Merchant Fleet

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of merchant vessels in the United Kingdom fleet (a) today and (b) 15 years ago; and what assessment he has made of the reasons for the decline.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of merchant vessels—over 500 gross registered tonnes—in the United Kingdom fleet, including Crown dependencies, but excluding British dependent territories overseas at 28 February 1990 were as follows:

Year	Number
1975	1,776
1990	444

The number of ships on the United Kingdom register reduced as a consequence of the general decline in world shipping from the economically unsustainable levels of the 1970s. Changes in trading patterns, notably arising from adjustments to oil price increases, particularly affected the United Kingdom tanker fleet. Additionally, British operators have withdrawn from less profitable shipping sectors and concentrated on the higher value-added sectors.

Merchant Fleet

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the number of officers and ratings employed on British merchant ships (a) today and (b) in 1975; and what assessment he has made of the reasons for the decline.

Mr. McLoughlin: The most recent figures are as follows:

Officers and ratings employed in the United Kingdom shipping industry: 1975, 1989

	31 December 1975	31 December 1989
Officers	35,815	8,573
Ratings	33,524	11,953

Note: Figures derived from General Council of British Shipping statistics.

The number of jobs on British merchant ships reduced with the decline in the British world fleets from the economically unsustainable levels of the 1970s. Automation and new technology have further reduced the number of crew required.

Coastal Trading

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will take steps to eliminate from coastal trading the ships of countries which do not allow British ships access to their coastal trades.

Mr. McLoughlin: No. The adoption of such a policy would be against our aim of promoting competition in shipping markets and reducing transport costs. My right hon. Friend is pressing his colleagues in the Transport Council of the European Community to reach early agreement to the liberalisation of all Community coastal and offshore trading. However, as a last resort we would consider using the powers under the 1988 Merchant Shipping Act to introduce a test of establishment for any operator trading in United Kingdom coastal waters.

Chemical Discharge, Salisbury

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will call for a report from the Health and Safety Executive on the discharge of chemicals by British Rail on to private land in Salisbury on 5 and 6 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: On 6 March, BR staff applied the locally stored pesticides to brambles. Shunting staff considered the brambles to be a safety hazard. Subsequently, the chemicals were spread by the wind on to some nearby private properties causing damage to plants, grass and herbage. The environmental health officer wrote to all households in the vicinity warning them not to eat any produce from the affected gardens. I understand the two herbicides involved, Atlacide and Borocil, are MAFF-approved products, but their effects could persist for some time.

British Rail has accepted full responsibility for the incident and is, I understand, in touch with local people to discuss compensation. An officer of the railway inspectorate is investigating the matter and will decide whether any further action is necessary.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Training

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many people from developing countries have been financed to come to the United Kingdom for training for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: The number of overseas students in this country under United Kingdom Government support schemes for the years 1979 to 1988 is estimated as follows. Some schemes are recorded only on a financial year basis. Where this is so the number for the financial year (for example) 1983-84 has been counted as 1983.

	Number
1979	16,021
1980	14,433
1981	13,755
1982	12,639
1983	15,460
1984	17,587
1985	16,731
1986	16,952
1987	18,764
1988	19,544

Water and Sewerage Projects

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many water supply and sewerage projects have been financed by the Overseas Development Administration for each year since 1979.

Mrs. Chalker: A total of 62 projects in the water supply and sewerage sectors were financed during the years 1980-88, some of which have spanned more than one year. This includes projects committed before 1980.

The numbers of new commitments in these sectors each year were:

	Number
1980	1
1981	9
1982	0
1983	3
1984	3
1985	3
1986	4
1987	4
1988	6

The figure for 1989 is not yet available.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the major projects currently being undertaken by the Natural Resources Institute.

Mrs. Chalker: The Natural Resources Institute aims to alleviate poverty and hardship in developing countries by increasing the productivity of their renewable natural resources. It does this by supporting projects which help to increase agricultural productivity and farmer income through the more effective use and management of resources; develop robust, cost-effective solutions to pest management problems, paying particular attention to environmental safety and user needs; and reduce crop losses and improve the supply and quality of food and cash crops in the domestic and export markets of developing countries.

I shall send the hon. Member a copy of the framework document of the Natural Resources Institute, together with the latest annual report, which reviews major projects. Both documents are in the Libraries of the House.

Energy Projects

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will outline the Overseas Development Administration's current policy towards providing advice and finance for new energy projects in developing countries;

(2) which organisations in Britain provide advice to the Overseas Development Administration on energy policy in developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: The policy of the Overseas Development Administration towards providing advice and finance for new energy projects in developing countries is based on the assessment, case-by-case, of several factors. These include economic appraisal of the energy supply-demand situation; the scope for increase in the technical and economic efficiency of existing energy supply and use systems; social and environmental issues; and the need to ensure the reliability and sustainability of energy supplies.

In making such assessments, the ODA draws on the advice of its own substantial body of economic, engineering, natural resources, and social development advisers, supplemented by that of British consultants as necessary. In addition, the Administration keeps in touch with national and international expertise in British industry, academic bodies; the World Bank; regional development banks; the United Nations Environmental Programme and the development assistance committee of the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.

Women

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will outline the ways in which the Government is specifically assisting women in developing countries.

Mrs. Chalker: Our booklet "Women, Development and the British Aid Programme", published in March 1989 copies of which are in the library, explains our women in development policy and how we are helping women in developing countries. I have today sent the hon. Gentleman a copy.

Anniversary Review

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total cost to his Department of producing the booklet, "British Overseas Aid—Anniversary Review 1989".

Mrs. Chalker: It cost £105,000 to produce 20,000 copies of the anniversary review 1989 at a unit cost of £5·25.

Kenya

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what types of project are being financed by the Overseas Development Administration in the Embu, Meru and Isiolo districts of Kenya.

Mrs. Chalker: We have been assisting Kenya's arid and semi-arid lands development strategy by funding projects to stem environmental deterioration and to improve the productivity of the land in the drier areas of Embu, Meru and Isiolo districts. Under these projects £3·7 million has been committed for soil and water conservation, forestry development, livestock improvement and goat and sheep improvement.

We have also recently completed the financing of the construction and equipping of a 160-bed district hospital at Isiolo at a cost of over £3 million; we are continuing to help, for example, with the provision of technical co-operation.

Aid Shipments

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will introduce a policy of using only British ships for the shipment of United Kingdom aid cargoes.

Mrs. Chalker: No. Government policy is that aid cargoes should be shipped in accordance with normal commercial competitive practice and not directed to ships or companies of any particular flag or country. This policy is designed to ensure value for money for the aid programme.

Vietnam

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer concerning the lack of a shadow programme between Vietnam and international financial institutions, Official Report, 2 April, column 889, if he will define the term shadow programme and give any examples of countries that have previously established such programmes.

Mrs. Chalker: The term "shadow programme" refers to programmes of economic reform undertaken by a number of countries which have fallen into arrears on repayments due to the IMF, World Bank and regional development banks and have been declared ineligible for further lending. After approval by the IMF's executive board, these programmes are known as fund-monitored programmes (FMPs). They have specific targets and performance criteria, as in any normal IMF programme, but do not include any access to IMF resources. The purpose of an FMP is to allow a country to establish a track record of economic reform as a condition for international assistance with the clearance of arrears and for resumption of access to IMF lending. FMPs were agreed for Guyana in April 1989, Somalia in July 1989, and Zambia in March 1990. The executive board has not yet approved an FMP for Vietnam.

Sierra Leone

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Sierra Leone currently has (a) arrears owed to the International Monetary Fund, and (b) an economic programme agreed with the International Monetary Fund; and whether there is currently a British aid programme in Sierra Leone.

Mrs. Chalker: Yes, Sierra Leone has arrears to the International Monetary Fund amounting to $91 million at the end of March 1990. There is currently no economic programme agreed with the International Monetary Fund, but discussions with the fund and the World Bank are taking place.

The current British programme to Sierra Leone comprises technical co-operation and training; expenditure in 1989-90 amounted to some £1·6 million.

Zambia

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether United Kingdom aid to Zambia has ceased at any point since 1985.

Mrs. Chalker: No. Gross annual United Kingdom bilateral aid to Zambia since 1985 has been:

	£ million
1986	35.351
1987	25.349
1988	16.683

The 1989 figures are not yet available. As I announced on 5 April, we intend to provide a further tranche of £30 million in balance of payments support in 1990 to assist the implementation of the economic recovery programme agreed with the IMF, in addition to our ongoing technical co-operation programme.

ACP Debt

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of the Minister for Overseas Development on 2 April, Official Report, column 415, when and in which forum a decision is expected to be taken on cancelling outstanding repayments owed by ACP countries under the STABEX system; what is the estimated amount of such outstanding repayments; and whether Her Majesty's Government is in favour of their cancellation.

Mrs. Chalker: The ACP-EC Council of Ministers is responsible for resolving this issue. A decision was not reached at its recent meeting in Fiji, and the matter is now unlikely to be formally settled until next year's meeting. In the meantime, no repayment of the sums involved, some 90 million ecu—around £70 million—will be required. A final decision will be taken in the preparation for next year's meeting.

SCOTLAND

Local Government Finance

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sources of local authority income which have financed total local authority expenditure for each region in Scotland for every year since 1979-80 in constant prices and percentage terms.

Mr. Rifkind: The figures are given in the table. They have been converted to 1988-89 prices using the gross domestic product deflator. Amounts for rate and revenue support grant are final amounts or those applying to the most recent order. Figures for non-domestic and domestic rates are derived from data published in rating review for the relevant years up to 1988-89. For 1989-90 and 1990-91 amounts of non-domestic rate income and community charge income are taken from the provisional outturn-budget estimate returns made by local authorities by the Scottish Office. Domestic rates figures are net of domestic rate relief. All figures of domestic rate and community charge income are inclusive of rebates.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the most recent Government estimates of the cost to local authorities in Scotland of recovery of poll tax arrears.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale (Sir D. Steel) on 15 January.

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria his Department has given to assessors for assessing the commerciality of single self-catering units.

Mr. Rifkind: The Abolition of Domestic Rates (Domestic and Part Residential Subjects) (Scotland) Regulations 1990, which came into force on 1 April, exclude from the definition of domestic subjects dwelling houses made available for letting, commercially, as self-catering accommodation for short periods amounting in aggregate to at least 140 days per year. This has the effect of rendering such properties liable to non-domestic rates. Implementation of the regulations is in the first place a matter for assessors, whose decisions regarding particular properties are subject to the normal appeal procedures.

Mr. Richard Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list his latest estimate of the percentage of the community charge liability of chargepayers received by each charging authority for 1989-90.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not held centrally, but we understand that in most regions 85 to 95 per cent. of those eligible for the community charge have made some payment, with a figure of 98 per cent. in one area.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the accountancy firms used by his Department.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 18 December 1989 at column 50. The five firms used in 1989 were:

Coopers and Lybrand
Deloitte Haskins and Sells
Ernst and Young
Peat Marwick McLintock
Price Waterhouse

Medical Treatment

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish in the Official Report a list of those medical conditions which cannot be treated by hospitals within Scotland but can be treated by hospitals within England.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None; although in practice patients' conditions requiring certain surgical procedures, for example heart and liver transplants and pancreatic implants, are currently treated in specialised units in England.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) which hospital in Scotland has the longest waiting list for arthritic hip joint surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for arthritic hip joint surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each;

(2) which hospital in Scotland has the longest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; which has the lowest waiting period for varicose veins surgery; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each;

(3) which hospital in Scotland has the longest waiting list for hernia operations; which has the lowest waiting period for hernia operations; and if he will specify the number of waiting days for each.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Information on waiting times for individual operations is collected centrally on an annual basis. That for 1988, the last year for which statistics are available, revealed the following:

(a) Raigmore hospital, Inverness (Highland health board) had the longest median wait of 214 days for operations which are performed on arthritic hip joints. Stirling royal infirmary (Forth Valley health board) had the lowest median wait of 51 days.

(b) Victoria hospital, Kirkcaldy (Fife health board) has the longest median wait of 803 days for varicose vein operations. Dr. Grays hospital, Elgin (Grampian health board) had the lowest median wait of 43 days.

(c) Glasgow royal infirmary (Greater Glasgow health board) had the longest median wait of 124 days for hernia operations. Stracathro hospital, Brechin (Tayside health board) had the lowest median wait of 19 days.

In all three instances, hospitals with less than 50 such cases were excluded.

Rents-to-Mortgages Scheme

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many inquiries from tenants interested in purchasing their homes under the rents-to-mortgages scheme are now in the process of converting from rent to mortgage.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Scottish Homes is responsible for the processing of applications to purchase under the rents-to-mortgages scheme. As at 26 March Scottish Homes had received 839 inquiries from tenants interested in purchasing their homes under the scheme and at that date was processing 84 applications to purchase.

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of inquiries from tenants interested in purchasing their homes under the rents-to-mortgages scheme for each Scottish Homes area office.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information on the source of inquiries under the rents-to-mortgages scheme is not held centrally. I have asked Scottish Homes to supply the information directly to the hon. Member.

Capital Gains Tax

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether under the Scottish community charge regulations the 60-day period beyond which capital gains tax becomes chargeable upon the proceeds of the sale of a private home which is used in part as a bed-and-breakfast business refers to consecutive days or to the total in any one year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I have been asked to reply because of my responsibilities for the community charge in Scotland. I intend to write to my hon. Friend shortly about her question.

New Towns

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what submissions he has received from individuals or organisations interested in taking over the development corporation housing stocks in each of the Scottish new towns; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: None.

Bankruptcy

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the maximum hourly rate of remuneration that has been accepted as reasonable by the accountant in bankruptcy, in terms of section 53(4) of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act 1985, being work reasonably undertaken by the trustee in sequestration.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The maximum hourly rate allowed by the accountant in bankruptcy other than in exceptional circumstances in assessing claims for the remuneration of trustees and their staff is the same as that published by the Law Society of Scotland in respect of charges by the legal profession for similar work. The present Law Society rate is £62.

Books and Equipment

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will provide to the latest available date the figures for Scotland equivalent to the answer given to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms. Ruddock), of 13 February, Official Report, columns 142-44, on expenditure on books and equipment.

Mr. Rifkind: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms. Ruddock) on 14 February 1990, Official Report columns 190-92.

Court Reporting

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Moray, Official Report, 2 April, column 474, he will list in the Official Report the names and addresses of organisations and companies which were successful in winning contracts for function of shorthandwriting in Scottish courts.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The following four firms secured Government shorthand writing contracts for the period April 1990 to March 1992 in the Scottish courts:

William Hodge (Shorthand Writers) Ltd.
20 York Place
Edinburgh

William Hodge & Pollock Ltd.
36 North Frederick Street
Glasgow

John Larking
Coniston Bunch [illegible]ane
Haslemere
Surrey

Verbatim Reporters
98 Hanover Street
Edinburgh

Roads

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Government's conclusions following consultation on the routes south of Edinburgh road study.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I announced today the results of our consultation exercise. Copies of the report on the consultation responses and on the Government's proposals in the light of them have been placed in the Library of the House. As with the original consultation paper, I have also arranged for a copy of the report to be sent to all Scottish Members.

Health Boards

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish for each health board in Scotland (a) the net income from private patients and clinics and (b) the amounts written off in bad debts each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The information requested is not held centrally.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were prescription charges in Scotland in 1979; if he will list each subsequent increase; and what has been the percentage change since 1979.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 5 April 1990]: On 16 July 1979 the United Kingdom National Health Service prescription charge was increased from 20p to 45p. Since then the charge has been increased on 11 occasions to its present level of £3.05; the increases are listed in the table.

This represents an increase of 237 per cent in real terms.

Year	Prescription Charge	Cash Increase
1979 (July)	£0.45	25p
1980 (April)	£0.70	25p
1980 (December)	£1.00	30p
1982 (April)	£1.30	30p
1983 (April)	£1.40	10p
1984 (April)	£1.60	20p
1985 (April)	£2.00	40p
1986 (April)	£2.20	20p
1987 (April)	£2.40	20p
1988 (April)	£2.60	20p
1989 (April)	£2.80	20p
1990 (April)	£3.05	25p

Police Rent Allowances

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an estimate of the cost to public funds of (a) uprating rent allowance in the three police forces in Scotland whose rent allowance was last reviewed in 1988 by the index agreed by the police negotiating board and (b) by the movement in the retail prices index since their force maximum was last reviewed.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: If the formula proposed by the police negotiating board for uprating the new housing allowance were used to uprate the rent allowances in payment on 31 March in the three forces concerned, the cost to public funds would be about £2 million in 1990-91; but no such course of action was proposed by the police negotiating board. My right hon. and learned Friend's decision to uprate rent allowances in the three police forces concerned by reference to the increase in the retail prices index is likely to cost about £0·84 million in 1990-91.

Shellfish Harvesting, Solway Firth

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the findings of the recent research report to the Nature Conservancy Council on the effects of mechanised shellfish harvesting on the conservation of wildlife in the Solway.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: This report was prepared for the Nature Conservancy Council. I await its considered views and advice on the matter.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to control or prohibit potentially damaging operations in estuaries for the purposes of meeting Her Majesty's Government's obligations under the Ramsar convention on the conservation of wetlands of international importance.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: Sites selected for designation under the Ramsar convention will have previously been notified as sites of special scientific interest by the Nature Conservancy Council. They are protected under sections 28 and 29 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 against those potentially damaging operations specified by the council.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provisions currently exist to control mechanised shellfish harvesting in areas which meet the criteria for protection under the EC directive on the conservation of wild birds.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: Mechanised shellfish harvesting may be controlled through byelaws made by the Nature Conservancy Council in those areas which are national nature reserves. Local authorities have similar byelaw-making powers to control access in other areas.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will indicate the seaward limit of sites of special scientific interest notified in accordance with section 28 of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: I will write to the hon. Member.

Hepatitis B

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to encourage the take-up of the hepatitis vaccine in Scotland, particularly among people in high-risk groups; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 5 April 1990]: Advice on hepatitis B vaccination is contained in the memorandum, "Immunisation against Infectious Disease", which is prepared for the health departments by the joint committee on vaccination and immunisation and is issued to all doctors in Scotland. The memorandum identifies the high-risk groups and gives advice on those to whom vaccination should be offered. A new edition of the memorandum, which will be issued shortly, will remind doctors of the high-risk groups.

Guidance on measures for the protection of health care workers in hospital and the community against occupational infection with HIV and hepatitis viruses was issued on 5 April. The guidance, which is based largely on the advice of the expert advisory group on AIDS, draws attention to the joint committee's recommendations on immunisation.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Visits

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many (a) towns and (b) cities (i) in Britain and (ii) abroad she has visited in 1990.

The Prime Minister: My official duties involve visiting a considerable number of towns and cities. This year I have visited 12 towns and cities in the United Kingdom and two overseas, other than capital cities.

Archbishop of Canterbury

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister how many official meetings she has had with the Archbishop of Canterbury since his appointment.

The Prime Minister: I have met the Archbishop of Canterbury on many occasions, whether formal or otherwise, during the last 10 years.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on recent representations she has received about the poll tax.

The Prime Minister: I continue to receive many representations about the community charge.

Now that bills are arriving in people's homes they can see the substantial help that the Government are providing through grants, rebates and transitional relief. They can also see the link between their councils' spending plans and the level of the charge for their area.

I share the concern of many over the unjustified high charges that have been set by some councils and I am confident that in the years ahead local electors will demand restraint. In the first year of the new arrangements however I warmly endorse the action of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State in taking firm and immediate action against 20 authorities whose budgets are excessive.

Mr. Charles Powell

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister whether it was with her authority that Mr. Charles Powell participated at a recent dinner with Mr. Aspinall, Sir James Goldsmith, the hon. Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Clark) and Conrad Black, to discuss the attitude of The Daily Telegraph towards her position as leader of the Conservative party; and what consequences such participation by a civil servant has for the Armstrong guidelines on the role of civil servants.

The Prime Minister: The circumstances are not as the hon. Member describes them, and the issues in his question do not arise. The way in which the hon. Member attempts to vilify individual civil servants is deplorable.

Speeches

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Prime Minister how many times, excluding Prime Minister's Question Time, she has spoken in the House in (a) debates and (b) statements, in each year since 1979; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: This information is available in the Library of the House of Commons.

WALES

NHS (Capital Allocations)

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what changes are taking place for capital allocation for the Health Service in Wales in 1991-92; for how long there will be transitional arrangements; and whether such arrangements will protect major schemes approved or commenced in each of the next three years.

Mr. Grist: The NHS and Community Care Bill proposes changes in the way in which health services will be funded and charged for. This requires a new approach to determining capital allocations which will take account of health authorities' role as procurers of services and that of hospitals as providers of those services. Authorities will be consulted soon on possible future arrangements. However, it is not intended to begin changing the basis for allocating capital resources until 1992-93 in view of the lead time required to adjust service plans accordingly.

In addition, transitional arrangements will be introduced before the changes take their full effect with the aim of minimising disruption to health authorities' short term programmes and to protect existing contractual commitments. It is not possible to be specific about the length of time these arrangements will be required until the changes have themselves been agreed. For the same reason, it is not possible to confirm that all major schemes, other than those already subject to contractual commitments, will necessarily be protected under the transitional arrangements.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the level of capital allocation for the Health Service in Wales for 1990-91; and what is this in real terms after allowing for inflation in the construction industry taking 1982-83 as a base year.

Mr. Grist: The level of cash provision for capital spending in the NHS in Wales in 1990-91 is almost £95 million. It is not possible to say how much of this will be spent on new construction work as the provision includes £44·5 million which has been allocated to district health authorities for their discretionary use and it is possible that their plans for the use of these funds may have been varied since the submission of their 10-year capital programmes in April 1989. It also has to be borne in mind that the definition of capital expenditure within the Health Service does not relate only to new construction and capital maintenance of buildings. It also includes the purchase of medical and information technology equipment, the purchase of vehicles and the salary costs and travel and subsistence expenses of health service staff wholly engaged on capital works. It is, therefore, not appropriate simply to apply the construction industry price index to total capital provision in order to establish its value at constant prices. Indeed, the real-terms value of any element of programme provision is best expressed in terms of its opportunity cost to the economy as a whole and therefore adjusted by reference to actual and forecast movements in general inflation using the GDP deflator. On this basis and taking 1982-83 as the base year, the real-terms value of capital provision for the NHS in Wales in 1990-91 is some £61·9 million. This compares with £47·7 million in 1982-83 which in real terms represents an increase of nearly 30 per cent.

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he proposes to increase the financial allocation for Wales for the Health Service to fund the building of two general hospital developments, while at the same time meeting normal replacement and updating requirements and the funding for major computer acquisitions.

Mr. Grist: I refer the right hon. and learned Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 11 January when my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, announced the revenue and capital allocations to health authorities in Wales for 1990-91.

I also refer the right hon. and learned Gentleman to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones) on 12 February in which my right hon. Friend announced the distribution of almost £10 million for schemes to be centrally funded under the programme for the valleys initiative. This included provision relating to the development of a new district general hospital to serve the Taff Ely/Rhondda area and the development of community hospitals at Ebbw Vale and Ystrad Fechan.

General Practitioners

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many general practitioner practices in each county in Wales will be eligible under his Department's criteria to become a fund-holding practice;

(2) how many general practitioner practices in Wales will be eligible under his Department's criteria to become fund-holding practices.

Mr. Grist: It is not possible to place a figure on the number of practices meeting the eligibility criteria for fund-holding status. While each practice fund will require a minimum of 9,000 patients, smaller practices are enabled to group together to attain this number. In addition to its patient list size, each practice will need to demonstrate its ability to manage a practice fund.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he permits the use of capital receipts by health authorities in Wales to fund revenue spending; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Health authorities are permitted a degree of in-year flexibility in the use of their revenue and capital resources. An authority can vire up to 1 per cent. of its final approved revenue cash limit to capital, and conversely up to 10 per cent. of its final approved capital cash limit to revenue. In the event that an authority wishes to exceed its permitted virement limits, this may be allowed if the excess virement requirement can be contained within the all Wales virement totals.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the budget shortfall estimated by each health authority in Wales for the 1990-91 financial year.

Mr. Grist: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to him on 28 March.

DEFENCE

Environmental Protection

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many managed conservations areas he has established; if he will list them; and if he will make a statement as to how he intends to protect their ecology.

Mr. Neubert: Conservation groups and focal points, several of which cover more than one establishment, are in existence at the locations across the defence estate listed in the table. Conservation groups include among their members both professional and amateur naturalists, including representatives of such bodies as the Nature Conservancy Council and county naturalist trusts. They provide advice upon how the ecology of the area should be protected and, where possible, enhanced. Account is taken of this advice in the management of the area concerned, to the maximum extent consistent with military requirements. Focal points exist at those establishments at which, although there is natural history interest, there is no formal conservation group.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he has taken to promote environmental awareness in the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Neubert: As a result of action already taken, there is an enhanced level of awareness of the different ways in which the activities of the Ministry of Defence can impact on the natural environment.

The essay on "Defence and the Environment" in chapter 4 of the Statement on the Defence Estimates 1990 (CM 1022-I) gives examples of where this greater awareness has had beneficial consequences.

More recently, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has charged me with responsibility for environmental issues throughout the Department, in support of the Government's overall environmental objectives.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research is being done on alternatives to paints harmful to marine life to prevent contaminated discharges in shipyards from entering estuarial waters.

Mr. Neubert: The Ministry of Defence is encouraging efforts by the paint industry into the research of environmentally acceptable toxins for anti-fouling paints and is undertaking trials of new products on the hulls of Her Majesty's ships.

Until non-toxic alternatives are available, measures are being taken to prevent contaminated discharges from entering estuarial waters. The effectiveness of these measures has been confirmed by an extensive monitoring programme.

The Ministry of Defence's work in this field is reported on at various international conferences and the work has received national and international recognition.

Chlorofluorocarbons

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what action he is taking to recover chlorofluorocarbons from ships and submarines in dockyards.

Mr. Neubert: It is our policy as far as practicable to recover chlorofluorocarbons from ships and submarines in refit for recycling. In submarines, chlorofluorocarbons are already largely recovered for health and safety reasons. For surface ships, the policy will be introduced progressively.

Biological Warfare

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has for his statement in the Defence Estimates that the legitimate spread of biotechnology for scientific and economic purposes has carried with it the potential for the diversion of equipment and expertise into offensive biological warfare programmes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Advances in biotechnology have facilitated the large-scale production of toxic materials, some for legitimate civil uses, which had hitherto been available only in minute quantities from natural sources. The equipment and expertise, together with a number of these materials, have the potential for diversion into military programmes; however, it would not be in the public interest for me to give further details. Our research into biological and toxic agents is entirely defensive, being aimed at the protection of our armed forces from any biological warfare threat, and is permitted under the 1972 biological and toxic warfare convention.

Type 23 Frigates

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by which date he intends type 23 frigates will be fitted with integrated command and control systems.

Mr. Neubert: The type 23 frigate command system will enter service in the mid-1990s.

Low Flying

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the areas in which covert surveys of low flying activity in particular areas has taken place in the last 12 months, giving the number of covert surveys made in each area.

Mr. Neubert: Between 1 April 1989 and 31 March 1990 the RAF police carried out covert surveys of low flying activity in the following areas:

Date	Location
25-27 April 1989	Liskeard, Cornwall
2- 4 May 1989	Gloucester, Gloucestershire
8-11 May 1989	Blencarn, Cumbria
15-19 May 1989	Wigtown, Dumfries and Galloway
22-26 May 1989	Haddington, Lothian
26-30 June 1989	Knaresborough, North Yorkshire (Skyguard deployment)
24-27 July 1989	Earl Shilton, Leicestershire
24-27 July 1989	Market Bosworth, Leicestershire
31 July-4 August 1989	Penrith, Cumbria (Skyguard deployment)
26-27 September 1989	Glan Conwy, Gwynedd
3-5 October 1989	Alnwick, Northumberland (Skyguard deployment)
30 January-1 February 1990	Machynlleth, Powys
5- 9 March 1990	Wetheral, Cumbria
26-30 March 1990	Hereford, Hereford and Worcester
26-30 March 1990	Alnwick area, Northumberland Kelso area, Borders (Skyguard deployment)

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will place in the Library the central records of the usage of the United Kingdom low flying system.

Mr. Neubert: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the latest scheduled times of day for low level attacks during each Mallet Blow exercise since 1987; and at what times low flying activity in each of these exercises actually ceased.

Mr. Neubert: The scheduled and actual times when low flying ceased in Mallet Blow exercises since 1987 are as follows:

Mallet Blow	Scheduled	Actual
87/1	17.30	17.30
87/2	17.30	17.30
87/3	21.10	17.30

Mallet Blow	Scheduled	Actual
88/1	22.00	17.30
88/2	17.30	17.30
89/1	22.00	22.00
89/2	17.30	17.30
90/1	22.00	21.50

Night Flying

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on changes in the training requirement for night flying during Mallet Blow exercises since 1985;

(2) what plans he has to extend the night flying period in future Mallet Blow exercises to a time later than that used during Mallet Blow 90-1.

Mr. Neubert: I have nothing to add to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Kettering (Mr. Freeman) on 15 December 1987, column 124.

War Medals

Mr. Conway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will consider expanding the team responsible for the issue of war medals in order to satisfy existing claimants during the period of world war II anniversaries.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We are looking at ways in which the waiting time for applicants for world war II medals might be reduced. My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Armed Forces will write to my hon. Friend when our studies are complete.

Ship Charters

Sir John Farr: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will introduce a policy of using only British ships for his Department's charters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: It is the Government's policy to charter vessels on the basis of availability, suitability and cost and, subject to these conditions, to give preference to British ship operators.

Prescription Charges

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will set out the arrangements governing repayment schemes relating to prescription charge repayments for members of the armed services and their families.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Members of the armed forces who require emergency medical and dental treatment, outside the umbrella of service medical facilities, which necessitates the issue of prescriptions, may claim a refund of prescription charges through service channels.

Dependants of service personnel are charged standard prescription rates when medication is provided from service facilities and pay National Health Service prescription charges in the normal way.

Procurement Executive Airfields

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with the representatives of the civilian work force at the aeroplane and armaments experimental establishment at Boscombe Down about the future of the procurement executive airfields.

Mr. Neubert: My Department undertakes research and development flying at three procurement executive airfields at Bedford, Boscombe Down and Farnborough. My hon. Friend the Member for Hove (Mr. Sainsbury) informed the House on 15 December 1988, column 683, of our intention to conduct a study into the future requirements for these airfields.

External consultants were accordingly commissioned in 1989, and they recently submitted their report to the Department. We are now considering the way ahead, with making the most cost-effective use of our facilities against a background of declining flying activity our highest priority.

As part of our normal practice of keeping the work force fully informed of our intentions, the study's terms of reference, which included instructions to consult the trade unions and to take full account of their views, were passed to the appropriate trade unions. There will, of course, be full consultation with the trade unions and other interested parties before any final decisions are taken.

Radiation

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what frequency individual dosimeters of refit workers are calibrated and checked.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: In accordance with IRR85, thermoluminescent dosimeters are calibrated on receipt and re-calibrated at regular intervals, at least every 50 read cycles, by the defence radiological protective service, a dosimetry service approved by the Health and Safety Executive. In addition, the absorbtion rate of these dosimeters is checked every month. Direct reading dosimeters are tested at least once every 14 months, also in accordance with IRR85.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what level and individual radiation dose exposure his Department initiates investigation of the cause of these dose exposures.

Mr. Neubert [holding reply 4 April 1990]: Investigations are carried out in accordance with the Ionising Radiation Regulations 1985.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) how alpha radiation is monitored to and within specific human organs on individual refit workers; and what account is taken of radium daughter products occurring naturally;

(2) what is the individual lung dose for submariners and refit workers arising from absorption of tritium;

(3) what is the internal organ dose arising from absorption of the radionuclide cobalt-60;

(4) what is the internal organ dose arising from absorption of the radionuclides strontium-90, caesium-137, carbon-14 and the isotopes of plutonium and uranium.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The results of routine monitoring of levels of the contamination in the working environment and where applicable, biological monitoring of personnel, confirm that there is no requirement to record radiation doses for submariners or workers at the royal dockyards arising from intakes of radioactive material. In the unlikely event of an accident or incident occurring in the workplace leading to any suspicion of intake of radioactive material, special monitoring of the individual concerned would be undertaken.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many claims for compensation have been received from refit workers for radiation-induced illness; how many of these claims have been settled; and how many remain in dispute or progress.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: My Department has received a number of claims over the years from service and civilian employees for radiation-related illness, but it is not possible to identify, without disproportionate cost and effort, claimants who were engaged on refit work. Every claim received by the Department is dealt with on the basis of legal liability.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of those refit workers subject to radiation doses in excess of 50 milliSieverts in a particular year received the greater part of such doses as a result of some incident or accident outside the range of normal refit operations; if he will describe such incidents; and what conclusions he has reached as to why such abnormal exposures occurred.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: In the period 1979-89, only one employee engaged on refit work has recorded as receiving an annual dose above 50 milliSieverts, which could not be sensibly attributed to exposure arising from normal refit operations. The majority of his total assessed radiation dose of 88·10 milliSieverts arose from a single dose assessment of 83·75 milliSieverts from a dosimeter issued for use by that employee in June 1984. A local investigation concluded that the dosimeter had been exposed in the absence of the employee. Nevertheless, the recorded over-exposure was notified to the Health and Safety Executive and the assessed radiation dose remains on the record. Data for years earlier than 1979 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will give a breakdown of annual individual radiation exposure for refit workers in the bands 0 to 10, greater than 10 to 20, greater than 20 to 30, greater than 30 to 40, and greater than 50 milliSieverts, for all years since the onset of the naval nuclear propulsion programme.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: A breakdown of annual individual radiation dose for workers at the royal dockyards for each of the years 1979-89 is given in the following table. The figures shown in brackets are the number of additional employees monitored for exposure to ionising radiations by the local issue of direct reading dosimeters while employed under a written system of work. A more detailed or alternative breakdown of the figures and data for years earlier than 1979 can be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Annex A

Annual individual radiation exposure for workers at the Royal Dockyards

Year	Numbers of workers in dose ranges

1988	1,469 (2,862)	18	10	0	0	0
1987	1,781 (2,891)	19	5	2	0	0
1986	2,115 (2,560)	53	39	5	0	0
1985	2,093 (2,419)	76	62	17	0	0
1984	1,869 (2,190)	111	138	52	8	1
1983	2,090 (2,518)	75	86	36	29	0
1982	2,165 (2,672)	85	69	14	6	0
1981	1,997 (2,566)	93	133	45	11	0
1980	1,784 (2,877)	85	154	89	48	1
1979	1,469 (1,697)	102	125	75	66	2

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the dates when his Department's radiological protection measures and guidelines for submariners and refit workers were changed, altered or modified.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Within the Royal Naval submarine flotilla, detailed radiological protection instructions and training and qualification standards are promulgated in classified books of reference which are subject to regular update. The detailed instructions were subject to complete reissue in 1985, following publication of the Ionising Radiations Regulations (IRR85), and have been subject to minor amendments since that time. In addition to these specific instructions, nuclear submariners must also comply with general joint services instructions, which are also updated regularly in line with the promulgation of relevant national approved codes of practice.

Within the royal dockyards, radiological protection aspects are covered by site-specific instructions and standing orders which are produced by the companies and are subject to statutory control. Where relevant, the specific MOD instructions are also compiled with by the contractor in accordance with the terms of the contract.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will provide a definition of those personnel who are generally classed as refit workers who are involved in naval nuclear propulsion plant facilities and who are engaged on or involved with radioactive materials or radioactive processes.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The term "refit worker" is not a designation used by either MOD or its contractors. All personnel within the royal dockyards, who require access to controlled radiation areas as a result of their employment, are regarded as being occupationally exposed to radiation. It is in regard to this group that the radiation dose statistics are provided in answering the hon. Member's several other questions.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if in cases where refit personnel are subject to extraordinary radiation doses, such as in excess of 15 milliSieverts in a particular year, largely as a result of some incident or accident outside the range of normal refit operation, he will publish details of such incidents or cause them to be published in the Health and Safety Executive quarterly statement of nuclear incidents; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: All exposures of 15 milliSieverts or more within any calendar year are subject to investigation in accordance with regulation 28(1) and (2) of the Ionising Radiations Regulations, with the objectives of triggering procedures to ensure that exposures are being kept as low as reasonably practicable. If an exposure greater than 30mSv in any calendar year occurs, the Health and Safety Executive is notified as required by regulations 13(f) of IRR 85.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the gross numbers of refit workers employed in the United Kingdom, in terms of years employed at each respective port or refit dockyard facilities.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The data are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The numbers of employees occupationally exposed to radiation at each royal dockyard since 1979 are shown in the table.

Year	Chatham	Devonport	Rosyth	Total
1989	9	2,394	1732	4,135
1988	10	2,677	1,672	4,359
1987	12	2,669	2,017	4,698
1986	17	3,035	1,720	4,772
1985	19	2,936	1,712	4,667
1984	22	3,074	1,273	4,369
1983	447	3,016	1,371	4,834
1982	1,246	2,547	1,218	5,011
1981	1,456	2,159	1,230	4,845
1980	1,915	1,643	1,480	5,038
1979	1,008	1,265	1,263	3,536

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what in-house radiological protection measures and guidelines are adopted for submariners and refit workers; and if these are in addition or supplementary to Ionising Radiations Regulations.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Within MOD, radiation exposures continue to be authorised only on the basis that they are justified, comply with statutory limits, and are as low as reasonably practicable (ALARP). Individual measures taken are often site-specific and, in the case of the royal dockyards, are the responsibility of the contractors, who are subject to the legislative requirements.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the accuracy of dosimeters worn by refit workers in terms of percentage of the recorded radiation dose.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The accuracy of the personal dosimeters worn by workers monitored for exposure to ionising radiation by the defence radiological protection service meets the criteria specified by the Health and Safety Executive in its "Guidance on the Approval of Dosimetry Services" under the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985, part 1—external radiations.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the average individual radiation dose, whole body equivalent, for all refit workers involved or who have been involved in the naval nuclear propulsion programme and associated facilities.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The average annual radiation doses to workers at the royal dockyards for each of the years 1979 to 1989 inclusive are shown in the following table. Data for years after 1986 have been included with the permission of the dockyard contractors. The data include doses to individuals working under a written system of work who were issued with direct reading dosimeters. Figures for years before 1979 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Average annual radiation doses of refit workers

Year	Average annual dose (mSv)
1989	1·69
1988	1·26
1987	1·46
1986	1·82
1985	2·47
1984	3·82
1983	2·84
1982	2·34
1981	3·15
1980	3·60
1979	4·91

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the distribution of total radiation exposure for refit workers in the ranges 0 to 5, greater than 5 to 10, greater than 10 to 15, greater than 15 to 20, greater than 20 to 25, greater than 25 to 30, greater than 30 to 35, greater than 35 to 40, greater than 40 to 45, greater than 45 to 50 and greater than 50 milliSieverts in terms of percentage of overall work force.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The distribution of total radiation exposures of those workers at the royal dockyards who have radiation dose records maintained on computer by the defence radiological protection service, is given in the table. A more detailed breakdown for employees ceasing radiation work before the date on which computerised record keeping was introduced is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Lifetime dose (milliSieverts)	Numbers	Percentage
0 to 5	2,318	35·3
5 to 10	714	10·9
10 to 15	485	7·4
15 to 20	332	5·1
20 to 30	463	7·0
30 to 40	352	5·4
40 to 50	255	3·9
50 to 100	794	12·1
100 to 200	574	8·7
Over 200	283	4·2
Totals	6,570	100·2

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum radiation dose, rounded to the nearest milliSievert, received by any refit worker in one year during the last three decades; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: Rounded to the nearest milliSievert, 88 milliSieverts represents the highest recorded annual dose for any worker at the royal dockyards in the past 10 years. Data for earlier years are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The circumstances of this exposure are described in my earlier reply to the hon. Member.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the maximum total radiation dose received by any refit worker over any period, or number of periods, spent as a classified radiation worker; and whether such an individual or individuals are still working as classified radiation workers within nuclear-propelled submarine refit facilities.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The maximum total radiation dose recorded for any worker at the royal dockyards registered in the defence radiological protection service's record keeping system is 775·95 milliSieverts. This total dose accrued over the period June 1953 to March 1982. The man is no longer working, having reached retirement age. Data for personnel ceasing radiation work before 1 January 1979 are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the standard radiation exposure measuring device, issued to and worn by refit personnel during all refit operations; and whether the type of measuring device has changed since the onset of the naval nuclear propulsion programme.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The personal radiation dosimeter currently issued to radiation workers monitored for exposure to ionising radiation by the defence radiological protection service, an HSE approved dosimetry service, is the thermoluminescent dosimeter introduced in March 1983. Before this date, and from the onset of the naval nuclear propulsion programme, the photographic film dosimeter was used. Currently, a variety of direct reading dosimeters are used for the monitoring of employees.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total occupational, whole body equivalent, radiation exposure of all refit workers in the United Kingdom in milliSieverts, for each year since the onset of the naval nuclear propulsion programme; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: The cumulative radiation doses of all workers in the royal dockyards, for each of the years 1979 to 1989 inclusive, are shown in the table. These figures include the cumulative radiation doses of employees monitored for exposure to ionising radiations by the local issue of direct reading dosimeters within the refit yards. These latter figures have been supplied by, and are included with the permission of, the dockyard contractors, who assumed responsibility for health and safety of persons employed within the nuclear licensed sites at Rosyth and Devonport on 5 April 1987.

Data for earlier years are not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Year	Cumulative dose (MilliSieverts)
1989	6,978
1988	5,501
1987	6,837
1986	8,704
1985	11,536
1984	16,680
1983	13,734
1982	11,717
1981	15,276
1980	18,158
1979	17,378

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what limits are adopted for internal organ radiation dose exposure for refit workers.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: All dose limits adopted by the MOD and its contractors comply with the requirements of the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985 which are listed at schedule 1 of those regulations.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what percentage of refit workers are classified as radiation workers; and how these personnel are selected and deemed fit for classification.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: At present about 25 per cent. of workers at the royal dockyards are designated "classified". The criteria against which these employees are selected and designated as classified persons are specified in regulation 9 of the Ionising Radiations Regulations. Certification that an employee is fit to be designated as a classified person is provided by an appointed doctor, in accordance with the requirement of regulation 9(3)(b) and regulation 16 of IRR85.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department maintains an agreement with the United States Department of Defence regarding transfer of information and data about nuclear submarine refit accidents, risk or safety of refit workers.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: No.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department's research into morbidity and mortality among refit workers has considered genetic effects which have passed on to offspring due to exposure of refit workers to radiation in the normal course of their duties.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: No such research has been undertaken by my Department.

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether the refit personnel receiving doses in excess of 15 milliSieverts in two or more consecutive years, or three or more separate annual doses, were thereafter removed from the occupation or positions where they had been or likely would be in future, subject to such doses; and if these personnel were advised of the radiation risk they were undergoing.

Mr. Neubert [holding answer 4 April 1990]: It is not my Department's policy, nor to my knowledge that of any other United Kingdom employer, to remove persons receiving, as a result of their occupational external exposure to ionising radiation, doses in excess of this level, whether in two or more consecutive years or in three or more separate annual doses. With regard to the hazards associated with working with ionising radiation, all personnel who are occupationally exposed receive such information, instructions and training as are required by regulation 12 of the Ionising Radiations Regulations 1985. My Department ensures that such personnel have access to their individual radiation dose records, and receive appropriate counselling from specialist medical officers and health physics staff as deemed necessary or if requested.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Irradiated Food

128. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance has been given to trading standards officers on how to detect irradiated food contravening the Trades Description Act.

129. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance has been given to trading standards officers on how to detect irradiated food contravening the Trades Description Act.

130. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidance has been given to trading standards officers on how to detect irradiated food contravening the Trades Description Act.

Mr. Maclean: I am not aware of a need for specific guidance to local authority officers on this subject. The Government are, however, funding research on the development of detection methods.

Hatcheries

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he has any plans to introduce new regulations regarding hatcheries.

Mr. Maclean: The measures relating to hatcheries, together with other parts of the salmonella control programme, are being kept under review.

Farm Diversification

Mr. Butler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the uptake of the grants available for farm diversification.

Mr. Curry: Uptake to the end of February 1990 was as follows:

	Number of applications since start of scheme	Grant aid	Grant committed for future
		£ million	£ million
Capital Grants	2,491	2·884	5·973
Feasibility
Study Grants	191	0·047	0·131
Marketing Grants	43	0·008	0·124

Farm Animal Welfare Council

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Mr. Maclean: The Government value the Farm Animal Welfare Council's independent and authoritative advice very highly. The council has provided the impetus for many new welfare measures and will, I am sure, continue to lead the way in its future work.

Local Government (Agricultural Land Holdings)

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the acreage of agricultural land sold during the last financial year by local authorities.

Mr. Curry: Details for the last financial year (1989-90) are not yet available. In 1988-89 local authorities in England and Wales sold 887 hectares from their smallholdings estates.

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the average size of agricultural holding owned by local authorities in England and Wales; and what was the figure 10 years ago.

Mr. Curry: The average size of agricultural holdings owned by local authorities in England and Wales was 22·6 hectares in 1988-89 compared with 18·9 hectares in 1979-80.

Agricultural Wages Board

Mr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the chairman of the Agricultural Wages Board; and what was discussed.

Mr. Curry: None of the Ministers in the Ministry have met the chairman of the Agricultural Wages Board.

Green Pound

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress is being made to abolish the green pound by 1992.

Mr. Curry: As part of this year's farm price review the Commission proposed a further step towards the elimination of the gap between the market and green rates of exchange for the pound.

Surplus Food and Wine

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will raise at the next meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers the provision made for the disposal of surplus food and wine in the current year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: As my hon. Friend knows, the United Kingdom has taken the lead over a number of years in pressing for action to be taken to control the level of agricultural surpluses and the cost of the common agricultural policy. We have achieved considerable success and at the forthcoming meeting of the Council of Agriculture Ministers we will be looking to maintain this progress.

Avoparcin

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to be able to complete the process of deliberations with the European Community over a starch refund under regulation 1009/86 in respect of Avoparcin.

Mr. Curry: Additions to the list of products eligible for the Community starch production refund are decided by the Commission using powers exercised under the management committee procedure. I understand that the Commission is considering possible additions to the list, including that of Avoparcin, but is not yet in a position to make any firm proposal to the cereals management committee.

Countryside (Access)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on access to the countryside.

Mr. Maclean: Under section 17 of the Agriculture Act 1986 we have to balance the interests of promoting an efficient agricultural industry, the conservation and enhancement of the natural beauty and amenity of the countryside and its enjoyment by the public. It is generally recognised that there is a delicate balance between the increasing demand for public access and its impact upon the countryside and farming. The Ministry's policies are designed to encourage farmers wherever practicable to provide for countryside recreation. To this end, grants are available under the farm diversification grant scheme for farm walks and nature trails and the Ministry, jointly with the Countryside Commission, has published a ploughing code which reminds farmers of their responsibilities in relation to rights of way. Furthermore, we support the Rights of Way (Agricultural Land) Bill, introduced by my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh) which seeks to clarify the existing law on rights of way over agricultural land.

Rabies

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Caerphilly of 15 March, Official Report, column 241, how he proposes to implement his plan in the event of a rabies outbreak to bring about the destruction of foxes in the infected area; and what assessment he has made of the impact of any control methods on other animals and bird species.

Mr. Maclean: Action taken would depend on the circumstances and the geographical spread of any outbreak. Urban foxes might have to be controlled by shooting and trapping if poisoning were not possible but the main method of destroying foxes in an infected area would involve the use of poisoned bait. Trained Ministry staff would select and mark the baiting points and uneaten baits would be recovered and destroyed. Accidental casualties among other species would be kept to the minimum compatible with the task of stamping out any outbreak of rabies before it became established.

"At the Farmers Service"

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost to public funds of producing the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food/WOAD booklet, "At the Farmers Service"; how many copies were produced; how they are being distributed; and whether any charge per copy is being required of the recipients.

Mr. Curry: The new edition of "At the Farmers Service" was produced using desk-top publishing techniques to provide value for money and make future revisions easier. Production costs were £20,000 for 50,000 copies, giving a unit cost of 40p per copy. The booklet is distributed free to members of the farming community and other interested parties.

Set-aside Scheme

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place a copy of his Department's set-aside application forms in the Library.

Mr. Gummer: Yes, I have done so.

Healthier Eating

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much he has spent on research into healthier eating (a) within his Department and (b) to outside organisations for (i) 1989-90 and (ii) 1990-91; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how much money he intends to spend in the promotion of a healthier diet in 1990-91; and if he will make a statement;

(3) how much money was spent by his Department in the promotion of a healthier diet in 1989-90; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what assessment he has made of the efficacy of the publicity efforts of his Department to promote a healthier diet; and if he will make a statement;

(5) whether he will launch a nationwide campaign to encourage a healthier diet, using leaflets for widespread distribution, and other promotional methods; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My Department, the Department of Health and the Health Education Authority are now in the final stages of preparing a booklet setting out a simple set of dietary guidelines intended to help consumers choose an overall balanced diet. The guidelines are targeted in the first instance at those giving dietary advice, for example, health professional teachers and the media, but will apply to the general public. It is intended to adapt them for other specific audiences such as school children, the elderly and pregnant women.

In addition to this specific initiative my Department monitors the nutritional quality of the household diet through the national food survey and provides essential information on the nutrient content of particular foods. We have produced the "Manual of Nutrition" which describes all the important nutrients, their roles in the body and the foods that provide them. We commissioned jointly with the Department of Health the "Dietary and Nutritional Survey of British Adults" which will be published shortly. We also recognise the importance of food labels in providing information and have pressed for EC legislation which would require more nutritional information to be shown. Our free booklet "Look at the Label" on understanding food labels explains the significance of the nutritional declarations which are increasingly being made on food labels and relates them to dietary advice.

The directly attributable cost of the guidelines to my Department was about £14,000 in 1989-90 and a further £20,000 has been allocated for 1990-91. The total cost of work to promote a healthy and nutritious diet cannot be separately identified, but the cost of "Dietary and Nutritional Survey of British Adults" was over £1 million.

In 1989-90 my Department spent £900,000 on research into applied nutrition and £200,000 on monitoring nutrients in food. This work was contracted with outside organisations. It represents only part of my Department's total research expenditure (£8·6 million) on food safety and hygiene which is carried out so that consumers may have a safe and nutritious food supply from which they may choose a healthy diet. Figures for 1990-91 are not yet available.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his policy in respect of those research projects which have been identified as near market which subsequently fail to attract industrial support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Near-market research that does not attract industry support will have to cease. Work that is close to commercial application should be funded by industry, which is the direct beneficiary and best able to judge priorities for this work. Public expenditure is better redeployed on basic science, strategic research and research aimed at benefiting and protecting the community at large.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 9 February, Official Report, column 824, which projects have so far attracted near-market funding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The projects listed in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 9 February 1990 will be funded by my Department until their completion. This will be by 31 March 1991 or earlier as appropriate. The areas being researched by these projects have been identified as near market, that is, suitable for industrial funding. I am pleased to be able to say that the Meat and Livestock Commission (MLC) will be funding from 1990-91 onwards a programme of research that will cover many of these areas of research.

Poultry

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newark (Mr. Alexander), 13 February, Official Report, column 200, what evidence he has that the security of poultry premises could be jeopardised by open registers; and if he will now review his decision.

Mr. Maclean: The decision to remove the provisions in question was based on general concern about security rather than specific threats. I am satisfied that the action taken was a sensible precaution which does not prejudice the effectiveness of the salmonella controls.

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what European agriculture guidance and guarantee fund grants have been paid to Unigate plc in respect of poultry processing plants.

Mr. Curry: No EAGGF grants have been paid to Unigate plc or any of its subsidiary companies in respect of poultry-processing plants.

Soil Preservation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure the survival of rendzina soils subject to arable cropping; and what information he possesses concerning their degradation.

Mr. Curry: The special problems of rendzinas, and other soil types in England and Wales, are well understood by soil scientists of the Agricultural Development and Advisory Service. These specialists are located at the regional offices and sub-centres of MAFF and WOAD, and are available to provide advice and information on all aspects of soil care to all who require it.

The Department continues to fund research on a very wide range of soil-related problems. The many facets of soil degradation, such as heavy-metal contamination, erosion and acidification, are included in these studies.

Information is published in suitable format, for example, in scientific journals, from individual projects within this programme, as soon as conclusions can be drawn with confidence.

In addition to the work funded by my Department, there is a large amount of information available from other sources, both in the United Kingdom and overseas. It would not be possible to draw all this together for presentation, except at inordinate cost.

Agricultural Wages

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next expects to meet representatives of the Agricultural Workers Union to discuss wages and conditions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Ministers from this Department have no plans at present to meet representatives of the Transport and General Workers Union agriculture sector trade group.

Bovine Offal

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Truro, 2 February, Official Report, column 409, on what information he bases his statement that industry's policy is not to use those bovine offals currently banned for use in human consumption.

Mr. Maclean: The statement was based on the knowledge of the pet food industry that this Department has built up through its normal work in relation to this sector.

Salmonella

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to conduct periodic surveys of broiler flocks to establish the incidence of salmonella.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 5 April 1990]: Under the Government's salmonella control programme measures are being taken to reduce the level of salmonella infection in the broiler production chain. The impact of these measures on the incidence of salmonella will be kept under review.

Artioposthia Triangulata

Mr. Alton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will make a statement on the spread and effects of Artioposthia triangulata in Northern Ireland;

(2) what information his Department has as to how Artioposthia triangulata first entered Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what studies have been commissioned about the spread and effects of Artioposthia triangulata; and if he will make a statement;

(4) what studies his Department has commissioned into the effect of Artioposthia triangulata on the earthworm population of Northern Ireland and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The New Zealand planarian (flatworm), Artioposthia triangulata, has colonised Northern Ireland. It feeds on earthworms and may be capable of reducing populations. It is found in all counties in Northern Ireland and has been associated with the disappearance of worms from grassland.

The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland has a programme of research into the distribution and biology of Artioposthia triangulata in Northern Ireland. Associated with this research, scientists are also monitoring reported sightings elsewhere in the United Kingdom. Research is necessary to define both the threat and the need for control measures.

Fishing Vessels (Decommissioning Grants)

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has about decommissioning grants available to fishing vessels and the amount put in by European Community sources for decommissioning for (a) Holland, (b) France, (c) Denmark, (d) the United Kingdom and (e) Spain.

Mr. Curry [pursuant to his reply, 22 February 1990, c. 990-01]: The information supplied by the Commission is as follows:

	£ million
Denmark	1·64
France	nil
Netherlands	1·87
Spain	nil
United Kingdom	nil

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

City Regulation

9. Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on City regulation.

85. Mr. Turner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on City regulation.

Mr. Ridley: Regulation of investment business is, for the most part, the responsibility of the Securities and Investment Board, which is the designated agency under the Financial Services Act 1986. Other aspects of City activity are regulated under other arrangements, such as the Insurance Companies Act 1982 and the Banking Act 1987.

Drink Prices

10. Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the decision of the brewers to increase the price of alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks to the Office of Fair Trading.

78. Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the decision of the brewers to increase the price of alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks to the Office of Fair Trading.

100. Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will refer the decision of the brewers to increase the price of alcoholic and non-alcoholic drinks to the Office of Fair Trading.

Mr. Redwood: No. We have introduced a number of measures to increase competition in this area, and the Office of Fair Trading is already taking steps to keep the situation under review.

Manufactures

13. Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the OECD countries which had a more favourable trade balance in manufactures than Great Britain in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the OECD countries which had a more favourable trade balance in manufactures than Great Britain in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Redwood: The latest complete data refer to 1987 when 11 of the 23 OECD countries had surpluses or smaller deficits than the United Kingdom as a percentage of their total trade in manufactures.

The list is as follows:

71. Mr. Leadbitter: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the OECD countries which had a more favourable trade balance in manufactures than Great Britain in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Forth: The information is in the following table:

Trade in Manufactures[1] 1987

	Balance as a percentage of Total Trade[2] in Manufactures
Japan	61·5
Germany	24·3
Italy	14·1
Sweden	6·5

IT Skills Shortages

16. Mr. John Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the information technology sector on skills shortages.

Mr. Forth: There have been a number of representations from the information technology sector, in the past, with regard to IT skills shortages. In recognising this my Department has supported a number of initiatives aimed at reducing such shortages, including support of up to £440,000 over three years for the recently launched Women into Information Technology (WIT) campaign where this support is appropriately matched by industry.

70. Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the information technology sector on skills shortages.

97. Mr. Robert Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received from the information technology sector on skills shortages.

Mr. Forth: There have been a number of representations from the information technology sector, in the past, with regard to IT skills shortages. In recognising this my Department has supported a number of initiatives aimed at reducing such shortages, including support of up to £440,000 over three years for the recently launched Women into Information Technology (WIT) campaign where this support is appropriately matched by industry.

My Department also has an Information Technology Advisory Board (ITAB) with representatives from industry, commerce and academia. One of the ITAB's support committees advises specifically on education and training and comments on IT skills issues.

CBI Regional Bodies

19. Mr. James Lamond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry; and what was discussed.

20. Mr. Lambie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry; and what was discussed.

62. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met a regional body of the Confederation of British Industry; and what was discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My Department maintains regular contact with the CBI at all levels on a wide range of matters relating to industry.

Information Technology

21. Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

58. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any new plans to encourage research and development in information technology.

Mr. Forth: I am pleased to announce Government support of £34 million for new national collaborative research and development programmes in the following areas of IT: safety-critical software, the application of parallel processing and open distributed processing. They will be jointly funded by the Department of Trade and Industry and the science and engineering research council.

26. Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the training of senior staff in the application of information technology.

69. Dr. Kim Howells: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the training of senior staff in the application of information technology.

88. Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the training of senior staff in the application of information technology.

Mr. Forth: No. I have nothing to add to my answers of 14 March 1990 at column 292.

Office of Fair Trading

23. Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the directors of the Office of Fair Trading.

60. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the director of the Office of Fair Trading.

104. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the director of the Office of Fair Trading.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend met the Director General of Fair Trading on 2 April. There are currently no further meetings planned with Ministers in this Department.

National Economic Development Council

24. Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council; and what will be discussed.

83. Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council; and what will be discussed.

30. Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the director general of the National Economic Development Council; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Ridley: My Department has frequent contacts with NEDO officials on a wide range of business matters and I last chaired the council on 4 April. I have no plans to meet the director general again at present.

Glass Safety

25. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that all the conditions of BS 6262 on glass safety are made mandatory without delay.

75. Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that all the conditions of BS 6262 on glass safety are made mandatory without delay.

106. Mr. Lofthouse: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to ensure that all the conditions of BS 6262 on glass safety are made mandatory without delay.

Mr. Forth: I propose to approve British Standard 6262 (code of practice for glazing in Buildings) for the purposes of the general safety requirement under section 10 of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 on publication of amendments to this standard. The standard will specify the use of safety glass in features such as patio doors, panels beside doors and other low-level areas where the risk of injury is greatest.

Textiles

27. Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet his European counterparts to discuss the textile industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Industry Council which I attended discussed the Commission annual report on the state of the textile industry on 13 March. No further EC discussion has been arranged at the moment but the subject frequently comes up in bilateral contacts. In addition, my noble Friend the Minister for Trade is this week attending an informal meeting of world Trade Ministers in Mexico with Ministers from some other EC member states, which will review progress in the GATT Uruguay round including the negotiations on the future of the multi-fibre arrangement.

45. Mr. Buchan: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet his European counterparts to discuss the textile industry.

105. Mr. Buckley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet his European counterparts to discuss the textile industry.

Mr. Redwood: The Industry Council which my hon. Friend the Minister for Industry attended discussed the Commission annual report on the state of the textile industry on 13 March. No further EC discussion has been arranged at the moment but the subject frequently comes up in bilateral contacts. In addition, my noble Friend the Minister for Trade is this week attending an informal meeting of world Trade Ministers in Mexico with Ministers from some other EC member states, which will review progress in the GATT Uruguay round including the negotiations on the future of the multi-fibre arrangement.

Poland

28. Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures for the United Kingdom's trade balance with Poland.

59. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, if he will give figures for the United Kingdom's trade balance with Poland.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 the crude deficit in United Kingdom visible trade with Poland £134 million.

Manufacturing Output

29. Mr. Snape: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his assessment of the causes of the relative performance of each region in terms of constant value manufacturing output since 1979.

53. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his assessment of the causes of the relative performance of each region in terms of constant value manufacturing output since 1979.

39. Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his assessment of the causes of the relative performance of each region in terms of constant value manufacturing output since 1979.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: There are many factors underlying regional performance, including the state of the world economy, and regional industrial structure. Recent indices show continuing growth in all regions of the United Kingdom.

Securities and Investments Board

31. Mr. Eadie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and what will be discussed.

65. Mr. Dunnachie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board to discuss a range of topics concerning the regulation of financial services as frequently as is necessary. No date has been fixed for the next such meeting.

Confederation of British Industry

34. Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry; and what will be discussed.

64. Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry; and what will be discussed.

66. Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry; and what will be discussed.

91. Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next expects to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry to discuss manufacturing industry.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I have no immediate plans to meet the president of the Confederation of British Industry.

89. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Confederation of British Industry; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Redwood: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State last met representatives of the Confederation of British Industry when he chaired a meeting of the National Economic Development Council on 4 April 1990. The main items discussed on that occasion were business and the environment, the electronics industry and the United Kingdom's trade performance.

Cot Deaths

35. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he first became aware of Dr. Barry Richardson's research into cot deaths; and what action he then took to alert the public.

102. Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he first became aware of Dr, Barry Richardson's research into cot deaths; and what action he then took to alert the public.

Mr. Forth: The Department of Health wrote to my Department about Dr. Barry Richardson's research on 7 June 1989. A copy of Dr. Richardson's report dated June 1989 was received on 12 June. As a direct result the laboratory of the Government chemist was asked to undertake a scientific assessment of this research work.

In a written reply on 9 March, my hon. Friend the Minister for Health stated that a group of independent experts had been asked to investigate further claims by Dr. Richardson about emission of toxic gases from soiled mattresses taking account of the assessment still being carried out by the laboratory of the Government chemist.

I shall await the findings of this expert working group to see if there are any implications for the use of fire-resistant treatments in the manufacture of nursery furniture.

Manufactured Goods (Exports)

36. Mr. Jack: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of exports of manufactured goods Japan in 1989.

68. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of exports of manufactured goods to Japan in 1989.

79. Mr. David Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of exports of manufactured goods to Japan in 1989.

Mr. Redwood: The level of United Kingdom exports of manufactured goods to Japan in 1989 was £1,938 million, an increase of 29 per cent. over 1988.

49. Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in exports of manufactured goods to Japan since 1979.

93. Mr. Irvine: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in exports of manufactured goods to Japan since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Exports of manufactured goods to Japan have risen from £481 million in 1979 to £1,938 million in 1989, an increase of 303 per cent.

67. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in exports of manufactured goods to the European Community since 1979.

96. Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in exports of manufactured goods to the European Community since 1979.

107. Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what has been the growth in exports of manufactured goods to the European Community since 1979.

Mr. Redwood: Exports of manufactured goods to the European Community have risen from £13 billion in 1979 to £38 billion in 1989, an increase of £25 billion.

Invisibles

37. Ms. Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prospects for British invisibles in the European market after 1992.

Mr. Redwood: The single market offers both a challenge and an opportunity to British business. This applies to businesses generating invisible trade as much as to those generating visible trade. The opportunities are great: according to estimates published by the Commission in "European Economy" in March 1988, the Community services sector is expected to contribute about 30 per cent. of the gains from the completion of the single market. The outcome for British invisibles will depend on the dynamic response of individual businesses.

Consumer Guarantees Bill

38. Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

63. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

74. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what further representations he has had on the Consumer Guarantees Bill.

Mr. Forth: At the Committee Stage of the Bill I undertook to inform members of the Committee of the representations I had received about various aspects of the Bill, where I had the agreement of the parties concerned to do so. This I have done. Further representations received since Committee were made in confidence and it would be inappropriate to give details of them.

Consumer Demand

40. Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what effect he expects falling consumer demand to have on British industry.

Mr. Redwood: Prospects for the economy to mid-1991, including manufacturing production, are contained in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1990-91 laid before the House by the Chancellor of the Exchequer on 20 March 1990. Chart 3.8 of that statement forecasts continuing growth in consumer expenditure in 1990 and the first half of 1991, but at a slower rate than in 1988 and 1989. The forecasts suggest maintained levels of manufacturing production in 1990 and modest growth of 0·75 per cent. in the first half of 1991.

Product Safety

41. Mr. Maxton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to how many cases have been brought under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 concerning product safety which were already covered by an approved standard.

48. Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to how many cases have been brought under the Consumer Protection Act 1987 concerning product safety which were already covered by an approved standard.

Mr. Forth: Enforcement of the safety provisions of the Consumer Protection Act 1987 is mainly the responsibility of the trading standards departments of local authorities. A number of suppliers have been successfully prosecuted for breaches of the general safety requirement, but information is not available on whether these cases involved an approved standard.

West Germany

44. Mr. Bell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

99. Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

103. Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of United Kingdom trade with West Germany.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 United Kingdom imports from West Germany were £20 billion; United Kingdom exports to West Germany were £11·1 billion. Invisible trade is not separately recorded by country.

87. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the United Kingdom balance of trade with West Germany in 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 imports of manufactured goods from West Germany exceeded United Kingdom manufactured exports to that country by £9·6 billion. Invisibles are not separately recorded by country.

Post Office

46. Mr. Bidwell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Post Office.

54. Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next intends to meet the chairman of the Post Office.

Mr. Forth: I will next meet the chairman of the Post Office, Sir Bryan Nicholson, on 4 May.

Tin Mining

47. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the tin mining industry in Cornwall.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The respective managements have decided to cease operations at the Geevor tin mine immediately and at the Wheal Jane tin mine at the end of the year. These decisions appear inevitable given the prevailing low tin prices and the absence of indications of the substantial and sustained improvement in the tin price required for these mines to continue in production.

The remaining tin mine, South Crofty, has been the subject of a major capital investment programme designed to lower costs. This had been assisted by substantial DTI loans. That investment programme, and the geological conditions of the mine, mean that South Crofty is better placed to withstand low prices.

Shipbuilding

50. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the shipbuilding industry in the United Kingdom.

57. Mr. Ted Garrett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the shipbuilding industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway).

Exporters

51. Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment he has made of the recent performance of United Kingdom exporters of goods and services.

Mr. Redwood: We have seen a significant and sustained growth in the United Kingdom's export performance. The value of non-oil exports doubled between 1979 and 1988. They increased again by 16 per cent. in 1989. In the three months to February, the value of goods exported was 5 per cent. higher than in the previous three months. This is a remarkable success, achieved in the face of increasingly strong competition, on which British exporters of goods and services are to be congratulated.

52. Mr. Patchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any new proposals to assist British exporters.

101. Mr. Orme: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any new proposals to assist British exporters.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave on 14 March to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Hillhead (Mr. Galloway) at columns 477-79.

Engineering Products

55. Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in engineering products.

80. Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in engineering products.

95. Mr. Ron Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current balance of trade in engineering products.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The crude deficit on the balance of trade for engineering products was £8·2 billion in 1989.

Regional Assistance

56. Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many regional selective assistance grants and regional development grants were awarded to firms in the north-west of England in 1988-89, at what cost to his Department.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the financial year 1988-89 my Department made offers of regional selective assistance for 340 projects, and approved regional development grants under the revised scheme for 2,036 projects, in the north-west region. The value of these offers and proposals was £133·4 million which is the amount expected to be paid if the projects proceed as planned.

Note: The north-west region includes the counties of Cheshire, Cumbria, Lancashire, Greater Manchester and Merseyside and the High Peak district of Derbyshire.

Car Manufacturers

61. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the major car manufacturers; and what will be discussed.

72. Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the major car manufacturers; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The Secretary of State and I regularly meet the major car manufacturers to discuss a variety of issues.

Footwear

73. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent representations he has received from the footwear industry regarding import penetration of the United Kingdom footwear trade.

Mr. Redwood: We have received a small number of representations about footwear issues, including the level of footwear imports.

EC Trade and Industry Ministers

76. Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet his counterparts in the European Community; and what will be discussed.

86. Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet his counterparts in the European Community; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: I maintain regular contacts with my opposite numbers in the European Commission across a wide range of issues.

Government Special Shares

77. Sir George Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if his Department has any plans to extend the use of Government special shares.

Mr. Redwood: The government have a general prejudice against the creation of special shares, but recognise that a special share may be warranted by the particular circumstances of a privatised company. Each case is assessed on its merits.

Steel

81. Mr. Bill Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the steel industry in the United Kingdom.

84. Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the future of the steel industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentlemen to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby (Mr. Mitchell) earlier today.

West German Trade and Industry Minister

82. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met his West German counterpart; and what was discussed.

Mr. Redwood: I last met my West German counterpart, Dr. Haussmann, at the Anglo-German summit on 30 March. A range of issues were discussed.

Building Societies

90. Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his latest estimate of the proportion of larger building societies having tied arrangements with insurance companies.

Mr. Redwood: Eight of the 10 largest building societies have a "tied" arrangement with a single insurance company. However, seven of these eight also operate an independent financial adviser arm.

Sir Leon Brittan

92. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Vice-President of the European Commission, Sir Leon Brittan; and what was discussed.

Mr. Ridley: I maintain regular contacts with my opposite numbers in the European Commission across a wide range of issues.

Trade Deficit

94. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on the trade deficit.

Mr. Redwood: Exports from the United Kingdom are running at record levels. The present deficit has been caused by excessive growth in domestic demand in relation to domestic industrial capacity. It is therefore a macro-economic problem which will be resolved by the sound macro-economic policies which the Government are pursuing.

Stock Exchange

98. Mr. Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he next plans to meet the chairman of the stock exchange; and what will be discussed.

Mr. Redwood: Ministers meet the chairman of the stock exchange whenever appropriate to discuss topics of mutual interest.

Balance of Trade

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the European Economic Community countries with which the United Kingdom had a trade surplus in manufactured goods in 1989.

Mr. Redwood: In 1989 the United Kingdom had a manufacturing trade surplus with Ireland, Spain and Greece.

RECHAR Scheme

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) how many jobs have been lost because of coal mine closures in the south Leeds area since 1 January 1984; if the RECHAR grants scheme can be applied to this area; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will consider in any further discussions with the European Commission on RECHAR allocations that area of the Normanton constituency which is the former coal mining area of south-east Leeds, for allocation of grant; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the areas which have been allocated grants through the RECHAR system.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The south-east Leeds area lost approximately 3,000 coal mining jobs since 1 January 1984. The Government have therefore already proposed to the European Commission that it should be among the areas to benefit from the RECHAR initiative for European structural fund grants to coal-mining areas. The Commission's decision is due by 27 April.

Recycling

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will list the research and development projects being undertaken by his Department and related agencies into recycling, giving the cost of each project.

Mr. Forth: The Department has commissioned a range of projects to aid the development of its policy on recycling. Some have been placed with Warren Spring laboratory, including an examination of present market barriers to recycling in the United Kingdom, and others with management consultants, including investigations into CFC recovery, recycling and destruction, and into the problems of scrap tyre disposal. The Department believes that those companies and organisations directly involved in materials recycling should themselves be the prime initiators of R and D in this area, but stands ready to consider helping worthwhile projects.

Animal Experiments

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many animal experiments for cosmetics took place in the United Kingdom in 1978, 1988 and 1989; if these exceed in number the essential minimum referred to by him in his reply to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 6 March, Official Report, column 588; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: Statistics on the safety testing of cosmetics and toiletries are published by the Home Office. The latest information is contained in table 3 of the "Statistics of Scientific Procedures on Living Animals, Great Britain 1988" and similar information was published in previous years. The number of procedures carried out for the safety testing of cosmetic substances is determined by the requirements of current regulations which are kept to the minimum essential for consumer safety.

Unigate plc

Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what grants in aid have been paid to Unigate plc in respect of poultry-processing plants.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: St. Ivel Farm Foods Ltd. (formerly Unigate Poultry Ltd.), a subsidiary of Unigate plc, is receiving regional aid in respect of a poultry processing plant at Scunthorpe.

Payments of regional development grant towards the project have totalled £3,729,000 to date. The company also accepted an offer of £10,558,000 of regional selective assistance and the first payment of grant under that offer was made in the quarter January to March 1989.

Details of the RDG payments and the RSA offer were published in British Business in accordance with standing arrangements.

Cosmetics

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's policy in respect of the number of clearances given to additives for use in cosmetics; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The "positive" or approved lists of colourants, preservatives and ultra filters are agreed by member states at Brussels on the advice of the EC scientific committee on cosmetology. Since these are potentially more hazardous classes of ingredients the SCC normally asks for a full range of animal test data to safeguard the user.

ECGD (Relocation)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make it a criterion for the privatisation of the Export Credits Guarantee Department that the consequent relocation of offices from Cardiff, should take into account areas in Wales of high unemployment and poverty.

Mr. Ridley: There is currently no proposal for relocating the offices away from Cardiff nor do I expect one: but this would be a matter for the management after privatisation.

London United Investments

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will take steps to satisfy himself that the accounts of London United Investments plc in respect of the financial years ended in 1988 and 1989 showed a true and fair view of the profit and loss accounts and balance sheets and complied with the Companies Acts.

Mr. Redwood: The accounts of London United Investments plc for 1987 and for 1988 were audited by Messrs. Peat, Marwick, McLintock who reported that the financial statements of the company gave a true and fair view of its affairs and had been properly prepared in accordance with the Companies Act 1985 and that the consolidated financial statements had been properly prepared in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 applicable to insurance companies. The group's accounts for 1989 are not yet due. In another answer to my hon. Friend today I have set out the action taken by my Department.

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when his Department first sought an actuarial report by Tillinghast into the insurance liabilities of London United Investments plc or its subsidiary companies; what were the dates when the report or reports were received by his Department; what were the dates when his officials took action on each report; and what was the nature of the action taken in each case.

Mr. Redwood: The Department required an actuarial report into Walbrook and its subsidiaries in January 1989. This report by Tillinghast was received in June 1989. The Department after consulting the Government Actuary's Department put various questions to LUI in August and September 1989. In October the DTI told LUI that it would require a further actuarial report covering all the United Kingdom insurance subsidiaries and that the Department needed to discuss a substantial reduction in the new business taken on by Walbrook. None of the other United Kingdom insurance companies in the group were authorised to take on new insurance business. The second actuarial report has not yet been received by LUI. The regulatory action to stop new business being taken by Walbrook, announced at 8.30 am on 26 March, was on the basis of Tillinghast's preliminary work which Schroders, the recently appointed merchant bank advisers to LUI reported to the Department on Saturday 24 March 1990.

Illegal Profits

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will introduce legislation to provide that anyone, including financial institutions, who knowingly conceals the origins of illegal profits, will face a fine or imprisonment.

Mr. Waddington: I have been asked to reply.

It is already a serious offence to launder the proceeds of drug trafficking and terrorist funds, and there are extensive powers both to enable the police and customs officers to investigate such activities and to require banks and other financial institutions to report suspicious transactions to those authorities. The powers to combat drug money laundering have been further strengthened by the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990, which also contains provisions to prevent drug traffickers evading the controls on money laundering by importing or exporting their proceeds in the form of cash.

It is also an offence to handle stolen goods or the proceeds of stolen goods; and those who do so may be held to have acted as accessories, conspirators or aiders and abetters in relation to the crime. Additionally, part VI of the Criminal Justice Act 1988 frees banks and others from obligations of confidentiality when they report voluntarily transactions involving funds which they suspect are derived from criminal activity.

Written Answers to Questions

Thursday 19 April 1990

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Land Tenure

13. Mr. Knapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the discussions within the industry concerning land tenure.

Mr. Maclean: We welcome the debate within the industry on ways of revitalising the tenanted sector. Whilst consensus would be desirable we recognise that complete agreement may not be possible. Any proposals must genuinely address the problem and increase the availability of land for letting, including for new tenants. We hope the industry will pursue the debate vigorously with the need for effective measures uppermost in their minds.

Marine Environment

14. Mr. Fishburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department is taking to improve the quality of the marine environment.

Mr. Curry: We have set a date to end all dumping of liquid industrial waste, flyash and sewage sludge, and we will cease incineration at sea at the end of this year.

Scotch Whisky

15. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what subjects he expects to discuss at his next meeting with representatives of the Scotch whisky industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: I will discuss any issues of current commercial interest to the industry should a meeting be requested.

Farms (Pollution)

16. Mr. Ward: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what schemes his Department has to help farmers deal with on-farm pollution and waste disposal.

Mr. Maclean: All farmers are entitled to initial free technical advice and we also make 50 per cent. grants available for the handling, storing and treatment of agricultural effluent and waste. In nitrate-sensitive areas further payments will be made for substantial restrictions to cut nitrate leaching.

Cereals

17. Mr. Nellist: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total United Kingdom hectarage of cereals for each of the last five years.

22. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total United Kingdom hectarage of cereals for each of the last five years.

35. Mr. Rogers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the total United Kingdom hectarage of cereals for each of the last five years.

Mr. Curry: Total United Kingdom hectarage of cereals in million hectares over the last five years is:

Year	Million hectares
1985	4·015
1986	4·024
1987	3·935
1988	3·896
1989	[1]3·894

[1] Latest estimate

Agricultural Subsidy

18. Mr. Grocott: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total current level of subsidy to agriculture.

Mr. Curry: Expenditure on agricultural support in the United Kingdom in 1989-90, under the EC's common agricultural policy and on national grants and subsidies, is forecast to be £1,255·5 million.

Green Pound

19. Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many European Community countries are in favour of devaluation of the green pound.

Mr. Curry: In the negotiations on the 1990 agricultural price proposals no member state has opposed the principle of a green pound devaluation.

Animal Welfare

20. Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met the director of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; and what was discussed.

Mr. Maclean: I met the chief executive and other officers from the society on 27 March when many current issues on farm animal welfare were discussed.

23. Mr. John P. Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what reports he is expecting from the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave earlier to the hon. Member for Pontypridd (Dr. Howells).

25. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he plans to bring forward any primary legislation on farm animal welfare.

57. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he plans to bring forward any primary legislation on farm animal welfare.

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. Friend the Minister recently announced a major new initiative by the Government to tighten up farm animal welfare standards throughout the European Community. We intend to seek the fullest degree of harmonisation so that all countries of the Community operate to the same high standards. We shall seek to ensure that welfare measures which we consider to be desirable to introduce are, so far as possible, adopted throughout the European Community.

The Government have already announced that primary legislation is required to implement a number of recommendations by the Farm Animal Welfare Council relating to the welfare of animals at slaughter. It remains our intention to introduce the legislation as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits to make provision for those measures which may not be covered by Community law.

38. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on policy towards animal welfare within the United Kingdom and the European Community.

42. Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that the welfare of farm animals is given priority throughout the European Community.

Mr. Maclean: As explained in the reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hereford (Mr. Shepherd) on 7 February, Official Report, column 712, we are pressing for a comprehensive package of measures on farm animal welfare to be adopted in the Community in order to achieve the widest possible safeguards.

44. Mr. Cox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the Farm Animal Welfare Council.

Mr. Maclean: The Government value the Farm Animal Welfare Council's independent and authoritative advice very highly. The council has provided the impetus for many new welfare measures and will, I am sure, continue to lead the way in its future work.

White Fish (North Sea)

21. Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent discussions he has had with his European Community counterparts regarding further conservation measures for the fishing of North sea white fish stocks.

Mr. Curry: High-level discussions are now taking place in Brussels on conservation and I expect the report on this to be discussed at the next Fisheries Council. The United Kingdom has submitted proposals, following discussion with the industry.

Agriculture (Capital Investment)

24. Mr. Cran: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the figure for the amount of fixed capital investment in the agricultural industry over the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Curry: The figures requested are as follows:

Annual fixed capital investment in the United Kingdom agricultural industry £ million (current price)

1985	1,226
1986	1,057
1987	941
1988	1,010
[1]1989	1,004

[1] Provisional.

Extensification

26. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Community proposals for extensification.

36. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Community proposals for extensification.

Mr. Curry: We shall shortly be announcing decisions on pilot schemes for extensification of beef and sheep following consultations with interested organisations and with the Commission.

We are also intending to issue a consultation document outlining a possible extensification scheme under which grant aid would be available to farmers wishing to convert from conventional to organic production.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

27. Mr. Sean Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to date of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy slaughter and compensation schemes.

56. Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost to date of the bovine spongiform encephalopathy slaughter and compensation scheme.

Mr. Maclean: From the introduction of the compulsory slaughter policy on 8 August 1988 to the end of February 1990, the total cost was £6,436,167.

34. Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further action he proposes to reduce the risk of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Government have introduced a comprehensive package of measures to tackle BSE in cattle and to eliminate the remote risk to public health.

52. Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the estimate of the Southwood committee of the level of reporting of bovine spongiform encephalopathy; what is the current level of reporting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: The Southwood working party did not predict the level of reporting of suspect BSE cases. It did, however, make certain estimating assumptions about the development of the disease and concluded that there might be some 350 to 400 cases of BSE per month. Since the beginning of this year, the number of suspect BSE cases notified to the Ministry has risen and at present around 350 to 400 are being reported each week.

Milk Marketing Board

28. Mr. Ian Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the factors that will affect the operation of the Milk Marketing Board in 1992.

Mr. Curry: 1992 will not, of itself, affect the operation of the Milk Marketing Board. But the single market will reduce barriers to trade and there is now more milk available as a result of the recent increase in quotas. It is important that our dairy industry should be in a position to compete vigorously at home and in other member states in order to exploit these new opportunities. That is why I am encouraging the board and the Dairy Trade Federation to pursue discussions with a view to devising milk marketing arrangements suited to the 1990s.

Fishing Industry

29. Mr. Kennedy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will assess the prospects for the United Kingdom fishing industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: While fishing opportunities in 1990 for certain stocks, in particular North sea cod and haddock, have had to be reduced to safeguard the stocks, the value of landings in the early part of the year has been similar to that at the same time last year. We are, however, working hard on improvements to measures aimed at the conservation of fish on a Communitywide basis to achieve improved fishing prospects in the future.

Fishing Industry (Northumberland)

30. Mr. Beith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effect of recent restrictions on the viability of the fishing industry in the Northumberland fishing ports.

Mr. Curry: The measures I announced on 8 March were necessary to conserve North sea haddock, in the light of the current state of that stock. For this reason, they are essential to ensure the long-term viability of all sections of the haddock industry.

Food Safety Bill

31. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to lay the first orders under the Food Safety Bill.

Mr. Maclean: The Food Safety Bill is very much an enabling framework and many orders and regulations will be required. I hope to issue the first of these for consultation soon after Royal Assent.

46. Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the regulations under the Food Safety Bill will cover diet products.

Mr. Maclean: At present foods marketed as diet products are subject to the general provisions of the Food Act 1984 and to regulations made under it. In particular, schedule 6, part II, item 6 of the Food Labelling Regulations 1984 lays down the conditions under which slimming claims may be made. Some slimming aids for consumption are marketed as medicines and are licensed under medicines legislation. It is intended that these arrangements should be continued under the Food Safety Bill, but my hon. Friend may wish to be aware that the definition of food is being extended in the Bill to include "articles and substances of no nutritional value".

This is to make it entirely clear that all diet products fall within the scope of legislation.

Consumer Needs

32. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action his Department is taking to encourage farmers to meet the needs of the consumer.

Mr. Curry: Recent changes to the common agricultural policy, which the Government have supported, are intended to increase the role of market forces in agriculture and so encourage farmers to respond more effectively to demand from consumers. The Government have also taken a number of specific measures, including continued funding of Food from Britain, to help farmers respond rapidly to market signals.

Bovine Offal

33. Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will reconsider his decision on the bovine offal ban so as to include calves of under six months of age.

37. Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will reconsider his decision on the bovine offal ban so as to include calves of under six months of age.

50. Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will reconsider his decision on the bovine offal ban so as to include calves of under six months of age.

Mr. Maclean: No. These animals were born after the ban on ruminant feedstuffs was introduced and even if BSE is transmitted from dam to calf, the agent would be undetectable in such young animals.

Dairy Sector

39. Mr. Knox: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he next intends to meet the president of the National Farmers Union to discuss the dairy sector.

Mr. Curry: I have nothing to add to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend on 8 March, Official Report, column 847.

National Farmers Union

40. Mr. Tredinnick: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last met representatives of the National Farmers Union; and what was discussed.

Mr. Curry: The Minister and I meet representatives of the National Farmers Union frequently to discuss agricultural matters.

Less-favoured Areas

41. Mr. Amos: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assistance has been given to help farmers in the less-favoured areas; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Farmers in the less-favoured areas benefit from the payment of hill livestock compensatory allowances and from higher rates of grant for investments under the farm and conservation grant scheme. They are also eligible for a wider range of grants than other farmers under the farm diversification grant scheme and for special aid to encourage co-operative forage production. All told, these extra payments amount to over £140 million a year for the United Kingdom. This is a considerable package of extra help over and above our general agricultural support policies which benefit hill farmers as well as other farmers.

Access to the Countryside

43. Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on access to the countryside.

Mr. Maclean: Under section 17 of the Agriculture Act 1986 we have to balance the interests of promoting an efficient agricultural industry, the conservation and enhancement of the natural beauty and amenity of the countryside and its enjoyment by the public. It is generally recognised that there is a delicate balance between the increasing demand for public access and its impact upon the countryside and farming. My Department's policies are designed to encourage farmers wherever practicable to provide for countryside recreation. To this end, grants are available under the farm diversification grant scheme for farm walks and nature trails and this Department, jointly with the Countryside Commission, has published a ploughing code which reminds farmers of their responsibilities in relation to rights of way. Furthermore, we support the Rights of Way (Agricultural Land) Bill, introduced by my hon. Friend the Member for Gainsborough and Horncastle (Mr. Leigh), which seeks to clarify the existing law on rights of way over agricultural land.

Food Labelling

45. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what further action he proposes to improve the labelling of foodstuffs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: On 15 November 1989 I announced that I had asked the Food Advisory Committee to carry out an independent assessment of our current food labelling legislation and practices to see how these can best be developed to give consumers what they need and want to know. I look forward to receiving the committee's recommendations. In the meantime proposals relating to datemarking and nutrition labelling, resulting from recently agreed Community legislation, are already in preparation.

North Sea Dumping

47. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from North sea fishermen about the dumping of industrial waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: We have received representations from fishermen's organisations and individuals concerned about the dumping of industrial waste in the North sea. I am able to reassure them that licensed dumping is strictly controlled and has no adverse effects on fish stocks.

In view of progress in the development of safe alternative land-based disposal methods I have recently announced termination dates for the sea dumping of industrial waste and sewage sludge, and marine incineration.

54. Mr. Hind: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department is pursuing into ways of reducing North sea dumping of industrial and other wastes.

Mr. Curry: In the light of progress in the development of environmentally acceptable methods of disposal of waste on land we have now set deadlines for the termination of the sea dumping of industrial waste and sewage sludge, and marine incineration.

Coastal Flood Defences

48. Mr. Adley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department last reviewed coastal flood defences.

Mr. Maclean: The state of the country's flood defences, both inland and on the coast, is kept under continual review through close contact between my officials and drainage bodies, in particular the National Rivers Authority. The increases in grant provision from £36 million to £54 million for the period 1989-90 to 1992-93 announced following the public expenditure surveys in 1988 and 1989, resulted from our most recent reviews of current and future flood defence needs.

We are currently considering with the National Rivers Authority and local authorities the need for adjustments to current programmes as a result of recent storm events.

Anti-pollution Measures

49. Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the cost to the agricultural industry of complying with anti-pollution measures.

Mr. Maclean: We have received representations on the proposed regulations setting minimum standards for silage, slurry and agricultural fuel oil installations issued for consultation by the Department of the Environment, the proposal to ban, in time for the 1993 harvest, the burning of crop residues, and the proposed pilot nitrate sensitive areas scheme.

Sheep

51. Mr. Geraint Howells: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the present state of the sheep industry.

Mr. Curry: Prices and exports of lamb are well above the levels of the corresponding period in 1989. The increase in exports suggests that the industry is already taking advantage of the opportunities offered by the new sheepmeat regime.

Agricultural Intervention Board

53. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to announce the name of the site chosen for the relocation of the agricultural intervention board.

Mr. Curry: As soon as my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales, and for Northern Ireland, my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and the Minister have concluded their consideration of the advice received from the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce.

Pesticides

55. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he last reviewed the arrangements for pesticide approval.

Mr. Maclean: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Daventry (Mr. Boswell) on 3 April, Official Report, column 86.

Badgers

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many badgers were killed by or on behalf of his Department during 1989; and whether all those were killed under the bovine tuberculosis control scheme;

(2) how many of the badgers killed by his Department during 1989 were (a) uninfected with tuberculosis, (b) showing signs of tuberculosis and (c) capable of infecting other animals;

(3) if he will make a statement on the progress made to date in developing (a) a vaccine against tuberculosis in badgers and (b) a live trap side test for tuberculosis;

(4) what extensions have recently taken place to the scope of the badger destruction element of his bovine tuberculosis clearance scheme; and if he will make a statement;

(5) what was the total cost during 1989 of the tuberculosis eradication scheme; and of this sum how much was earmarked for badger control.

Mr. Maclean: A total of 727 badgers were killed by Ministry Officers in 1989, all in connection with the eradication programme for bovine tuberculosis. Tuberculosis was not identified in 605 badgers. Tuberculosis was confirmed in 122 animals and those animals were considered capable of transmitting the disease to other animals.

Collaborative research on the development of a vaccine has been carried out by workers at the Middlesex hospital and the Ministry's central veterinary laboratory. Workers from the Middlesex hospital have completed a study in the Republic of Ireland on the acceptance of the vaccine by wild badgers. A field trial of efficacy is in progress, again in the Republic of Ireland. A pilot study at the central veterinary laboratory of the possibility that the vaccine could sensitise cattle to tuberculin, and a larger study in Ireland, have suggested that this would not be a problem. An experiment at the central veterinary laboratory to investigate possible desensitisation of cattle infected with tuberculosis has been approved in principle, and is likely to start this year; it will take at least 15 months to complete.

A diagnostic test for use in badgers has been developed at the central veterinary laboratory and shows some promise. It has reached a stage where a field trial is necessary to study its effectiveness and the logistics of its use. It is hoped that a trial will begin in September 1990.

There have been no modifications to the policy of badger control adopted following the Dunnet review.

The total cost of the tuberculosis eradication programme in the financial year 1989-90 was £7·3 million. Of this, £0·4 million was spent on the badger control strategy.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the findings of the Stormont research laboratory on the spread of bovine tuberculosis; what action he proposes to take in the light of the reports' findings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: I am aware of the work done by the veterinary research division at Stormont. The conclusions in no way invalidate the existing badger control strategy.

Record Keeping

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what new administrative responsibilities regarding the keeping of records on the movement of animals, artificial insemination, home mixing of feed, and use of medicines and crop sprays have been imposed on farmers since 1 September 1989.

Mr. Curry: On 1 September 1989 the requirements of the Movement of Animals (Records) Order 1960 were extended to the movement of deer. As regards crop spraying, the health surveillance requirements of the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988, parts of which took effect after 1 September 1989, involve keeping of records of employees' work with pesticides containing anticholinesterase compounds. This builds upon obligations previously in the Poisonous Substances in Agriculture Regulations 1984. There have been no new administrative responsibilities placed upon farmers as regards the keeping of records relating to artificial insemination, home mixing of feed and on the use of veterinary medicines since 1 September 1989.

Bass

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he proposes to proceed with plans to designate nursery areas for the protection of juvenile bass stocks; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have decided that, following extensive consultations with interested parties over the last two years, regulations should be introduced as soon as practical to establish 34 nursery areas in the coastal waters of England and Wales in which fishing for bass from any boat will be prohibited for all or part of the year. The nursery areas and the duration of the seasonal prohibition on bass fishing will be as follows:

Area	Duration of prohibition (dates inclusive)
Bradwell Power Station outfall (River Blackwater)	1 May to 31 October
Isle of Grain Power Station outfall (River Medway)	All year
Kingsnorth Power Station outfall (River Medway)	All year
Chichester Harbour	1 May to 31 October
Langstone Harbour	1 May to 31 October
Portsmouth Harbour	1 May to 31 October
Southampton Water	1 May to 31 October
Fawley Power Station outfall (Stanswood Bay, Solent)	1 May to 31 October

Area	Duration of prohibition (dates inclusive)
Poole Harbour	1 May to 31 October
The Fleet	All year
River Exe	1 May to 31 October
River Teign	1 May to 31 October
River Dart	1 May to 31 December
Salcombe Harbour	1 May to 31 December
River Avon (Devon)	1 May to 31 December
River Yealm	1 May to 31 December
Plymouth Rivers	All year
River Fowey	1 May to 31 December
Fal Estuary	1 May to 31 December
Percuil River	1 May to 31 December
Helford River	1 May to 31 December
River Camel	1 May to 30 November
River Torridge	1 May to 31 October
River Taw	1 May to 31 October
Aberthaw Power Station outfall	All year
Burry Inlet	1 May to 31 October
Taf, Twyi and Gwendraeth Estuary	1 May to 31 October
Milford Haven	1 May to 31 October
River Dyfi	1 May to 31 October
River Mawddach	1 May to 31 October
Dwyryd/Glaslyn Estuary	1 May to 31 October
Conwy Estuary	1 May to 31 October
Dee Estuary	1 June to 30 September
Heysham Power Station outfall (Morecambe Bay)	1 June to 30 September

We shall also be inviting the National Rivers Authority and sea fisheries committees to consider the introduction of additional restrictions in some areas or parts of areas where juvenile bass stocks are particularly vulnerable to other fishing activities. Full details of the extent of the 34 nursery areas and the additional restrictions proposed have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses. It is not proposed that any restrictions should be placed on fishing from the shore for which primary legislation would be necessary. However, any bass taken from the shore and landed will still need to comply with the minimum landing size of 36 cm.

The introduction of nursery areas forms the final part of the package of measures that are being adopted for the long term conservation and management of the bass fishery in our coastal waters. The other measures, the introduction of mesh size controls for gill and similar nets and an increase in the minimum landing size for bass from 32 to 36 cm, which was subsequently adopted by the European Community, took effect from 1 January this year.

Drift Net Fishing

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on drift net fishing.

Mr. Curry: Properly regulated drift net fishing is an efficient method of fishing. We oppose the indiscriminate use such as the large-scale drift net operations for tuna on the high seas which has been occurring in the south Pacific and the United Kingdom has supported the recent United Nations resolution promulgated to deal with by such misuse. In United Kingdom waters drift nets are generally used in small-scale coastal operations for herring or salmon and where needed controls are placed on these fisheries.

PRIME MINISTER

Official Information

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list those statutes currently in force which control the release of official information.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Home Office, to my hon. Friend the Member for Aldridge-Brownhills (Mr. Shepherd) on 2 April 1990 at columns 439-41, which listed statutes other than the Official Secrets Acts which create criminal sanctions for the release of certain kinds of information.

Television Licences

Mr. Sillars: To ask the Prime Minister what correspondence she has received from Key housing association about concessionary television licences; what were its terms; and what action she proposes.

The Prime Minister: Key housing association wrote to me on 20 March asking that its accommodation should attract the £5 concessionary television licence available to occupants of certain residential homes and comparable accommodation.

I welcome Key housing's policy of providing mixed housing developments designed to integrate mentally handicapped people into the community. But I am advised that such accommodation cannot qualify for the concessionary television licence. The regulations approved by Parliament in 1988 were explicitly intended to restore the original intention of the concessionary scheme, which was to cater for self-contained units of accommodation rather than those which are mixed in with other housing.

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister when she last raised the issue of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and its forthcoming fourth review conference with a visiting Head of State or Government; and when she next expects to do so.

The Prime Minister: I have not recently discussed this issue thoroughly with a visiting Head of State or Government, and do not have plans to do so. The non-proliferation treaty and other matters related to non-proliferation are regularly discussed in the appropriate fora, and in bilateral contacts at various levels.

Engagements

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 April.

Ms Short: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 April.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 April.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 April.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Thursday 19 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ramsar Convention

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he last designated an area under the Ramsar convention on the conservation of wetlands of international importance; if he will indicate the area which is next to be designated; and when he expects to designate it.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At the time of ratification of the Ramsar convention on wetlands of international importance especially as waterfowl habitat by the United Kingdom in 1976 Lough Neagh and Lough Beg were jointly listed as being conserved under the terms of the convention. This is the only Ramsar site in Northern Ireland, although a number of other areas are under consideration. It is essential that any further sites in Northern Ireland are fully protected under the provisions of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Northern Ireland) Order 1985 before designation as Ramsar sites and there are no plans for the listing of further sites in the immediate future.

Police and Criminal Evidence

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the authorities and officials who have to operate under (a) a code of practice under article 65 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 and (b) the persons, authorities and officials who are covered for the purposes of article 65 by section 66.

Mr. Cope: Those who have to operate under a code of practice issued under article 65 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989 are members of the following police forces:

the Royal Ulster Constabulary;
the Belfast Harbour Police;
the Larne Harbour Police;
the Northern Ireland Airport Police.

Those who are covered for the purposes of article 65 by article 66 and who are therefore required to have regard to the provision of such a code are persons, other than police officers, who are charged with the duty of investigating offences or charging offenders.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the persons and organisations whom he consulted before introducing codes of practice under the provisions of article 65 of the Police and Criminal Evidence (Northern Ireland) Order 1989.

Strangford Lough

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many applications have been made for consents to carry out notifiable operations in the Strangford Lough area of special scientific interest; and in how many cases consents have been granted.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To date, 45 applications have been made. In 36 cases consents have been issued and in two cases consents were not actually required. Three consents are expected to be given shortly and four cases are as yet unresolved.

I am pleased to note that 22 of the applications were verbal. Landowners and occupiers are taking full advantage of this less formal approach which was introduced by article 10 of the Nature Conservation and Amenity Lands (Amendment) (Northern Ireland) Order 1989.

The Sunday Times

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether any current officials of his Department or others involved in security force operations in Northern Ireland requested permission to give evidence on behalf of The Sunday Times in the libel action brought by Mr. T. Murphy and Mr. P. Murphy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: No.

Lough Foyle

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the minimum depth of water in the shipping channel to Lisahally dock in Lough Foyle.

Mr. Peter Bottomley [holding answer 26 March 1990]: The answer is 6·5 metres.

Kincora Boys Home

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he hopes to complete his consideration of the issues raised by the Channel 4 television programme of 28 March on Kincora.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 2 April 1990]: I have studied the transcript of the Channel 4 News programme. I note that there were some statements by Mr. Mike Taylor which are not consistent with what I understand to be the content of his 1982 statement to the police. If he has anything to add to his 1982 statement, he should give it to the police.

For the remainder, the transcript contains no new material. As the Terry report confirmed, rumours about the homosexual tendencies of one member of the staff at Kincora reached the police in Northern Ireland during the 1970s but this did not amount to substantive evidence of homosexual abuse of boys at the hostel. Sir George Terry in his published conclusions refers, against the background of intense contemporary terrorist activity, to > "an understandable inability to recognise that extremely vague information which arose in 1974, if probed thoroughly, may well have revealed that which was finally discovered in [the] 1980 investigations"

but adds:

> "I do not consider . . . that an earlier investigation would reasonably have been prompted on the basis of the information available . . ."

A full account of such rumours, which are known to have come to the attention of social services, is contained in the Hughes report. Rumours that a man may have homosexual tendencies are not by themselves a basis for criminal or disciplinary action against him. However, if anyone believes that they have substantive new evidence which is relevant, they should give it to the police.

Stevens Inquiry

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many soldiers from the Ulster Defence Regiment who were arrested in connection with the Stevens inquiry but who were not charged with a scheduled offence have subsequently had to move home for security reasons.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 23 March 1990]: I understand that 10 such soldiers have moved house, or plan to do so.

HEALTH

Nuclear Weapons Testing

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish in the Official Report the correspondence between himself and Mr. Chazov, Minister of Public Health of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, about nuclear weapons testing.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have placed copies of the relevant correspondence in the Library.

South Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost per head of spending in the National Health Service for the South Manchester district health authority in each of the past 15 years (a) in cash terms and (b) in real terms.

Mr. Freeman: Figures of average annual expenditure per head of resident population for the South Manchester health authority for the years since its establishment on 1 April 1982 are shown in the table:

Revenue expenditure per head of resident population
Hospital and community health services (HCHS)

	£ (cash)	£ (at 1989-90 prices)
1982-83	388	559
1983-84	416	572
1984-85	434	568
1985-86	453	563
1986-87	473	569
1987-88	518	591
1988-89	571	608

Sources:

(a) Annual accounts of the South Manchester Health Authority—1982-83 to 1988-89 (latest available).

(b) Mid-year estimates of resident population—1982 to 1988 (Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys).

Notes:

1. The figures have been expressed at 1989-90 prices by the use of the gross domestic product deflator.

2. HCHS includes hospital, community health and other services provided by the health authority. Capital expenditure and expenditure on family practitioner services is excluded; the latter expenditure is accounted for by family practitioner committees (FPCs) and cannot be attributed to particular districts.

3. People do travel across district boundaries for treatment and resource allocations reflect the pattern of service provision locally. The population figures used make no allowance for people resident in one district who receive treatment in another or for the difference in morbidity and age/sex structure of particular populations.

4. Prior to 1 April 1982 the authority's predecessor health district formed part of a larger area health authority and in such cases district based figures were not collected centrally.

Distinction Awards

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether he has met the chairman of the Central Advisory Committee on Distinction Awards to discuss progress towards a more open system, as advocated by the Review Body on Doctors' and Dentists' Remuneration in April 1988.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Discussions have taken place between the chairman of the advisory committee on distinction awards and the Department of Health's officials and with the British Medical Association about ways to make the awards system more open and better understood. Further information about the operation of the awards system, following the changes proposed in the Government's White Paper "Working for Patients" will be available later this year.

GP Budgets

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether any general practitioners' practices have expressed an interest in holding their own budgets.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Wyre Forest (Mr. Coombs) on 14 March at column 280

Acute Operations

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current average waiting time for acute operations in (a) England and (b) Cornwall.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The median waiting time for patients who underwent surgery in the year ending March 1989 was seven weeks for England and nine weeks for Cornwall and Isles of Scilly.

Mentally Handicapped People

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the provision of services for the profoundly mentally handicapped.

Mr. Freeman: Government policy is to encourage the development at local level of a comprehensive range of well co-ordinated health and social services for mentally handicapped people. Advice to authorities in meeting the needs of those who are profoundly mentally handicapped was contained in "Helping Mentally Handicapped People with Special Problems" 1984—a copy of which is in the Library.

Community Care

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to improve the management of social services departments prior to implementation of care in the community.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: It is predominantly, of course, for local authorities themselves to determine the management skills and approaches they need to develop in order to implement care in the community policy. The Department is supporting management development through a joint project between the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy (CIPFA) and the Association of Directors of Social Services (ADSS) on financial management training and also a joint project between ADSS and Price Waterhouse looking at the organisational response needed successfully to implement the policy.

Family Planning (Nottingham)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received on the reduction of family planning services in Nottingham district health authority.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: None.

Mike Heaffey Sports Centre, Stanmore

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Health Service will be making any contribution to the funding of the Mike Heaffey sports centre for the disabled, Stanmore; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I am informed that North West and North East Thames regional health authority will be offering ASPIRE a joint contribution to the running costs of the Mike Heaffey centre of £45,000 in 1990-91, to be followed by a further £45,000 in 1991-92.

North West Thames RHA, whose patients are the main users of the Royal National Orthopaedic hospital where the Mike Heaffey centre is sited, will be contributing a total of £60,000; North East Thames, whose patients are the second main users, will be contributing a total of £30,000. These contributions will help put the finances of the Mike Heaffey centre on a firm footing; and, by demonstrating the NHS's support for ASPIRE's efforts to improve the situation of those with spinal injuries, encourage further voluntary donations to this worthwhile cause, which has much public support.

Health Authorities

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the largest population served by one health authority in Great Britain.

Mr. Freeman: West Midlands RHA (resident population 5,206·5 thousand) and Leicestershire DHA (885·5 thousand) were the largest regional and district health authorities respectively in England and Wales at mid-1988. In Scotland, the Greater Glasgow health board served a resident population of 939·2 thousand at the same date.

Porton Down

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of the centre for applied microbiology and research at Porton Down, near Salisbury.

Mr. Freeman: I said in my reply of 7 February to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury at column 705 that we were considering a number of possible options for the future of the centre for applied microbiology and research (CAMR), including an approach by Porton International plc to acquire CAMR. The current proposal from Porton International is unacceptable, but talks between the financial advisers to the two sides are continuing. Whatever the outcome, I am confident that the essential public sector interests in CAMR's work, including its public health aspects, can be safeguarded.

NHS Capital Expenditure

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list National Health Service capital expenditure for each year since 1979-80 (a) in cash terms, (b) adjusted by the gross domestic product deflator and (c) adjusted by the appropriate service deflator, listed both inclusive and exclusive of income from National Health Service land sales.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 30 March 1990]: The information requested is given in the table.

National Health Service capital expenditure since 1979-80

TRANSPORT

Railways, Greater Manchester

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the provision of funding for railway services in Greater Manchester.

Mr. Portillo: The provision of funding for local passenger rail services in Greater Manchester is a matter for agreement between the Greater Manchester PTE and British Rail.

Coastal Trading

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those nations whose ships are able to carry cargoes in the coastal trade of the United Kingdom but whose coastal trade is closed to British registered ships.

Mr. McLoughlin: The United Kingdom's coastal trades are open to all vessels regardless of flag. In the EC, British registered vessels do not have reciprocal rights presently in France, Spain, Italy, Portugal and Greece. We are pressing vigorously for these coastal and offshore trades to be liberalised before the end of 1992. Further afield, opportunities for British registered vessels to carry cargoes in coastal trades are extremely limited.

Light Dues

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has received the British Ports Federation study about extending light dues to pleasure craft.

Mr. McLoughlin: The British Ports Federation report is being published today, and I have placed copies of it in the Library.

I am grateful for the work done by the Federation on this difficult subject. I will wish to consider its report carefully, and I have reached no conclusions on its primary recommendation. This is that a flat rate light dues charge should be introduced for pleasure craft users based on a new compulsory registration system. The federation argues that closer regulation of the growing number of pleasure craft is increasingly desirable to assist with crime prevention and safety as well as to provide a basis for levying a contribution towards the costs of the aids to navigation provided by the general lighthouse authorities which are used by pleasure craft.

I believe these wider issues require careful consideration, and I am therefore seeking the views of interested parties on all aspects of the BPF report before reaching any conclusions. The changes recommended by the BPF could in any event not be implemented without primary legislation.

Learner Drivers

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he has reached a decision on the regulations governing those who are supervising learner drivers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Responses to the recent consultation indicated overwhelming support for the introduction of minimum requirements on the age and experience of those who supervise learner drivers.

In the light of the comments received, I have decided to introduce requirements for a minimum age of 21 years and three years as the holder of a full driving licence. There will be no change in the requirements for supervisors of HGV and PSV learner drivers.

I have today issued draft regulations for comment by 18 May, with a view to implementing the changes by the summer.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Mr. Knowles: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the vehicle inspectorate executive agency business plan for 1990-91 will be published.

Mr. Atkins: The business plan has been published today. Copies are available in the House Libraries.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set financial objectives for London Regional Transport.

Mr. Parkinson: I have today written to the Chairman of London Regional Transport in the following terms:

> "On 20 December 1989, I wrote to you setting quality of service objectives for London Underground Limited, for bus services operated by or on behalf of London Regional Transport, and for the Docklands Light Railway. In the same letter, I formally endorsed the safety objectives which you had set for London Regional Transport and all its subsidiaries. I am now writing to you, in exercise of my powers under section 16 of the London Regional Transport Act 1984, to set financial objectives to be achieved by London Regional Transport, by London Underground Limited and by London Buses Limited.

I must reiterate that safety is your top priority. We have also agreed on the need to improve the quality of the services LRT provide and hence to meet the quality of service objective I set you on 20 December. These financial objectives are concerned with ensuring that you meet your other objectives as efficiently as possible, thereby ensuring that passengers and taxpayers receive value for money.

I am setting three main financial objectives. In each case I have specified a level of performance which I wish to see achieved in respect of the financial year ending 31 March 1993, set at 1989-90 prices. For the purpose of measuring the achievement against the objectives, the figures actually achieved will be deflated to 1989-90 prices using the Retail Price Index.

The objectives relate to the operating surplus of London Regional Transport and to the operating costs of your principal subsidiaries. Achievement of these objectives will not in any way impact on the pursuit of your ambitious capital expenditure programme. In the Chancellor's Autumn Statement, we announced our intention of contributing £1·75 billion of grant over the three years up to 1992-93, towards your investment programme of £2·2 billion. That arrangement is unaffected by these objectives.

London Regional Transport

London Regional Transport has forecast that it will make an operating loss, before making deductions in respect of depreciation and renewals, of £76 million in the financial year ending 31 March 1990. I propose that you should transform this loss into an operating surplus of £70 million in the financial year ending 31 March 1993, so that the day to day operations of LRT can at least make some contribution towards its investment programme. This objective assumes that London Underground Limited and London Buses Limited achieve the unit cost reduction objectives set out below and that London Regional Transport secures additional improvements in the financial performance of its other subsidiaries. The objective is based on London Regional Transport's own forecasts of future revenue, which include the conventional assumption that fare increases in future years will be in line with the increase introduced in February this year. If for any reason this assumption proves to be ill-founded, the objective will need to be modified accordingly.

In order to meet the objective, it will be necessary for all London Regional Transport businesses to exercise their best endeavours to optimise revenue whilst running their operations efficiently and cost-effectively. Certain activities of London Regional Transport are categorised as being essentially commercial in nature. These include certain commercial bus and coach operations undertaken by subsidiaries of London Buses Limited, and all the activities undertaken by the Victoria Coach Station Ltd., London Transport International Services Ltd., London Transport Catering and London Transport Advertising. It has previously been agreed between the Government and London Regional Transport that each of these commercial activities should, as a minimum, earn a 5 per cent. return on turnover, taking one financial year with another. I confirm that I wish these activities to continue to meet this requirement.

The Docklands Light Railway is not covered by this requirement. Nor have I sought to set a loss reduction objective for it. This reflects the fact that there are very many uncertainties about the future financial performance of the railway, whose services are still evolving: the extensions to Beckton and the City, for instance, should both open within the period covered by these financial objectives. I will wish to set a financial objective for the Docklands Light Railway, as soon as possible. Although the Docklands Light Railway is not a major contributor to the costs or revenue of London Regional Transport at this stage, it accounts for a significant part of your capital expenditure. We need to ensure that the benefits of this investment are realised in Docklands. I have asked officials to hold urgent discussions with the Docklands Light Railway to consider what form of objective it would be appropriate to set the railway at this stage. In the interim, I look to the Board of London Regional Transport to ensure that the Docklands Light Railway makes its proper contribution to achievement of the profit target.

London Underground Limited

Expenditure in the day-to-day running of the London Underground system has risen significantly over the last two years. It is now some 23 per cent. above the level of 1987-88. The reasons are well known. The actions which London Regional Transport and London Underground Limited set in hand in the wake of the fire at Kings Cross, and the further actions called for in the report by Sir Desmond Fennell QC and other reports, have involved incurring additional capital and current expenditure. The complement of the British Transport Police 'L' Division has likewise increased in response to the urgent need to tackle crime on the Underground. You have introduced a new management structure within London Underground Limited, which is designed to ensure that the individual lines and stations are brought within better day-to-day management control. Last, but not least, you are now embarked on an ambitious capital expenditure and maintenance programme, which makes additional demands on your staff resources. All these developments are very welcome, and I recognise that there are further areas of the business where you see a legitimate case for increased operating expenditure.

Nevertheless, I consider it essential that London Underground Limited should be set a financial objective, which ensures that this enormous expansion in activity with its associated costs is achieved with due regard to efficiency. This is a necessary safeguard for the fare-payers and taxpayers who must, between them, bear the cost of running the London Underground system. I propose a target to be calculated on the basis of operating costs, excluding depreciation and renewals, per operated train mile. The figure I propose is £14·02. This compares with a forecast outturn figure for 1989-90 of £14·97. We are both satisfied that this can be achieved without prejudicing the achievement by London Underground of a steady improvement in both safety and quality of service.

London Buses Limited

As noted above, certain bus and coaching operations of subsidiaries of London Buses Limited are categorised as commercial. They are subject to the requirement that each service earns not less than a 5 per cent. return on turnover. The remainder of London Buses' operations consists of network routes and routes operated under contract to London Regional Transport. I propose that these routes should be set a unit cost reduction target expressed in terms of operating costs (including depreciation and renewals, but excluding severance payments) per operated bus mile.

The Government remains firmly committed to the deregulation of the London bus market, and the subsequent privatisation of the subsidiaries of London Buses Limited, but has yet to determine a timetable. I recognise that the absence of a firm date for deregulation makes it difficult for LBL to plan unit cost reductions too far ahead. However, the prospect of deregulation and privatisation makes it vital that the subsidiaries of London Buses Limited should move as quickly as possible to a position where they can compete successfully in a deregulated bus market. Their efforts to achieve this can only be strengthened by having a firm financial objective to work to. I am therefore setting a unit cost target for the financial year ending 31 March 1993. We will review the position for future years in the light of the decisions we take on the timing of deregulation. The target figure is £2·57. This compares with a forecast outturn figure for 1989-90 of £2·77.

Public Accountability

I would like the Board to report performance and progress in achieving all its different objectives in its annual Report and Accounts. This should include:

(a) progress in implementing the safety objectives you have set for London Regional Transport and its subsidiaries;

(b) the quality of service achieved against the objectives set for London Underground Ltd, London Regional Transport bus services and the Docklands Light Railway;

(c) progress towards the achievement of the financial objectives set in this letter."

President of India (State Visit)

Sir Neil Macfarlane: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department was consulted about the traffic arrangements in the city of Westminster on 3 April prior to the arrival of the State President of India; whether the procedures adopted were assessed by his officials; what prior warning was given to the road user in London on traffic effects within his Department's responsibilities; and if he will make a statement about the effect upon traffic in London when Victoria station is used as the arrival point for a state visit.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The Department was not consulted. Traffic control arrangements for state visits are the responsibility of the Metropolitan police. I understand that they provided advance warning signs and informed the media of diversions well in advance.

ENERGY

Landfill Gas

Sir Charles Morrison: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the research and development projects being undertaken by his Department or related agencies on landfill gas.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The list of research and development projects currently being supported by the Department of Energy on landfill gas is as follows:

Title	Contractor
1. FUNDAMENTAL STUDIES
Cellulolysis in landfill	AFRC Institute of Food Research, Norwich
Methanogenesis in landfill	Queen Mary College, London University
Interactions between species in landfill	Strathclyde University
Assessment of Fungi in landfill	Institute for Grassland and Animal Protection (Hurley). [Recently completed]
Protozoa in landfill	NERC Institute of Freshwater Ecology
Anaerobic methane oxidation	Warwick University
General consulting	D. Archer, IFRN
Microbiology of landfill gas enhancement test cells	Biotechnology Group, Harwell
Review of microbiological techniques for assaying landfill	Biostrategy Associates [Proposed—due to start shortly]
2. LANDFILL GAS FIELD STUDIES
Research and development on landfill gas abstraction and utilisation	Shanks and McEwan Ltd. and Yorkshire Brick Company
Monitoring and technical assessment of above project	Environmental Safety Centre, Harwell
National assessment of landfill gas resource	Environmental Resources Ltd. [Complete, but 2nd phase proposed]
Landfill gas enhancement techniques	Environmental Safety Centre, Harwell
Assessment of leachate recirculation to enhance landfill gas production[1]	Water Research Centre
Monitoring of trace components in condensate from landfill gas	Environmental Safety Centre, Harwell
Landfill gas Guidelines[2]	Environmental Resources Ltd.
3. ENERGY EFFICIENCY DEMONSTRATION SCHEMES[3]
Landfill Gas from shallow landfill site	Cory Waste Management Ltd., Stanford-Le-Hope
Monitoring of Bilham Grange Farm landfill gas	Lemace Ltd., Doncaster [Completed November 1989]
Spark ignition engines fuelled by landfill gas	Shanks and McEwan Ltd. Bedford
Gas turbine to convert landfill gas to electricity	Packington Estates Enterprises Ltd., Meriden
Landfill gas to electricity using dual fuel engine	Summerleaze Gravel Co. Ltd., Maidenhead

---

[1] Part funded by Landfill Gas Ltd.

[2] Funded by D. Energy, DoE and Ofgas.

[3] Schemes also supported by the Department of Energy using landfill gas.

Gas Industry

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what information his Department collects on the gas industry.

Mr. Wakeham: The Department collects a variety of information on the United Kingdom gas industry. Key figures are published in the "Development of the Oil and Gas Resources of the UK" (the Brown Book), and in the Department's statistical publications "Energy Trends" and the "Digest of United Kingdom Energy Statistics".

Offshore Oil Production

Mr. Arbuthnot: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any plans to award offshore petroleum production licences in the frontier exploration areas to the north and west of Scotland.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I am today making available a list of the licence areas for which applications will be invited in a round of licensing in the frontier exploration areas to the north and west of Scotland.

Eleven licences will be on offer in the frontier round. I shall place in the Libraries of both Houses a full list of the grouped blocks which will be on offer in the round.

The purpose of a separate round for frontier areas is to encourage a fresh start to exploration in areas which have been little explored in the past and where existing geological information is sparse or low in quality. A fresh start needs to be made to exploration in these areas if the contribution which the United Kingdom continental shelf makes to the economy is to be extended further in the next century.

To offset the high financial risks attached to exploration in the deep water areas concerned, the areas for licensing will be substantially larger than usual. Together, the 11 licences will cover 117 blocks. Licensees will be expected to carry out a programme of seismic exploration in the first part of the initial phase of the licence. It is expected that any drilling will normally take place in the second part of this phase. A feature of the licences granted in these areas will be extended terms to allow licensees longer periods in which to plan and carry out activity on the licences.

As soon as possible, I will publish in the London, Edinburgh and Belfast Gazettes a formal announcement giving the detailed licence terms for frontier licences (including financial terms) and the basis on which awards will be made. Any additional licence conditions, the format of licence applications, and the information required will be available from my Department as soon as the Gazette notices have been published.

Applications will be returnable by a date in January or February 1991 which has yet to be determined.

I will shortly make available a list of the licence areas for which applications will be invited in a separate 12th round of licensing for the established petroleum areas of the UKCS.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Offences

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the offences currently triable only on indictment.

Mr. John Patten: The list of offences currently triable only on indictment in England and Wales is given in the table.

There may in addition be a few common law mischiefs which would be triable only on indictment, where it is not definite how far the common law remains effective.

Absconding from lawful custody	Common Law

Breath Tests

Sir Ian Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department in what circumstances a breath test may be administered by the police other than those listed in his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 635; and what was the total number of such breath tests administered in 1988 and 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: In addition to the circumstances set out in the reply given on 21 March by my right hon. and learned Friend to my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby) at column 635, a constable in uniform may require a person to provide a breath test where he has reasonable cause to suspect that that person has committed a moving traffic offence, or reasonable cause to believe that that person has been involved in an accident.

Breath tests are recorded under two headings according to the reason for the test:

(i) where there is suspicion of consumption of alcohol or suspicion of a moving traffic offence; and,
(ii) where an accident has occurred.

In 1988, 443,000 breath tests were recorded. Of these, 365,000 were in the first category and 78,000 in the second category. In the most recent 12 months for which statistics are available (to September 1989), 502,000 tests were recorded. Of these, 403,000 were in the first category and 99,000 in the second category. Statistics for the fourth quarter of 1989 are not yet available.

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether there are plans to conduct a publicity campaign to explain to the motoring public the full powers available to the police to stop and breath-test drivers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government will continue to support the full use by the police of the powers available to them, including during our regular campaigns against drinking and driving. These powers have been explained on many occasions, most recently in the reply given by my right hon. and learned Friend to my hon. Friend on 21 March at column 635. We do not consider that a further specific publicity campaign is necessary.

Immigration Officials

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the staffing levels of immigration service officials at (a) Heathrow airport (all terminals) and (b) Gatwick airport, in terms of total numbers of staff and by grade, at 1 June for each year from 1986 up to 1 June 1989.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The tables below set out the allocation of staff, by grade, at Heathrow and Gatwick airports on the dates requested. The figures relate primarily to permanent staff but also include seasonally employed officers who operate the embarkation control during the summer, thereby releasing permanent staff for the arrivals control.

Immigration service staff in post on 1 June

Year	Assistant chief inspector	Inspector	Chief immigration officer	Immigration officer	[3]Seasonal immigration officer	[1]General service grades
Heathrow (all terminals)—by grade
1 June 1986	3	14	77	518	70	62·5
1 June 1987	3	17	85	[2]571·5	66	61·5
1 June 1988	3	19	85	525	54	54·5
1 June 1989	3	16	88	552·5	53	59
Gatwick—by grade
1 June 1986	1	4	22	152·5	21	11
1 June 1987	1	4	19	149	8	10
1 June 1988	1	6	29	193	5	13
1 June 1989	1	6	35	214	18	13

Notes:

[1] The general service grades shown in the final column are given as one figure for ALL grades. This includes the following grades; higher executive officer, executive officer, administrative officer, administrative assistant, personal secretary, typist, messenger and interpreter.

[2] The 1987 staff in post figures for immigration officers is unusually high because of the need to deal with the large backlog of casework which arose from the introduction of the various visa requirements in 1986 and 1987. It also reflects the fact that a number of staff were based at Heathrow prior to transfer to Gatwick when the new terminal opened there on 22 March 1988.

[3] The number of seasonal immigration officers increases further in July and August.

Police Housing Allowances

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what meetings with (a) the Police Federation and (b) senior representatives of the police forces in England and Wales he and his ministerial colleagues have had since 1 September 1989 to discuss police housing allowances.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. Friend the then Home Secretary met representatives of the staff side of the Police Negotiating Board to discuss this subject on 24 October 1989. My right hon. and learned Friend and my right hon. and noble Friend also met the chairman and secretary of the staff side, and my hon. Friend the Member for Uxbridge (Mr. Shersby), for the same purpose on 17 January this year. The staff side includes members of all police representative organisations including the Police Federation. My right hon. and learned Friend also discussed the matter with the chief constable of Surrey when he accompanied my right hon. Friend the member for Woking (Mr. Onslow) and other hon. and right hon. Friends to a meeting with him on 21 February.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when representatives of the police forces of England and Wales were first informed of his general proposals with regard to the police housing allowance.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Draft regulations giving effect to my right hon. and learned Friend's initial decisions on the Police Negotiating Board's recommendations on police housing allowance were sent to the board for comment on 4 January. All three police staff organisations for England and Wales are represented on the staff side of the board.

Homosexuality

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation has taken place with the United Kingdom Government over the wording of chapter 38 of the Sex Offences Bill currently before the House of Keys in the Isle of Man; and what response the Government have made.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Sexual Offences Bill has recently been sent to the Home Office by the Isle of Man Government as part of the usual consultative procedures. Section 38 of the Manx Sexual Offences Bill, which is on the same lines as section 28 of the Local Government Act 1988, takes account of earlier discussions between Her Majesty's Government and the Isle of Man authorities.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what indication he has given to the authorities in (a) Jersey and (b) the Isle of Man about the steps which he would take in relation to the criminal law on homosexuality, in the event that the parliaments of these islands fail to amend their current legislation to the satisfaction of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Both Jersey and the Isle of Man have been made aware of the need to amend their current legislation in order to enable the United Kingdom to conform with its international obligations under the European convention on human rights. The Island authorities are also aware that the United Kingdom would need to legislate on their behalf, if necessary.

Police Officers (Resignations)

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many resignations of officers under the age of 45 years there have been from the police forces of England and Wales in each of the last five years for which figures are available; and how many were occassioned by (a) serious injury in the course of duty and (b) all other factors.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The information is not held centrally.

State Visits

Mr. Amos: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the number of occasions in the past year when parts of central London have been closed to traffic due to the arrival of visiting dignitaries; and if he will make a statement on the traffic disruption caused by these closures;

(2) why parts of central London were closed to traffic on 3 April; and if he will make a statement on the traffic disruption caused by this closure.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the Commissioner that parts of central London have been closed to traffic during the past year due to the arrival of visiting dignitaries on the following dates:

6 April 1989—Official visit, President of USSR
8 May 1989—State visit, President of Nigeria
30 May 1989—Official visit, President of USA
5 July 1989—Official visit, Prime Minister of Pakistan
3 April 1990—State visit, President of India

On these occasions parts of central London were closed to traffic for a short time and traffic held up at junctions to facilitate progress of the visitors. In every case, advance warning was given by road signs and via the media. It is inevitable that the closure of major thoroughfares will result in some increased congestion, but every effort is made to plan diversionary routes and to enable traffic to flow freely on these routes.

United Kingdom Warning and Monitoring Organisation (Exercises)

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details for each of the United Kingdom warning and monitoring organisation exercises at Royal Observer Corps bunkers by (a) name, (b) location, (c) starting and finishing dates and (d) starting and finishing times.

Mr. John Patten: The 1990 exercise dates for the United Kingdom warning and monitoring organisation (UKWMO) are:

INTEX 1990:—17-18 March—0800-0700 hours
POSTHORN 1/90:—20 May—0700-1800 hours
POSTHORN 2/90:—14 October—Times to be decided

These exercises, which are designed to practice operational procedures, will involve all UKWMO operational controls and monitoring posts throughout the United Kingdom. The field force of UKWMO is the Royal Observer Corps.

London Demonstration

Mr. Hattersley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if, when the organisers of the 31 March poll tax demonstration asked for the location to be transferred from Trafalgar square to Hyde park, he consulted the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis about the desirability of meeting their request.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 5 April 1990]: I understand that the organisers applied on 18 January to the Department of the Environment for permission to hold the rally in Trafalgar square. After discussions with the Metropolitan police permission was granted on 7 March. The details of the route of the proposed march from the assembly point in Kennington park to Trafalgar square were discussed and agreed with the police. On Monday 26 March the organisers asked the Department of the Environment for permission to hold the rally in Hyde park. The Metropolitan police were contacted about this very late request but no formal decision was taken. At a meeting later that day between the police and the organisers the request was not pursued and plans for holding the rally in Trafalgar square were finalised. On Tuesday 27 March the organisers withdrew their request to hold the rally in Hyde park.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Bogus Invoices

Mr. Hanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether there has been any progress in trying to secure action to be taken against those who send out bogus fax invoices from addresses both within the United Kingdom and from abroad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: The Unsolicited Goods and Services Acts 1971 and 1975 provide that any demand for payment in respect of a directory entry which has not been ordered by the person concerned is an offence, and the recipient of the demand is not liable to pay for it. The Acts seem to have proved effective in controlling such practices by firms within the United Kingdom.

For invoices originating from overseas we liaise with the authorities in the countries involved. They share our concern but attempts at legal action in their courts have not to date proved effective. Many of the invoices originate from Switzerland and the Swiss have taken legal action under a new law on unfair competition which came into force in 1988. The outcome of this action is not expected until later this year.

Amateur Radio Licences

Mr. Andrew MacKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will report progress on the introduction of an amateur radio novice licence.

Mr. Forth: I am pleased to announce that following discussions on novice licence conditions with the Radio Society of Great Britain, the Radiocommunications Agency has today published a final draft of the proposed novice licence. A copy has been placed in the Library. Work is also in hand on setting up arrangements for the training and examination of potential licensees. Those arrangements will necessarily take some time to put in hand but the agency would hope to the be ready to issue the first novice licences in early 1991.

Origin Marking

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress he has made on the establishment of a European origin marking regime.

Mr. Forth: In accordance with an undertaking I gave to the House on 10 November 1988, Official Report, column 588-89, I wrote to ministerial colleagues in other member states and to the Commissioner then responsible for origin marking matters.

I sought their views on a possible European Communitywide origin marking regime which would require the corrective marking of third-country imports bearing European brand-names. Such a regime would appear to be the most that could be required within the relevant provisions of the treaty of Rome, the interpretation of which has been established in a number of European Court rulings.

Responses to my letter ranged from varying degrees of support to outright opposition. In several cases I received no reply even after several reminders. I have therefore reluctantly concluded that such a proposal would not command sufficient support to secure its implementation, and I do not propose to pursue the matter further.

Estate Agency Report

Mr. Favell: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will implement the recommendations in the Director General of Fair Trading's report on estate agency.

Mr. Forth: Since receiving the Director General of Fair Trading's report last month, I have given it careful consideration and generally agree with his analysis of the problems and with his recommendations.

I believe that the package of legislation which he has proposed would deal effectively with the malpractices identified in the report while not imposing significant burdens on reputable estate agents. It is therefore the Government's intention that, as soon as legislative time is available, the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 should be extended to cover misdescription of property. It is also my intention, as soon as the consultation required under the Estate Agents Act 1979 can be carried out and the results considered, to make and lay before Parliament orders under section 3 and regulations under section 18 to deal with misdescription of property, forced sales, misleading terms and other abuses identified in the report and to add to the list of offences which can trigger banning action against estate agents.

I have read with interest the analysis in the report of the arguments for and against licensing and use of the power under section 22 to prescribe minimum qualifications for estate agents. I agree with the Director General's view that the case for these measures has not been made out. This finding on section 22 is in line with the conclusion I reached in the review of estate agency which I completed last year and also with the conclusion reached by the Consumers Association in its recent report on estate agency.

I have noted with regret the Director General's conclusion that there is little prospect of agreement in the immediate future on an industrywide voluntary code of practice. However, I consider that the package of legislation I propose deals with the main problems. I welcome the Director General's undertaking that his Office will maintain contact with the industry with a view to resuming discussions on a voluntary code of practice if the climate of opinion becomes more favourable.

Telephone Charges

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will publish a table showing the comparable costs in sterling of a local telephone call in each European Community country, making clear where the minimum duration per unit cost of such calls varies.

Mr. Forth: There is no standard measure which enables comparisons to be made between the cost of local calls in different European Community countries. For example, the average local call area is particularly large in the United Kingdom, which means that many calls at local rates here would be charged at long distance rates in other countries.

However, OFTEL has produced figures (which include exchanges line rentals and long distance calls) comparing both the cost of an average resident's telephone bill and the cost of an average business bill in the four European countries which are most readily comparable in terms of population and size. Taking the United Kingdom (British Telecom only) as index 100 (and excluding VAT) the figures are as follows:

	Residential basket	Business basket
United Kingdom	100	100
France	76	83
Italy	97	120
Federal Republic of Germany	98	96

(OFTEL: "International Comparisons of Telecommunications Prices" January 1990)

European Single Market

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry which of the measures contained in the single market White Paper remain to be implemented.

Mr. Redwood: The table lists the single market White Paper measures which have been adopted, and which are not yet required to have entered into force.

Directives in the White Paper programme which are not yet required to have entered into force

GATT

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what action the Government have taken to ensure that the outcome of the Uruguay round of multilateral trade negotiations under the GATT will (a) promote environmentally sustainable development, (b) promote food security for the poorest groups in developing countries and (c) decrease the dependence of developing countries on primary commodities.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The Government attach a high priority to the successful conclusion of the GATT Uruguay round, and we are working with our European Community partners to bring this about. Matters under discussion include several of particular interest to developing countries; a successful agreement will therefore help promote trade in the products concerned, and hence the economic development of such countries.

Cotton Goods

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proposals to control the dumping of Indian poplin he will put to the EC as part of the negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade rules in relation to textiles.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 18 April 1990]: Our aim in the GATT Uruguay round negotiations is to secure improvements in the general rules governing anti-dumping action. The European Community has put forward proposals for the amendment of the GATT anti-dumping code, some of which are of particular relevance to the textiles sector. Complaints about the dumping of particular products are best followed up with the European Commission in the normal way by the industry concerned.

European Single Market

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what funds have been made available to Her Majesty's Government and public bodies by the European Economic Community and its institutions for the purpose of circulating information about the 1992 programme and policies.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 18 April 1990]: No funds have been made available to Her Majesty's Government for the purpose of circulating information about the 1992 programme and policies. Some pump-priming funds have been made available to some local authority organisations to help in the administration of information on European Community matters more generally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disability

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response he has received to "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People" from the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The council was represented at a meeting that I held on 5 April with the Disability Benefits Consortium to discuss "The Way Ahead". We shall give careful consideration to all the council's comments in carrying forward the detailed work on our proposals.

Benefits, Manchester

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish tables using the assumptions in his answer to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) of 22 June 1988, Official Report, columns 571-6, but using expenditure and benefit figures appropriate for families in Manchester, together with a column showing the extent of the differences resulting from the April 1988 social security changes.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The tables are no longer published, for the reasons given in my reply to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) on 23 February at c. 937-38.

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether he will publish in the Official Report the guidance to be issued on the interpretation of regulation 3(1A) of the Mobility Allowance Regulations 1975.

Mr. Scott [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The guidance which is issued, with report forms, to examining doctors is in the table.

DEAF/BLIND CLAIMANTS—NOTES FOR EXAMINING DOCTORS

1. The requirement of the legislation is that there should be a measurable test of BOTH blindness and deafness. The Regulations stipulate that the degree of disablement resulting from the loss of vision amounts to 100 per cent. and that the degree of handicap resulting from loss of hearing amounts to not less than 80 per cent.
2. An assessment of 100 per cent. blindness is appropriate not only where there is a total lack of vision, but also where there is residual vision. Experience with other benefits indicates that an assessment of 100 per cent. will be appropriate where the vision is found to be less than 6/60, using both eyes whilst glasses are used; or where finger counting is not possible beyond one foot. Depending on the location and circumstances of the examination, possible methods of testing including Snellen's Chart finger-counting or E-test. Please note your findings overleaf.
3. Hearing should be tested on the basis of simple clinical examination. The test should be a simple instruction or question, shouted from just beyond one metre behind the claimant. As it must test the claimant's need to understand, rather than just the ability to react to the shout by turning the head, it should be in a form such as "Please lift your right arm" or "How old are you?" If possible the test should be conducted outdoors so that the effect of loss of hearing on the claimant's outdoor mobility problems can be properly assessed. Where an outdoor test is not possible the results should be related to the outdoors. Experience with other benefits indicates that an assessment of 80 per cent. will be appropriate where the claimant is unable to hear a shout beyond 1 metre using both ears (with aids). Please record your assessment overleaf.

4. Also, the examining doctor needs to assess the ability of the deaf/blind person to walk to any intended or required destination whilst out of doors without the assistance of another person. If a walking test is appropriate it should be carried out on the kind of surface which the claimant would normally have to cope with outdoors. Where this in not possible, the examining doctor should use medical judgement to assess walking ability in such outdoor circumstances, bearing in mind the effects of both blindness and deafness.
5. Unless it is clear beyond doubt that the specific criteria for deaf/blind people are satisfied a full test of walking ability should be undertaken (this should include balance tests, if it seems that a person needs physical support to walk). This will make it possible for a decision to be made as to whether a person qualifies under any of the criteria which apply to disabled people generally if the criteria for deaf/blind people are not fulfilled.

Child Benefit

Mr. Allen McKay: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the increase in child benefit since 1987.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: [pursuant to her reply of 2 April, Official Report, c. 486]: My reply was found to be incomplete; the full reply is as follows.

Child benefit has remained payable at £7·25 per week for each child since April 1987.

We have however since then devoted considerable extra resources totalling some £350 million in real terms to the least well-off families—those on income support and family credit—who do not gain from an increase in child benefit of itself and who are now therefore better off than they would have been if child benefit had been uprated.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iraq (Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make it his policy to instruct (a) Her Majesty's Government's representative on the board of governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency and (b) the United Kingdom ambassador to the United Nations, to initiate investigations at the International Atomic Energy Agency and United Nations, respectively, into the Iraqi nuclear weapons programme.

Mr. Waldegrave: Iraq is a party to the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, and as such has undertaken not to develop nuclear weapons. We expect Iraq to abide by her international legal obligations. We are currently considering, in consultation with interested parties, how to strengthen barriers against proliferation. We do not, however, envisage taking the specific action outlined by the hon. Member.

Hong Kong

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the annual report on Hong Kong will be laid before Parliament.

Mr. Maude: The report was laid before Parliament and published on 18 April. Copies will be placed in the Library of the House.

Czechoslovakia

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the cessation of exports of Semtex from Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Waldegrave: As I informed the House on 10 April 1989, Official Report, column 360, we had been told that Czechoslovakia ceased exporting Semtex in 1982. We have now received further clarification from the Czechoslovak authorities, who have explained that the last foreign trade exports had indeed been in 1982, but that in addition "special deliveries" to the GDR and Hungary had continued in the context of Warsaw pact commitments. These deliveries were distinct from normal foreign trade operations and had been covered by a guarantee of non re-export to third countries. They have informed us that all exports of Semtex, including the "special deliveries", ended in 1989. We are in discussion with the Czechoslovak authorities about past exports of Semtex, and have noted President Havel's statement that about 1,000 tonnes had been exported to Libya.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Uniform Business Rate

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance issued to district rating valuation officers as to the criteria to be used by them to determine the rateable values on which the uniform business rate is calculated.

Mr. Lilley: No. The material contains information confidential to indvidual ratepayers.

Civil Service Relocation

Mr. Speller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if there are any plans to relocate any part of the civil service to north Devon.

Mr. Ryder: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) on 17 January 1990, Official Report, c. 289-90. Departmental Ministers will announce their own decisions on relocation venues once the essential processes of assessment and consultation have been completed.

Gross Domestic Product

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a list of the top 30 countries in the world in descending order for gross domestic product per head for the latest available date.

Mr. Ryder: Information for the OECD member states is available in the OECD publication "National Accounts, Main Aggregates, volume 1, 1960-1988". Wider coverage is given by the United Nations publication "National Accounts Statistics, Analysis of Main Aggregates, 1986". Both volumes are available in the Library of the House.

For ranking countries in terms of gross domestic product per head, no fully comparable worldwide official statistics are readily available. For many of the centrally planned economies, the official estimates available are prepared in accordance with United Nations system of material product balances (MPS), which differs from the United Nations system of national accounts (SNA) used to describe market economies.

Money Laundering

Mr. Irvine: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to publish the report of the financial action task force on money laundering; and if he will make a statement.

Mr Major: The Government welcome the report of the financial action task force which is published today. A copy of the report has been placed in the Library of the House.

The task force was established following the G7 Paris summit in July 1989 to review existing measures against money laundering and to recommend improvements. Experts from 15 countries (G7 countries, Austria, Australia, Belgium, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland) and the EC Commission, the OECD, the IMF and the bank for international settlements contributed to the work of the task force, with the United Kingdom playing a leading role. The report has three main sections: an assessment of the extent and nature of the problem; a review of existing legal and administrative measures against money laundering; and 40 detailed recommendations for further action.

The report's recommendations encompass domestic measures implementing the United Nations Vienna convention against illicit traffic in narcotic drugs and psychotropic substances, improvements in laws and administrative practice relating to institutions dealing with large amounts of cash, and strengthening international co-operation. While acknowledging that the recommendations have no formal legal status, the Government fully endorse them. The priority now is for their implementation in all participating countries. In the United Kingdom, the Drug Trafficking Offences Act 1986 already makes drug money laundering an offence and gives the police and Customs and Excise strong enforcement powers.

Provisions included in the Criminal Justice (International Co-operation) Act 1990, which received Royal Assent on 5 April, will further strengthen these powers and allow the United Kingdom to ratify the United Nations convention. Further measures are also being considered to reinforce our defences against money laundering inside and outside the formal financial sector.

However, money laundering is an international problem which cannot be tackled by individual countries in isolation; the commitment by the major industrialised countries to strengthen international co-operation in the fight against money laundering is therefore all the more welcome. Our record is good and many of the areas of co-operation covered in the report are already covered by our bilateral agreements to trace, freeze and confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking. So far agreements have been signed with 13 countries and negotiations are in progress with several others.

European Community Contributions

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the payments to European Economic Community institutions less VAT abatement increased from £4,066 million in 1987 to £4,442 million in 1989, as set out in table E of the Central Statistical Office leaflet of 13 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The increase in the United Kingdom's gross contribution less abatement between 1987 and 1989 reflected an increase of around a quarter in the size of the Community budget. The United Kingdom's share of gross contributions, after abatement, fell from 16·2 per cent. in 1987 to 15·4 per cent. in 1989.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the general Government receipts from European Economic Community funds have fallen from £2,282 million in 1987 to £2,141 million in 1989, as set out in table E of the Central Statistical Office leaflet of 13 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The fall is mainly due to a reduction in the level of receipts from the structural funds arising from the fact that Community support frameworks were not signed until the end of 1989. As a result, some payments were delayed. Receipts in 1990 are expected to be significantly higher than in 1987 or 1989.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement explaining the nature and extent, in respect of each calendar year, of the increase in payment to the European Economic Community in respect of previous years following the annual reassessment, as referred to on page 3 of the Central Statistical Office leaflet of 13 March; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ryder [holding answer 18 April 1990]: Contributions in respect of VAT own resources and the GNP-based fourth resource are paid by member states to the Commission on the basis of agreed economic forecasts. Each year an adjustment is made to contributions paid in previous years to take account of outturn information. As such, the adjustment can be either positive or negative.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blackburn of 29 March, Official Report, column 274, if he will now make arrangements to deposit in the Library copies of each scheme for the local management of schools which he has approved.

Mr. MacGregor: Yes.

History Teaching

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will provide a list of all individuals, organisations and others whom he will consult in respect of the recommendations in the final report of the national curriculum history working group.

Mrs. Rumbold: They are too numerous to list individually but include LEAs, teacher associations, religious bodies—including the General Synod of the Church of England board of education and the Board of Deputies of British Jews—and subject associations such as the Historical Association, the Royal Historical Society, the Primary History Association and the History Curriculum Association. Others consulted include for example the Commission for Racial Equality and the National Childrens Bureau.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

Romania

Mrs. Margaret Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Moray of 27 February, Official Report, column 111, he will list in the Official Report what further medical supplies, food, clothes and other non-financial aid Her Majesty's Government have provided to Romania.

Mrs. Chalker [holding answer 18 April 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

Since my hon. Friend's answer on 27 February, column 111, we have donated AIDS testing equipment, provided small contributions to British charities caring for Romanian children and, as I announced on 5 April, column 734, £500,000 to the World Health Organisations programme for the Romanian health service. We have also donated 118 tonnes of paper (worth £100,000) for the use of Romanian political parties during the election campaign.

DEFENCE

RAF Brawdy

Mr. Boyes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the cost of the proposed over-the-horizon radar facility at Brawdy, Wales, will be borne by the NATO infrastructure fund.

Mr. Alan Clark: This question will be addressed once it has been decided whether to retain the over-the-horizon radar as a permanent operational facility in the United Kingdom.

Residential Accommodation

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's houses or flats have been empty for three months, six months, nine months or longer; and how many of these are situated at Medhurst.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Records are not maintained in the precise form requested. As at 30 November 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, 8,296 service married quarters in the United Kingdom, both houses and flats, had been vacant for under one year and 4,127 for one year and over. In addition, as at 31 December 1989, 103 Ministry of Defence civilian houses and flats in the United Kingdom had been vacant for under six months and 120 for six months and over. Many of these properties were either undergoing or awaiting major maintenance work or modernisation, some were already allotted to entitled occupants who were due to move in shortly and others were in the process of disposal.

We have been unable to identify the location to which the hon. Gentleman refers in his question but, if he will write to me with further details, I will attempt to provide the information requested.

Royal Army Veterinary Corps

Mr. Latham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on his review of the future of the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, Melton Mowbray.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: On 11 July last year at columns 495-96, my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Mr. Neubert) announced that he was minded to accept the recommendation that a service animal centre should be formed. I am now able to confirm the intention to form such a centre, under unified command. For the foreseeable future, however, this will operate at the existing separate locations of RAVC Melton Mowbray, RAF Newton and RAF Syerston, because reduced estimates of disposal value have affected the recommendation to vacate and sell all the land at Melton Mowbray.

The service animal centre will be a candidate for defence support agency status, but the centre will in any case be expected to build on the savings in running costs referred to by my hon. Friend in his earlier answer.

WALES

M4

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to purchase land along the missing gap of the M4 between Earlswood and Baglan to enable additional lanes to be constructed if traffic flows exceed current forecasts.

Mr. Roberts: If needed, any necessary land would be acquired at the appropriate time.

Conservation Sites

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the number of sites which meet the criteria for designation and protection under the European Community directive on the conservation of wild birds, the number of sites so designated, the name of the site next to be designated and the date he expects to designate it;

(2) when he last designated an area under the Ramsar convention on the conservation of wetlands of international importance; if he will indicate the area which is next to be designated, and when he expects to designate it.

Mr. Roberts: The designation of special protection areas and Ramsar sites is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment. Welsh sites are designated in consultation with me.

I understand that the NCC has so far identified 14 potential SPAs in Wales, of which three have been designated. The last Ramsar designation in Wales, Cors Fochno and Dyfi, was on 5 January 1986.

I cannot forecast which site will be designated next nor when. Government officials are currently carrying out consultation on a number of sites in both England and Wales.

General Practitioners

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many general practitioners and general practitioner practices in Wales have requested information from his Department about practice budgets;

(2) how many general practitioners and general practitioner practices in each family practitioner committee area in Wales have requested information from his Department about practice budgets.

Mr. Grist: The booklet "Funding General Practice—The Programme for the Introduction of General practice Budgets" was mailed directly to all Welsh general practitioners in early January 1990. Effectively, therefore, all Welsh GPs have received basic information regarding the scheme. Comprehensive records of requests for supplementary information are not available.

Health Authority Budgets

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each health authority in Wales (a) the standstill budget for that authority in 1990-91 as estimated by that authority, (b) the standstill budget for that authority as estimated by the Welsh Office and (c) the figure made available by his Department for that authority for 1990-91.

Mr. Grist: It is not clear what the hon. Gentleman means by the term "standstill budget". The initial 1990-91 revenue allocations to health authorities in Wales by comparison with their final allocations for 1989-90 (subject to end-of-year adjustments) are as follows:

DHA	1989-90 £ million	1990-91 £ million
Clwyd	110·175	116·584
East Dyfed	68·060	74·897
Gwent	129·520	137·968
Gwynedd	65·436	69·164
Mid Glamorgan	150·828	161·446
Pembrokeshire	25·123	28·379
Powys	30·758	33·393
South Glamorgan	179·064	188·955
West Glamorgan	109·449	119·263

The figures for 1990-91 take account of the full-year effect of all developments funded on a part-year basis last year before 31 December 1989. The full-year effect of developments funded subsequently during 1989-90 will be taken into account in adjustments to the initial 1990-91 allocations which have yet to be notified to authorities along with those centrally directed developments for 1990-91 which have yet to be allocated.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will set out the approved practice of health authorities in Wales regarding the separation of capital and revenue funds (a) under Government regulations, (b) in respect of guidance issued by his Department and (c) under independent guidance from other bodies including CIPFA and the Audit Commission.

Mr. Grist: The definition of capital expenditure which is currently applied by district health authorities in the separation of capital and revenue is as follows:

Capital expenditure comprises spending on:

1.1 Acquisition of land and premises, lump sum payments for related rights (including capitalised rents), and payments made under the Land Compensation Act 1973 (including payments to local authorities for rehousing persons displaced by National Health Service acquisition); and associated fees;

1.2 Individual works schemes costing £15,000 or more (including related fees and equipment—but excluding land) for the initial provision, extension, improvement or adaptation (including upgrading), renewal, replacement or demolition of buildings, building elements (eg. roofs), external works, engineering services or plans;

1.3 Complete individual items of equipment costing £7,500 or more before the deduction of any sum obtained for any item replaced (except where the item is associated with a works scheme when paragraph 1.2 above applies regardless of cost). This includes all categories of equipment not associated with works scemes referred to in paragraph 1.2 above, other than vehicles.

1.4 All purchases of vehicles regardless of cost; and

1.5 Pay, and directly attributable expenses such as travelling allowances, of works officers and all the staff (including typists, clerical and administrative staff) of their departments who are fully or mainly engaged on spending charged to capital.

2. Spending on maintaining capital assets in effective working order, or in good repair, is charged to revenue, unless it falls within the above definition of capital spending. For example, interior or exterior redecorating, or repointing of brickwork, would be revenue whatever the cost.

3. The definition of a scheme given in the "Glossary of Hospital Building Cost Control Terminology" should be used in applying the definition of capital spending. Where the provision or replacement of certain pieces of equipment comprises two or more separate and distinct interdependent units (for example electro-diathermy equipment) doubt may arise; each interdependent unit should be regarded, for the purpose of the financial limit in paragraph 1.3 above as a complete individual item.

4. The whole cost of schemes with a mixture of capital and revenue type spending should be charged to revenue unless the estimated capital type spending exceeds the limits set out in paragraph 1; then the capital type element should be charged to capital."

All other expenditure not covered by the above definition is charged to revenue.

As noted in a separate reply to the hon. Gentleman of today's date in respect of the use of capital receipts in meeting revenue funding requirements, district health authorities in Wales are permitted a degree of in-year flexibility between revenue and capital provision.

Neither CIPFA nor the Audit Commission has any locus in issuing guidance to health authorities on such matters.

SCOTLAND

Pensioners

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of single pensioner households in Scotland as a percentage of all households in Scotland.

Mr. Rifkind: At 30 June 1989 approximately 16 per cent. of households in Scotland consisted of one person of pensionable age.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the most recent estimate of (a) the number of pensioners in Scotland, (b) pensioner-headed households in Scotland, (c) single pensioner households and (d) pensioner couple households.

Mr. Rifkind: The most recent estimates for Scotland are:

	Number
(a) Number of persons of pensionable age at 30 June 1988	896,000
(b) Number of households headed by a person of pensionable age at 30 June 1989	582,000
(c) Number of households with one person of pensionable age at 30 June 1989	314,000
(d) Number of households with 2 persons of pensionable age at 30 June 1987	152,000

Boundary Commission

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the Boundary Commission for Scotland intends to conduct any further interim reviews of parliamentary constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Rifkind: The Boundary Commission for Scotland has informed me that it intends to conduct interim reviews of 10 parliamentary constituencies under section 3 of the Parliamentary Constituencies Act 1986. The constituencies are as follows:

Midlothian and Tweeddale, Ettrick and Lauderdale;
North Tayside, Perth and Kinross, and Stirling;
Motherwell North and Linlithgow; and Edinburgh East, East Lothian and Midlothian.

I understand that the reviews have arisen from alterations to local authority boundaries which those of the parliamentary constituencies concerned no longer follow exactly.

Speech Therapy

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will meet the Scottish councillors, Mrs. Joan Munro and Mrs. Moira McGovern of Queen Margaret college, to discuss representations made to him by, and on behalf of, the speech therapy profession.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 18 April 1990]: I have nothing to add to the letter that I sent to the hon. Member on 8 April.

Arts and Design

Mr. Fisher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what expenditure was made by his Department on (a) the arts and (b) design in the last financial year.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 21 December 1989]: Expenditure by the Scottish Office was £21·015 million in 1988-89 on the three national institutions (the National Library of Scotland, the National Galleries of Scotland and the National Museums of Scotland). Further expenditure of £1·998 million covered assistance to the Scottish Museums Council, the Scottish Film Council, Scottish Film Production Fund and various arts and cultural organisations.

The Scottish Office does not directly fund design, although I understand that the Scottish Development Agency does, from time to time, support various design projects. Details of the agency's expenditure on such projects are not separately recorded.

Local Income Tax

Mr. Nicholas Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what would be the estimated charge on the basis of current expenditure (a) per household and (b) per capita for each Scottish district if a system of local income tax were to be introduced.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 5 April 1990]: Local income tax bills per household and per capita would depend on the taxable income of each household and person in every district in Scotland. This information is not available to my Department.

On the basis of the estimates of local income tax rates which were provided on 27 February in reply to a question from the hon. Member for Glasgow, Cathcart (Mr. Maxton), the tax bill for a single person on Scottish average earnings would be as shown in the table.

Notes:

1. The estimate of average gross earnings has been taken from the 1989 new earnings survey and is the average of the male and female full-time adult earnings not affected by absence at April 1989.

2. In calculating the tax bill for a single adult, it is assumed that earnings are the only source of income and that only personal tax allowances apply.

EMPLOYMENT

Skill Centres

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what recent representations he has received regarding the future of skill centres.

Mr. Eggar: I have received representations from hon. Members, some skill centre staff, and trade unions.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what amount Astra Training Services has paid for each of the skill centres in Wales.

Mr. Eggar: Terms of sale have been agreed with Astra Training Services Limited covering 46 skill centres, together with the Skills Training Agency's head office, mobile training service, sales teams and colleges, and involving a payment from the Government to Astra in respect of the entire business of some £11 million. All four skill centres located in Wales are included in the sale package.

Training

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people have completed employment training courses; and if he will give a breakdown of (a) the vocational qualifications they obtained and (b) the destinations of those who left the programme.

Mr. Nicholls: Thirty-five per cent. of people leaving employment training during July 1989 to October 1989 completed their agreed training: of these 51 per cent. entered jobs or full-time further education or training; 43 per cent. were unemployed and 6 per cent. were doing voluntary work or something else. Information about vocational qualifications obtained is not yet available.

Mr. Leighton: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what percentage of training managers have been approved to award qualifications.

Mr. Nicholls: The Training Agency does not approve training managers to award qualifications.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what changes there will be in Ministers' decision-making powers on training in 1991-92.

Mr. Nicholls [holding answer 18 April 1990]: Ministers' powers to make arrangements for training are derived from the Employment and Training Act 1973 as amended by the Employment Act 1988. From April 1991 (subject to parliamentary approval) it is intended that similar powers will in Scotland be exercised by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, subject to approval of their plans by the Government under the terms of the Enterprise and New Towns (Scotland) Bill now before Parliament.

Earnings Comparisons

Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement on the disparity of wages between men and women; and what plans the Government have to address this disparity.

Mr. Nicholls: This disparity is due to a range of factors including differences in educational qualifications and skills, occupational levels, occupational choices and work experience. Take home pay is also affected by women doing more part-time work and less overtime than men. Equal pay legislation has helped considerably to reduce any disparity based on sex discrimination and the Government are firmly committed to eliminating unjustifiable discrimination in pay. The Equal Pay Act 1970 (as amended) provides a real avenue of redress for any woman who thinks she is being denied equal pay because of her sex.

Moreover, the increasing number of women entering higher paid jobs in "non-traditional" areas of employment will work its way through and further reduce the difference. The Government both welcome and encourage this.

ENVIRONMENT

Rented Accommodation

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the consequences of the general level of rent increases in the private, council and housing association sectors for the supply of rented property.

Mr. Chope: The deregulation of rents for new private tenancies will encourage landlords to invest: so far proposals for between 6,000 and 7,000 new assured tenancies have been reported under the business expansion scheme. Deregulation of rents for new housing association tenancies has enabled private finance to be used to supplement public expenditure, and so increase output of new subsidised rented housing; we estimate that some 13,000 additional units over three years will result. In the local authority sector our aim is to move towards a pattern of rents that better reflects the value of the accommodation provided and enables authorities to maintain their stock in good condition. Both housing association and local authority rents continue to benefit from substantial subsidies; and housing benefit is available to tenants who would otherwise have difficulty affording their rents.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consideration he has given to any changes in the basis of community charge for 1991-92.

Mr. Chope: The underlying principle of the community charge is that almost all adults should pay something towards the costs of local services. There are no proposals for changing that principle.

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance he has given to local authorities on the procedures to be adopted for the levying of the community charge on properties which become vacant and available for sale on the death of the home owner; if he will take steps to prevent local councils from levying a double community charge in cases where the properties have not become available through the process of probate or where the ownership of the property is subject to division in consequence of the terms of the will of the deceased; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The Secretary of State has prescribed that no standard charge is payable in respect of unoccupied property which has become vacant on the death of the owner, and with respect to which no grant of probate or letters of administration have been made or less than three months have elapsed since the day on which a grant of probate or letters of administration were made. Local authorities have discretion to extend this period or set a standard charge multiplier lower than the maximum for such a period as may be specified by the authority.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing (a) the total amount of community charge benefit to be paid in 1990-91 and (b) the expected community charge benefit caseload for 1990-91 on the basis of (i) the Government's estimates of community charge levels and (ii) the actual levels of community charge which have been set.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard [holding answer 22 March 1990]: I have been asked to reply.

The Public Expenditure White Paper (Cm 1014) stated that £1·82 billion would be spent on community charge benefit in 1990-91, and that there would be an average of 7·9 million community charge benefit cases in 1990-91 on a Great Britain basis. More recent estimates suggest that £2·5 billion will be spent on community charge benefit in 1990-91, and that the number of benefit cases will be in excess of 8 million on a Great Britain basis which, since a couple are treated as one benefit unit, equates to about 10 million individuals. The caseload estimates mean that about one in four of all individual charge payers will be helped by community charge benefit.

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table in the Official Report showing actual or, where not available, budgeted expenditure for all local authorities in England and Wales in each of the last three years, and the proposed expenditure in 1990-91, showing percentage increase, for each authority, and giving total expenditure for all authorities in each year.

Mr. David Hunt: Total expenditure for English authorities in 1987-88, 1988-89 and 1989-90 is £25,686, £27,736 and £29,563 respectively. The figures for 1987-88 and 1988-89 are latest estimates of outturn expenditure, where available, and the figure for 1989-90 is local authority budgeted expenditure. Information is not yet available for 1990-91.

I am arranging for details of budgeted expenditure for individual local authorities in England to be placed in the Library of the House.

The information relating to Welsh local authorities is a matter for the Secretary of State for Wales.

Control of Pollution Act

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to lay before Parliament the regulations relating to part II of the Control of Pollution Act.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The majority of part II of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 was repealed by, and substantially re-enacted by, the Water Act 1989. We have no plans to lay any further regulations under part II of the 1974 Act.

Housing

Mr. Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the proportion of the Housing Corporation's approved development programme for 1990-91 on average spent on each unit of rented accommodation; what is the equivalent figure for housing for sale; and if he will provide the same figures for the two succeeding years where planned levels of approved development programme have been identified.

Mr. Chope: Detailed information about the Housing Corporation's approved development programme for 1990-91 and provisional plans for the following two years was made available by the Housing Corporation in January 1990, and I am arranging for details to be provided to my hon. Friend direct. The Housing Corporation is currently reassessing plans for 1990-91 and subsequent years in the light of more up-to-date information on housing associations' development programmes.

Mr. Hind: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many housing association projects were funded by the Housing Corporation in Liverpool in each of the last three years for which figures are available.

Mr. Chope: This is a matter for the Housing Corporation. I have therefore asked the corporation to respond to my hon. Friend direct.

Developers

Mr. Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has any proposals to protect home owners from undue harassment from developers.

Mr. Moynihan: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales have today issued a consultation paper seeking views on a proposal to include a statement of owners' property rights on the certificates which have to be served on the owners of land which is the subject of a planning application. The paper also invites comments on proposals to amend the General Development Order 1988 to provide general planning permissions (a) to install equipment for driver information systems, (b) to install postal pouch boxes, (c) to install liquefied petroleum gas tanks for dwelling houses, (d) so that industrial and warehouse extensions erected as permitted development under schedule 2, part 8, can be used for workplace-related social, recreational and welfare purposes; and on a proposal to amend the Use Classes Order 1987 so as to include launderettes and dry cleaning establishments within the shops use class (A1). This last proposal is not associated with the independent research into the effects of the order which is being carried out on behalf of the Department.

London Demonstration

Mr. Hattersley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the organisers of the 31 March poll tax demonstration asked permission to hold that demonstration in Hyde park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten [holding answer 5 April 1990]: The organisers applied on 18 January for permission to hold the rally in Trafalgar square. After discussions with the Metropolitan police permission was granted on 7 March. The details of the route of the proposed march from the assembly point in Kennington park to Trafalgar square were discussed and agreed with the police. On Monday 26 March the organisers asked my Department for permission to hold the rally in Hyde park. The Metropolitan police were contacted about this very late request but no formal decision was taken. At a meeting later that day between the police and the organisers the request was not pursued and plans for holding the rally in Trafalgar square were finalised. On Tuesday 27 March the organisers withdrew their request to hold the rally in Hyde park.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 20 April 1990

PRIME MINISTER

Children

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Prime Minister whether she will attend the summit meeting of world leaders to be held by the United Nations on 29 to 30 September to address the urgent needs of children in the 1990s; and if she will make a statement about the role of Her Majesty's Government in planning the agenda for the meeting.

The Prime Minister: I cannot yet say whether it will be possible for me to attend this summit. The United Kingdom is, however, contributing actively to its preparation. We are a member of the planning committee set up by the six original sponsors, and are also playing a full part in the working groups set up to prepare particular aspects.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teachers (Criminal Proceedings)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish for each of the last five years for each local education authority the number of teachers who lost their posts following a successful prosecution in the criminal courts.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The information requested is not available. A teacher's employment may be terminated as a result of misconduct (whether evidenced by criminal conviction or otherwise) either following a decision by my right hon. Friend to exclude him or restrict his employment, or as a result of internal disciplinary proceedings by his employer. The available information relates only to decisions taken by my right hon. Friend and is not categorised by local education authority area.

Asbestos (Schools)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many schools have asbestos in them; and where they are located.

Mr. Alan Howarth: The Department does not keep records of how many individual schools contain asbestos.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Vagrancy

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people of no fixed abode were arrested in the years 1988 and 1989 in (a) the Metropolitan police district and (b) England and Wales.

Mr. Waddington: The information requested is not available.

Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the total sums airlines have been fined under the Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act for each year since its introduction; and what are the figures for each airline.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The number of demands for payment of the currently set penalty of £1,000 issued to all carriers (that is, airlines and sea operators) in each year since the introduction of the Act in March 1987 was as follows:

	Number
1987	3,921
1988	4,211
1989	6,337

Information on demands issued to individual airlines is not readily available.

Justices' Clerks

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department who has responsibility for instigating disciplinary procedures against justices' clerks.

Mr. John Patten: This is a matter for the magistrates courts committee concerned.

ENVIRONMENT

European Environment Commissioner

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the European Environment Commissioner; and what was discussed.

Mr. Trippier: My right hon. Friend met Commissioner Ripa di Meana at the meeting of the Environment Council on 22 March. The outcome of these discussions was reported in my right hon. Friend's reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Gedling (Mr. Mitchell) on 27 March.

Wargaming

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of wargaming upon the environment; and whether he plans to take any protective measures.

Mr. Trippier: Sensitive environments are protected in appropriate cases by regulations and byelaws against damage from recreational activities. Local authorities and local residents have powers to take action against excessive noise or other forms of nuisance. The need for additional protective measures is kept under constant review.

London Demonstration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the organisers of the anti-poll tax march and rally held in London on 31 March asked to transfer the rally venue to Hyde park; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook (Mr. Hattersley) on 19 April.

Charge Capping

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report the precise criteria used to decide the extent of the budget reduction required for each local authority designated for charge capping in 1990-91.

Mr. Hunt: The cap which my right hon. Friend has proposed for each designated authority reflects his view, on the basis of all the information available to him, of a reasonable and appropriate level of budget reduction for that authority in all its circumstances.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities which would have been subject to the capping of the community charge had his selection of expenditure levels not been included as a qualification.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: It would not be right for me to speculate about the consequences of adopting some selection principles different from those which my right hon. Friend has determined and which he is satisfied are reasonable, appropriate and in accordance with the statute.

Mr. Nellist: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many district councils will be affected by his statement on capping which was given to the House on 3 April; what is the number of adults liable for the poll tax in each district council area and what is the total; what is the number of people eligible for rebates or transitional relief in each district council area and what is the total; and if he has any estimate of the likely costs of rebilling and recalculating for the total number of people affected.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: My right hon. Friend designated 10 district councils for capping on 3 April 1990. Another 14 district councils (excluding Bristol which itself was designated) will be affected by capping by virtue of the designation of Avon and Derbyshire county councils. Following is a list of the district councils concerned together with the relevant population of each and the total. The Department does not have information about the numbers of people eligible for community charge benefit or transitional relief in each area.

(i) District Councils designated for capping

Council	Relevant Population
Barnsley	167,712
Basildon	119,185
Bristol	290,725
Calderdale	143,540
Doncaster	218,650
North Tyneside	151,181
Rochdale	158,227
Rotherham	201,284
St. Helens	136,039
Wigan	231,410
Total	1,817,953

(ii) Other District Councils affected by capping

Council	Relevant Population
Bath	57,700
Kingswood	67,953
Northavon	94,745
Wansdyke	60,311
Woodspring	140,098
Amber Valley	86,949
Bolsoiver	54,433
Chesterfield	77,412
Derby	164,676
Erewash	83,899
High Peak	63,382
North East Derbyshire	75,126
South Derbyshire	54,510
Derbyshire Dales	53,569
Total	1,134,763
Grand Total	2,952,716

The Department estimates that the cost of issuing new charge bills, including recalculating community charge benefit and transitional relief as appropriate, would on average be about £200,000 per charging authority.

Local Authority Debt

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total amount of debt incurred by each English shire county for the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Chope: The information requested is set out in the table:

Atmospheric Pollution

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress the United Kingdom has made towards meeting its target reduction of nitrous, nitric and sulphuric oxides emissions by 1993.

Mr. Trippier: Using 1980 as a baseline, the UK is committed to reducing emissions of sulphur dioxide (SO_2) by 20 per cent. and oxides of nitrogen (NOx) by 15 per cent. from existing large combustion plants by 1993 as the first stage of directive 88/609/EEC. The current "Digest of Environmental Protection and Water Statistics" (a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library) shows that in 1988 relevant emissions of SO_2 and NOx were 21 per cent. and 10 per cent. lower, respectively, than in 1980.

Nature Conservancy Council

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to respond to the report of the House of Lords Select Committee on Science and Technology on the future of the Nature Conservancy Council.

Mr. Trippier: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 5 April to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthrope (Mr. Morley) at column 784.

Local Government Finance

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what proposals he has to collect information from local authorities about the level of their standard community charge;

(2) when he expects to know which local authorities are levying a standard community charge at less than twice the personal community charge.

Mr. Chope: We are collecting information about standard charge multipliers for 1990-91 in a return which authorities have been asked to make to the Department in May.

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list for each district authority in England (a) the amount of Government grant per authority, (b) the amount of UBR income per authority, (c) the taxable income per authority and (d) the revenue from taxable income per authority assumed in the 1990-91 "Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax" published by his Department on 4 April;

(2) if he will set out the formula for taxable income used to produce the 1990-91 "Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax" published by his Department on 4 April;

(3) if he will set out the grant formula used to produce the 1990-91 "Illustrative Capital Value Rates and Local Income Tax" published by his Department on 4 April.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The illustrative capital value rates and local income tax figures published on 4 April assume that Government funds and business rates are distributed to achieve full equalisation of local income tax rates. This means that in every area the same local income tax rate could apply if all local authorities were spending at the level needed to provide a standard level of services. The level of grant entitlement would vary if expenditure were at a different level in order to ensure that each £1 per head of additional spending in any area would lead to exactly the same change in the local income tax rate. Areas with high average taxable incomes would receive less grant with higher spending, while areas with low taxable resources would receive more grant with higher spending. No reliable estimate of the taxable income of residents in each local authority area is available and hence no estimate of grant and business rate payments to each authority was made when producing the illustrative figures.

Bathing Water

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a list of those bathing beaches sampled by the water research centre in its project on rotaviruses in sewage discharges.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: In the centre's research for the Department, samples were taken from the north and south beaches and bathing water at Tenby; bathing water and sediment at Watchouse bay, near Barry; bathing water at Barmouth and, in Dyfed, Pendine East and Pembrey, Cefn Sidan.

Demolition (Planning Control)

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will issue a consultation paper inviting views on whether planning controls should be extended to the demolition of dwelling houses.

Mr. Michael Spicer: My right hon. Friends the Secretary of State and the Secretary of State for Wales have today issued a consultation paper. It describes the issue, invites views on the scale of the problem, and seeks comments on various options for extending planning controls to the demolition of dwelling houses.

Storm Damage

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce the special financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme to be given to those local authorities whose coasts suffered damage as a result of the severe storms during 25 and 26 February.

Mr. Chope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Radioactive Gas Emissions, Sellafield

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made of the extent to which emissions of radioactive gas from Pond 5 fuel handling plant at Sellafield arising from works carried out and chemical reactions in the pond itself, comply with statutory requirements.

Mr. Trippier [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The emissions of radioactive gas from this plant are continuously sampled and monitored by BNFL. The measurements demonstrate that these discharges comply with statutory requirements.

DEFENCE

Submarines

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish a list of Z-berth locations for submarines in the United Kingdom and those sites which he is planning to use.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Bow and Poplar (Ms. Gordon) on 5 May 1989 at column 276. We have, since this date, decided to establish Swansea as a Z-berth. The Royal Navy's requirements for port visits by nuclear-powered submarines are continually under review. When a port appears suitable and practical, the safety considerations are discussed with local civil authorities.

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration he has given to the development of Milford Haven as an operational base for submarines.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

ENERGY

British Coal (Notification Procedures)

Mr. Andy Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy when he expects to receive the results of the attitude survey carried out to assess public satisfaction with British Coal's notification procedures.

Mr. Baldry: I have now received this report and the accompanying data and have placed copies in the Library of both Houses. It clearly shows that there is a strong wish for individual notification of households and we are discussing with British Coal how best this can be implemented.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he will take to ensure that the timetable for reviewing the proposals for renewable energy projects does not preclude a full environmental assessment.

Mr. Peter Morrison: All renewable energy projects will have to comply with normal planning procedures.

My Department's research programme on renewable energy includes extensive work on environmental assessment to help provide information on which the environmental acceptability of renewable energy technologies could be judged.

Mains Supply (Rural Areas)

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy what forms of grant aid or subsidy will be available after privatisation to electricity distribution companies seeking to connect rural areas to the mains supply.

Mr. Wakeham: I do not believe that the post-privatisation arrangements for rural supplies require financial assistance by the Government.

Fuel Exports and Imports

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy (1) if he will give for each month from January 1989 the total export and import of (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) coal in tonnes and in value on the same basis as his answer of 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68;

(2) if he will give for each month from January 1989 the total export and import of (a) oil, (b) gas and (c) coal in coal-equivalent tonnes for both gas and oil.

Mr. Wakeham: The equivalent information for exports and imports of oil, gas and coal for each month from January 1989, set out on the same basis as my earlier answer of 9 November 1989, Official Report, columns 767-68, are shown in tables 1 and 3. I have also set out figures in tonnes of coal equivalent, for both gas and oil, in table 2.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list the accountancy firms which are being used for the electricity privatisation.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend gave to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) on 5 February 1990 at columns 454-58.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Disablement Benefits

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what response he has received to "The Way Ahead: Benefits for Disabled People" from the Spastics Society; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Spastics Society was represented at a meeting I held on 5 April with the Disability Benefits Consortium to discuss "The Way Ahead". We shall give careful consideration to all the society's comments in carrying forward the detailed work on our proposals.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will indicate projected expenditure in the current year and the next five years on (a) private residential homes, (b) private nursing homes and (c) Department of Social Security payments to local authorities for community care; and if he will indicate the expected number of elderly persons who in each case will benefit.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: At August 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, total income support expenditure on an annualised basis for people in independent residential care homes and nursing homes was estimated to be £1,073 million to 173,000 claimants. Of that total £639 million is for those receiving residential care, £434 million for nursing care. All figures are rounded. Information about expected numbers of income support claimants and expenditure for future years is published in the public expenditure White Paper (Cm. 1014). It has never been the practice to publish separate forecasts about expenditure specifically on people in residential care and nursing homes.

Community Charge Benefit

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many poll tax payers in Scotland who are in receipt of benefit have been subject to deduction of benefit; and if he will classify benefit recipients by size of income and on that basis, indicate for each category, how many persons have been subject to deduction of benefit of (a) less than 20p a week, (b) 20p to 49p a week, (c) 50p to 99p a week, (d) £1 to £1·99 a week, (e) £2 to £4·99 a week, (f) £5 to £9·99 a week and (g) over £10 a week.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

Motorways (Speed Restrictions)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish for motorways in England a list of any sections where speed restrictions up to 50 mph have been in existence for periods of (i) up to one year, (ii) one to three years, (iii) three to five years and (iv) over five years.

Mr. Atkins: Mandatory speed restrictions for some motorway maintenance schemes were introduced in August 1988 for reasons of safety. Since then the following sections have been subject to speed restrictions for major (over £0·5 million) maintenance schemes. All had durations of less than one year.

1988-89	Section

In addition a relatively small number of motorway non-major maintenance schemes will have been subject to mandatory speed restrictions for the same reason. These schemes would be of short duration, considerably less than one year.

There have also been the following recent motorway improvement schemes where mandatory speed restrictions were in force:

	Section
Less than one year
M25	J10-13
M42	J3A
M56	J3-5
M61	J2-4
M62	J12-19

M5	J4-4A
M5	J4A-5
M5	J5-6
M20	J11-12
M42	J1-M5
M63	J3-5

There have not been any such restrictions lasting more than three years.

There are permanent speed restrictions on the following sections of motorway:

	Section
M1	J43-47 (50 mph)
M4 (London)	Elevated Section (50 mph)
M4[1]	Severn Bridge (40 mph)
M6/M62	Croft Interchange (40 mph)
M621	J1-3 (50 mph)

[1] Mandatory speed limit imposed in 1986 during bridge strengthening and resurfacing work. This will remain in force until about the end of this year.

Speed Limits

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to extend mandatory speed limits where roadworking is in operation to those roads for which local authorities are the highways authority.

Mr. Atkins: Local highway authorities already have the power to introduce mandatory speed limits at roadworks where they consider it appropriate.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures, other than mandatory speed limits, are in force to ensure the safety of roadworkers and motorists where road repairs and maintenance are being carried out.

Mr. Atkins: In addition to any speed limit, measures to ensure safety at roadworks, both for road users and workers, comprise provision of proper signing and traffic management together with maintenance of an appropriate safety zone between moving traffic and the works. Advice on the signing of roadworks is given in chapter 8 of the traffic signs manual. A report prepared jointly by the Department of Transport, the County Surveyors Society and the Health and Safety Executive provides guidance for ensuring the safety of personnel undertaking works.

Substandard Shipping

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the number of defective merchant vessels that have been detained at British ports for each of the last five years.

Mr. McLoughlin: The number of merchant ships which have been detained in United Kingdom ports as a result of defects indentified by Department of Transport marine surveyors in the course of general or port state control inspections in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Number
1985	33
1986	33
1987	26
1988	48
1989	47
[1]1990	23

[1] January—March

Compulsory Head-guards

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has any plans to make it compulsory for cyclists to wear protective head-guards.

Mr. Atkins: If everbody wore cycle helmets, a great many injuries and deaths would be prevented, particularly among children. While I have no present plans for making it compulsory, I urge cyclists to wear them, and parents to encourage their children to do so.

Maritime Safety

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what current statutory regulations exist concerning the seaworthiness of vessels and the number of shipmen relative to size that should be sailing a ship.

Mr. McLoughlin: Statutory regulations issued under the various Merchant Shipping Acts are promulgated by way of a merchant shipping notice. There are many such regulations in force covering, inter alia, crew matters, dangerous goods, fire, life-saving, marine pollution, navigation, ship construction and equipment, and health and safety. Each year the list is revised, and I have placed a copy of the latest notice in the Library. (Merchant Shipping Notice No. M.1407, Principal Acts and Regulations on Merchant Shipping, published by the Department of Transport in February 1990.)

Apart from the statutory requirements for certificated officers, the minimum safe complement of other seafarers depends on other factors as well as size—the ship's equipment, trading areas and the nature of cargo all have to be taken into account when assessing a safer manning level. Passenger ships must have an adequate crew to muster and assist the passengers in an emergency.

Private Security Firms

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what weapons private security firms are empowered to employ in dockyards and ports.

Mr. McLoughlin: Private security firms are not empowered to carry firearms in dockyards and ports unless they have a firearms certificate from the chief officer of police under section 1 of the Firearms Act 1968.

Southend (Official Visit)

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make an official visit to Southend-on-Sea by train.

Mr. Portillo: My right hon. Friend or I will be happy to do so when a suitable opportunity arises.

THE ARTS

British Library

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister for the Arts what progress has been made on the British Library; when he expects work on it to be completed and at what cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Luce: Construction on the first phase of the building is proceeding within its budget of £300 million and a schedule which will enable the British Library to start moving books into St. Pancras by mid-1991. The first phase is planned to be fully operational by mid-1993.

The completion phase upon which I will shortly be making a separate announcement is scheduled to be opened to the public in 1996.

Bathgate Fossil

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement on his latest discussions with Dr. Robert Anderson and Dr. Ian Rolfe of the Scottish Museum on the issue of the 340-million-year old reptile found in the constituency of the hon. Member for Linlithgow.

Mr. Luce: I have had no discussions with either Dr. Robert Anderson or Dr. Ian Rolfe of the National museum for Scotland, on the issue of the Bathgate fossil, but as the hon. Gentleman knows the question of bringing natural heritage items under existing controls has been referred by me to the reviewing committee on the export of works of art for advice.

Lieu of Tax

Sir Hal Miller: To ask the Minister for the Arts if there have been any items accepted in lieu of tax or allocated since he last made an announcement on the subject to the House.

Mr. Luce: Since my announcement on 29 March, Official Report, col 264, I am very pleased to announce the acceptance of three further offers in lieu of tax: a portrait of the children of Henry Herbert, first Lord Porchester, by William Beechey in lieu of £151,489 tax; a painting by Lucas de Heere, entitled "The Family of Henry VIII: An Allegory of the Tudor Succession", in satisfaction of £527,898 tax, and a group of four paintings in satisfaction of £6,650,000 tax; two portraits by Thomas Gainsborough, a portrait of Peirre Pecquis by Sir Peter Paul Rubens and "View of Wageningen" by Hercules Seghers. The acceptance of the Lucas de Heere and the group of four paintings was made possible by the arrangements for a call on the Reserve first announced by Lord Gowrie in 1985 and brings the total call on the Reserve for 1989-90 to £9,977,898 and total expenditure on the acceptance in lieu scheme for that year to over £11·5 million. This is a record amount for a single financial year and demonstrates beyond doubt the investment and vital role of the scheme, and its benefits to individual estates.

In accordance with the conditions on which they were offered, the Beechey and de Heere paintings will remain in situ at Highclere castle, Berkshire, and Sudeley castle, Gloucestershire, respectively while the group of four paintings from the estate of the late Mrs. Eva Borthwick-Norton will be allocated in consultation with my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland in a manner consonant with the testator's wishes as expressed in her will. The Secretary of State for Scotland will make an announcement about this in due course.

CIVIL SERVICE

Health Hazards

Dr. Marek: To ask the Minister for the Civil Service whether assessments under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations have been undertaken for all workplaces used by civil servants within the civil service.

Mr. Luce [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The civil service is a multi-departmental organisation and in common with other major employers assessments under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations are the responsibility of individual Departments. There is no requirement to record these assessments centrally and it is not possible to confirm that all assessments have been carried out.

In the period leading to enactment of the regulations representatives of many Departments attended training and information courses within the civil service and externally.

In October 1988 representatives of the civil service occupational health service (CSOHS) discussed the requirements of the regulations with departmental establishment officers. The CSOHS issued a detailed briefing note in January 1989 to assist Departments in meeting their statutory obligations. CSOHS health advisers and hygienists have provided information and advice on the regulations during routine visits and on request.

Departments which require professional support on assessments can obtain those on request from CSOHS who continue to provide advice, guidance and specialist input as required.

SCOTLAND

Vacant Accommodation

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those local authorities known to him which have allowed in 1989-90 an extension of beyond three months to the period when a poll tax is not payable in respect of empty and unfurnished accommodation.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I understand that in 1989-90, all levying authorities made use of the powers given to them under section 10(8) of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987 to determine different periods from the statutory minimum of three months during which the standard community charge is not payable in respect of unoccupied and unfurnished premises. Some authorities determined a longer period in respect of all unoccupied and unfurnished premises in their area, while others restricted the use of their discretionary power to certain classes of premises.

Tourism

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement concerning the provision of accommodation within the tourist industry following the implementation of the poll tax.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As a consequence of the Abolition of Domestic Rates Etc. (Scotland) Act 1987, property which was previously valued as a dwellinghouse will have been removed from rating as from 1 April 1989, but if the assessor considers that the degree to which a particular property is used for commercial purposes is such that it should fall within the non-domestic sector, he will enter it in the valuation roll. There remains a valuation judgment for the assessor to make.

However, to ensure a consistent approach throughout Scotland, my right hon. and learned Friend recently decided to clarify the boundary between the domestic and non-domestic sectors for self-catering properties and bed-and-breakfast establishments. The Abolition of Domestic Rates (Domestic and Part Residential Subjects) (Scotland) Regulations 1990 accordingly provide that dwellinghouses made available for letting, commercially, as self-catering accommodation for short periods amounting to at least 140 days per year are to be treated from 1 April 1990 as non-domestic, thus rendering them liable to non-domestic rates.

In the case of bed-and-breakfast establishments, we have been consulting interested parties on a proposal to include within the statutory definition of domestic subjects any dwellinghouse which is made available for the provision of bed-and-breakfast accommodation for at least 100 days per year or which provides such accommodation for no more than six guests. My right hon. and learned Friend is likely to bring forward appropriate regulations on this before long.

Engineering Apprenticeships

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what were the numbers of engineering apprenticeships available in (a) Greenock and Port Glasgow, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in (i) 1979, (ii) 1984 and (c) the latest year for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: Statistics are not collected about the number of available engineering apprentices. However, the engineering industry training board compiles a register of those completing the first stage of engineering craft training. For the Strathclyde area the figures are 1,071 in 1978-79, 418 in 1983-84 and 360 in 1988-89. For Scotland the figures are 1,694 for 1978-79, 686 for 1983-84 and 769 for 1988-89. No separate figures are available for the Greenock and Port Glasgow area.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Eastern Health and Social Services Board

Mr. Kilfedder: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the managerial relationship between the newly appointed director of public health in the Eastern health and social services board and (a) environmental health officers and (b) the area board chief medical officer.

Mr. Needham: The title of chief administrative medical officer (that is, the area board's chief medical officer) changed to director of public health on 1 September 1989. Environmental health officers are employed by local councils and have no managerial relationship with the Eastern health and social services board.

Accountancy Firms

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list accountancy firms used by his Department.

Mr. Cope: During 1989-90 the information requested is as follows:

Binder Hamlyn
Capita Muir and Addy
John Compton Associates
Coopers and Lybrand
CSL Group Ltd—formerly known as CIPFA Services Ltd
Deloitte Haskins and Sells
F.M. Donaghy and Company
Ernst and Young
Hanna Thompson
KPMG Peat, Marwick, McClintock
D. J. MacRitchie
B. R. McGuire and Company
John McVeigh and Company
Muir and Addy
Price Waterhouse
Brendan Quinn and Company
Stoy Hayward
Touche Ross and Company
Witt Thornton

Fair Employment

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a list of types of employment in each church-based society or organisation in Northern Ireland for which the Fair Employment Agency and/or Commission has advised that the successful applicant must belong to the same religious denomination as the church-based society or organisation which is inviting applications to fill vacancies.

Mr. Needham: Neither the Fair Employment Agency nor the Fair Employment Commission has ever advised any organisation that a successful applicant for employment must belong to a particular religious denomination. The agency/commission has, however, taken the view that in the case of staff of organisations with a religious basis who had to act in a "in loco parentis" role, the organisations could take religion into account when making such appointments.

An individual has the right to challenge the organisation's view of the nature of a particular job and the onus is on the organisation to show that the "essential nature of the job" requires it to be done by a person holding, or not holding, a particular religious belief or political opinion as permitted under section 37 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1976.

The Sunday Times

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what requests were received from The Sunday Times for assistance in defence of the libel action brought by Mr. T. Murphy and Mr. P. Murphy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Cope [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The Government received a number of requests from members of the staff and representatives of The Sunday Times for assistance in defence of the libel action brought against the newspaper in the Irish High Court by Thomas and Patrick Murphy. After careful consideration it was decided that there was no direct help which the Government could usefully or properly provide in the Irish courts.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Cotton Goods

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is the current output of cotton goods in north-east Lancashire.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 18 April 1990]: Sectoral output statistics are not readily available at sub-regional level. However, in the north-west standard region (Lancashire, Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Cheshire) latest figures (1988) show that the net output from the cotton and silk industries amounted to £263·1 million (or 54·7 per cent. of United Kingdom net output). (Source: Central Statistical Office).

Paper Production

Mr. Paice: To ask the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on progress within the paper and pulp industry for the increased use of straw as a resource.

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 18 April 1990]: I am aware of a commercial venture which Berisford Bristar is investigating for the production of pulp from straw on a site near Immingham. In addition I am aware of an application for support of collaborative research and development on the use of United Kingdom-grown crops for industrial use under the LINK initiative. This programme, which is receiving consideration, will be able to cover the necessary research to enhance the potential use of straw.

HEALTH

Leukaemia

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) of 2 April, Official Report, columns 430-34, he will list the other studies currently under way on leukaemia clusters referred to in column 430 and state who is funding them; if he will list the other studies of workers receiving high radiation doses referred to in column 431 and state who is funding them; which Government Departments are involved in the co-ordination of research and what arrangements have been made; and if he will list the related research proposals into the offspring of radiation workers referred to in column 431.

Mr. Freeman: In respect of the studies currently under way on leukaemia clusters, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Copeland (Dr. Cunningham) on 15 February at columns 397-98. The studies are being funded by the Scottish Office (Dounreay studies) and the Department of Health.

The studies referred to in my earlier reply comprise those referred to previously and, in addition, a number of proposals for research submitted to the Department and to the Health and Safety Executive (HSE), as well as research commissioned independently of Government. The HSE has drawn up a protocol investigation at Sellafield. This investigation will be in two parts: the first will consist of an epidemiological case-control study comparing the occupational records of the case fathers with those of matched controls; the second is a case-only study into the particular operational histories of the fathers of the leukaemic children.

The lead Government Department involved in co-ordination of research is the Department of Health, in collaboration with HSE, and a co-ordination group has been established for the purpose of expediting progress on existing and proposed research. Other Government Departments and the Medical Research Council will provide representation as appropriate.

In relation to the proposed studies of the health of the offspring of radiation workers, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 7 March at columns 646-47.

Scanner Unit (North Devon)

Mr. Speller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received about the need for a scanner unit within the North Devon health authority area.

Mr. Freeman: We have received one representation, from the mayor of Barnstaple.

Hospital Doctors

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in the pay and conditions of hospital doctors in the National Health Service since 1979.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Between April 1979 and April 1990 the pay of hospital doctors in the National Health Service has increased in real terms by 37·2 per cent. From April 1990 they will receive a further 7 per cent. rise in their pay and subsequently a further 2·5 per cent. from 1 January 1991.

The terms and conditions of service for hospital doctors are frequently amended following negotiations between the Health Departments and the medical and dental professions. Copies of the current version of the handbook of terms and conditions of service for medical and dental staff have been placed in the Library.

Hospital Incinerators

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library details of all hospital incinerators in England, by health authority area, specifying for each incinerator (a) the date commissioned, (b) the name of the manufacturer, (c) the temperature in the main chamber, (d) the temperature in the after-burner, (e) the type of temperature control used and (f) the monitoring regime for air pollution.

Mr. Freeman: This information is not available centrally and could be collected only at disproportionate cost.

Constituencies

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the constituencies of (a) England, (b) Scotland, (c) Wales and (d) Northern Ireland in order of size based on the 1990 register, indicating in each case the extent to which the electorate is above or below the electoral quota.

Mr. Freeman: Information about the 1990 electoral registers has now been collected by OPCS from electoral registration officers. The number of electors in each local authority area will be published in "OPCS Monitor EL 90/1" on 26 April, before the local elections. The figures are still being reassembled by parliamentary constituency. They will be published in the latter form in "Electoral Statistics 1990 (Series EL No. 17)" in July.

Human Spermatozoa

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the reply to the question from the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 2 April, Official Report, column 982, if he will make a statement on the use of the hamster test in the study of chromosomal abnormalities of human spermatozoa.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: To achieve penetration by a human sperm the hamster egg must first have had its zona pellucida removed by a chemical. The normality of chromosomes derived from the human sperm can be assessed by examining them within the product of fusion of a human sperm and a hamster egg. The test is completed about 24 hours after fusion begins and at that point the material is destroyed. Normally it will not have divided into two cells. Schedule 2 to the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Bill would require that if two cells did appear they must be destroyed.

Microbiology

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of the centre for applied microbiology and research.

Mr. Freeman: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 19 April.

Nurses

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the current levels of nurse staffing.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 18 April at column 875.

Eye Tests

Mr. Harry Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his Department's latest estimate of the reduction in the number of eye tests since the introduction of charges.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We have commissioned an independent survey into the number of sight tests carried out during the first quarter of 1990. The figures collected will be compared with earlier periods; results should be available by the early summer.

Mr. Fearn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether figures are collected nationally to show whether the detection of illnesses such as diabetes has been influenced by the introduction of charges for eye tests on 1 April 1989.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Information is not collected centrally on the number of patients referred by their optometrist or ophthalmic medical practitioner to a doctor for further medical investigation and diagnosis following a sight test. The number of cases seen by the hospital eye departments since April 1989 is unlikely to be available before the end of the year.

General Practitioners

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what modification he is proposing for screening targets in the new contract for general medical practitioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: A modification to the operation of screening targets was announced on 10 April. This change means that entitlement to target payments will be based on partnership lists rather than individual practitioner's lists. No further modifications are planned.

Indicative Drug Budgets

Mr. Shersby: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he intends to issue guidelines on the operation of indicative drug budgets; and whether he has any modifications to propose to the proposals originally outlined in the White Paper.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: We intend to publish in May a further working paper on the operation of indicative prescribing budgets. The working paper will set out details of the development of our proposals since the White Paper was published.

Mental Hospitals

Mr. Gould: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will update information given in the answer to the hon. Member for Dagenham on 20 March 1987, Official Report, column 669.

Mr. Freeman [pursuant to his reply, 4 April 1990, c. 650-52.]: I regret that due to a typing error there was an omission in the answer given. Table 2 should have ended after the sixth entry and been followed by a third table. The correct information is contained in the following tables.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Soviet Union

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Soviet authorities about Mr. Adolf Borisovich Gorvitz.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have made numerous representations to the Soviet authorities about this case—most recently during my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs' visit to the USSR from 9 to 12 April. We shall continue to raise it until there is a satisfactory outcome.

Hong Kong

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many seizures of illegally imported endangered species were made by the Hong Kong authorities in the second six months of 1989; how many seizures were made of similar categories intended for export; and if he will make a statement giving details of all seizures made, including country of origin.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 29 March 1990]: The Hong Kong authorities made 60 seizures of illegally imported endangered species during the period July to December 1989:

The following illegal imports were seized:

Species	Number
Gibbon	2
Slow Loris	1
Pangolin	3 live, 2 carcasses, 25·45 kg meat, 20 pieces of scale and 1·5 kg of scale

Species	Number
Rhino (horn)	17 pieces
Whale (bone)	1 piece
Bear (paw)	4 pieces
Otter (skin)	2 pieces
Wild cat	82 skins and 1 stuffed specimen
Monitor Lizard (skin)	16,342 pieces
Alligator/crocodile	1,498 pieces (skin), 56 kg (meat) and 1 stuffed specimen
Python (skin)	86 pieces
Turtle/tortoise (live)	8
Sea turtle	34 stuffed specimens and 119 eggs
Giant salamander (carcass)	1
Parrot (live)	15
Bird of prey plus owl	11 live, 4 carcasses and 2 stuffed specimens
Asiatic bony tongue fish (live)	29 tails
Black coral (skeleton)	4
Giant clam (live)	4
Orchid	1
Ivory	2·39 tonnes

Countries of export included China, United Arab Emirates, Bangladesh, Federal Republic of Germany, Spain, France, Indonesia, India, Japan, Korea, Malaysia, Papua New Guinea, Philippines, Singapore, Thailand, Taiwan, United States of America, Venezuela, South Africa.

Only one seizure was made of endangered species intended for export: a live parrot destined for Switzerland.

European Investment Bank

Dr. Thomas: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what projects in the United Kingdom have received support, in each year since 1979, from the European investment bank; and if he will set out in each case the level of financial support received.

Mr. Ryder: I have been asked to reply.

The projects supported by the European investment bank and the levels of financial support in 1987, 1988 and 1989 are given in the table. To go back to earlier years would involve disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Monetary Union

Mr. Teddy Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the outcome of the discussions at the Council of Ministers on the issue of monetary union on 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lilley: I refer my hon. Friend to the statement my right hon. Friend the Chancellor made to the House on 3 April, Official Report, col 523.

Purchasing Costs

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if his Department achieved the target of 5 per cent. saving in purchasing costs in 1988-89, set by the Paymaster-General, through use of the central unit on purchasing.

Mr. Ryder: I am pleased to report that the Treasury (excluding CISCO) achieved an 8·5 per cent. saving in overall purchasing costs in 1988-89.

EMPLOYMENT

Bed-and-breakfast Accommodation

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether his Department has commissioned any research into the provision of bed-and-breakfast acommodation within the British tourist industry after the introduction of poll tax.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Wages Council Inspectors

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether he has any plans to increase the numbers of wages council inspectors.

Mr. Nicholls: No.

Disabled People

Mr. Ashley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to his answers to the hon. Member for Exeter (Mr. Hannam) of 18 January, Official Report, column 401, and Stoke-on-Trent, South of 14 March, Official Report, column 252, if he will give the most recent figures for the percentage of (a) firms and (b) public sector employers satisfying their quota obligations under the Disabled Persons (Employment) Act 1944;

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 5 April 1990]: In June 1989, the latest date for which figures are available, 23·3 per cent. of private sector employers subject to the obligations of the quota scheme employed 3 per cent. or more registered people with disabilities. At the same date 4·7 per cent. of the public sector employers who are subject to the obligations of the quota scheme employed 3 per cent. or more registered people with disabilities.

In both the public and private sectors 0·9 per cent. of employees of employers subject to the obligations of the quota scheme are registered as disabled.

Training

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether a training credit pilot scheme will operate in Scotland.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 18 April 1990]: The prospectus which I have issued on training credits for young people invites training and enterprise councils, and local enterprise companies in Scotland, to bid to run local training credit pilots. There is to be a geographical spread of pilots throughout Great Britain. The actual range will depend on the bids received.

WALES

M4

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to improve the M4 east of the Baglan roundabout.

Mr. Roberts: Currently the only work planned for this part of the M4 is renewal work on the Groes-Pentyla section which is expected to start this summer. The whole of the M4 is included in the south Wales traffic study which will identify sections of the trunk road network where traffic is likely to exceed recommended traffic flow levels, and consider solutions.

Hedgerows

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many miles of hedgerows have been removed, and how many miles planted (a) since 1 January 1960 and (b) since 1979.

Mr. Roberts: Although various estimates have been made for past periods none covers precisely the periods referred to.

A survey of landscape change in England and Wales carried out for the Department of the Environment and the Countryside Commission by Huntings Survey and Consultants Ltd. showed annual hedgerows losses in Wales of some 250 miles (out of a total of 2,600 miles for England and Wales) between 1947 and 1969, 400 miles (England and Wales total 2,900 miles) between 1969 and 1980, and 500 miles (England and Wales total 4,000 miles) between 1980 and 1985. A postal survey of environmental topics on farms carried out by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, however, showed annual losses of 500 miles for England and Wales between 1980 and 1985 with losses in Wales accounting for just over 100 miles of the total. The two surveys used different methodologies and neither can be regarded as definitive.

Since 1973 grants have been offered to farmers for planting of new hedgerows and for hedgerow laying. In Wales in the two years 1987 and 1988, grant was paid for the equivalent of almost 500 miles of new hedge planting.

Work is continuing to improve information on the rate of removal and on the extent of new planting.

Ford Plant, Bridgend

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he has plans to visit the Ford plant at Bridgend.

Mr. Peter Walker: I have no immediate plans to do so.

Burns Unit, St. Laurence Hospital

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will specify the date when the plastic and burns unit will be transferred from the St. Laurence hospital, Chepstow to Morriston hospital.

Mr. Grist: I understand that the managing health authority, West Glamorgan health authority, and the Welsh health common services authority expect that the new burns, plastic and maxillo-facial surgery unit being developed at Morriston hospital, Swansea, should be completed in mid-1994, after which the service can be transferred from St. Laurence hospital, Chepstow.

General Practitioners

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many general practitioners and general practitioner practices in Wales have indicated an interest in becoming budget-holding practices.

Mr. Grist: To date, 42 practices comprising some 217 general practitioners have expressed an interest in becoming fund-holding practices.

Meat Processing Plant

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what grounds he turned down the Development Board for Rural Wales proposals to assist the financing of the proposed integrated meat processing plant at Three Cocks, near Brecon.

Mr. Peter Walker: Since the Development Board for Rural Wales withdrew its application in respect of these proposals, my Department has taken no formal view of this particular scheme.

Mr. Livsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking to ensure that an integrated meat processing plant is established in south Powys, pursuant to the requirements of the single European market.

Mr. Peter Walker: The question of the establishment of a meat processing plant in any particular location is entitely a matter for the commercial judgment of the company concerned.

Special Needs Housing

Mr. Gwilym Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales whether he proposes to make changes to the funding arrangements for special needs projects undertaken by housing associations in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Grist: Special needs housing projects financed by Housing for Wales will be subject to new funding arrangements introduced from 1 April 1990.

The capital element of these projects will be funded by a mixture of housing association grant from Housing for Wales and private finance, as is already the case with the general needs housing. The level of grant will take into account the higher costs of providing special needs housing. This means that from 1 April 1990 all new allocations for housing association schemes funded by Housing for Wales will be on a mixed funding basis.

A new revenue allowance, to be known as special needs management allowance, will cover the additional housing management costs incurred for special needs housing; it will replace hostel deficit grant. Care costs will continue to be met from other topping-up sources.

These new arrangements will lead to the more effective and efficient use of public money in the funding of special needs schemes and improvements in estimating future expenditure demands.

Initially, the level of the new allowance will average £2,800 per bed space for existing schems and £3,600 per bed space for all new schemes coming into occupation in 1990-91. Existing schemes will continue to claim hostel deficit grant until 1991-92 when they, too, will be eligible for the new allowance.

To allow payments of the allowance to be paid from the start of the financial year, parliamentary approval of the revised estimate (class XVI vote 6 1990-91) is being sought for expenditure estimated at £168,000 to be met from repayable advances from the Contingencies Fund.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 170

SESSION 1989–90

26th March—20th April 1990

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R=first reading, 2R=second reading, Money res=money resolution, Com=Committee stage, Rep=Report stage, 3R=third reading, amendt/amendts=amendment/amendments, *=matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
